But & word of the Lord came to Semeiah the man of god saying: speake vnto Rehoboā the sonne of Salomon king of Juda & to al Israel & are in Juda, and to Beniamin and say: thus saith & lorde. Go not nor fight vō your brethrē: But returne euerye man to hys house, for thys thyng is done of me. And they obeyed the wordes of the Lord & turned from goyng agaynst Jeroboam.

And Rehoboam dwelt in Jerusalem, & buylt stronge cytyes in Juda: as Bethlehem, Etam & Thekua: Bethzur, Socho & Odollam: Geth, Maresah & Ziph: Adoraim, Lachis and Azecah: Zarah Aialon and Hebron. Which were the strōg cities of Juda and Ben Jamin. And when he had repayred soche stronge cytyes he put captaynes in thē and store of vitaile, & of oyle & of wyne. And he ordened in all cytyes shildes & speares, & made them exceadynge stronge. And so Juda and Ben Jamin were vnder him.

And the preastes & Leuites & were in all Israell resorted to hym, oute of all their costes. For so moch that & Leuites left their Suburbes & possessyons & came to Juda and Jerusalem: for Jeroboam & hys sonnes had cast them oute from mini strynge vnto the Lord. * And he ordened 11. And after them ther came of al & tribes of Israel (soch as their hertes moued thē to seke the Lord God of Israel) to Jerusalē to offer vnto the lord god of theyr fathers. And so they strēgthened the kingdom of Juda and made Rehoboam the sōne of Salomō myghtye thre yere longe, for thre yere they walked in the waye of Dauid and Salomon.

And Rehoboam toke hym Mahalath the daughter of Jerimoth the sōne of Dauid to wyfe, and Abihail the daughter of Eliab the sonne of Isai, whych bare hym childrē: Jeus, Samariah & Zaha. And after her he tooke Maacah & daughter of Absalom whyche bare him Abiah, Ethai, Ziza & Salumith. But Rehoboam loued Maacah the daughter of Absalō aboue al his other wyues and concubynes for he

And he plated wisely & skatered of al hys chyldrē thorow out all the countreyes of Juda & Beniamin in euery stronge cytye. And he gaue them aboundaūce of vitaile, and asked manye wyues.

Then came Semeiah the Prophet to Rehoboam & to the Lordes of Juda that were gathered to Jerusalem for feare of Sesac, & sayde to thē: thus sayth the Lorde, ye haue lefte me, & therfore will I leue you also in ỹ handes of Sesac. Whervpon the Lordes of Israel and the kyng hūbled them selues & sayd: the Lord is rygh teous. And when the Lord saw that they submitted thē selues, ỹ worde of ỹ Lorde came to Semeiah saying: they meke them selues, and therefore I wyll not destroye them. But I wyl delyuer them somwhat, and my wrath shall not fal vpō Jerusalē. Neuerthelater they shall be hys seruaūtes, to knowe what dyfference is betwene my seruyce and the seruyce of the kyngedomes of other landes.

¶ And Sesac kynge of Egipte came to Jerusalem and toke awaye the treasures of the house of the Lord, and the treasures of the kinges house, & shortly he toke all. And he toke also ỹ shildes of gould which Salomō made. In stead of which kynge Rehoboam made shildes of brasse, & put thē in the kepinge of the captaynes of his gard which waited in the gate of the kinges house. And as often as ỹ kyng wēt to ỹ house of the lord, ỹ garde wēt & fet them, & brought thē agayne vnto ỹ garde chābre. And so because he humbled him selfe, the wrath of ỹ lord turned frō him, & destroyed not al together. And thereto there were many good thynges yet in Juda.

And kyng Rehoboā waxed myghty in Jerusalē & raigned. And Rehoboā was .xli. yere olde whē he was made kyng, & he raygned .xvii. yeres in Jerusalem the citie which the lord had chosē out of al ỹ tribes of Israel to put hys name there. And hys mothers name was Naamah an Ammonite. * And he dyd euel: for he prepard not his hert to seke the Lorde.

The actes of Rehoboam fyrst and last are writtē in the sayinges of Semeiah ỹ Prophete & of Addo the sear of visions, so moche as his genealogye and the perpetu all warre that was betwene Rehoboam & Jeroboam during their lyfe. And Rehoboā layd hī to slepe wt hys fathers & was buried in ỹ citie of Dauid, & Abiah his sōne raygned in hys steade.

The .xiii. Chapter.

IN the .xviii. yere of kyng Jeroboam begā Abiah to raygne ouer Juda, & he raigned thre yere i Jerusalē. His mothers name was Michaiah ỹ daughter of Vziel of Gabaah. And ther was warre betwene Abiah and Jeroboā. And Abiah made a battel wyth an host of high tyng men of foure hundred thousand chosen men. And Jeroboam put in araye to fyght agaynst him, .viii. hundred thousand pycte men and stronge.

And Abiah stode vp vpō Zemaraim an hil in mouīt Ephraim & sayd: heare me ỹ Jeroboā and al Israel. Becomethe it not you to know how that the lord god of Israel gaue ỹ kingdom of Israel to Dauid for euer, euē to hym & to his sonnes, wyth a * salted couenaunt. But Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat the seruaunt of Salomō the sonne of Dauid, rebelled agaynst the Lord. And there geathered to hym lewde men and vnthryftes, and preuayled against Rehoboā ỹ sōne of Salomon: for Rehoboam was younge and tender harted & not stronge ynough for them.

* Of the Num.xviii.

And now ye thinke to preuayle agaynst the kyngdō of the Lord in the hand of the sonnes of Dauid, because ye be a greate multitude & haue wyth you the golden calues which Jeroboam made you for Gods. And haue ye not cast out the preistes of the Lorde the sonnes of Aaron, and the Leuites, & haue made you Priestes lyke the nacyons of other landes: euen whosoeuer cometh and fylleth hys hande wyth an ore & seuē rammes, the same is made Priest to them that are no Gods.

But with vs is the Lord our God whō we haue not forsaken, & the priestes of the sonnes of Aarō ministring vnto the Lord & the Leuites in offyce, burninge vnto the Lord euery morning & euery euē burnt offerynges & swete cense: & the shewbred put in order vpō a pure table: & the candelstycke of gould wyth the lampes of the same, to be lyght euery euē. For we kepe the watche of the Lord our God: but ye haue forsaken hym. Moreouer se, God is with vs in the forewarde, and hys preistes, and the roring trompettes to crye alarum against you. Ye chyldren of Israel fyght not with the Lorde God of your fathers: for it wyl not prosper wyth you.

But for al that Jeroboam sent mē pryuely about to come behinde vpon thē: & so they were before Juda, and thee layers in wayte were behind thē. And whē Juda turned & saw the battel behind & before, they cryed vnto the Lord, & the Priestes blewe the trōpettes and the men of Juda gaue a showte. And as the men of Juda showted god smote Jeroboā & al Israel before Abiah & Juda. And ỹ children of Israel fled before Juda, & the lord deliuered thē into the handes of Juda. And Abiah & his people slue a great slaughter of thē: so ỹ ther were strikē downe dead of Israel .v. C. M. chosen mē. And so the children of Israel were brought vnder at ỹ tyme, & the chyldrē of Juda preuayled: because they leaned vnto the Lord god of their fathers. And Abiah folowed after Jeroboā & wāne certaine cities frō him: Bethel with the townes belōging therto, & Jesanah with the townes that longed therto, & Ephrō with her townes. And Jeroboam recouered not strēgth agayne in the dayes of Abiah. And at the last the Lord plaged hym, that he dyed.

And Abiah waxed mightie, & toke hym .xiiii. wyues, & begat .xxii. sonnes and .xvi. daughters. The rest of the actes of Abiah and hys wayes & hys doynges are writtē in the storie of the Prophete Ido. And when Abiah was layde to slepe wyth hys fathers, they buryed hym in the cytye of Dauid, and Asa his sonne raygned in his steade. In whose dayes the lande was quyet ten yeare.

The .xiiii. Chapter.

AND Asa dyd that was good & ryght in the eyes of the Lorde hys God, and toke awaye the aultars of straungers and the hylaulters, & brake the Images and cutte downe the groues, and commaunded Juda to seke the Lorde God of theyr fathers and to do accordyng to the law & commaūdement. And he put away out of al the cytes of Juda, the hilaulters & the ydolles: for the kingdome was quyet before hym. And he buylte stronge cytyes in Juda: because the lande was in reste, and he hadde no warre in those yeres. For the Lord had geuen hym reste.

And therfore he sayd to Juda: lette vs buyld these cytes and compasse thē wyth walles & towres, gates & barres, while we haue the land quyet. For we haue soughte the Lord oure God: and because we haue sought hym, he hath geuen vs rest on euery side. And so they built & prospered. And Asa had an Armye that bare shyld & spere oute of Juda thre hundred thousand, and out of Ben Jamin that bare shylde & drue bowes two hundred and .lxxx. thousand, & were al stronge men.

And ther came out against thē Zarah the Mozian with an Host of .x. hūdred thousand, & thre hundred charettes, & came as ferre of Mareša. And Asa wēt out to him & they put in araye to battell in the valeye of Zephatah beside Mareša. And Asa cryed vnto the Lord his God & sayd: Lorde it is all one wyth the to helpe them that haue no power, wyth fewe or with manye helpe vs O Lorde oure God, for we trust to the, and in thyne name be come agaynst thys multitude. Thou arte the Lorde oure God, Jehosaphat.

God let not man preuayle agaynst the.

And the Lord smote the blacke Moores before Asa & Juda, that they fled. And Asa & ỹ people that was with him, followed after thē as ferre as Gerar. And ỹ blacke Moores were ouerthrowen, that there bode none a lyue of thē, but were destroyed of ỹ Lorde & of his Hoste. And they carped awaye a myghtye greate praye. And they smote al the cities roūd about Gerar. For the feare of the Lord came vpon thē. And they robbed al the cities for ther was exceding moch to be robbed in them. And ther to they smote the tētes of cattel and caried awaye plentie of shepe and camelles, & returned to Jerusalem.

¶ King Asa by the monition of the Prophet Azarias after he had put downe the Idolles, sacrificeth to the Lord. He depriueth his mother of her dominion.

The. xv. Chapter.

And the spyryte of God came on Azariah the sōne of Obed. And he wēt out agaynst Asa & sayd to him: heare me Asa & al Juda & Ben Jamin. The Lord is wyth you, whyle ye be wyth hym, and yf ye shal seke him, he wylbe found of you: but & yf ye shall forsake hym he wyll forsake you. Ther wyll come many dayes in Israel, in which ther shalbe no true god nor Priest that teacheth, nor any law. And in theyr tribulation they shall turne vnto the Lord God of Israel & shall seke hym, and he shalbe found of them. And in those dayes ther shalbe no peace to thē that goo out and in. But great veration vpō the habiters of al landes. For one nation shal destroye another, & one cytye another: for God wyl trounce them wyth al aduersyte. But plucke you vppe your hertes and lett not your handes fayne, for youre workes shalbe rewarded.

When Asa hearde those wordes & thee Prophesye of Azariah the sonne of Obed the Prophete, he toke courage & put away the abhominations out of al the lande of Juda and Ben Jamin, & out of the cyties whych he wāne in mounte Ephraim, & renued the aulter of the Lorde that was before the porche of the Lord. And he gathered al Juda & Ben Jamin, and the straungers with them out of Ephraim, Manasseh & Simeon. For ther fel many to hym out of Israel, whē they saw that god was wyth hym. And they assembled at Jerusalem the thyrde moneth of the fyftene yeare of the raygne of Asa. And they offred vnto the Lorde that same tyme of the spoyle whych they had brought. vii. hūdred oxen and. vii. thousand shepe.

And they made a couenaunt to seke the Lord God of theyr fathers, wyth all theyr hertes and all theyr soules: so that all that sought not the Lorde God of Israel, shulde die for it, whether he were smal or great man or woman. And they sware vnto ỹ Lorde wyth a loude voyce and showtinge and wyth trompettes and hornes. And all Juda reioyced in thee othe, for they hadde swoorne wyth all theyr hartes, and sought hym wyth al theyr luste, and he was foūd of them. And the Lorde gaue them rest rounde aboute.

And therto kynge Asa putte Maacah hys mother oute of auctorite, because she had made an ydole in a groue: and brake downe her ydole & stampte it & burnt it by the broke Cedrō. But they put not the hyl aulters oute of Israel: neuertheless thee herte of Asa was pure al hys lyfe. And he brought into the house of God the dedicat gyftes which he & his father had dedicate in gould, syluer and other Jewelles. And there was nomore warre vnto thee. xxxv. yeare of the raygne of Asa.

The notes

& To sweare vnto the Lord. is to geue thy self wholly to hym wyth a pure herte: which thyng the worshippers do, as is sayde of Dauid. Psa. cxxxii. But to sweare by thee Lorde. is to call on the name of the Lorde as a witnesse and Judge, as it is sayd Josue. xxiii. c ¶ Asa, for feare of Baasa king of Israel: maketh a couenaunt wyth Benhadad King of Siria.

The. xvi. Chapter.

In the. xxxvi. yere of the rayg ne of Asa, came Baasa kinge of Israel agaynst Juda and buylt Ramah, to the entent ỹ he wolde let none that pertayned to Asa king of Juda, haue passage in and out. Wher vpon Asa fet out syluer & gould out of the treasures of the house of the Lorde and of the kinges house, & sent it to Benhadad king of Siria, that dwelt at Damasco, and sayde. There is a confederation betwene me and thē, & so was betwene my father and thyne, wherfore I haue sent the syluer and gould, that thou go and breake thyne apoyntmēt with Baasa king ỹ kinge of Israell, ỹ he may depart frō me. And Behadad graūted vnto king Asa, & sent the captaynes of his armie agaynst ỹ cyties of Israel. And they bet Ion, Dan, Abelmaim & al the store cities of Nephthali. And whē Baasa heard that, he left building of Ramah & let his worke cease. And then Asa the kyng toke all Juda & caryed awaye & stones & tymber of Ramah wher wyth Baasa was a buylding: & he buylte therwyth Gabaa and Maspha.

At that same tyme Hanani ỹ sear, came to Asa king of Juda & said to him: because ỹ trustest in ỹ king of Siria, & trustest not in the Lord thy god, therfore is ỹ hoste of the king of Siria escaped out of thine hand. Were not the blacke mores & thet of Libia a great hoste with exceding manye charettes and horsemen? And yet because thou trustedest in the Lorde, he delyuered thē into thyne hādes. For ỹ eyes of ỹ Lord behold al the erth, to strength the hertes of thē that ar hole wyth him. Herin thou hast done folyshly, & therfore from henceforth ỹ shalte haue warre. Wherupon Asa was wroth w the sear & put him in the conuerting house, for he was displesed wyth hym because of that. Moreouer Asa oppressed certayne of the people the same season.

The dedes of Asa both fyrst & last, are writtē in the boke of the kinges of Juda and Israel. And the. xxxix. yere of his raigne Asa fel sicke of his fete, & that his disease exceaded. And therto in hys sickneste he asked no councel of the Lord, but of Physytions. And at the last Asa fel on slepe w hys fathers and dyed when he had raygned. xli. yeare. And they buryed hym in his owne sepulchre whiche he had made in the cytie of Dauid, and layed hym in the bed whych he had fylled wythe swete odoures of diuerse kindes, made by the craft of the potecarves. And they dyd exceding greate coste aboute burienge of hym.

¶ Iehosaphat succedeth after Asa, whyche causeth the feare of the Lord to be reputed amōg the people.

The. xvii. Chapter.

And Iehosaphat his sōne raigned in his stede & was mightier thē Israell. And he putte soulditoures in al the stronge cities of Juda, & sette rulers both in the land of Juda & also in the cyties of Ephraim which Asa his father had wonne. And the Lorde was with Iehosaphat, because he walked in the olde wayes of his father Dauid, & sought not Baals. But sought the Lord god of hys father & walked in his cōmaundementes & not after the doynges of Israell. Therfore the Lord stablished the kingdō in his hand, & al Juda brought him presentes, that he became exceading riche & glorious. And his herte was corageous in thee wayes of the Lord, & he put downe yet more of the hyl aulters and groues out of Juda.

And the thyrde yeare of hys raygne he sent of his Lordes: Benhail, Abdiah, Zachariah, Nathanael & Michaah to teache in the cities of Juda: & with thē Semeiah, Nathaniah, Zabadiah, Asahel, Semiramoth, Jehonathan, Adoniah, Thobiah & Thobodoniah Leuites: & wyth them Elisama & Joram Priestes. And they taught in Juda, & had the boke of the lawe wyth thē, & wēt about thorowoute al the cytyes of Juda and taught the people.

And the feare of the Lord fel vpō al the kingdōs of ỹ lādes that were roūde about Juda, that thet durst not warre with Iehosaphat. And ỹ Philistines brought Iehosaphat giftes & tribute syluer. And therto the Arabiens brought him of shepe, seuen thousand. vii. C. rāmes, & seuē thousand and. vii. C. he gootes. And so Iehosaphat prospered & grue vp on hye. And he builte in Juda, castels & store cyties. And he had great substāce in ỹ cities of Juda, & fightinge men & men of mighte in Jerusalem.

And thys is thee order in the houses of theyr fathers, of the captaynes ouer thousandes in Juda: Ednah the captayne and with hym of fightinge men. iii. hūdred thousand. And next to him Iehohanan a captayne and with him. ii. hūdred & lxxx. thousand. And by his syde Amaziah the sonne of Zechri willinge vnto the Lord, & wyth him. ii. hūdred thousand mightie men. And of the children of Ben Jamin, Eliada was a man of myght, and had with him armed with bowes and shildes. ii. hundred thousande. And by hys syde Iehosabad wyth whō were an hundred and. lxxx. M. trymmed for warre. These wayted on the king besydes those which the kyng had putt in stronge cyties thorowout al Juda.

¶ After Ahab had asked counsel of the foure hundred Prophetes, he putt Micheah in prison. He dieth by the shot of an Arrowe.

The .xviii. Chapter.

A And Jehosaphat became very ryche and glorious, & ioyned affinite wyth Ahab. And after certayne yeares he went
1 Kin. 22. 2 Esdr. 8 downe to Ahab to Samaria

And Ahab slue shepe & oxē plenteously for hym & for the people that came wyth him, and entreated him to go vp vnto Ramoth in Galaad. And Ahab kynge of Israell sayd to Jehosaphat kyng of Juda: wylte thou go wyth me to Ramoth in Galaad? And he answered hym, I wylbe as thou, and my people shalbe as thine and we wil be with the in the warre.

But Jehosaphat sayd vnto the king of Israell: aske I praye the, the worde of the B Lord. And the kinge of Israel geathered together of the Prophetes foure hundred men, & said vnto thē: shal we go to Ramoth in Galaad to fyghte, or shal I cease? And they sayd, go: the Lord shal deliuer it into the kinges hāde. And Jehosaphat sayd, is ther yet here neuer a Prophete more of the Lordes, that we might aske of hym? And the kyng of Israell sayde to Jehosaphat, there is yet one, to aske the Lord by hym: But I hate hym, for he neuer prophesieth me good, but alwaye euel, one Micheah ꝑ sonne of Jemla. And Jehosaphat said: let not the kyng saye so.

Then the kinge of Israel called one of hys chāberlaynes & sayd: fetch hether quickely Micheah the sōne of Jemla. And the kinge of Israell & Jehosaphat kynge of Juda sate ether of thē on his seate in their apparell, in a threshinge flowre beside the C gate of Samaria, & al the Prophetes prophesienge before thē. And one Zedekiah the sonne of Chananah made him hornes of yron and sayde, thus sayeth the Lorde: wyth these thou shalt wynowe Siria vntyll thou hast brought thē to nought. And all the Prophetes prophesyed euen so sayinge: Go vp to Ramoth in Galaad & prospere, for the Lord shall delyuer it into the hande of the kynge.

And the messenger that wēt to cal Micheah, spake to him sayinge: behold, ꝑ wordes of the Prophetes are pleasaunt to the kynge wyth one assent, lette thy wordes I praye the, be lyke one of theyrs, & speake ꝑ which is pleasaunt. And Micheah sayde: as truly as the Lord lyueth, euē what my God sayth, that wyl I speake. And whē he was come to the kynge, the kinge sayde to him: Micheah, shal we goo to Ramoth in Galaad to fyght, or shal I be in rest? And he answered: go ye & prosper, for ꝑ Lord shal deliuer it into youre handes. But the
D king sayd to him: how often tymes shal I adiure ꝑ that thou saye nothing but truth to me, in the name of the Lorde.

Thē he sayd: I se al Israel skatered in ꝑ mountaines, as shepe ꝑ haue no shepard And the Lord sayd: these haue no mayster lett thē returne euery man to hys house in peace. Thē sayd the king of Israel to Jehosaphat, did I not tel the, that he woulde not prophecye good vnto me, but euel?

And he answered: therfore heare ye thee word of the Lord. I saw the Lord syt vpō his seat, & all the cōpanye of heauen standing on his ryght hand & on his left. And the lord sayd: who shal deceaue Ahab kynge of Israel, that he may go & be ouerthro
E wē at Ramoth in Galaad. And whyle one sayd thus & another that, there came out a spirite & stode before the Lord & sayde: I wyl deceaue him. And ꝑ Lord said to him, how? And he said: I wil go out & wylbe a lyinge spirite in the mouthes of al his prophetes. And the Lord sayd, ꝑ shalt deceaue him & shalt preuayle, go out & do euē so And now behold ꝑ Lord hath put a lying spirite in the mouthes of all these thy prophetes, & yet ꝑ lord hath spokē euel against F the. And Zedekiah ꝑ sōne of Chananah, wēt to & smote Micheah vpō the cheke, & sayd: by what way wēt ꝑ spyrite of the lord frō me, to speake in ꝑ? And Micheah sayd thou shalt se the day whē ꝑ shalt rūne frō chābre to chābre, for to hyd thy self. Then sayd the king of Israel, take ye Micheah & deliuer hym to Amō the gouernour of ꝑ citie, & to Joas the kinges sōne & say, thus sayth the king: put this felow in prison, & fede him with bread & water of tribulatiō vntyl I come agayne in peace. And Micheah sayd: yf thou come agayne in peace, thē hath not ꝑ Lord spokē in me. And Micheah said moreouer, herkē to ye people euery one of you. And so ꝑ king of Israel & Jehosaphat the king of Juda wēte vp to Ramoth to Ramoth in Galaad. Thē said the king of Israel to Jehosaphat: chaūge the & get the to battel, but sey thou haue thine owne

G apparel vpon the. And the king of Israel chaūged him self, & thei wēt to battel. But the kinge of Siria cōmaunded the cappytaynes of hys charettes sayinge: se that ye fyght not agaynst small or great, saue agaynst the kyng of Israel onely.

And whē the captaynes of the charettes saw Jehosaphat, they had wēt he had ben ꝑ king of Israel, & therfore cōpased about him, to fight. But Jehosaphat cryed out, & the Lord holpe him, & God tyred them a way frō him. For whē the captaynes of ꝑ charettes perceaued ꝑ it was not the king of Israel, they turned backe agayne from him. And a certē mā drew hys bowe ignorauntly & smote the king of Israel betwene the ioyntes of his habergyne. And he said to the charet mā, turne thine hand & carye me out of the hoste, for I am hurt. And the battel arose that day. Howbeit the king of Israel cōtinued standing in hys charet agaynst the Siriens vntyl euē. And about the sunne goinge downe he dyed.

¶ After Jehosaphat was rebuked by the prophete Jehu, he called agayne the people to the honorynge of the Lorde God.

The .xix. Chapter.

A And Jehosaphat king of Juda returned to his house safe & sound to Jerusalē. And Je-
1 hu the sōne of Hanani ꝑ seer wēt out agaynst him & sayde to king Jehosaphat: oughtest thou to help the wicked, & to loue thē that hate the Lord In this werely is the wrath of ꝑ Lord vpō the. Neuerthelater there are good thinges found in the, in ꝑ thou hast put away groues out of the land, & hast prepared thyne

C take hede what ye do for ye be not iudges in the lawe of mā, but of god, which is with you in the wordes of the lawe. Wherfore let the feare of the Lord be with you, & take hede & do it. For ther is no vnright wilnesse in the Lord our God * nor regarding of persones, nor taking of rewardes.

Moreouer in Jerusalē did Jehosaphat set of the Leuites & of the priestes & of the aūciēt hrades of Israel, ouer the customes of the lord & causes of strife. And thē they returned agayne to Jerusalē. And he charged thē sayng: do euē so in the feare of the

And whatsoeuer come to you of your brethrē ꝑ dwel in their cities, betwene bloud & bloud, law, cōmaū demēt, ordinaūces & customes: se ꝑ ye warne thē, ꝑ they trespace not against the lord lest wrath come vpon you & on youre brethrē. Thus do & ye shal not offend. And se here Amariah the priest whiche is head ouer you in al matters of the Lord, & Zabadiah the sōne of Ismael a ruler in ꝑ house of Juda, he is ouer al causes concerninge the kyng, wych officers of the Leuites before you. ¶ The meruelouse victorye ꝑ the Lord gaue Jehosaphat kinge of Juda agaynste the Moabites, & the chyldren of Ammon, and them of Seir.

The .xx. Chapter.

After that came the childrē of Moab & the chyldren of Am-1 mō & wt them of the Ammonites agaynst Jehosaphat to battel. And ther came ꝑ tolde Jehosaphat sayinge: ther cometh a greate multitude against the frō the other syde ꝑ see out of Syria. And se they be in Hasasō Thamar which is Engadi. And Jehosaphat feared & set him self to seke the lord, & proclaymed fasting thorowout al Juda And Juda geathered thē selues together for to aske cōsell of the Lord. And therto ther came oute of al the cyties of Juda to seke the lord. And Jehosaphat stode in the cōgregatiō of Juda & Jerusalē in ꝑ house of the Lord before the new court & sayde:
B Lord god of our fathers, art not ꝑ god in heauen, & raygnest not ꝑ on al ꝑ kingdōs of the hethen? And in thine hand is power & might, ꝑ noma cā stand before ꝑ. Art not thou our god which didest cast out the enhabiters of this lād before thy people Israel, & gauest it to the sede of Abrahā thy louer for euer. And thei dwelt therin & ha-built ỹ a tẽple therin vnto thi name, & said whẽ euel cometh vpõ vs, as the swerde of iudgemẽt, pestilẽce or hõgre: thẽ yf we stãd before this house & before ỹ (for thy name is in this house) & shal crye vnto the in our tribulation, thou shalt heare and helpe.

And now behold, the childrẽ of Ammõ & Moab & moũte Seir, by which thou woldest not let Israel go: whẽ thei came out of Egipt: but thei departed frõ thẽ & destroyed thẽ not. And se, how they reward vs, to come for to caste vs oute of thy possession which ỹ hast possessed vs withall. O oure god, wilt thou not iudge thẽ? for we haue no might agaynst this great cõpanye that cometh agaynst vs. Neither wot we what to do: but our eyes be vnto the.

And as al Juda stode before the lord wt their yõge ones, their wyues & their childrẽ: the spirite of the lord came vpõ Jahaziel the sonne of Zacharias ỹ sonne of Banatah ỹ sonne of Jeiel the sõne of Mathaniah a Leuite of ỹ sõns of Asaph, euẽ as he was in ỹ middes of ỹ cõgregatiõ. And he sayd, herkẽ al Juda & the enhabiters of Jerusalẽ, & also king Iehosaphat. Thus sayth the Lorde vnto you be not afrerde or fayntherted by reason of this great multitude. For ỹ warre is not youres, but gods And to morow ye shal go downe to thẽ: se they come vp at Ziz, & ye shall fynde thẽ in the flagges of ỹ broke before ỹ wildernes of Jeruel. Moreouer it belongeth not to you for to fight i this quarel: but stey forthe & stand & behold ỹ help of ỹ lord which is wt you: feare not, nor let your hertz fayle you, O ye of Juda & of Jerusalẽ. To morow go out to thẽ: for the Lord is wt you.

And Iehosaphat bowed him selfe wyth his face to the citie, & al Juda & the enhabiters of Jerusalem fel before the Lorde, to bowe them selues vnto the lord. And ỹ Leuites & the childrẽ of the Cahathites & of the Corahites stode vp, to prayse the lorde god of Israel wt a loude voice on hie. And so thei arose erly in ỹ morning & get them out vnto the wildernesse of Thekua. And as they wẽt out Iehosaphat stode & saide heare me Juda & ye enhabiters of Jerusalẽ. Beleue in the lord your god & so shal ye cõtinue: & beleue his Prophetz & so shal ye prospere. And he gaue the people coũcel, & set the singers of the lord & them ỹ praised in holy apparel, to go out before the armie & to sate: prayse the Lord for hys mercy lasteth euer. And what time thei begã to laude & prayse, then the lord set layers awaye agaynst the childrẽ of Ammõ & Moab & mount Seir, to destroye them vtterly and to wype them out. And when they had made an ende of the enhabiters of Seir, then they holpe to destroye eche other.

And when Juda came to Maspha in the wildernes, thei loked vnto the multitude. And beholde, they were dead carcases fallen to the erth, & none escaped. And Iehosaphat & his people went to robbe away the spoyle of them & fõũd amõg thẽ abõdaũce of goodes & rayment & of pleasaũt Jewelles, & caught frõ thẽ more then they could carry away: so ỹ they were thre dates in gathering of the spoyle, it was so moch And the fourth day they assembled in the valeye of blessing, for ther they blessed the Lorde. And therfore they called the name of the sayd place the valey of blessing vnto this daye. And so al the men of Juda & Jerusalem returned & Iehosaphat amõg the thickeste of them, for to goo agayne to Jerusalem with gladnes: for the lord had made thẽ to reioyse of theyr enemies. And they came to Jerusalẽ wt psalteries & harpes and trõpettes, euen vnto the house of the Lord. And the feare of God fell in the kingdõs of al lãdes, when they had heard that the Lord fought against the enemies of Israel. And so the reaulme of Iehosaphat was in tranquilite: for hys god had geuen hym rest on euery syde.

And Iehosaphat raygned vpõ Juda, & was .xxv. yere olde when he begã to rayne & raygned .xxv. yere in Jerusalem. And his mothers name was Azuba the daughter of Silhi. And he walked in the way of Asa hys father & bowed not therfrõ, to do that was pleasaũt in the syght of the lord. Howbeit they putt not downe the hylaulters, neither dyd ỹ people yet prepare theyr hertes vnto the god of theyr fathers. The rest of the actes of Iehosaphat fyrst & last are written in the workes of Jehu the sonne of Hanani, whych noted them in the boke of the kynges of Israel.

After this Iehosaphat king of Juda ioyned hym selfe with Ohoziah kyng of Israel whyche was a wicked doar. And he coupled Ohoziah coupled him selfe with him, to make shippes to goo to Tharsis. And they made the shyppes in Azion Gaber. And Elieser the sõne of Dodauah of Maresa prophesyed against Iehosaphat: saying: because thou hast ioyned thy self wt Ohoziah the Lord hath broken thi workz. And ỹ shippz were broke ỹ thei were not able to go to Tharsis.

The .xxi. Chapter.

Iehosaphat layd hi to rest wt his fathers, & was buried wt his fathers in ỹ cytte of Dauid & Iehorã his sõne raygned in his rowme: which Iehorãhad other brethrẽ, sõnz of Iehosaphat Azariah Iehiel Zachariah Azariah Michael & Sephatiah. Al these were ỹ sõnz of Iehosaphat king of Juda. And their father gaue thẽ many great giftes in siluer, gould & other precious thingz wt stronge cyties in Juda: but the kingdõ he gaue to Iehorã, because he was ỹ eldest: And whẽ Iehorã was vp vpõ the kingdõ of his father & setelde he slue al his other brethrẽ wt ỹ swerde, & diuerse of the lordes of Israel therto * Iehorã was .xxxii. yere old whẽ he begã to raigne, & he raigned .viii. yere i Jerusalẽ. And he walked in ỹ wayes of ỹ kinges of Israel like as dyd ỹ house of Ahab (for a daughter of Ahab was hys wife) & he wrought euel in ỹ eyes of ỹ Lord. Howbeit ỹ Lord wold not destroy the house of Dauid, because of the couenaũt ỹ he had made wt Dauid, & as he promised to geue a light to him & to his sonnes for euer.

In his dayes ỹ Edomites departed frõ vnder ỹ hãd of Juda & made thẽ a kinge. And Iehorã wẽt forth wt his Lordes & all his charets wt him & rose by night & layde on ỹ Edomites. Which cõpased hym in & ỹ captaines of his charets. And so Edõ departed frõ vnder ỹ hãd of Juda vnto this day. That same tyme also dyd Iobnah depart frõ vnder his power, because he lefte the lord god of his fathers. Moreouer he made hilaulters in ỹ moũtainz of Juda, & caused ỹ enhabiters of Jerusalẽ to comit adultrie, & he * thrust Juda out of ỹ way.

And ther came a writing to him frõ Eliah ỹ prophet of this tenour. Thus sayth the Lord god of Dauid thy father: because thou walkedest not in the wayes of Iehosaphat thy father & in the wayes of Asa king of Juda, but walkedst in the wayes of the kingz of Israel & hast made Juda & the dwellers of Jerusalẽ go a whorig, like to the whorig of the house of Ahab, & hast therto slaine thi brethrẽ ỹ were thy fathers house, which were better thẽ thou: Therfore beholde the Lorde wil smyte the wyth a mightie plage in thy folke, in thy childrẽ, in thy wyues & in thy goodes. And ỹ shalt haue moche disease thorowe infirmitie in thy bowelles, vntyll thy bowelles fall out by reason of thy sycknesse, daye by daye.

And the Lord stered vp agaynst Iehorã the spirite of the Philistines & the Arabiãs ỹ bo. der on the black mores. Whych came agaynst Juda & al to tare the lande, & caried away al the substaũce ỹ was foũd in the kinges house, & therto hys sonnes, & his wiues: so ỹ ther was neuer a sõne lefte him saue Iehoahaz his yõgest sõne. And after al ỹ, the Lorde smote him in hys bowelles wt an incurable disease. And in pro cesse of tyme, euẽ about the ende of .ii. yere his guttes fel out by reason of his sickness and so he dyed of euell diseases. But they made him no bonefyre, lyke the bonefyres of hys fathers. Whe he began to raygne, he was .xxxii. yere olde, & raygned in Jerusalẽ .viii. yeare. And * he walked not pleasaũtly, & thei buried him in the citie of Dauid: but not in the sepulchre of the kinges ¶ Ohoziah raigneth in the rowme of Iehorã. Jehu king of Israel killeth Ohoziah & Athaliah putteth to death al the kynges Linage, one ỹ Joas escapeth.

The .xxii. Chapter.

And the enhabiters of Jerusalẽ made Ohoziah hys yõgest sonne king in his stede. For ỹ me of warre ỹ came wt the Arabiãs in the host, had slayne all hys elder sonnes. And so Ohoziah thee sõne of Iehorã kyng of Juda, was made king. Two & fourtie yere old was he whẽ he began to raygne, & raygned one yere in Jerusalẽ. His mothers name was Athaliah the daughter of Amri. And he walcked also in the wayes of ỹ house of Ahab, for his mother was his coũceler for to do euel Wherfore he did ỹ displesed ỹ lord like to the house of Ahab for they were his coũcelers after the death of hys fathers, to hys destructiõ. And he also walked after their counsel. And Jehozā sonne of Ahab king of Israel went to fyght with Hazael king of Syria at Ramoth in Galaad: & they of Ramoth wouded him. Wherfore he retur ned to be healed in Jezrael of the wouds which were geuē him at Ramoth, when he fought with Hazael kinge of Syria. And C Ohoziah the sonne of Jehozā king of Ju da wēt downe to se Jehozā the sonne of A hab at Jezrael, because he was diseased.

For it was thrust &c. of god vnderstād, to thintent that he comynge to Jehoram myght be ouerthro wē of Jehu
*For it was thrust into Ohoziah of God to go to Jehozā, & that whē he was come, he shuld goout with Jehozā against Jehu the sonne of Namsi whō the Lord had an noynted to destroye the house of Ahab.

And as Jehu was executing iustice vpō the house of Ahab. He found the Lōr des of Juda & the sonnes of the brethrē of Ohoziah that wayted on Ohoziah, and he slue them. And he sought Ohoziah, & they caught him wher he was hid in Samaria and broughte him to Jehu. And whē they had slayne hym they buried hym: because (sayd they) he was ỹ sonne of Jehosaphat which sought the Lorde wythal his herte. And ther was none of the house of Ohozi
D ah, that sould obtayne to be kinge.
*For Athaliah the mother of Ohoziah, whē she sawe her sonne was dead, arose & spake with al the sede of the kingdō of the iiii.reg.xi.a house of Juda. But Jehosabeath ỹ daughter of the kinge toke *Jehoas the sōne Of Joas. of Ohoziah and stale hym frō among the kinges sonnes that were slayne, & put him & his nource in a slepyng chambre. And so Jehosabeath ỹ daughter of king Jehozā & wife of Jehoiada the preste (because she was the sister of Ohoziah) hid hym frō Athaliah ỹ he slue hym not. And he was wt them hyd in the house of God syxe yeare. And Athaliah raygned ouer the lande.

¶ Jehoas the sonne of Ohoziah is made king & Athaliah is put to death.

The.xxiii. Chapter.

AND in the.vii. yere Jehoiada toke hert, & made a bond with A thre captaynes of hundredes iiii.Re.xi.a Azariah the sonne of Jeroha Ismael the sonne of Johanā Azariah the sonne of Obed, Maasiah the sonne of Adaiah and Elisaphat the sonne of Zechri. And they wente aboute in Juda and geathered thee Leuites oute of all the cities of Juda & the auncyente heades of Israel: & they came to Jerusalem. And al the congregatiō made a bonde wyth the kyng in the house of God. And Jehoiada sayde to them: beholde, thee kynges sonne must raygne ouer the chyldren of Dauid, as the Lord hath sayd.

This it is therfore that ye shal do. The third part of you prestes & Leuites which B come in the Saboth day, shal kepe the do res & another thyrd part shalbe in the kinges house & another third part shalbe in ỹ gate of the foundatiō, & al the people shal be in the *courtes of the house of the lord.
xxi.reg.xxiii And ther shal none come into the house of the Lord, saue the prestes & the Leuites ỹ minister. They shal go in, for they ar holy and al the people shal kepe the watch of ỹ Lord. And the Leuites shall compasse the kyng round about, & euery man his wepō in his hand: & what soeuer other man come into the house of the Lord, he shall dye for it: & they shalbe with ỹ king, as he cometh in and as he goeth out.

And the Leuites and al Juda dyd in al thinges as Jehoiada the prest cōmaūded,
C and toke euery man his men: both thē that came in & thē that wēt out the saboth daye: for Jehoiada the prest dyd let none of the cōpanies depart. And Jehoiada the priest deliuered to thee captaynes of hundredes speares & shildes & boukelars ỹ pertained to king Dauid & were in the house of god. And he set al the people & euery mā his wepō in his hand, frō ỹ right corner of ỹ hou se to ỹ lefte corner of the house, alonge by the aulter and the house rounde about the kynge. And they brought out the kynges sonne and put vpon hym the crowne & the That is, ỹ lawe of god. Deu. xvii. *testymonie, and made him king. And Je hoiada and his sonnes anoynted him and sayde: God saue the kynge.

When Athaliah hearde the noyse of the people rūninge & prayssinge the kinge: she wēt amōgethe people into the house of the Lord. And when she sawe the kinge stand at hys pyller in the enterynge, and the Lor des and trompettes about the kynge, and all the people of the lande reioysynge and blowing with trompettes, and the singers wyth instrumentes of musycke teachynge to prayse. Then she rente her clothes and cryed: treason, treason. And Jehoiada the Amaziah preste went out wyth the captaynes of hundredes that were apointed to gouerne the hoste and sayde to them: haue her oute without the arayes and whosoeuer folo weth her, let him be slayne with the sword. For the preste said: slay her not in the house

D of the Lorde. And they layde handes on her, and when she was come oute to the en tringe of the horsgate in the kynges hou se, they slue her there.
iiii.Re.xii.d *And Jehoiada made a bād betwene hi and al the people and the kynge, to be the Lordes people. And al the people went to ỹ house of Baal and destroyed it, & brake hys aulters and hys ymages, & slue Ma than the preste of Baal before the aulters. And Jehoiada put ỹ offices of ỹ house of the Lorde in the handes of the prestes the leuites, which Dauid had deuyded in cōpanyes for the house of the Lord, to offer burntofferynges vnto the Lorde, as it is wrytten in the law of Moses, wyth reioy syng and syngyng, as it was ordeyned by Dauid. And he set porters vnto the gates of ỹ house of the lorde, that none that was vncleane in any poynte shuld entre in.

And he toke the captaynes of hundre des and thee nobles, and the gouernoures of the people & all the folke of the lāde, & brought the king downe out of the house of the Lord, and they went thorow the hye gate in the kynges house, and set the king vpon the seate of the kynge dome. And all the people of the lande reioysed, & the cytie was in tranquilite: but they slue Athaliah wyth the swerde.

¶ Jehoas dueyng ỹ life of Jehoiada keyeth ỹ law, but after hys death he regardeth it not. He hyll the sacrificeth the Prophete. Jehoas is kylled of his owne seruauntes, and after hym reygneth Amaziah.

The.xxiiii. Chapter.

JEhoas was seuen yere olde iiii.Re.xii.b whē he begānne to raygne, & he raigned fourtie yere i Jeru salē. His mothers name was Zebiah of Bersabe. And Je hoas did ỹ pleased the Lorde al the dayes of Jehoiada the preaste. And Jehoiada gaue hym two wyues, and he begatte sōnes and daughters.

It chaūched after that, that Jehoas was mynded to mende the house of the Lorde. And vpon that he geathered to gether the prestes and the Leuites and said to them:
*go out thorowe the cytyes of Juda and iiii.re.xii.a geather of all Israel syluer, to strength ỹ house of youre God, yere by yere, & se that ye haste the thynge: howe be it the Leuites were slacke. Then the kynge called Jeho

For wycked Athaliah & her chyldren had broke the house of god, & had therto bestowed al the dedicat giftes of the house of ỹ Lorde, aboute Baals.

Wherfore at the kynges cōmaūdement, they made a cofer, & set it at the gate of the house of the Lorde: & made proclamacion thorow Juda & Jerusalem to bryng in to Exo.xxv.a ỹ Lord *the taxatiō of Moses the seruaūt of god, which he set vpō Israel in the wyl dernesse. And the Lordes and al the people

And whē ỹ time came that the chest shulde be brought in by the hādes of the Leuites at the apoyntmēt of the king, whē they saw ỹ ther was moche money: then came the kinges scribe & one apointed by the hye preste, and powred out that was in ỹ cofer, & thē toke it & caryed it to his place againe, & thus they did day by daye, and geathered moche moneye.

And the kynge & Jehoiada gaue it to worckmē that wrought vpō the house of the Lorde, & hyred Masons & carpenters

And the workmen wrought & ỹ worck mended thorowe their hādes: and they made the house of god as it ought to be, and strengthed it. And whē they had fynished it, they brought the rest of the money to the kynge and Jehoiada, & therwyth were made vessels for ỹ house of the Lorde: euen vessels to ministre with al and to serue for burntofferynges & la delles and vessels of goulde & siluer. And they offered buntofferinges in ỹ house of the lord contynually, all the dayes of Je hoiada. And Jehoiada waxed olde & full because he had done good in Israel, and on god & on his house. And after the deeth of Iehoiada, came ye lordes of Juda & made obeysaūce to the kynge. And then he herkened vnto the. And so they lefte the house of the lord god of their fathers, and serued groues and Images. And then came ther wrath vpō Juda & Jerusalē, for this their trespaces sake. Not wtstandyng yet God sēt Prophetes to the, to bring the agayne vnto the lord. And they testified vnto the. But they wolde not heare.

And ye spirite of God came vpō Zacharias the sonne of Iehoiada the preste, & he stept vp aboue the people & sayde to them. F Thus saith god: why trāsgresse ye the cōmaūdemētes of ye Lorde, ye shal therfore not prospere, but as ye haue forsakē hi, so shal he forsake you. * Wherupō they cōspired against hym & stoned hi wt stones, Mat.xxiii. b at the cōmaundemēt of the kynge: euen in the court of ye house of the lord. And so Ioas the king remēbred not the kyndenes which Iehoiada his father had done to hi, but slue his sōne. And whē he died, he sayde: the Lord se and requite a recoynge.

And whē the yere was out, the hoste of ye Sirriens came agaynste hym: & they came to Juda & Jerusalem, and destroied al the lordes of the people frō amōg the people and sent al the spoile of them vnto ye king G to Damasco. And though ye armie of Siria came with a small cōpanye of men, yet the lord deliuered a very greate hoste into their handes, because they had forsakē the lord god of their fathers. And therto they serued Iehoas accordynge.

And as sone as they were departed frō hi, though they left hym in great diseases: yet his owne seruātes cōspyred agaynst him for ye bloud of ye chyldrē of Iehoiada the preest, & slue him on his beed. And whē he was dead, they buried him in the citie of Dauid: but not in ye sepulchres of ye kinges And these ar they ye cōspired against hym: Zabad ye sōne of Samaath an Ammonite & Iehosabad ye sonne of Simrith a Moabite. And his sōnes and the summe of the tare that came to him, and the foūdatiō of the house of God, are written in the storye of the booke of kinges. And Amaziah his sonne raygned in his steade.

¶ Amaziah ouercometh ye Edomites. And Ioas king of Israel ouercometh and kylleth Amaziah.

The.xxv. Chapter.

AMaziah was.xxv. yere olde whē he begāne to to raigne, & he raigned.xxix. yere in Jerusalē. His mothers name was Iehoiadā of Jerusalē. And he dyd ye pleased the Lorde: but not wt the hoale herte. And as sone as he was seteled in the kingdom, he slue the ye killed ye king hys father. But he slue not their children as it is wrytten in the law, euen in the boke of Moses to whom the Lord commaūded sayinge: * the fathers shal not dye for the chyldrens cause, nor the chyldren for the fathers, but euery man shall dye for hys owne synne. And Amaziah gathered Juda together and made captaynes ouer thousandes & ouer hundredes in the houses of their fathers throwout all Juda & Beniamin. And he numbred them frō.xx. yere and aboue, & found them thre hūdred thousād lustie men able to go to battell, & that couldе handle speare and shild. And he hyred thereto an hūdred thousand lightynge men oute of Israell, for an hūdred talentes of syluer.

For god hath power to help or to cast downe. And Amaziah sayde agaīne to ye mā of god, what shal we do the, for ye hundred talētes which I haue geuen vnto ye host of Israel? And the mā of God sayde: the Lorde is able to geue the moche moze then that.

And then Amaziah seuered the armie ye was come to hym out of Ephraim, to go whom againe. Wherfore they were exceadyng wroth wt Juda, & returned to their owne whome in great angre.

And Amaziah toke herte & caryed oute his host & wēt to saltdale. * Wher he slue of the children of Seir.x. thousād. And other ten thousād ye chyldrē of Juda toke aliue, & carted them vnto the topp of a rock and

And it chaunced, after ye Amaziah was come from the slaughter of ye Edomites, & had brought ye gods of the children of Seir, he set the vp to be his Gods, and bowed hym self before the & burned cēse vnto the. Wherfore ye Lorde was wroth wt Amaziah & sent to him a prophete, & said to hym: why sekest thou ye Gods of ye people whiche were not able to deliuer their owne people out of thine hādes? And as ye prophete spake to him, he said to ye prophet: hauest made the of the kynges councel? cease, lest thou be beaten. And the prophete ceased & sayde I am sure that God hath take coūcel to destroy ye, because ye haste done thys, and obeyest not my councell.

Then Amaziah king of Juda toke aduise & sent to Joas the sonne of Iehoahaz ye sōne of Jehu kyng of Israel & sayd: come, & let vs se ether other. And Ioas king of Israel sent againe to Amaziah king of Juda saying: a thistell in Libanon sēt to a Cedar tree of Libanō sayig: * geue thy daughter to my sonne to wyfe. But there came ye wilde beastes of Libanō & troade downe ye thistell. Thou thinkest: se, I haue beate ye Edomites, therfore thine hert ariseth to glorifie thy self. Now bide at home: what meadeth ye to prouoke to euell, ye thou perishe and Juda with the.

But Amaziah rested not: for it came of god, euen to deliuer them into ye hādes of their enemies: and that because they had sought the Gods of the Edomites. And Ioas king of Israel came vp: & they sawe ether other, both he & Amaziah king of Juda at Bethsames i Juda. And Juda was put to the worse before Israel, & fled euery mā to hys tent. And Ioas king of Israel toke Amaziah kyng of Juda the sonne G of Iehoas ye sōne of * Ohoziah at Bethsames: & brought hym to Jerusalem, & tare the wal of Jerusalē frō the gate of Ephraim vnto the corner gate, foure hūdred cubites lōg. And he toke al ye goulde & siluer and all the Jewelles that were foūd in the house of God wyth Obed Edom and the treasure of the kynges house & hostages, and returned to Samaria.

And Amaziah the sōne of Iehoas kig of Juda lyued after the deethe of Ioas sone of Iehoahaz king of Israel.xv. yere. The rest of the actes of Amaziah fyrst & last are wrytte in the boke of the kinges of Juda & Israel. And after ye tyme that Amaziah did turne away frō the lord, they cōspired treason agaynst him in Jerusalem: and he fled to Lachis. Whether they sēt after him & slue him there, & brought hym vp wythe horsses and buryed hym with hys fathers in the cytye of Juda.

¶ After ye deeth of Amaziah raigneth Oziah which is stryken with the lepre, and Ioatham raigneth in hys rowme.

The.xxvi. Chapter.

THen al the people of Juda toke Oziah wtch was.xvi. yere olde, & made hi king in the rowme of his father Amaziah. And he builte Eloth and brought it againe to Juda after the kyng was layde to rest wt his fathers. xvi. yeare olde was Oziah whē he began to raygne, & he raigned.lii. yere in Jerusalē. Hys mothers name was Iecaliah of Jerusalē. And he dyd that pleased the Lorde, in all poyntes as dyd hys father Amaziah. And he sought god while Zacharias the teecher to se God lyued: & as longe as he soughte the Lorde, God made him prospere.

And he went to battel against the Philistines & brake downe the walles of Geth, & the walles of Jabneh & the walles of Asdod, & built cities about Asdod & among the philistines. And god holpe him against the philistines & against the Arabiens ye dwelt in Gurbaal, & against the Meunites. And the Ammonites gaue trybute to Oziah, and his name spredе abroade euen to Egipte for he played the man & exceaded. Moreouer Oziah buylt towres in Jerusalem ouer the corner gate, and ouer the valeye gate, and ouer other corners, and made them strong. And he built towres in the wildernes & digged many welles. For he had moch catell, both in the valeye and also in the playne: and plowmen and vine dressers in the mountaynes and in Charmel, for he loued husbandrye.

And Oziah had an host of fightig men that went out to warre in the arimy & were Joatham told & numbred by Jeiel the scrybe & Maasiah an officer, vnder the hande of Hananiah one of ỹ kinges Lordes. And ỹ hoale nũbre of the auncyent heedes of the mẽ of myght were .ii. thousande & fyue hũdred and vnder the handes of thẽ was ỹ armie of the hoste, .iii. hundred & seuẽ thousande, & fyue hundred that made warre wythe myght & strẽgth, to helpe the king against hys enemyes. And Oziah prouided them throrow out all ỹ hoste shildes, speares, helmetes, habergynnes, bowes & slynges for stones. And he made engynes in Jerusalem by the crafte of artificers to be on the towres & corners, to shote arowes & great stones wt al. And hys name spreade farre abroade, for he was wonderfully holpe, vntyl he was become myghtye.

And in hys greatnesse hys hert arose, ỹ he was marred: & transgressed agaynst ỹ Lorde hys God. For he wente into the tẽple of the Lorde to burne cense vpon the aulter of incense. But Asariah the preaste went in after him withe foure skore preastes of the lord ỹ were bolde mẽ. And they stepte to Oziah ỹ kynge & sayde to him: it pertaineth not to the Oziah to burne cẽse vnto the Lord, but to the prestes ỹ childrẽ of Aaron that ar cõsecrate for to burne incense. Come out of the sanctuarye, for thou hast trespaced, and it shalbe no worshepe to the before the Lord God.

And Oziah was wroth & had cẽse in his hand to offer, & in his indignacyõ against the preast, * ỹ leprosye sprange in hys fore heed before the prestes in the house of the Lorde, euen beside the incense aulter. And Asariah the cheefe preste wal the other prestes looked vpõ hi: & behold he was a leper in hys forehed, & they vered hym thence. And therto he was fayne to go out, because the Lord had plaged hym. And Oziah the kyng contynued a lepre vnto the daye of his deeth & dwelt in an house at libertie bowbe it, he was cast out of the house of the Lorde. And Joatham his sonne had ỹ gouernaũce of the kynges house and iudged the people of the lande.

The rest of the actes of Oziah both first and last, did Isaiah the prophete the sõne of Amos wrote. And whẽ Oziah was layde to rest with his fathers, they buried him with his fathers in ỹ feld of ỹ buriall of ỹ kinges. For they sayde: he is a leper. And Joatham his sonne raigned in hys stead.

The .xxvii. Chapter.

IOatham was .xxv. yere olde whẽ he begãne to raigne, and raigned .xvi. yere i Jerusalẽ. His mothers name was Jerusah ỹ daughter of Zadoc. And he did ỹ pleased ỹ Lord in al pointes as dyd his father Oziah: saue, that he came not to the temple of the Lord, and that the people did yet corrupt them selues. He built the hye gate of the tẽple of ỹ Lord, & on the wall Ophel he bupilt moch. Moreouer he built cytyes in the mountaines of Juda, & in the wood coũtre he built castelles and towres.

And he fought with the kinge of ỹ chyldren of Ammon, and preuayled agaynste thẽ. And the childrẽ of Ammõ gaue hym the same yere an hundred talẽtes of siluer, & ten thousand quarters of whete and as moche barleye. So moche also did ỹ chyldren of Ammõ geue him the seconde yere and the thyrde too. And Joatham became mightie, because he directed hys way before the Lorde hys God.

The rest of the actes of Joatham & all hys warres and hys wayes are written in the boke of the kynges of Israel and Juda. He was .xxv. yere olde when he begãne to raygne, and raygned .xvi. yere in Jerusalẽ. And when Joathã was layde to rest with hys fathers they buryed hym in the cytye of Dauid: and Ahaz his sonne rayg ned in his steade.

The .xxviii. Chapter.

AHaz was .xx. yere olde whẽ he beganne to raigne, & raigned xvi. yere in Jerusalem. And he did not ỹ pleased the lorde, as did his father Dauid: but walked in the wayes of the kynges of Israell, and made thereto Baals of metall. And he offered cense in the valey of ỹ chyldren of Hennon, and burnt his children in fyre after the abhomination of the nacyõs which the lord cast out before the childrẽ of of Israell. And he offered burnte cense in hyllaulters and on mountaines and vnder euery grene tre.

Wherfore the Lorde hys God deliuered him into the hãd of the king of the Syries: whych bet him & caryed away a great multitude of hys captiue into Damascon. And thereto he was delyuered into ỹ hande of the kyng of Israel which slue of his a mighty slaughter. For Phakeh ỹ sõne of Romeliah slue in Juda an hũdred & twẽtye thousand in one daye, & al fightinge mẽ: & that because they had forsaken ỹ Lorde God of theyr fathers. And Zechri a mightie mã in mouñt Ephraim slue Maasiah ỹ kinges sõne, & Azricã the lord stuarde of houshold, and Elcanah ỹ was nexte to ỹ kyng. And the chyldrẽ of Israel toke preseners of theyr brethren two hundred thousãd wiues, sõnes & daughters, & ther to caried away moche spoyle of them, and brought it to Samaria.

But ther was a prophete of the lordes named Obed which went out to the host that came to Samaria & sayde to thẽ: se, because ỹ Lord god of your fathers was wroth wt Juda, he deliuered thẽ into your handes. And ye haue slaine thẽ with cruelnesse preacheth vp to heauen. And now ye purpose to kepe vnder the chyldren of Juda and Jerusalem & to make them bonde mẽ & bondwemen. What other thyng do ye (ye vnhappye) then offende ỹ lord your God. But now heare me, and delyuer the captyues agayne whiche ye haue take of youre brethren: for the great wrath of the Lorde is vpon you.

And certayne of the heedes of ỹ chyldrẽ of Ephraim, as Asariah ỹ sõne of Johanã Barachiah ỹ sonne of Meshimeloth, Jehezekiah the sonne of Sellum & Amasa ỹ sõne of Hadalai stode vp against them that came from warre, and sayde vnto them: ye shal not bringe in the captyues hyther. For where we haue offended the Lorde al readye, ye attend to adde moze to oure synnes & trespace. For oure trespace is greate all readye, & there is featre wrath vpõ Israel. And vpõ ỹ mẽ of armes left ỹ captyues & the spoyle before the Lordes & all the congregacyon.

And there arose certayne apoynted ther to by name, & toke the preseners & clothed al ỹ were naked among them, of the spoyle, & arayed thẽ & shoed them & gaue them to eate & to drynke & anoynted thẽ, & caried al that were feble of them vpon asses and brought thẽ to Jericho ỹ citye of Paulme trees fast by their brethrẽ: and then returned to Samaria agayne.

And at ỹ same tyme king Ahaz sent vnto the kinges of Assur to haue help. And ỹ Edomites came yet agayne & slue of Juda & caried away some captyues. And the Philistines inuaded ỹ cities in ỹ low coũtrey & the south of Juda: and toke Bethsames, Ataion, Gaderoth & Socoh with the townes longyng therto, & Thimna wt ỹ townes of the same, & Gisso wher townes, & dwelt therin. For the Lord brought Juda lowe, because of Ahaz kynge of Juda which made Juda naked & trãsgressed against ỹ lord. And Thiglah palneser kinge of Assur came vpõ him & besieged him, but preuailed not against him. For Ahaz toke away out of ỹ house of ỹ lord & out of the kinges house & out of the lordes houses, & gaue vnto ỹ kig of Assur, though it holpe him not. And therto in ỹ verye tyme of his tribulacõ did kinge Ahaz trespace yet moze against the lorde. For he offered vnto the gods of thẽ of Damasco which bet him & said, because the gods of ỹ Syriens help thẽ, therfore wil I offer to them, ỹ they may helpe me also. But they were his destructiõ & the destructiõ of al Israel. And Ahaz gathered together ỹ vessels of the house of god & brake thẽ, & shut vp the dozes of the house of ỹ lord, & made hi aulters in all cozners of Jerusalẽ. And in al ỹ cities of Juda citie by citie he made hil aulters to burne incense vnto other gods, & angred the lord god of his fathers. The rest of his actes & al his waies both first & last ar writtẽ in ỹ boke of the kiges of Juda & Israel. And whẽ Ahaz was layde to rest wt his fathers, they buried hi in the cytie of Jerusalẽ: but brought him not vnto the sepulchres of the kinges of Juda. And * Hezekiah his sonne raigned in his stead

HEzekiah began to raigne whẽ he was .xxv. yere olde, & raigned, xxix. yere i Jerusalẽ. And his his mothers name was Abiah the daughter of Zacharyah. And he dyd that was right in the sight of the Lorde in all pointes as did Dauid his father. He opened ye dores of ye house of the Lorde in the fyrste yere & fyrst moneth of his raygne, & he repaired the. And he brought in ye prestes & ye Leuites & gethered the together into the eeststrete: & sayde vnto the.

Heare me ye Leuites: purifye your selues & halow the house of the Lorde God of your fathers, & bringe out ye filthinesse out of the holy place. For oure fathers haue trespaced & done euel rauozedly in ye eyes of ylozd our God: & haue forsake him, and turned away their faces frō ye habitacio of ylozd & turned to their backes. And beside ye they haue shutt vp ye dores of the porch & quēthed ye lāpes & haue nether burned cēse noz offered burntoffringes in the holy place vnto the god of Israel.

Wherfore the wrath of ye lozd fel on Juda & Jerusalē: & he shatered them & made the so thynne that men hisse at it, euē as ye se withe youre eyes. For se, oure fathers were ouerthrowen with the swerde & oure sonnes, oure daughters & our wiues were carped awaye captyue for the same cause. Now haue I in my hert to strike a couenaūte vp the Lozd God of Israel: ye his wrath maye cease. Nowe therfore my sonnes be not necligent: for the lozde had chosen you to stand before him and for to mynystre & burne offeryinges to him.

Thē the Leuites arose: Mahath ye sone of Amasai & Joel the sone of Asariah beyng of the childre of the Cahathites: & the sones of Merari, Kis the sone of Abdi & Asariah the sone of Jehaleleel: & of ye Gersonites, Joah the sone of Simma & Edē ye sone of Joah: & of ye sones of Elizaphā, Simri & Jeiel: & of the sones of Asaph, Zacharyah and Mathanyah: & of the sonnes of Heman, Jehtel & Semei: & of the sonnes of Jeduthū, Semaiah & Oziell. And they gethered their brethre & purified the selue, & then wēt at ye cōmaūdement of the kinge by the word of the lozd, for to clence the house of the lozd. And the prestes went to the house of the lozde to clense it, and brought out al the vnclenesse ye they foūde in ye tēple of the lozde, & in the courte of the house of the lozd. And the Leuites toke it and carted it out in to the broke Cedrō. They begāne the fyrste daye of the fyrste moneth to purify, and came the eight day to the porche of the lozd so ye they had purged the house of the lozd in eyght dayes & the .xvi. daye of the fyrste moneth they made an ende.

And then they wēt into Hezekiah ye kig & sayd: we haue clensed all the house of the lozd, & the aulter of burntoffringes vp all his vessels, & the shewbreed table with all his aparel: and therto al the vessels which king Ahaz did cast a side when he raigned & trāsgressed, them we haue repaired & sanctyfied: & se, they are before the aulter of the Lorde. And * Hezekiah the kyng rose erlie and gethered the Lordes of the cytye & went vp to the house of the lozd. And ther were broughte seuen oxen, seuen rammes, seuē lambes & seuen kyddes to be a synne offeryinge for the kyngdom, for the sanctuarye & for Juda: And he cōmaūded the prestes the sones of Aaron to offer them on the aulter of the Lorde.

And they slue the oxē: & the prestes receaued the bloud & sprynkled it on the aulter: and they slue the rāmes and sprynkled the bloud vpō the aulter: and they slue the lābes and sprynkled the bloud vpō the aulter. And thē they brought forth the kiddes of the synneoffering before the king & the cōgregacion which put their hādes vpon the. And the prestes slue them and offered the bloud of them vpō the aulter, to make satisfactiō for al Israel: for the kyng sayde: ye the burntoffring and ye synneoffryng shuld serue for al Israel. And they sett the Leuites in the house of the lozd w̄ symbales, psalteries and harpes accordynge to the cōmaūdemētes of Dauid and of gad the kinges sear of visiōs and of Nathā ye prophet. For so was the cōmaundemēt of the lozd thorow the hād of his prophetes. And so the Leuites stode w̄ the instrumentes of Dauid, and the prestes w̄ trōpets. And Hezekiah cōmaūded to offer ye burnt offeringe vpon the aulter. And when the burntoffering begāne, the sōg of the lozd beganne, & the trompetes with the instrumentes of Dauid king of Israel. And al the cōgregacion bowed them selues, & the singers sāg, & the trōpets blew, and continued vntil ye burntoffering was finished

And

And whē they had made an ende of the burntoffring, the king & al that were with him kneled downe & bowed them selues & gaue praise & thankes. And Hezekiah the kyng and the Lordes bade the Leuites to prayse the lozd w̄ the wordes of Dauid & of Asaph the sear of visiōs. And the Leutes praised that thei retoysed agayne, & the other stowped & bowed them selues.

And Hezekiah answered & sayd: nowe ye haue fylled your hādes to the Lozd, go to & bring in the sacrifices & thankeoffringes into the house of the Lozd. And the cōgregatiō brought in the sacrifices & thāke offringes, & al that were willing broughte burntoffringes. And ye nūbre of ye burntoffringes which the cōgregatiō broughte in was .lxx. oxē & an hūdred rāmes & two hūdred lābes: & al for burntofferinges to the Lozd. And beside that they dedicated sixe hundred oxē & thre thousande shepe.

But the prestes were to few, & were not able to flaye al the burntoffringes. Wherfore theyr brethre the Leuites holpe them tyl the worke was ended, & vntyll the prestes were sanctified. For the Leuites were purer herted to sanctifie the selues the the prestes. And therto ye burntoffringes were many with the fatte of the peaceoffringes & the drinkeoffringes that belōgeth to the burntoffringes. And so the seruice pertayning to the house of the Lorde went forward. And Hezekiah retoysed & al the people, that god had made the folke so ready: for the thyng was sodenlye done.

(G) Hezekiah renueth the feast of passeouer.

The .xxx. Chapter.

(A) And Hezekiah sent to al Israel & Juda: & therto wrote letters to Ephraim & Manasseh that they shoulde come to the house of the Lozd at Jerusalem, to offer passeouer vnto the Lozd god of Israell. And the kynge helde a councel wyth hys Lordes and all the congregatyon at Jerusalem to kepe the feast of passeouer in the seconde moneth. For they could not kepe it at that tyme: for there were not Prestes ynoughe sanctified, neyther was the people geathered together to Jerusalem. And the thynge pleased the king and all the congregatiō. And they decreed that it shulde be proclaymed thorowe out all Israell frō Bersabe to Dan, that they shulde come and holde the feast of passeouer vnto the Lozd God of Israel at Jerusalē: for they had not often done it, as it is writtē how they shulde.

And the messengers wēt wyth letters of the hand of the king & of his Lordes thorow out al Israel & Juda, at the cōmaundemēt of the king which sayd: chyldren of Israel, turne agayne vnto the Lozd God of Abrahā, Isaac & Israel, and so wyll he turne to the remnaūt of you that are escaped out of the hādes of the king of Assur. And be ye not like your fathers & your bretherē which trespased agaynst the Lozd of your fathers, whych therfore gaue the vp that they ar wasted as ye se. Wherfore be not stiffnecked like vnto your fathers, but yelde your selues vnto the lozd, & come to his holy place which he hath sanctified for euer, & serue the Lozd your God, that hys wrath may turne frō you. For yf ye turne vnto the Lorde, then your brethren & your children shal fynd cōpassiō in the presence of thē that holde them captyue, that they maye come agayne vnto this land: for the Lozd your God is full of mercy and compassiō, & wyl not turne his face from you, yf ye turne agayne to hym.

And the postes went from cytie to cytie thorow out the land of Ephraim and Manasseh & euē vnto Zabulō. But they laughed them to skorne & mocked the. Neuertheless yet dyuerse of Asser, Manasseh & of Zabulon meakened the selues & came to Jerusalem. And therto the hand of god was in Juda, to make the of one accorde to do the cōmaundement of the king & the captaynes, which was according to ye worde of the Lozd. And so there assembled to Jerusalē moch people & a mightie greate congregation, to holde the feaste of swete bread in the seconde monethe.

And they arose & put awaye the aulters (C) ye were in Jerusalē. And therto all the incense thet dyd away & cast thē into ye broke Cedron. And they slue passeouer the .xiiii. day of the second moneth. And the prestes and Leuites sanctified thē selues for shame, & brought in the burntoffringes into the house of the Lorde. And they stode in theyr stādyng after theyr maner accordig to the lawe of Moses the mā of god. And the prestes sprinkled the bloud receauinge it of the handes of the Leuites. And because there were many in the cōgregatiō that were not sanctified: and therfore dyd thee Leuites slay passeouer for al that were not cleane to sanctifye thē to the Lorde.

There was very moche people oute of Ephraim, Manasseh, Issakar and Zabulon that were not cleane, and therfore dyd eate Passeouer otherwyse then wyttynge specyfieth. But Hezekiah prayed for them and sayde: the good Lorde be mercyefull to all that sett theyr hertes to seke the God that is thee Lorde God of theyr fathers, thoughe they doo it not accordinge to thee clennesse of the holye place. And the Lord hearde Hezekiah & healed the people. And so the chyldren of Israel that were found at Jerusalem, helde thee feaste of swete bread seuen dayes wyth greate gladnesse, and thee Leuites and the Prestes praysed the Lord daye by daye wyth lowde instrumentes.

And Hezekiah spake hertelye vnto thee Leuites that hadde good vnderstandinge of the Lorde. And they dyd eate that feast seuen dayes longe and offered peaceofferinges & thanked the Lorde God of theyr fathers. And the hoale assemble toke counsell to kepe seuen dayes mo: and they held those seuen dayes wyth gladnesse. For Hezekiah kyng of Juda gaue for heaueofferinges to the congregatiō a thousand oxē and seuē thousande shepe. And the lordes gaue to the congregation for heaueoffringes a thousand oxen & ten thousand shepe And the prestes sanctified thē selues, that they were ynoughe.

And al the congregation of Juda with the prestes & Leuites, & al the congregatiō that came out of Israel & the straungers, both that came out of the land of Israel & that dwelte in Juda, reioysed: & there was great ioye in Jerusalē. For sence the tyme of Salomon the sonne of Dauid kynge of Israel it happened not so in Jerusalem And the prestes & the Leuites arose & blessed the people, and theyr voyce was heard and theyr prayer went vp vnto hys holye dwelling place heauen.

¶ After Hezekiah had called agayne the people vnto the way of the Lord, he ordeyneth the prestes, vnto whom he cōmaundeth to geue tythes.

The. xxxi. Chapter.

And when they had fynished al this: thē al Israel that were founde in the cyties of Juda, wēt out & brake the Images & cut downe the groues, & all to brake the hilaulters & the other aulters throwout al Juda & Bē Jamin, Ephraim and Manasseh, vntyll they had made an ende of thē. And afterwarde all the chyldren of Israel returned euerye man to his possession in theyr owne cyties.

And Hezekiah set the prestes & the Leuites in theyr order to wayte by course, euery man accordinge to his office whither preste or Leuite: for the burntoffringes & peaceoffringes, & to minister & to thācke & to pray in the gates of the lodge of ỹ lord. And the king gaue a portiō of his substāce for burntoffringes at morning & euē, & for burntoffringes on the Saboth dayes and new mones & other solempne feastes, accordīg* as it is writtē in the law of the Lord. And he bade the people that dwelte in Jerusalē to geue the parte of ỹ prestes & Leuites, that they myght be mayntened in the lawe of the Lorde. And as sone as ỹ worde came abroade the chyldrē of Israel brought aboūdance of first frutes of corne, wyne, oyle & hony, & of al maner of frutes of the felde: & the tithes of al manor of thinges brought they in pleteoussly. And ỹ chyldrē of Israel & Juda that dwelte in ỹ cyties of Juda, they also brought in the tythes of oxē & shepe, and tythes of dedicate thinges which were dedicated to the Lord theyr God, & put thē on heapes. In ỹ thyrde moneth they begāne to laye the heapes and fynished them the seuenth.

And whē Hezekiah & the Lordes came & saw the heapes, they blessed the Lorde & his people Israel. And Hezekiah questioned wt the prestes & the Leuites cōcerning the heapes. And Azariah ỹ chefe preest of the house of Zadock answered him & said sense they began to bring the heaueoffringes into the house of thee Lorde, we haue eate & had ynough, and yet lefte al aboundāce, for the Lorde hathe blessed hys people & therof is this heape lefte. And Hezekiah bade dresse vp ỹ storehouses about ỹ house of the Lord. And so they dyd & caried in the heaueoffringes and the tythes and the dedycate gyftes euen of fyde'lyte.

Ouer

Ouer whych Chonaniah ỹ Leuite had the rule wyth Semei hys brother nexte to him. And Jehiel, Asariah, Nahath, Asael, Jerimoth Josabad, Eliell, Jesmachiah, mahath & Bananiah were ouerseers ordeined by Chonantah & Semei hys brother, at the appoyntmēt of Hezekiah the king & Asariah the ruler of the house of god. And Chore the sonne of Jemna ỹ Leuite porter of the East dore had the ouersyghte of the frewilloffringes of god, to geue heaue offringes vnto the Lord, & was ouer thynges moost holye. And vnder hym were Eden, Miniamin, Jesua, Semeiah, Amariah & Sechenyah in the cyties of the prestes of theyr fydelyte, to geue to theyr brethren theyr portions, as wel to the smal as to the greate.

And to the males also that were rekened from thye yere and aboue amonge all that wēt into the house of the Lord day by day to do seruyce & to wayte by course. And to the prestes that were rekened in the housholdes of theyr fathers frō twentie yere & aboue, to wayte when theyr courses came. And to thē that were rekened throwe out al their babes, wiues, sonnes and daughters throwout al the congregation. For to the fydelite of them dyd men commytte theyr sanctified gyftes. And therto amōg the chyldren of Aaron the prestes were menamed by name in the feldes of the suburbes of all theyr cyties, cytie by cytie, for to geue portyons to al the males of the prestes, and to all that were rekened amonge the Leuites.

And of thys maner dyd Hezekiah throwe oute all Juda, & dyd that was good & right and truthe, before thee Lorde hys God. And in all the workes that he began in the seruyce of the house of God, to seke hys God after the Lawe and commaundemente, that dyd he wythe all hys herte, and prospered.

¶ Sennaherib, which should haue besieged Jerusalē, as Esaie of the kynges Hezekiah dyeth after whom succeedeth Manasseh.

The. xxxii. Chapter.

After these dedes and truthe, Sennaherib kynge of Assur came & entred into Juda and pytched agaynst the stronge cyties & thought to draw thē to hym. And whē Hezekiah saw that Sennaherib was come and that he was purposed to fyght agaynst Jerusalē: he toke counsell wyth hys captaynes and mē of might to stoppe the water of the fountaynes that were without the cytie: and they were content to helpe hym. And so there geathered moche people to geather and stopte all the welles and the broke that ranne throwe the myddes of the lande, entendynge that the kynges of Assur shuld not fynd moch water when they came. And he went to lustely and buylt vp the walle where it was broken, and made towres aboue vppon, & yet another walle wythoute, and repayred Melo the citie of Dauid, and made many dartes and shyldes.

And he sette ỹ captaynes of warre ouer the people & geathered them together into the large strete of the gate of the cytie and spake sentlye to them, sayinge. Plucke vp youre hertes & be stronge: Be not afrayde or in any wyse discouraged for drede of ỹ King of Assur, & of the great multitude ỹ is with him: * for ther is one greater wyth vs thē with him. With hym is an arme of flesshe: But with vs is the Lorde our God for to helpe vs & to fyghte oure batayles. And the people were well couraged wythe the wordes of Hezekiah King of Juda.

After that Sennaherib kinge of Assur sent of his seruauntes to Jerusalē (he hym self lynge before Lachis & al his kingdō with him), vnto Hezekiah kyng of Juda, & vnto al Juda ỹ were at Jerusalē saying. Thus sayth Sennaherib king of Assur: * wherin do ye trust, O ye ỹ are beseged in Jerusalē & Hezekiah deceaueth you, to delyuer you to death, hōgre, & thrust, saying: ỹ Lorde oute God shal rydde vs out of the hand of the king of Assur. Is it not ỹ Hezekiah ỹ put downe his hilaulters & his other aulters, & cōmaūded Juda and Jerusalē saying: before one aulter ye shal bow your selues & vpon that offer also.

Moreouer haue ye not hearde what I & my fathers haue done vnto thee people of al landes: were the Gods of the people of other landes able to saue theyr landes out of my hande: which of al the Gods of those nacīōs ỹ my fathers destroyed was it, ỹ could delyuer his people out of myne hād, ỹ your God shulde be able to delyuer you out of mine hand: Wherfore now let not Hezekiah deceaue you ether perswade D you of thys facyō, nor yet beleue him. For as no God among so many nacyons and kyngdoms, was able to rydde hys people out of myne hande and the handes of my fathers: euen so moch lesse shal your God kepe you out of myne hand. And yet more dyd his seruaūtes speake agaynst the Lor de God & agaynst his seruaūte Hezekiah.

And therto he wrote a letter to raple on the Lord God of Israel & spake therin sayig as the Gods of the nacōs of other landes haue not deliuered their people out of my ne hand, nomore shal the god of Hezekiah delyuer his people out of myne hand. And they cryed wyth a lowde voyce in the Je-wes speache vnto the people of Jerusalē that were on the walles, to feare them and to dismaye them, that they myght haue ta E ken the cytte. And they spake agaynste the God of Jerusalem, as agaynst the Gods of the nacyons of the earth, whych are the worcke of the handes of men.

But Hezekiah the kyng & the prophete Isaiah sonne of Amoz prayed concerning the thing and cryed vp to heauen. And the Lord sent an angel & destroyed al the men of warre & the Lordes & captaynes of the hoste of the kinge of Assur, that he turned his face with shame towarde his owne lād
And when he was come into thee house of his God, he was ther ouerthrowē with the swerde euē by thē that issued out of his bo welles. And so the Lorde saued Hezekiah & the enhabiters at Jerusalē out of the hā des of Sennaherib king of Assur & of all other, & mayntened thē on al sydes. In so moch that many brought presentes vnto the Lord to Jerusalem & precious gyftes to Hezekiah king of Juda: so that he was magnified in the syghte of all nacions frō thencefoyth.

F * In those dayes Hezekiah was sycke

Isa.xxxviii. che answered him & shewed him a wonder ful myracle: But Hezekiah dyd not accor dinge to the curtesye shewed hym, for hys herte arose: and therfore came there wrath vpon hym & vpon Juda and Jerusalem.
Notwithstādyng Hezekiah mekened hym selfe for the aryspnge of his herte, both he and the enhabiters of Jerusalem. Wherfore the wrath of the Lorde fell not vpon them in the dayes of Hezekiah.

And Hezekiah had exceading moch rychesse and honour. And he geathered hym treasure of syluer, gould, precious stones spices, shildes & of al maner pleasaūt Je-welles: & made store houses for the frutes of corne, wyne & oyle: & stables for all maner of beastes, & foldes for shepe. And he made hym townes because he had cattell G of shepe & oxē great aboūdance. For God had geuen him substaūce exceading moch
And the sayd Hezekiah stopped the vpper water spryinges of Gihon & brought them downe to the Weste syde of the cytie of Da
uid. And Hezekiah prospered in al his wor kes. But when the Ambassadours of the Lordes of Babylon were sente to hym to enquyre of the wondre that chaūced in the land, God left hym: to tempte hym that all that was in his hert myght be knowen.

The rest of the dedes of Hezekiah & his goodnesse ar writtē in the visiō of Isaiah the prophete the sonne of Amoz in the boke of the kinges of Juda and Israel. And then Hezekiah layde him to reste wyth his fathers, & they buried him in the hyeste sepulchre of the sōnes of Dauid: and Juda and thee enhabiters of Jerusalē dyd hym worshyp at his death. And Manasseh his sonne raigned in hys steade.

¶ Manasseh is take prysoner. and after he cometh succeadeth Amō. After Amō was killed of his owne people, Josiah his sonne raygneth for him.

Jerusalem to erre and to do worse thē the heaten whiche the Lorde destroyed before the chyldren of Israel. And when the Lor de spake to Manasseh & to his people, thei attended not to hym.

Wherfore the Lord brought vpon thē the captaynes of the hoste of the kynge of Assur, which toke Manasseh in an holde &

selfe exceedingly before the God of his fathers, & made intercessiō to hym: & he was entreated of him and hearde hys prayer & brought hym agayne to Jerusalē into his kingdō. And then Manasseh knew how ỳ the Lord was the very God.

After that he buylt a wall without the cytie of Dauid on the west syde of Gihon in the broke & so forth to fysh gate & roūd about Ophel & brought it vp of a verye great heyght, & put captaynes of warre in al the strong cyties of Juda. And he toke away straunge Gods & the Idole oute of the house of God, & all the aulters that he had buylt in the moūt of the house of god and in Jerusalē, & cast thē out of the cytie
And he made an aulter vnto the Lord & sa crefyced theron peaceoffringes & thankedyd offer styll in the hylaulters, howbeit vnto the Lord their God onelye.

The rest of the actes of Manasseh and D his prayer vnto his God, & the wordes of the seers of visiōs that spake to him in the name of the Lord God of Israel, ar writ-where he made hilaulters & set vp groues of visions. And whē Manasseh was layd to rest with his fathers, they buried him in hys owne house: & Amon his sonne rayg-ned in hys rowme. Amon was. xxii. yeare olde, when he began to raygne, & raygned father, for Amō sacrificed to al the kerued ymages which Manasseh his father made & serued thē, & mekened not him selfe before the Lordes as Manasseh hys father had mekened hym selfe: But Amon trespaced greatly. Wherfore his owne seruaūtes cō spired agaynst him & slue him in his owne house. And the people of the land slue al ỳ had conspired agaynst kyng Amon. And therto the people of the land made Josiah hys sonne kynge in hys rowme.

The. xxxiiii. Chapter.

JOsiah was made king when he was. viii. yere olde, and he

And he dyd ỳ pleased the lord (4.reg.22.
& walked in the waies of Da uid his father bowing nether to the righte hande or to the lefte. In so moche that the eyght yere of his raygne, when he was yet a lad, he begā to seke after the god of Da-uid his father. And in the twelueth yerehe began to pourge Juda & Jerusalē of hyl-aulters, groues, kerued Images, & Images of metal: so that they brake downe the aulters of Baals euē in his presence, & the Idoles that were upō thē, he caused to be destroyed. And the groues, kerued Images, & Images of metall he brake & made dust of thē, & strawed it upō the graues of thē that had offred to thē. And he burnte ỳ B bones of the prestes upō the aulters, & clē sed Juda & Jerusalē. And euen so dyd he in the cyties of Manasseh, Ephraim, Simeon & of Nephthali therto. And in ỳ wil dernesses of thē roūde about he plucked a sondre the aulters & the groues & did beat

them & stape them to powdre, & bete down the pdols throwout al the lande of Israell: & then returned to Jerusalem agayne.

And in the .xviii. yere of his raygne whē he had purged the land and the temple, he sent Saphan the sonne of Azaliah, & Maasiah the gouernour of thee cytie, & Joah the sonne of Joahaz the recorder, to repayre the house of the Lord his god. And whē they came to Helkiah the hie preste, men de lyuered them the money that was brought te into the house of God, whych the Leuites that kepte the enteries had gathered of the handes of Manasseh and Ephraim and of all that yet remayned in Israel and of all Juda and Ben Jamin and of the en habiters of Jerusalem. And they put it in thee handes of the workemen that hadde pe ouer syght of pe house of pe Lorde, whych gaue it to the labourers that wroughte on the house of the Lord, to repayre and men de it, and to masons and carpenters to bie hewed stone and tymber for to make couples and beames for the houses which the kinges of Juda hadde destroyed: And the men wrought in the worke of fidelite.

And the ouerseers of this to courage thē forward, were Jahath & Obadiah Leuites of the childrē of Merari: & Sechacia & Mesulam of the childrē of the Cahathites, & as manye other of the Leuites as could skylle of instrumentes of Musyck. And ouer the bearers of burthens & ouer al that wrought, in whatsoeuer workemā shipp it were, were there scribes, officers & porters of the Leuites.

And as they brought out the moneye pe was broughte into the house, Helkiah the prieste fond the boke of the law of the lord geuē by Moyses. And Helkiah answered and sayd to Saphan the Scribe: I haue found the boke of the lawe in the house of the Lorde, and gaue the boke to Saphan. And Saphā carted the boke to the king, & brought the king worde agayn, saying: al that was cōmitted to thy seruātes, that do they. And they haue powred out pe moneye that was found in the house of the Lorde and haue delyuered into the handes of the ouerseers of the workemen. And then Saphan the scribe shewed the kyng, saynge: Helkiah the preste hath geuen me a Boke, and he redde it before the kyng.

And whē the king had heard pe wordes of the lawe, he tare his clothes, & cōmāded Helkiah & Ahikam the sonne of Saphan & Abadon the sonne of Micah & the sayde Saphā the scribe & Asaia a seruaūt of the kinges, saying: go & enquire of pe lord for me & for thē that are left in Israel & Juda cōcerning pe wordes of the boke pe is fonde For great is the wrath of the Lord that is fallē vpō vs, because our fathers kept not the word of the Lord, to do after al that is written in this boke.

And Helkiah with them pe pertayned to the king wēt to Holdah a prophetisse wife of Sellū the sonne of Thekohath pe sonne of Hasarah keper of the wardrope (whych prophetisse dwelt in Jerusalē in the secōd warde) & they communed so with her. And she sayd vnto them thus sayth the lord god of Israel, tel ye the mā that sent you to me Euen thus saith the Lorde: I wyl bring euel vpō this place & vpon the enhabiters therof, euē al the curses pe are writtē in the boke which they haue rede before the king of Juda, because they haue forsakē me & haue offered vnto other gods to angre me wythe all maner workes of theyr handes, therfore is my wrath set on fyre agaynste thys place & shal not be quenched.

And as for pe king of Juda which sent you to enquire of the Lord, so shal ye saye vnto him: thus saith pe lord god of Israell cōcerning the wordes which pe hast hearde Because thine hert dyd melt & thou dydest meke thy selfe before god, whē pe heardeste his wordes agaynst this place & agaynste the enhabiters therof: & hūbledest thy selfe before me, & tarest thy clothes and wepest before me, that haue I heard also saith the Lord. Behold I wyl take pe to thy fathers & thou shalt be putt in thy graue in peace, & thine eyes shal not se al the mischeue pe I wyl bring vpō this place & vpō the enhabiters of the same. * And they brought the king word agayne. Thē the king sent and gcathered together all the elders of Juda & Jerusalē. And the kinge wēt vp into the house of the Lord, & al the men of Juda & the enhabiters of Jerusalē & the Priestes and Leuites & al the people great & small: and reade al the wordes of the boke of the couenaunt that was found in the house of the Lorde. And the kynge stode at hys standynge and made a couenaūt before pe Lorde, to folow the Lord and to kepe his cōmaundementes, his wytnesses and hys statutes with all his herte and wt all hys soule & to fulfil the wordes of pe apointmē te wrytten in the sayde boke.

And he made to come forth al that were found in Jerusalem and Beniamin, & the enhabyters of Jerusalē promesed to kepe the couenaunt of pe God which was pe god of theyr fathers. And Josiah put awaye al maner of abhominacyons out of al lādes that pertayned to the childrē of Israel, and brought all pe were fonde in Israel to serue the lord theyr god. And they turned not a side frō after pe lord god of their fathers as long as he lyued.

The .xxxv. Chapter.

A And Josiah held the feaste of passeouer vnto the lord in Jerusalē, & they slue passeouer in the .xiiii. daye of the fyrste moneth. And he sett the preastes in their offyces & ayded them in pe seruice of the house of the Lorde. And he sayde to the Leuites that taught throwout all Israell and were sanctified vnto pe lorde: put the holy arcke in the house whyche Salomon pe sonne of Dauid kyng of Israel did builde, ye nede not to beare it vpō youre shoulders. Wherefore now serue pe Lord your God & his people Israel. And prepare youre selues by youre auncyente housholdes & companyes, accordyng to pe wrytynge of Dauid kynge of Israell, & the wrytynge of Salomon hys sōne. And stande in the holy place accordynge to the deuysions of the auncient housholdes of your brethrē the chyldren of the people, & after the deuyson of the auncyente housholdes of the Leuites, & kil passeouer, sāctifie & prepare your brethrē that they may do accordynge to the worde of the lord by the hande of Moses.

And Josiah gaue to the comen people in lambes & kiddes, for passeouer offerynges only, vnto al pe were present. xxx. thousande by tale, & thre thousande oxen, euen of pe kinges substaunce. And hys Lordes B gaue willingly both vnto pe people & also vnto pe preastes & vnto pe Leuites. Helkiah, Zachariah & Jehiel, rulers of the house of god, gaue vnto the preastes for passeouer offerynges. ii. thousand & fyue hundred lābes & kiddes, & thre hundred oxen. And Conaniah with Semeiah & Nathaneel his brethren, and Hasabiah and Jaiel and Josabad Lordes of the Leuites, gaue vnto pe Leuites fyue thousand passeouer offerynges, and fyue hundred oxen.

And so the seruice went forwarde: and the preastes stode in theyr places, & the Leuites in theyr cōpanyes at the kynges commaundement. And they slewe passeouer: & the preastes sprynckled the bloude receaunge it of the Leuites, and the Leuites stripte the beastes. And they sett away the burnt offeryng, to geue them vnto the comē people as they were deuyded by auncient houses, for to offer vnto the lorde, lyke as it is written in the boke of Moses. And so dyd they wt the oxen to. And they dressed the passeouer with fyre as pe maner was. But the other halowed dedycate beastes they sodde in pottes, caulderns & pānes & deuided them quickly amonge al the comē people. And afterwarde they made readye for them selues & for the preastes and for the chyldren of Aaron, whiche were busied in offeryng of burntofferyngs & the fatte vntyll nyghte. And therfore the Leuites prepared for thē selues and for the preastes the sonnes of Aaron. And the syngers the children of Asaph stode in their standyng accordyng to the cōmaundement of Dauid & Asaph, Heman & Iduthun the kynges sear of visions: & pe porters waited at euery gate, & might not depart from theyr seruice: But their brethrē the Leuites prepared for thē. And so al pe seruice of pe lorde wēt forward the saide daye, in offeryng passeouer of burntofferyngs vpō the aulter of the Lorde, accordyng to the cōmaundement of kynge Josiah.

And so the chyldren of Israel pe coulde be founde, offered passeouer the same time and kepte the feaste of swete bredde seuen daies. And ther was no passeouer like to pe kept in Israel frō pe tyme of Samuel pe prophete: neither dyd anye of the kynges of Israel holde soche a passeouer feaste as dyd Josiah and the preastes & Leuites and all Juda, and al inoche of Israel as could be had, & ỹ enhabiters of Jerusalē. And this passeouer was holden in the .xviii. yere of the raygne of Josiah.

*After all this, whē Josiah had finisshed the temple, Necho kyng of Egypt came vp to fight agaynste Carcamis vpon Euphrates, & Josiah wēt out agaynst hi. And the other sent messengers to him saynge: what haue I to do with the thou kynge of Juda: I came not againste ỹ nowe at this tyme, but against an house wt whō I haue warre, and god bade me hast. Leaue of therfore and medle not wt god which is wt me, least he destroy the. Neuertheles Josiah turned not his face frō hi, but made hym readye to fyght wyth him, & herkened not vnto the wordes of Necho out of the mouthe of god. And whē he was come to fyght in the valeye of Magedo, the shoters shot agaynst the kyng Josiah. And ỹ kyng sayde to hys seruauntes: carie me away, for I am sore hurte. And his seruaūtes had him out of ỹ charet and put him in another, & brought him to Jerusalē wher he dyed & was buryed in the sepulchre of his fathers. *And all Juda & Jerusalem mourned for Josiah. And Jeremiah lamēted Josiah, and al syngyng men & syngynge wemen speake of Josiah to this day, & made it an ordinaunce in Israel: & they be wrytte in the lamentacyons. The rest of ỹ actes of Josiah & his goodnes in folowynge the writyng of the lawe, & hys deades fyrst & last are wrytten in the boke of ỹ kinges of Israel and Juda.

The .xxxvi. Chapter.

AND the people of the land toke Jehoahaz ỹ sonne of Josiah & made him king for his father in Jerusalem. And Jehoahaz was .xxiii. yere olde whē he begaune to raigne, and he raigned thre monethes in Jerusalē. For the kyng of Egypte put hym downe at Jerusalē & mercyed the lande in an hundred talentes of syluer & a talent of goulde. And ỹ kyng of Egipt made Eliakim hys brother kig vpō Juda & Jerusalē, & turned his name vnto Jehoaki, but Jehoahaz his brother Necho toke & caryed him to Egipt. And Jehoakim was .xxv. yere olde when he begaune to raigne, & he raigned a .xi. yere in Jerusalē: & he dyd ỹ displeased ỹ lord his god. Against him came Nabuchodonozor king of Babilon & bounde hym in fetters to carye hym to Babilon. Therto the king Nabuchodonozor caryed of the vessels of the house of the Lord to Babilon and put them in his temple at Babilon. The reste of the actes of Jehoakim, & hys Abhominacyons, and that was laid to his charge, are wrytte in the boke of the Kinges of Israell: and Jehoachin hys sonne raygned in his stead. And Zedekiah was .xxi. yere old when he begaune to raigne, & raygned a .xi. yere in Jerusalem. And he dyd that displeased the Lord his god, & humbled not him self before Jeremiah the prophete at ỹ mouth of the Lord. And therto he rebelled against Nabuchodonozor which had receaued of him by god, & was to styfe necked & to harde herted to turne vnto the Lorde god of Israel. Therto al the rulers of the prestes wt ỹ people trespaced a pace after al maner of abhominacyons of the herthē & poluted ỹ house of ỹ lorde which he had halowed in Jerusalem.

And ỹ Lord God of their fathers sent to the by his messengers, sendynge thē betymes: for he had compassyon on hys people and on hys dwellyng place. But they mocked the messengers of God and despised their wordes & mysse vsed his prophetes, vntyll ỹ wrath of the Lord so arose against hys people that it was past remeadie. And so he brought vpō them the king of Caldeye & slue their young men wt the sword in their holy temple, & nether spared younge man or mayden, nether olde man, nether so moch as him ỹ stowped for age: But gaue all into his hande.

And we haue done sacrypice vnto him, sence the tyme that Asor Hadon the kynge of Assur broughte vs vp hyther. But Zorobabel and Jesua and the other auncient fathers of Israell answered them: It belongethe not to you, but to vs to buyld ỹ house vnto oure God: for we oure selues wyl buylde alone vnto the Lord our God of Israel, *as Cyrus the kynge of Persia hathe commaunded vs. i.Eldr.v.a

Then the folcke of the lande hyndered the people of Juda, and made them afrayde to builde, and hyred councelers against them and hyndered theyr deuyce, as longe as Cyrus the kynge of Persia lyued, vntyl the raygne of Darius king of Persia. But when Ahasuerus was kynge, in the begynnynge of hys raygne wrott they vnto hym a complaynte agaynst them of Juda and Jerusalem.

And in the tyme of Artharerses, wrote Bisellam, Mithridates, Thabeel and the other of their councell vnto Artharerses the kynge of Persia. But the scripture of the letter was wrytten in the Syrias speache, and was interpretated in the langage of the Syrians. Rehum the chaunceler, and Samsat the scrybe, wrote thys letter agaynste Jerusalem to Artharerses the kynge.

We Rehum the *chaunceler, and Samsat the scrybe, and other of the councell of Dina, of Arphasath, of Tarpiat, of Persia, of Arach, of Babilon, of Susan, of Deha, and of Elam, and other of the people, whome greate and nooble Asenaphar broughte ouer, and set in the cytes of Samaria, and other on thys syde the water, & *in Ceneeth. And thys is the summe of the letter that they sente vnto kynge Artharerses. *Or, peace or health.

Thy seruaũtes the mẽ on this syde the water & in Ceneeth. Be it knowne vnto ỹ kyng, that the Jewes are come vp from ỹ to vs vnto Jerusalem a cyte sedycious & froward, and buylde the same, and lay ỹ foundacion of the walles therof, & repaire them. Be it knowne now therfore vnto the king, that yf this cytie be buylded and the walles made vp agayne, thẽ shal not they geue tribute, tolle, and yearly custome, * & euẽ vnto ỹ kynges shal this hurt redownde. But nowe what we all are therby why che destroyed thee temple, we wolde no lõger se the kynges dyshonoure. Therefore sent we out, & caused the kynge to be certyfyed therof: That it maye be sought in ỹ Chronycles of thy progenitoures, and so shalt thou fynde in the same Chronicles, & perceaue, that this citie is sedicious & noysome vnto kynges & landes, & ỹ they cause other also to rebel of olde, & for ỹ same cause was thys citie destroyed. Therefore do we certifye ỹ kyng, that yf thys citie be buylded, and the walles therof made vp, thou shalt kepe nothyng on this side ỹ water by the reason of it. * Some rede ỹ wo ỹ kynges trybu t may turne to damage.

Thẽ sẽt the kynge an ãswere vnto Rehum the chaunceler, & Samsat the Scribe, & to ỹ other of their councel ỹ dwelt in Samaria, & vnto ỹ other beyond the water. Peace & salutatiõ. The letter which ye sẽt vnto vs, hath bene opẽli red before me, and I haue cõmaũded to make searche: & it is foũd, ỹ this citie of olde hath made insurrectiõ against kinges, & how ỹ vprore & rebelliõ hath bene cõmitted therin. There haue bene mightie kinges also at Jerusalẽ which haue raigned ouer all that is beyonde the water, & tolle, trybute & yearlye custome was geuẽ vnto them. Do ye now after thys commaundemẽt, forbid the same men, that the citie be not builded, til I haue geuẽ cõmaũdemẽt. Take hede nowe that ye be not negligent here in, lest the kinge haue harme there thorowe.

Nowe when kinge Artharerses letter was red before Rehum the chaũceler and Samsat the Scrybe and their councell, they wẽt vp in all the haste to Jerusalem vnto the Jewes, & forbad them with violence and power. Then ceassed the worck of the house of God at Jerusalẽ, & continued so vnto the seconde yere of Darius kynge of Persia.

Of ỹ childrē of Joab, Obadiah ỹ sōne of Jehiel, & wyth hym two hundred and xviii. men. Of the childrē of Selomith, the sonne of Josphiah, & with him an hundred and thre men. B

Of the childrē of Bebai, Zachary the sonne of Bebai, & with him eyght & twentie mē. Of the childrē of Asgad, Johanā, the sonne of Hakatan, & wyth him an hundred &

dzed & ten men. Of the last childzē of Adonicam, & these were theyr names: Eliphelet, Jehiell & Samaiah, and with thē thre score men. Of the childzē of Begui, Uthai and Zabud & with thē seuentie men. And I geathered thē to geather by the water that renneth towarde Ahaua, & there abode we thre dayes. And whē I loked amonge the people and the prestes, I founde no Leuites there. Then sent I Eliezer, Ariel, Semeiah, Elnathan, Jarib, Elnathā, Nathā Zachary & Mosolam the rulers, & Joiarib and Elnathan the teachers, & those sent I vnto Edo the chefeste at Casphia, that they shuld fetch vs ministers for the house of oure God, & I told thē what they shuld saye vnto Edo and to his brethrē the Nethinims at Casphia.

And (according to the good hand of our God vpō vs) they brought vs a wyse mā from among the chyldzen of Moholi the sonne of Leui the sōne of Israell, euē Sarabia with his sonnes & brethrē, eyghtene And Hasabia, & with him Isaiah of ỹ childzen of Merari, wyth his brethren & theyr sonnes, xx. And of the Nethinims, whome Dauid & ỹ rulers gaue to minister vnto the Leuites, two hundzed and twentye, all named by name.

And cuē ther at the water beside Ahaua, caused I a fasting to be proclamed, that we might hūble our selues before our God, to seke of him a right waye for vs, & oure childzen and al oure substaunce. For I was ashamed to requyre of ỹ king, soudiers and horsemē, to helpe vs against the enemye in the way. For we had sayd vnto the king: The hand of our God is vpō all thē that seke him in goodnes, and his violence and wrath vpō all them that forsake him. So we fasted, & sought thys at our God, and he hearde vs.

And I toke out twelue of the chefe prestes, Sarabia & Hasabia, and ten of theyr brethren wyth them, and weyed them there the syluer & gould & vessels for the heueoffring vnto the house of our God, whych the king and the Lordes of his councell & rulers, and al Israel that were at hande, had geuē to the heueoffringe: & ther weyed I them vnder theyr hand syxe hūdzed and fyftie talentes of syluer, & in syluer vessell an hundzed talentes, and in gould an hundzed talentes, twentie cuppes of goulde of a thousande dzammes, and two costely ornamētes of good bzasse, as cleare as goulde, & sayd vnto them: Ye ar holy vnto the Lozde, therfore are the vesselles holy also, and so is the syluer & gould that is geuen of a good wyl vnto the Lozd God of your fathers: Watch ye therfore and kepe it, tyll ye wepe it downe before the chefe prestes and Leuites, and auncient fathers of Israel at Jerusalem in the chestes of thee house of the Lozde. Then toke the prestes and Leuites that weyed syluer & gould & vessell, to bringe it to Jerusalem vnto the house of our God. So we brake vp, from the water of Ahaua on thee twelueth daye of the fyrst moneth, to go vnto Jerusalē: and the hand of our God was vpon vs, & delyuered vs from thee hande of thee enemies and pzeuye waytinges by the waye. And we came to Jerusalem, & abode there thze dayes. But on the fourth daye was ỹ syluer and goulde, and vessell weyed in ỹ house of our God vnder the hand of Meremoth the sonne of Uziah the prieste, and wyth hym Eleazar the sonne of Phinehes and wyth them Iosabad the sonne of Jesua, and Noadiah the sonne of Benoi of the Leuites, according to the nombze & weighte of euerye one. And the weyghte was all wzytten vp at the same tyme.

And the childzen of the captiuite, which were come out of pzeson, offred burntoffe ringes vnto thee God of Israell: xii. bullockes for all Israell, syxe and nyntye rāmes, seuen and seuentie lambes, & twelue goates for a synneoffring, all to the burnt offringe of the Lozd. And they delyuered the kynges commyssion vnto thee kinges officers, & to the captaynes on thys syde ỹ water. And they promoted the people and the house of God.

The Notes.

a Fallinges, as the scripture maketh mencion, hathe bin common humiliations & supplicatyons done before God: other for some great tribulation suffered or cōminge at hande, or for a singular repentaunce & ernest for thinckyng of theyr synnes, as it is wyttenin 1. Regum. vii. b and. xxi. d. ii. Esdzas. ix and. c

Esdzas cōplayneth on ỹ people that had turned thē selues from God, & mingled with the gentyles.

The. ix. Chapter.

Whē al this was perfourmed I the rulers came to me, & sayd: The people of Israell, & thee prestes & Leuites are not separated from the nacios in the landes as touching theyr abhominatios, namely of the Cananites, Hethites, Pherezites, Jebusites, Ammonites, Moabites, Egiptias, and Amozites. Deut. vii. a and. xxiii. b Josue. xxiii. c Judic. iii. a For they haue take the daughters of the same, & theyr sonnes, and haue myxte thee holy sede wyth the nacios in the lādes: and the hand of the pzinces & rulers hath bene pzincipal in this trespace.

Whē I heard this, I rent my clothes and my rayment, and pluckt of thee hearte of my head and of my beard, & sate mourning. And ther resozted vnto me al soch as feared the wozd of the Lozd God of Israel because of the great transgressiō. And I sate mourninge vntyl the euenynge sacryfyce. And aboute the euenynge sacryfice I rose vp fro my heupnes, & rēte my clothes and my raymēt, and fell vpon my knees, & spred oute my handes vnto the Lozde my God, and sayde.

Esdr. viii. c

My God, I am a shamed, & darre not lyfte vp myne eyes vnto the my God: for oure wyckednesses are growne ouer oure head, & our trespaces are waxen great vnto the heauen. Sence the tyme of oure fathers haue we bene in great trespace vnto this daye, * & because of our wickednesses haue we & our kinges bene delyuered into the hande of the kinges of the nacios, into the swerde, into captiuite, into spoyle, and into confusiō of face, as it is come to passe thys daye.

Deut. xxviii. b

But now is ther a lyttle & sodayne graciousnes come frō the Lozde oure God, so ỹ some of vs are escaped, ỹ he maye geue vs a nayle in his holy place, that our God maye lyghte our eyes, and geue vs a lytle lyfe in our bondage. For we ar bondmen, & our god hath not forsakē vs in our bondage, & hath enclined mercy vnto vs in the sighte of the kinges of Persia, ỹ he shulde geue vs lyfe, & promote the house of oure God, & to sett vp the desolatiō thereof, & to geue vs an hedge in Juda and Jerusalē.

And now O our God, what shal we say after this: for we haue forsakē thy cōmaundemētes, whych thou hast cōmāded by thy seruautes the Prophetes, and sayde: The lād vnto which ye go to possesse it, is an vncleane lād thorow ỹ filthines of the people of the lādes, in their abhominacios wherewith they haue made it ful of vnclenes on euery side. Therfore shal ye not geue your daughters vnto their sonnes, and theyr daughters shal ye not take vnto your sonnes & seke not their peace & welth for euer, that ye may be stronge, and enioye ỹ good in the land, & that ye & youre childzen may haue the inheritaūce of it for euermore.

And after all this that is come vpon vs (because of oure euell dedes, & greate trespace) thou our god hast spared oure wyckednesses, and hast geuē vs a deliueraūce as it is come to passe thys daye.

As for vs, we haue turned backe, & haue let go thy cōmaundementes, to make contracte wyth the people of these abhominacions. Wylt thou then be wroth at vs, tyll we be vtterly consumed, so that nothing remayne, and tyll there be no delyueraunce? O Lozd God of Israell, thou arte righteouse, for we remayne yet escaped. as it is thys daye. Beholde in thy pzesence are we in oure trespace, for because of it is ther no standing before the.

The people repent them and turne, & putt awaye theyr straunge wyues.

The. x. Chapter.

And whē Esdzas prayed after this maner, & knowleged, wepte, & lay before ỹ house of god ther resozted vnto him oute of Israel a very great cōgregatiō of mē & wemen, & childzen: for the people wepte very sore. And Sechaniah thee sonne of Jehiel one of the childzē of Elam answered, & sayd vnto Esdzas: We haue trespaced agaynst the Lozd our God, in ỹ we haue taken straunge wyues of all the people of the land. Now there is hope yet in Israel cōcerninge this therfore lette vs make a couenaūt now with oure god, that we shal put away al the wyues (and soche as are borne of them) according to the counsell of the Lozd, and of them that feare the commaundemente of oure God, that we maye doo according to the lawe. Gett the vp therfore, for the matter belongeth vnto the. We wyll be wyth the, be of good comforte, and do it.

1. Esd. ix. a

* Then arose Esdzas, & toke an othe of ỹ rulers, prestes and Leuites, & of al Israel that they shuld do according to this wozd and they swase. And Esdzas stode vp before the house of God, & wēte into the chā-ber of Johanā ỹ sone of Eliasib. And whē he came thither, he ate no bred, nor dranke water: for he mourned because of the trās-gression of thē that had ben in captiuite.

And thei caused a proclamatiō be made thorow out Juda & Jerusalem, vnto al ỹ childrē which hadde bene in captiuite, that they shuld geather thē selues together vnto Jerusalē: And that whosoeuer came not within thre dayes accordīg to the deuyce of the rulers and eldors, al his substaunce shuld be forfet, & be put out from the congregation of the captiue.

Then al the men of Juda & Bē Jamin geathered thē selues to geather vnto Jeru salem in thre dayes, that is on the twentye daye of the nyneth moneth: & al the people sate in the strete before the house of god, & trembled because of thee matter, and for ỹ rayne. And Eldras the prest stode vp, and sayd vnto thē: * Ye haue trāsgressed, that ye haue taken straūge wiues, to make the trespace of Israel yet more: confesse nowe therfore vnto the Lorde God of youre fathers, & do hys pleasure, & separate youre selues, from the people of the land, & from the straūge wiues. Then answered al the congregation, & sayd with a loude voyce: Let it be done as thou hast sayde, But the people are manye, & it is a raynie wether, & they cannot stand here without, neyther is this a worke of one daye or two, for we are many that haue offended in this trāsgres-sion. Let vs appointe our rulers therfore in al the cōgregation, ỹ al they which haue taken straunge wiues in our cyties, maye come at that tyme appointed, & the elders of euery cytie & theyr Judges wyth them, tyll the wrath of our God be turned away from vs for thys offence.

Then were appointed Jonathā ỹ sonne of Asahel & Jahasia the sone of Thekuah ouer thys matter: And Mosolā & Sabathat ỹ Leuites holpe them. And ỹ children of the captiuite did euen so. And Eldras ỹ prest, & the aūcient heades thorow ỹ house of theyr fathers, & al that were nowe rehearsed by name, separated them selues, & sate thē downe on the first daye of ỹ tenth

Nehemiah butteler to kyng Artharxerses prayeth to God for the people.

The. j. Chapter.

These are the actes of Nehemi ah the sōne of * Hachalia. It foztuned in the moneth * Cas leu in the twentie yere, that I was in the castell at Susan:
and Hanani one of my brethrē came wyth certayne men of Juda, and I asked them how ỹ Jewes dyd that were delyuered & escaped from the captyuite, and how it wē te at Jerusalem. And they sayde vnto me:
The remnauut of the captyupte are there in the lande in greate myschefortune and rebuke. * The walles of Jerusalem ar broken downe, and the gates therof are brent wythe fyre.

Whē I heard these wordes, I satt me downe and wepte, & mourned two dayes, & fasted and prayed before the god of hea uen & said: O Lorde God of heauen, thou greate & terryble God, * thou that kepeste couenaunt and mercye for thē that loue ỹ and obserue thy commaundementes: lett thyne eares herken, & thyne eyes be open, ỹ thou maiest heare the prater of thy seruaū te, which I prayе now before the day and nyghte for the chyldren of Israel thy seruauntes, and knowledg the sinnes of the chyldren of Israel, whych we haue cōmit-ted agaynst the.

And I & my fathers house haue sinned al so. We haue bene corrupte vnto ỹ, in that we haue not kept the cōmaūdemēres, statutes & lawes, whych ỹ commaūdedst thy seruaūt Moses. Yet call to remembraūce the worde ỹ thou cōmaundest thy seruaūt Moses, & saydeste: Yf ye transgresse, then wyl I scatter you abrode amōg ỹ naciōs.
But yf ye turne vnto me, & kepe my commaūdemētes and do thē: thoughe ye were cast out vnto the vttermost part of heaue yet wil I geather you from thence, & wyll bring you from thēce, eue vnto the place, ỹ I haue chosē for my name to dwel there
They are thy seruaūtes, & thy people whō ỹ hast deliuered thorow thy great power and mightye hande. O Lorde, lette thyne eares herken to the prayer of thy seruaum-te, and the prayer of thy seruaūtes, whose delyre is to feare thy name, and let thy ser uaunt prosper thys daye, & graunte hym mercy in the syght of this man: for I was the kynges butelar.

After Nehemiah had obtained letters of Artharxerses he cometh to Jerusalem, & buyldethe the walles.

The. ij. Chapter.

Nȳ moneth Nisan in ỹ twētyeth yeare of kyng Artharxer-ses, when the wyne stode be fore hym, I toke vp ỹ wyne, & gaue it vnto ỹ kinge and I was heuy in hys presēce. Thē sayd ỹ king vnto me: why lokest thou so sadly? Thou art not sicke, that is not the matter, but ỹ arte heuy herted. Neuertheles I was sore afraied & sayde vnto the kyng: god saue ỹ kynges lyfe for euer, shuld I not loke sad ly? the citie of my fathers burial lieth wast
& the gates therof are consumed wȳ fyre.
Then sayde ỹ kyng vnto me: what is then thy request? then made I my prayer to the god of heaue, & sayd vnto the kynge: yf it please the king, & yf thy seruaūt be fauou red in thy sighte. I be seke ỹ send me into Juda vnto the citie of my fathers burial, that I maye buylde it.

And the kynge sayde vnto me, & so dyd the quene that sat by him: how longe shall thy tourney cōtinue, & whē wilt thou come agayne? And it pleased ỹ king to send me, and I set him a tyme, & sayd vnto the kin-ge: yf it please the king, let him geue me let ters to the captaynes beyonde the water, ỹ they maye conueye me ouer, tyl I come in to Juda: & letters vnto Asaph the lord of the kinges wood, ỹ he may geue me wood for beames to ỹ gates of the palace, which ar hard on the house & harde on the walles of the cytye, and for the house that I shal entre into. And the kynge gaue me accor dyng to the good hande of God vpō me.
And when I came to the captaynes beyō de the water, I gaue them the kynges letters. And the kynge sent captaynes and horsmen wyth me.

But whē Sanabalat the Horonite & Tobiah ỹ seruaūt of ỹ Ammonites heard that, it greued them sore, that ther was come a man which soughte thre welthe of the

childrē of Israel. And when I came to Jerusalē, & had bene there thre dayes, I gatme vp in ỹ night seasō, & a fewe mē wt me for I told no man what god had geuē me in my hert to do at Jerusalem: & ther was not one beast wt me, saue it that I rode vpon. And I rode by vyght vnto the valley porte before the Dragon well, and to the Dongeporte, and consydered the walles of Jerusalē that were brokē downe, & ỹ porters therof cōsumed wyth the fire. And I wēt ouer vnto ỹ wellporte, and to the kinges condyte, & ther was no rowme for my beast that it could go vnder me. Thē wēt I on in the nyghte by ỹ broke syde, & consydered the wall, and turned back & came home agayne to the valley porte.

And the rulers knew not whither I wēte or what I dyd: for hyther to had I not told ỹ Jewes & the prestes, the counceleres & ỹ rulers, & ỹ other ỹ laboured in ỹ worke. And I sayd vnto them: ye se the mysery ỹ we ar in, how Jerusalē lyeth waste, & how ỹ gates therof are brēt with fyre, come let vs buylde vp the walles of Jerusalē, ỹ we be no more a rebuke. And I told thē of the good hād of my god which was vpon me: and the kynges wordes that he had spokē vnto me. And they sayde: then let vs gett vp, & buylde: and their handes were strengthed to good.

But when Sanabalat ỹ Horonite, & Tobiah the seruaunt of the Ammonites, and Gesē the Arabiā herd it, they laughed vs to skorne, & dyspysed vs, & sayde: what is thys that ye do? Wyll ye fall awaye agayne from the kyng? Then answered I them, and sayde: the God of heauen he it is that causeth vs to prospere: & we be his seruauntes. Let vs get vp and build. As for you, ye haue no portiō nor right, nor remembraunce in Jerusalem.

¶ The buylding of Jerusalem is hyndred & let, but the Jewes buylde it beyng readye harneysed: lest their enemyes shuld inuade them.

The.iiii. Chapter.

But when Sanabalat heard ỹ we builded the wal, he was wroth & toke greate indignacīō & mocked the Jewes & sayd before his brethrē & the host of Samaria: what do ỹ impotēt Jewes? shal they be thus suffred? shal thei offre? shall they perfourme it i one day? shal they make the stones whole agayne ỹ are brought to dust, & brēt? And Tobiah ỹ Ammonite beside him said: let thē build on, yf a fore go vp, he shall breake downe theyr stone wal. Heare O ỹ our God, howe we ar despised, turne their shame vpon theyr owne head, that ỹ inpeet geue thē ouer in to despising in the lād of theyr captyuyte. Couer not their wickednes, & put not out their sine frō thy presēce: for they haue prouoked the builders. Yet builded we ỹ wal, and ioined it whole together, vnto the halfe heyght. And the people were wel mynded to laboure.

But whē Sanabalat, & Tobiah, & the Arabiās, & Ammonites, & Asdoodites hard ỹ ỹ walles of Jerusalē were made vp, & that they had begōne to stop vp the gappes they were very wroth, & cōspired all together to come & fight against Jerusalē, & to make an hinderaūce therin. Neuertheles we made our praier vnto our god, and set watchmē vpō the wall day & night ouer against them. And Juda sayd: the stregth of the bearers is to febie, & ther is to moch dust, we are not able to buylde on the wal. And our aduersaryes thought: they shal not know nether se, tyl we come in the middes among them, & slaie them, & hinder the worck. But whē the Jewes that dwelt beside thē, came out of al ỹ places wher they dwelt aboute vs, and told vs as good as ten times, then set I the people after theyr kindredes wt their swerdes, speares & bowes beneth in the low places behynd the wal, & loked, & gatime vp, and said vnto the chefe men & rulers, and to the other people: be not ye afraid of thē *think vpō the great lord which ought to be feared & fyghte for your brethrē, sōnes, daughters, wyues, and houses. Neuertheless when our enemies heard that we had gotten word of

of it. God brought their counsel to nought, and we turned all againe to the wall, euery one vnto his laboure. And frō that time forth it came to passe, ꝑ the halfe parte of the yonge men dyd the laboure, & the other halfe parte helde the spares, shyldes, bowes, and brestplates: and the rulers stode behynde all the house of Juda, whyche buylded on the wall, & bare burthens, frō those that laded them. Wyth one hād dyd they the worke, & with the other helde they their weapē. And euery one that buylded, had hys swerde guyrde by hys syde, and so buylded they. And the trompetters stode besyde me.

And I sayde vnto the prynceyall men, & rulers, and to the other people: ꝑ worcke is greate & large, & we are separated vpon the wall one farre from another. Loke in what place now ye heare the noise of ꝑ trō pett, resort ye thyther vnto vs * Our god shal fight for vs, & we will be labouringe in ꝑ worcke. And the halfe parte of thē held ꝑ speares frō ꝑ morninge springe, tyll ꝑ starres came forthe. And at the same tyme sayd I vnto the people: euerye one abyde with hys seruaunte at Jerusalem, that in the night seasō we may geue attendaunce to the watch, & to laboure on the day time. As for me and my brethren, & my seruaunt tes, and the men of the watch behynd me, we putt neuer of oure clothes, so mothe as to washe oure selues.

¶ The people are vexed with vsure, Nehemiah forbyddeth vsurye. He requyreth not the ꝑquysite of a captayne.

The. v. Chapter.

AND ther arose a greate complaint of ꝑ peple, & of their wyues against their brethē ꝑ Jewes. And ther were some that said: our sonnes & daughters are to many, let vs take corne for thē & eate, ꝑ we may lyue. Some sayde: let vs sett our lādes, vineyardes and houses to pledge, & take vp corne i ꝑderth. But some sayde: let vs borowe money of the kinges tribute for oure landes & vineyardes. Now are our brethrens bodyes as our owne bodies and their childrē as our childrē: els shulde we subdue our sonnes and daughters vnto bōdage, and some of our daughters are subdued already, * and no stregth is there in oure handes, & other men shall haue oure landes and vineyardes.

* After the Hebru some readers be haue not wher with to redeame them.

But when I hearde their complaynte and suche wordes, it displeased me sore, & I aduysed so in my mynde, that I rebuked the counselers, and the rulers, and sayd vnto them: * wyll ye requyre vsury one of another? And I brought a greate congregacion against thē and sayde vnto thē: we (after oure abilyte) haue brought our brethē the Jewes, whych were solde vnto the Heythen. And wyll ye sell youre brethren, whō we haue boughte vnto vs? Then held they their peace, and could fynd nothinge to answere.

And I said: It is not good that ye do, Ought ye not to walke in ꝑ feare of god, because of the rebuke of the Heythen our enemyes? I and my brethē & my seruaūtes haue lent thē money and corne: but as for vsury, let vs leaue it. Therfore this same daye se that ye restore them their lādes agayne, their vineyardes, oyle gardens and houses, and the hundred part of the money of the corne, wyne and oile that ye haue wonne of them. Then sayde they: we wil restore thē againe and will requyre nothyng of them, and wil do as thou hast spokē. And I called ꝑ prestes, and toke an oothe of them, that they shulde do so. And I shoke my lappe, and sayde: God shake out euery mā after ꝑ same maner frō hys house and labour, that maynteynethe not thys worde: euen thus be he shaken out, and voyde. And all the congregatiō sayde: Amen, and prayesed the Lorde. And the people dyd so.

And from the time forth that it was cōmitted vnto me to be a captayne in the lāde of Juda, namelye from the twentyethe yeare vnto the two and thyrtyeth yeare of kynge Artharerses (that is twelue yeare) I and my brethrē lyued not of soch sustenaūce as was geuē to a captaine. For the olde captaines ꝑ were before me, had bene chargeable vnto the people, and had take of thē bred and wyne, and forthe syches of siluer: yea and their seruaūtes had opprest ꝑ people. But so dyd not I, and ꝑ because of ꝑ feare of god. I laboured also in the worke vpō ꝑ wall, and bought no lande. And all my seruaūtes came thither togeather vnto ꝑ worcke. Moreouer there were at my table an hundred and fyftye of the Jewes

Jewes & rulers, whyche came vnto me, frō amonge the Heythen, that are aboute vs. And there was prepared me daply an ore, and fyue chosen shepe, and byrdes, & euer once in ten dayes a greate summe of wine. Yet requyred not I the lyuynge of a captayne for the bondage was greuous vnto the people. * Thynche vpō me my God vnto the best, accordyng to all that I haue done for thys people.

Nehemiah

¶ The buyldyng is yet agayne hyndred and lett.

The. vi. Chapter.

AND whē Sanabalat, Tobiah & Gesem the Arabiā, and ꝑ other of our enemies heard ꝑ I had buylded ꝑ wall, & that ther were no mo gappes ther in (howbeit at ꝑ same time had I not hanged the dores vpon the gates) Sanabalat & Gesē sent vnto me, sayinge come and let vs mete togeather * in ꝑ villages vpō ꝑ playne of the citie Ono. Neuertheles they thought to do me euell. Notwythstandyng I sent messengers vnto them, sayinge: I haue a great busines to do, I cānot come downe. The worck shuld stand styll, yf I were negligēt, & came downe to you. Howbeit they sēt vnto me as good as .iiii. times after the same maner. And I gaue ꝑ same answere. Thē sent Sanabalat his seruaūt vnto me the fifth time, with an open letter in hys hād, wherin was written: it is tolde the Heythen, & Gesem hathe sayd it, that ꝑ & the Jewes thynke to rebel: for the which cause thou buyldest ꝑ wall, & wyll be their kyng in these matters, & hast ordeyned the Prophetes to preache of the at Jerusalē, and to saye: He is kynge of Juda.

* After the Chaldey Some readers be haue not wher with to redeame them.

Now shall this come to the kinges eares; come nowe therfore, & let vs take oure counsel together. Neuertheles I sēt vnto hi sayinge ther is no soch thyng done as thou sayest: ꝑ haste kayned it out of thine owne hert. For they were all minded to make vs afrayed & thoughte: they shall withdrawe their handes frō ꝑ worke, ꝑ they shall not laboure. Howbett I strengthed my hande ꝑ more. And I came vnto the house of Semaiah thee sonne of Delaiah the sonne of Mehetabeel, and he had shut him selfe win, & said: let vs come together into ꝑ house of god, euē vnto ꝑ middes of the tēple, & shutt the dores of the temple: for they wyl come to slaye the, yee euē in the nyght wyl they come to put ꝑ to death. But I sayde: shuld any sothe mā as I flye? Who is ꝑ, being as I am, that wil go in to the tēple, to saue his life? I wyl not go in.

* After the Chaldey Some readers be haue not wher with to redeame them.

For I perceaued, ꝑ God had sente him: Yet spake he prophecie vpō me, neuertheles Tobiah & Sanabalat had hired him for money. Therfore toke he the money, that thrōugh feare I shuld so do: & synne: that thei might haue an euel report of me, to blaspheme me. Wy God think thou vpon Tobiah & Sanabalat accordynge vnto these their workes, & of the prophet Noadiah & of the other Prophetes, that wolde haue put me in feare.

And the wal was finished on the fyue & twentye daye of the moneth * Elul, in two and fyftye dayes. And when all oure enemyes hearde therof, all the Heythē ꝑ were aboute vs, were afrayed, & their courage fayled them: for they perceaued, that thys worke came of God. And at the same time were ther many of ꝑ chefe of Juda, whose letters wente vnto Tobiah, & from Tobiah vnto thē (for ther were many in Juda ꝑ were swore vnto hym: for he was the sōne in law of Sechaniah ꝑ sone of Arath, and his sonne Jehohanan had the daughter of Mosolam the sonne of Barachiah & they spake good of hym before me, and tolde hym my wordes) and Tobiah sēt letters, to put me in feare.

NOw when he had buylded ꝑ walle I hanged on the dores, & the porters syngers & Leuites were appoynted. And I cōmaunded my brother Hanani, & Hananiah the ruler of the palace at Jerusalē: for he was a faithful mā, & feared God more then did many other) and I sayd vnto them: let not the gates of Jerusalem be opened vntyll the sōne be whote. And whyle they are yet standynge in the watch, ꝑ dores shal be shut & barred. And ther were certayne citysens of Jerusalē appointed to be watchmen euery one in hys watche, & aboute hys house. ¶ The preastes and Leuytes which came with Zorobabell to Jerusalem are numbred: and the waile is deplored.

The.xii. Chapter.

These are the preastes and Leuites that went vp with Zorobabell the sonne of Salathiell & wt Jesua, Saraiah, Jeremy, Eldras, Amariah, Meluch, Hatus, Sechaniah, Rehum Meremoth, Ado, Genthoi, Abiah, Miamin, Maadiah, Belgah, Semaiah, Joiarib, Jadaiah, Sallu, Amok, Helkiah & Jadaiah. These were the heades amonge the preasties and their brethren in the tyme of Jesua. The leuites were these: Jesua, Benui, Cadmiell, Sarabiah, Juda & Mathaniah ouer the office of thankesgeuynge, they & their brethren: Bacbukiah and Unni and their brethren, were about them in the watches.

Jesua begat Joakim. Joakim begat Eliasib, Eliasib begat Joiada. Joiada begat Jonathā. Jonathā begat Jadua. And in the tyme of Joakim were these ꝑ chefe fathers amōge the preastes: vnder Saraiah Maraiah, vnder Jeremy Hananiah, vnder Eldras Mosolam, vnder Amariah Jehoanā, vnder Melico Jonathā, vnder Sebaniah Joseph, vnder Harim Edna, vnder Maraioth Helcai, vnder Idia Zacharī, vnder Ginnetō Mosolā, vnder Abiai, vnder Belgah Samua, vnder Semeiah Jehonathā, vnder Joiarib Mathnai, vnder Jadaiah Usi, vnder Sellai Kelai, vnder Amok Eber, vnder Helchiah Hasabiah, vnder Jadaiah Nathanael.

And in the tyme of Eliasib, Joiada, Johanā & Jadua, were the chefe fathers amōge the Leuites, and the preastes wyttē vnder ꝑ raigne of Darius the Persian. The chyldren of Leui ꝑ principal fathers were wytten in the Cronicles, vntyll the tyme of Jonathan the sonne of Eliasib. And these were ꝑ chefe amōg the Leuites, Hasabiah, Serebiah and Jesua & sōne of Cadmiel, and their brethren ouer agaynst thē, to geue prayse and thankes, accordynge as Dauid ꝑ man of God had ordeined it, one watche ouer against another. Mathania, Balbukiah, Obadiah, Mosolā, Talmon & Abub were porters in the watch at the threcholdes of ꝑ gates. These were in the tyme of Joiakim the sonne of Jesua & sonne of Josedec, and in the tyme of Nehemiah the captayne and of the preste Eldras the scribe.

And in the dedicacion of the wall at Jerusalē, were the Leuites sought out of al their places, that they myght be broughte to Jerusalē, to kepe the dedicacion & gladnesse, wt thākesgeuynges, withe singynge wt Cimbales, psalteries and harpes. And ꝑ chyldren of the syngers geathered them selues together frō ꝑ plaine coūtre aboute Jerusalem, & from the villages of Nethophathi, & from the house of Galgall, & out of the feldes of Geba and Asmaueth: for ꝑ syngers had buylded thē villages about Jerusalem. And the prestes & Leuites pu tyfyed them selues, and clēsed the people, the gates and the wall.

And I caused the princes of Juda to go vp vpō ꝑ wal, & apoynted two greate quers of thākesgeuing, which wēt on ꝑ right hande of the wal to warde the Dōggate, & after them wente Hosaiah, & halfe of the prices of Juda, & Azaria, Eldras, Mosolā Juda, Ben Jamin, Semeiah and Jeremi: & certaine of ꝑ prestes childrē wt trompets, namely zachary the sonne of Jonathan, the sonne of Semeiah, the sonne of Mathaniah, the sonne of Michaiah, the sonne of zecur, the sōne of Asaph, and his brethren, Semeiah, Asarael, Melalai, Galalai, Maai, Nathanael & Juda and Hanani, wt the musical instrumentes of Dauid the man of god.

And Eldras the Scribe before thē, toward the Welgate, & they wente vp ouer against thē vpon the steppes of the cyte of Dauid at the goynge vp of the wall to the house of Dauid, vnto the Watergate Eastwarde.

The other quer of thākesgeuynge wēt ouer against thē, & I after thē, & the halfe part of ꝑ people vpon ꝑ wal, towarde the Fornacegate vpward, vntil ꝑ brod wal, & to the port of Ephraim, & to ꝑ Oldegate, & to the Fyshgate, and to the tower of Hananeel, & to the tower of Meah, vntyll the Shepegate. And in the presongate stode they styll, and so stode the two quers of thankesgeuinge of the house of God, and I and the half of the rulers wyth me, and the prestes, namelye Eliakim, Maasiah, Miniamin, Michaiah, Elyoenai, Zacharay, Hananiah, wythe trompettes, and Maasiah, Semeiah, Eleasar, Uzzi, Jehohanan, Melchiah, Elam and Ser. And the syngers sange loude, & Jesrahiah was the ouerseer.

And ꝑ same daye were there greate sacrifices offred, & they reioyced: for god had geuen thē greate gladnes, so that bothe ꝑ wiues & chyldren were ioyfull, & the mirth of Jerusalem was herde farre of.

At the same tyme were ther mē appoynted ouer ꝑ treasure chestes (wherin were ꝑ Heueofferynges, the fyrstlynges and the tythes) that they shulde geather them out of ꝑ feldes aboute the cities, to destribute them vnto the prestes and Leuites accordyng to ꝑ lawe: for Juda was glad of the prestes, and Leuites, that they stode & waited vpon ꝑ office of their God, and the office of the purifycacion. And the syngers and porters stode after the commaūdemēte of Dauid and of Salomon his sōne: * for in the tyme of Dauid & Asaph, were ꝑ chefe syngers founded, and the songes of prayse and thankesgeuynge vnto God. In the time of zorobabel and Nehemiah, did al Israell, geue porciōs vnto the syngers & porters, euery day his porciō, & they gaue thynges halowed vnto ꝑ Leuites, & the Leuites, gaue thynges ꝑ were sāctyfyed, vnto the children of Aaron.

The.xiii. Chapter.

And what time as the boke of Moses was red in ꝑ eares of ꝑ people ther was fouid writtē therin, * ꝑ the Ammonites & Moabites shulde neuer come into the congregacyon of God, because they mete not ꝑ children of Israel with bred and water, * & hyred Balaam against them, that he shuld curse thē: neuertheles oure God turned thee curse in to a blessynge. Nowe when they heard the lawe, they separated from Israell euerye one that had myxte hym selfe therein. And before thys had the preast Eliasib delyuered the chest of the house of oure God vnto hys kinsman Tobiah: for he had made him a great chest, and ther had they afore tyme layed the meatofferynges, frankencense, vessel, and the tythes of corne, wyne and oyle (accordynge to the commaundemēt geuen to ꝑ Leuites, syngers & porters) and the heueofferynges of the prestes.

But in al this was not I at Jerusalem: for in ꝑ .xxxii. & thirtieth yeare of Artharxerses king of Babilon, came I vnto the kinge, & after certaine dayes optayned I licence of ꝑ king to come to Jerusalē. And I gat knowledg of ꝑ euel that Eliasib dyd vnto Tobiah, in ꝑ he had made him a chest in ꝑ court of the house of God, & it greued me sore, & I cast forth all ꝑ vessels of ꝑ house of Tobiah out of ꝑ chest, & cōmaūded thē to clense the chest. And thither brought I againe the vessels of the house of god, the meatofferynge and the incense.

And I perceaued, ꝑ the portions of the Leuites were not geuen thē, for ꝑ whyche cause ꝑ Leuites & singers were fled, euery one to his lād for to work. Then reproued I the rulers, and sayde: why forsake we ꝑ house of God? But I gathered them together, & set thē in theyr place. Thē brought all Juda the tythes of corne, wyne & oyle vnto ꝑ treasur. And I made treasurers ouer ꝑ treasure, euē Selemiah the preste, & Sadoc the scribe, and of the Leuytes Phadaiah & vnder their hāde Hanā the sonne of Zacur the sonne of Mathaniah: for they were coūted faythfull, & their office was to distribute vnto their brethrē. * Thinck vpon me O my God here in, & wypte not out my merci, ꝑ I haue shewed on ꝑ house of my God, and on the offyces ther of.

At the same tyme saw I some tredynge wyne prestes on the Saboth & bringinge in clusters, & asses laden wyth wyne, grapes, frygges, & bringinge all maner of burthens vnto Jerusalem, vpon the Saboth day. And I rebuked thē earnestli the same day that they sold ꝑ vitayles. Ther dwelt men of Tyre also therin, which broughte fysh & all maner of ware, and solde on the Saboth vnto the chyldren of Juda & Jerusalem. Thē reproued I the rulers in Juda, & sayde vnto thē: what euell thyng is this ꝑ ye do, & breake the Sabothe daye? Did not our fathers euen thus, and oure god brought al this plage vpon vs & vpō this citie? And ye make ꝑ wrathe moze yet vpon Israel, in ꝑ ye breake the Saboth. And it fortuned, ꝑ whē * the porters of Jerusalē made shadow before ꝑ Saboth, I comaunded to shut the gates, & charged ꝑ they ſhuld not be opened tll after the Sabboth: & ſome of my ſeruauntes ſet I at the gates, ꝑ ther ſhulde no burthē be brought in on the Saboth day. Then remayned ꝑ chapmen and marchaūtes once or twyce ouer night without Jeruſalē with al maner of wares. Thē reꝓzoued I thē ſoze, & ſaid vnto thē: why tary ye al night about the wal? If ye do it once againe, I will lay hādes vpō you. Frō that tyme forth came they no moze on the Sabeth. And I ſayd vnto the Leuites whych were cleane, that they ſhulde come and kepe the gates, to hallow ꝑ Saboth daye. Thynk vpon me (O my God) cōcernynge this alſo, & ſpare me accozdynge to thy greate mercy.

And at the ſame tyme ſawe I Jewes, ꝑ maried wyues of Aſdod, Ammō & of Moab & their childzē ſpake half in the ſpeache of Aſdod, and could not ſpeake in the Jewes language, but by the tonge myghte a man perceaue euery people. And I reꝓzoued them, & curſed them, & ſmote certayne men of them, & pluckte them vp, and toke an ooth of them by god: Ye ſhal not geue youre daughters vnto their ſōnes, nether ſhal ye take their daughters vnto your ſōnes, oz for your ſelues. Did not Salomō the kynge of Iſrael ſynne therin? and yet amōg many Heythen was there no kynge lyke him, and he was deare vnto hys god, and God made him kyng ouer al Iſraell, & yet neuertheles outlandyſh wemen cauſed hym to ſynne? And ſhall we then obey vnto you, to do all thys great euel, and to trāſgreſſe agaynſt our God, & mary ſtraūge wyues?

And one of ꝑ childzen of Jehoiada the ſōne of Eliaſib the hie ꝓꝛeſt, had made a cōtract with Sanabalat the Hozonite: but I chaced hym frō me. O my God, think ꝑ vpon thē that are quyte of the ꝓꝛeſtehode, & haue defyled the couenaūt of the ꝓꝛeſtehode & of the Leuites. Thus cleſed I thē frō al ſoch as were outlandiſhe, & appointed the courſes of the ꝓꝛeaſtes & Leuytes, euery one to hys offyce, & to offre ꝑ wood at tymes apoynted, & ꝑ fyꝛſt frutes. Thinke ꝑ vpon me (O my God) foz the beſt.

¶ Thꝭ Aha ſuerus, which is called Artharzesmasketh a royall feaſt, wherunto the quene Vaſthi will not come: foz which cauſe ſhe is denoꝛced.

The. I. Chapter.

IN ꝑ time of Ahaſuerus whiche raygned from India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundreth & ſeuen & twentye landes, what tyme as he ſate on hys ſeate royall in the caſtell of Suſan in the thirde yeare of his raygne, he made a feaſte vnto all hys ꝓꝛynces & ſeruauntes, namely vnto the myghtye men of Perſia & Media, to the cappytaynes and rulers of hys countrees, that he myghte ſhewe the noble riches of his kingdome, and the glorious woꝛſhippe of his greatneſſe, manye dayes longe, euen an hundreth and foure ſoze dayes.

And when theſe dayes were eꝛppyzed, ꝑ kyng made a feaſt vnto al the people that were in the caſtell of Suſan, bothe vnto great & ſmall, ſeuen dayes long in ꝑ courte of the gardē by the kinges palace: wher there hanged whyte, reed and palowe clothes, faſtened with coardes of lynnen and ſcarlette in ſyluer rynges, vpon pylers of Marble ſtone.

The bēches were of goulde and ſiluer made vpon a paueinēt of grene, white, yalowe & blacke Marble. And the dzynke was caried in veſſels of gould, & ther was euer chaūge of veſſell. And ꝑ kinges wine was moch accozdinge to the power of the kinge. And no man was appoynted what he ſhuld dzinck: foz ꝑ king had cōmaūded al the offycers of his houſe, that euery one ſhuld do as it liked him. And the quene Vaſthi made a feaſt alſo foz ꝑ wemen in ꝑ palace of Ahaſuerus. And on the ſeuenth day whē the king was merꝛy of wyne, he cōmaunded Mehuman, Baꝛtha, Harbona, Bagatha, Abagatha, Zathar and Carcas, the ſeuen chamberlaynes (that dyd ſeruyce in the ꝓꝛeſente of Kynge Ahaſuerus) to fetche the quene Vaſthi wythe the crowne regal, that he might ſhewe the people and ꝓꝛynces her fayꝛneſſe: foz ſhe was beutyfull. But the quene Vaſthi wolde not come at the kynges woꝛde by hys chamberlaynes.

laynes. Thē was the kyng very wꝛothe, & his indignacion kyndled in him.

And the king ſpake to ꝑ wiſe men that had vnderſtanding in ꝑ ordinaunces of ꝑ lād foz the kiges matters muſt be hādled before al ſoch as haue knowledg of ꝑ law & iudgemēt: and the next vnto hym were, Carſena, Sethar, Admatha, Tharſis, Mares, Marſana & Mamucan, the ſeuē ꝓꝛinces of ꝑ Perſians & Meedes, whyche ſaw ꝑ kynges face, & ſat aboue in ꝑ kingdom, What lawe ſhulde be executed vpō ꝑ quene Vaſthi, becauſe ſhe did not accozdig to ꝑ woꝛd of ꝑ kinge by hys chāberlaines. Then ſayd Mamucan before the kyng & ꝑ ꝓꝛinces: the quene Vaſthi hath not only done euel agaīſt ꝑ king but alſo againſt all the ꝓꝛynces & all the people in all ꝑ landes of kynge Ahaſuerus foz this dede of ꝑ quene ſhall come abzode vnto all wemē ſo that they ſhall deſpyſe theyꝛ huſbādes before theyꝛ eies, and ſhall ſay: the king Ahaſuerus cōmaunded Vaſthi the queneto come before him, but ſhe wolde not. And ſo ſhal the ꝓꝛinceſſes in Perſia & Media ſay lykewiſe vnto al ꝑ kinges ꝓꝛices, whē theꝛheare of this dede of ꝑ quene, thus ſhall there aryſe deſpytefulnes and wzath ynoughe. If it pleaſe the kyng, let ther go a commaundemente from him, & lett it be wꝛytten accozdyng to the law of the Perſians & Medians (& not to be trāſgreſſed) ꝑ Vaſthi come no moze before kyng Ahaſuerus, & let ꝑ king geue the kingdom vnto another that is better then ſhe.

And ꝑ thys wꝛytinge of ꝑ king which ſhalbe made, be publiſſhed thoꝛow out al his empyꝛe (which is great) that al wyues may hold their huſbādes in honour, bothe among greate and ſmal.

This pleaſed the kynge & the ꝓꝛynces, & the kyng dyd accozdinge to the woꝛd of Mamucan. Then were there letters ſente foꝛth into al the kynges lādes, into euery e land acozding to tho wꝛytyng therof, and to euery people after their language that euery mā ſhuld be loꝛd in his owne houſe. And this cauſed he be ſpoken after the lāguage of hys people.

¶ After the quene put away, certen goodly younge damoſelles are ſearched out. Ed. Ha otherwyſe called Eſther, pleaſeth the kyng, & is made quene. Mardocheus openeth vnto th. king thoſe that wold betraye hym.

The. II. Chapter.

AFter theſe actes whē the diſpleaſure of kinge Ahaſuerus was layed he thoughte vpon Vaſthi, what ſhe had done, & what was concluded concernynge her. Then ſayde the kynges ſeruauntes: Lett there be fayze younge vyzgins ſoughte foz the kynge, and let ꝑ kinge appoynte ouerſeaꝛs in all the landes of hys empyze, that they maye bzynge to geather all fayze younge vyzgyns vnto the caſtell of Suſan to ꝑ wemens buylding, vnder the hande of Haget the kynges chāberlaine, that kepethe the Women, and let hym geue them theyꝛ apparell. And loke whych damſell pleaſeth ꝑ kinge, let her be quene in Vaſthis ſtcade. This pleaſed ꝑ kynge, and he dyd ſo.

In the caſtel of Suſā there was a Jewe, whoſe naune was Mardocheus, ꝑ ſonne of Jair, the ſonne of Semei, ꝑ ſonne of Cis ꝑ ſonne of Jemini, which was caryed away frō Jeruſalē, * whan Jekoniah the king of Juda was led away, (whō Nabuchodonoſoꝛ ꝑ kig of Babilō caried away) & he noꝛiſhed Hadaſah (that is Eſther) his vncles daughter: foz ſhe had nether father noꝛ mother, and ſhe was a faire and beutiful damſel. And when her father and mother died. Mardocheus receaued her as hys owne daughter. * 4. reg. xxiiij.

Now when the kynges cōmaundemēt and cōmiſſyon was publiſſhed, & many dāſels were bzought to gether vnto ꝑ caſtel of Suſan vnder ꝑ hand of Hagei, Eſther was taken alſo vnto the kinges houſe vnder the hand of Hagei the keper of the wemē, & the damſell pleaſed him, & ſhe found grace in his ſight. And he cauſed her oint ment to be geuen her, and her gifres, & gaue her. vii. notable gentil wemē of ꝑ kingꝛ houſe, & arayed bothe her & her gyntyl wemē very ryche lie in the houſe of the wemē. But Eſther ſhewed not her people noꝛ her kinred: foz Mardocheus had chargedher, ꝑ ſhe ſhulde not teli it. And Mardocheus walked euerye daye before the courte of the wemens buyldynge, that he myghte know how Eſther dyd, and what ſhuld be come of her.

And when the appoynted time of euery dāſel came that ſhe ſhulde come to ꝑ kyng Ahaſuerus,

Ahasuerus, after that she had bene .xii. monethes in the decking of the wemen) for their decking must haue so moch time, namely syxe monethes wt Balme & Myrre, & .vi. monethes wt good spyces, so were ꝑ wemē beutifyed) thē went there one dāsell vnto ꝑ king, & what soeuer she requyred, ꝑ must be geuē her to go with her oute of ꝑ weines buyldinge vnto ꝑ kynges palace.
And when one came in ꝑ euenyng, ꝑ same wēt frō him on the morowe into ꝑ seconde house of wemen, vnder the hand of Sagas ꝑ kinges chāberlaine, which kept ꝑ cō-cubines. And she must come vnto ꝑ kyng nomore, except it pleased ꝑ kinge, & that he caused her to be called by name.

Now whē the tyme came of Esther the daughter of Abihail Mardocheus vncle) whō he had receaued as hys owne daughter (ꝑ she shuld come to the kynge, she desyred nothinge but what Hagei the kynges chāberlaine the keper of the wemē sayde.
And Esther found fauour in the syght of al thē that loked vpon her. And Esther was taken vnto king Ahasuerus into the house royal, in the tenth moneth whych is called Tebeth, in the seuenth yeare of hys raygne.

And the kyng loued Esther aboue al the wemen, & she founde grace and mercye in his sight before al the virgins: and he set the quenes croune vpon hir head, & made her quene in stead of Vasthi. And ꝑ kinge made a great feaste vnto all his princes & seruauntes (whych feaste was because of Esther) and lett the landes be in quietnes, and gaue royall gyftes.

And whā the virgins were gethered to gether the secōd time, Mardocheus sat in ꝑ kynges gate. And as yet had not Esther shewed her kinred & her people, accordyng as Mardocheus had biddē her: for Esther dyd after the worde of Mardocheus, lyke as whē he was herutoure. At ꝑ same time whyle Mardocheus sat in ꝑ kinges gate, two of the kinges chāberlaines Bagathā and Thares whych kepte the doze, were wroth, & sought to lay their hādes on the kyng Ahasuerus: where of Mardocheus gat knowledg & told it vnto quene Esther & Esther certyfied the king therof in Mar docheus name. And whē inquisition was made, it was founde so. And they were both hanged on tre: and it was writtē in the Chronycles before the kynge.

¶ Haman the Macedonian, after he was exalted, obtained of the kyng, that all the Jewes shulde be put to deeth, because Mardocheus had not done hi worshyp, as other had

The .iii. Chapter.

AFter these actes did the kyng promote Hamā ꝑ sōne of Madadatha the Agagite, & set hi hie, & set his seat aboue al the princes that were wt him. And al the kinges seruauntes that were in ꝑ gate, bowed their knees, & dyd reuerēce vnto Haman: for the kynge had so cōmaūded.
But Mardocheus bowed not the knee, & worshipped him not. Thē the ꝑ kinges seruauntes whiche were in the kynges gate, said vnto Mardocheus: why trāsgressest ꝑ the kinges cōmaundement? And when they spake this dayly vnto him, & he followed thē not, they told Hamā, ꝑ they might se whether Mardocheus matters would endure: for he had told them, that he was a Jew. And whē Hamā saw, that Mardo cheus bowed not the knee vnto hym, nor worshypped hym, he was full of indigna cyon & thought it to lyttell to laye handes onli on Mardocheus: for thei had shewed hym the nacyon of Mardocheus, but he sought to destroy al the Jewes the nacion of Mardocheus, that were in ꝑ whole empyre of Ahasuerus.

In the first moneth (that is the moneth Nisan) in thee twelueth yeare of kynge Ahasuerus they cast Phut (ꝑ is a lott) before Hamā, on what day & what monethe this shuld be done: & it went out the twelueth moneth that is ꝑ moneth Adar. And Haman said vnto king Ahasuerus: Ther is a people scatered abrode and dyspersed amōge all people in al the landes of thyne empire, & theyr law is cōtrary vnto al peo ple, & they do not after the kynges lawes, nether is it ꝑ kinges profet to suffre theā ter this maner. If it please ꝑ king, let him write, that they may be destroied, & so wyl I wepe downe ten thousande talentes of siluer, vnder the handes of the workmen, to be brought into ꝑ kynges chāber. Thē toke the kyng hys ringe from hys hande, & gaue it vnto Haman the sonne of Amadatha the Agagite the Jewes enemie. And the kynge sayde vnto Haman: Lette the syluer

syluer be geuen the, & that people also, to do with all what pleaseth the.

Thē were the kynges scrybes called on the thirteenth day of the first moneth, and ther was writtē (accordinge as Haman cō maūded) vnto the kynges princes and to the captynes euery where in the landes, & to ꝑ rulars of euery people in ꝑ coūtreyes on euery syde, according to the writting of euery nacyon, and after their language in the name of kyng Ahasuerus, and sealed wt the kynges ryng. And the writtynges were sēt by postes into al the kynges landes, to rote oute, to kyll, and to destroye all Jewes, both ponge and olde, chyldrē and wemen in one day (namely vpon the thir-tenth day of the twelueth moneth, which is the moneth Adar) & to spoile their goodes.

Thys was the summe of ꝑ writyng, ꝑ ther shuld be a cōmaundemente geuen in al lādes, to be publisshed vnto all people, that they shulde be ready agaynst ꝑ same daye. And the postes wente in all the haste accordyng to the kinges cōmaundemēte.
And in the castel of Susan was the commaundement deuysed. And the kyng and Haman sate and dranck. But the cyrye of Susan was disquieted.

¶ Mardocheus geueth the quene knowledge of the cruell decree of the kyng agaynst the Jewes.

The .iiii. Chapter.

WHē Mardocheus perceaued al that was done, he rent hys clothes & put on sackcloth, & ashes, & wēt out in to ꝑ mid-des of the citie, and cried lou-de and lamētably, and came before the kin ges gate: for there might no man entre wt in the kynges gate, that had sack cloth on.
And in all landes and places, as farre as the kynges worde and commaundement extended, there was great lamentacyon a mōg theat Jewes and many fasted, wept, mourned, and lay in sackclothes and in as shes. So Esthers damsels, and her cham-berlaines, came and tolde it her. Thē was the quene exceadinglye astonyed. And she sent rayment, that Mardocheus shuld put them on, and lay the sackclothe from him.
But Mardocheus would not take them.
Thē called Esther Hathath one of the kin ges chamberlaynes (whyche stode before her) and gaue hym a commaundemente vnto Mardocheus, that he myght know what it were, and wherefore he did so. So Hathath went forthe to Mardocheus vn to the strete of the cytye, whyche was before the kynges gate.

And Mardocheus tolde him of al ꝑ had happened vnto him, & of the summe of sil uer ꝑ Haman had promised to wepe downe in the kynges chāber because of ꝑ Jewes for to destroye them (& he gaue him the co-pye of the cōmaūdemēt, that was deuised at Susā to destroye them, that he myghte shewe it vnto Esther, & to speake to her & charge her, that she shulde go in to ꝑ king and make her prayer & supplication vnto hym for her people.

And whē Hathath came in, & told Esther ꝑ wordes of Mardocheus, Esther spake vnto Hathath, and cōmaūded hym to say vnto Mardocheus: al the kynges seruaūt tes, & the people in the landes of the kynge know, that whosoeuer cōmeth within the courte vnto the king, whether it be mā or womā, which is not called, the cōmaunde-mēt is that the same shal die immedyatly, except the kynge hold out the gouldē scep ter vnto him, that he may lyue. As for me, I haue not bene called to come in to ꝑ kin ge now this thirtie dayes.

And whē Mardocheus was certified of Esthers wordes, Mardocheus bad say a gayne vnto Esther: think not to saue thine owne syle, whyle thou arte in the kynges house before al Jewes: for yf thou holdest thy peace at this time, then shal the Jewes haue helpe and delyueraunce out of another place, and thou and thy fathers house shalbe destroyed. And who knoweth whether thou art come to ꝑ kyngdom, for this tymes sake? Esther bad, geue Mardoche-us this answere: Go thou thy way then, & geather together al ꝑ Jewes that ar fou̇d at Susan, & fast ye for me, ꝑ ye eate not & drink not in .iii. dales, nether day nor night.
I and my dāsels wyll faste lykewise, & so wil I go in to the kyng cōtrary to ꝑ cōmaū demēte: yf I perishe, I perishe. So Mar docheus wente hys waye, and dyd all that Esther had commaunded him.

The Notes.

a ¶ The Jewes were firste called Hebrues, of Haber the eldest sonne of Sale sonne of Arphaxat, as it appeareth, Genes. xi. b, and i. Paralip. c. after were they called Israell of Jacob, & after Jewes of one of the sonnes of Jacob that is to wete of Juda.

Esther

¶ Esther entreth into ỹ king and byddeth him and Haman to a feast. Haman prepareth a gallouse for Mardocheus.

The.v.Chapter.

A Nd on the thirde day put Esther on her royall apparel, and stode in ỹ court of the kinges palace within ouer against ỹ kynges house. And the kyng sate vpon hys royall seat in the kinges palace ouer agaynste the gate of the house. And when the kinge sawe Esther ỹ quene standynge in the court, she found grace in his syghte. And the kynge held out ỹ golden scepter in hys hande to warde Esther. B So Esther stepte forthe, and touched the toppe of the scepter. Then sayd the kynge vnto her: What wylt thou quene Esther? and what requyrest thou? aske euen the halfe of the empyre, & it shal be geuen the. Esther sayd If it please the king, let ỹ kynge & Haman come this day vnto ỹ banket ỹ I haue prepared. The kyng sayde: cause Haman to make haste, that he may do as Esther hath sayde.

Now whē the kyng & Haman came to ỹ bāket ỹ Esther had prepared, ỹ kyng sayd vnto Esther at ỹ banket of wyne: Esther, what is thy petitiō? & it shalbe geuen the. And what requyrest thou? If it be euen ỹ halfe of the empyre, it shalbe done.

C Then answered Esther and sayde: my petition & desyre is, yf I haue founde grace in the syghte of the kynge, & yf it please the kynge to geue me my petition, and to fulfyll my request, then let the kynge and Haman come to the bāket that I shal prepare for thē, and so wyl I do to morow as the kinge hath sayde.

Then went Haman forth the same day ioyfull and merye in his mind. And when he sawe Mardocheus in the kinges gate, that he stode not vp and kneled before hi, he was full of indignacion at Mardocheus. Neuertheles he refrayned hym selfe: & when he came home, he sent, and called for hys frendes, and Zares hys wyfe, & tolde them of the glorye of his richesse, & ỹ multitude of his children all to geather how ỹ kyng had promoted hym so greatlye, and how that he was taken aboue the prynces and seruaūtes of the kynge. Haman sayd D moreouer: Yee & Esther the quene lette no man come with the kinge vnto ỹ banckett that she had prepared, excepte me, & to morow am I bidden vnto her also wt ỹ king. But in all thys am I not satisfyed as log as I se Mardocheus ỹ Iewe sitting at ỹ kynges gate. Thē sayd Zares his wyfe & all his frendes vnto him: Let thē make a galowes of fyftye cubites hie, & tomorow speake thou vnto ỹ king, ỹ Mardocheus may be hāged theron, yf thou cōmesle merely wt the kyng vnto the bancket. Haman was wel content wyth al, and caused a galowes to be prepared.

¶ The king turneth ouer the Chronicles & findeth the fidelitie of Mardocheus: the to the confusiō of Haman, cōmādeth Mardocheus to be had in honour

The.vi.Chapter,

THe same night could not the king slepe, and he cōmaūded E to bring the Chronicles & stories: which whē they were red before ỹ king they happened on ỹ place wher it was written, how Mardocheus had tolde, that the kynges two chāberlaynes (whych kepte the threshholdes) sought to lay handes on kyng Ahasuerus. And the king sayd: what worshyp & good haue we done to Mardocheus therfore? Then sayde the kynges seruauntes that ministred vnto him. There is nothing done for hym. And the kyng sayde: Who is in the courte? (for Haman was gone into the courte wythoute before the kynges house, that he myghte speake vnto ỹ kinge to hange Mardocheus on the tre, that he had prepared for him.) And the kinges seruauntes sayde vnto hym: beholde, Haman standeth in the courte. Thee kynge sayde: let hym come in. And when Haman came in, the kynge sayde vnto hym: what shall be done vnto the man, whom the kinge wolde fayne bringe vnto worshyppe? But Haman thought in his hert: Whom shulde the kynge els be glad to bryng vnto worshyppe, but me? And Haman sayde vnto the kynge: Lett the man vnto C whome the kynge wouldo be glad to do worshyppe, be broughte hyther, that he maye be arayed wyth the royall garmētes whyche the kyng vsethe to weare: and the horse that the kynge rydethe vpon, & that the crowne royall maye be sett vpon hys heed. And let thys rayment and horse be delyuered vnder the hande of one of the kynges prynces, that he maye araye the man the man wythall (whome the kinge wolde fayne honour) and carye him vpō the horse thorow the strete of the citie, & cause it to be proclaymed before hym: thus shall it be done to euery man, whom the kynge wold fayne honoure.

The king sayd: make haste, and take as thou hast sayd, the rayment and the horse: & do euē so wyth Mardocheus ỹ Iewe that sytteth before the kinges gate, & let nothing fayle of al that thou hast spokē. Then toke Haman the rayment & the horse, & arayed him, & brought him on horsebacke thorowe the strete of the cytie, & proclaimed before him: Euen thus shall it be done vnto D euery man whome the kynge is dysposed to honour. And Mardocheus came agayne to ỹ kynges gate, but Haman gat hym home in al the haste mourning withe beare heade, & tolde Zares his wife & al hys frēdes, euery thyng that had happened hym. Then sayd his wise mē & Zares his wife vnto him: If it be Mardocheus of ỹ sede of the Iewes, before whom thou hast begōne to fal, thou canste do nothinge vnto him, but shalt fal before hym. While they were yet talkinge with him, came the kynges chamberlaynes, and caused Haman to make haste to come vnto the bancket that Esther had prepared.

¶ The quene boldeth the king and Haman against & prayeth for her selfe and her people. She accuseth Haman, and he is hāged on ỹ gallouse, which he had prepared for Mardocheus.

The.vii.Chapter.

AS Nd whē the king and Haman came to ỹ bancket that quene Esther had prepared, ỹ kinge sayd vnto Esther on ỹ second daye at the banckett of wyne: what is thy petition quene Esther, that it may be geuen the? And what requyrest ỹ? Yea aske euen halfe of the empyre, and it shalbe done. Esther the quene answered & sayd: Yf I haue found grace in thy syght (O king) & yf it please the kyng thē graūt me my lyfe at my desyre & my people for my petitions sake: for we are solde I & my people both to be destroyed, to be slayne & B to perysshe. And wold God we were sold to be bondmen & bondewemen, then wolde I holde my tonge, * so shuld not the enemye be so hye to the kynges harme. The kinge Ahasuerus spake and sayde vnto Quene

Some rede although ỹ enemie shal be not recōpence ỹ kinges harme.

Esther: what is he that? Or where is he ỹ darre presume in hys wynde to do soche a thinge after that maner? Esther sayde: the ennemye and aduersarye is thys wycked Haman.

As for Hamā, he was exceedingly afrayed before the king & the quene. And ỹ kinge arose frō the bancket & frō the wyne in hys displeasure & wēt into the palace garden, And Haman stode vp, and besoughte quene Esther for hys lyfe: for he saw that there was a mischefe prepared for hym of the kynge already. C

And whē the kinge came agayne out of the palace gardē into the parler where they had eate, Haman had layed hym vpon the bed that Esther sat vpō. Thē sayd ỹ king wil he force the quene also beside * me in ỹ house? As sone as ỹ worde wēte out of the kinges mouth, they * couered Hamās face And Harbonah one of the chāberlaynes ỹ stode before the king, sayd. Beholde, there stādeth a galowes in Hamās house fyftie cubites hye, which he had made for Mardocheus, that spake good for ỹ king. The kinge sayde: hange hym thereon. So they hanged Hamā on the galowes that he had made for Mordocheus. Thē was the kinges wrath pacyfyed. D

* Or in my presence

* To couer his face, is to shew him worthye of death.

¶ After the death of Haman is Mardocheus exalted, and then are there sounforth his letters sent vnto the Iewes.

The.viii.Chapter.

THe same daye dyd kyng Ahasuerus geue the house of Haman the Iewes enemye, vnto A quene Esther. And Mardocheus came before the kinge: for Esther told how that he belōged vnto her. And the king put of his finger ringe, which he had take from Haman, & gaue it vnto Mardocheus. And Esther set Mardocheus ouer the house of Hamā. And Esther spake yet more before the kinge, & fel downe at hys fete, & besought him, that he wolde put away the wickednes of Haman the Agagite, & his deuice that he had ymagined agaynste the Iewes. And the kinge held out the goulden scepter vnto Esther. Then rose Esther, & stode before the king B and sayd: yf it please the king & yf I haue founde grace in hys syght, and yf it be conuenient for the kyng, and yf it be accepted in hys syght then let it be written, that the letters of the deuyce of Haman thee sonne of Hamadatha the Agagite, may be called agayne: whych letters he wrote, to destroy the Jewes in all the kynges landes. For how can I se the euell that shall happē vn to my people? & how can I loke vpon thee destruction of my kynred?

Then sayde the kinge Ahasuerus vnto Quene Esther, & to Mardocheus the Jewe: Behold, I haue geuē Esther the house of Hamā, and him haue they hanged vpō a tree, because he layde hande vpō the Jewes. Wryte ye now therfore for ỹ Jewes, as it liketh you in the kinges name, & seale it with the kinges ringe (for the writinges that were written in the kinges name, and sealed with the kinges ring, durst no man disanulle.) Then were the kinges scrybes called at the same tyme in ỹ thyrd moneth, that is the moneth Siuan, on the thre and twentyeth daye.

And it was writtē (as Mardocheus cōmaunded) vnto thee Jewes & to the princes, to the ℣ cbyties and captaynes in the landes frō India vntil Ethiopia, namely an hundred and seuen and twētye landes, vnto euery one accozding to the wrytynge therof, vnto euery people after their speche and to the Jewes accozding to theyr wrytinge and language.

And it was written in the king Ahasuerus name, & sealed with the kinges ringe. And by postes that rode vpō swyft ponge Mules, sent he the wrytynges, wherin the king graunted the Jewes (in what cytyes soeuer they were) to geather thē selues to gether, & to *‡stand for theyr lyfe, and for to rote oute, to slaye, and to destroye all the power of the people & land that wold trouble them, with childzen and wemen, and to spople their good vpō one daye in al ỹ landes of kinge Ahasuerus namely vpon the thyrteenth day of the twelueth moneth, whiche is the moneth Adar.

The summe of the writinge was, howether was a cōmaūdemēt geuē in al landes to be published vnto al the people, that the Jewes shuld be ready against that day to auenge thē selues on theyr enemyes. And the postes that rode vpō the Mules, made haste with al spede, accozding to ỹ kinges wozde: and the cōmaundement was deuyled in the castel of Susan.

As for Mardocheus, he wēt oute frō ỹ king in royal apparel of yelow & whyte, & with a great crowne of gould, beyng arayed wyth a garment of lynnē and purple, & the cytie of Susan reioysed & was glad: but vnto the Jewes ther was come light & gladnes, and ioye & worshippe. And in all lādes and cyties, into what places soeuer the kinges wozd and commaundemēt reached, there was ioye & myrthe, prosperite & good dayes among the Jewes: in so moch that many of the people in the lād became of ỹ Jewes beleue, for ỹ feare of ỹ Jewes came vpon them.

The Notes.

*‡ To stande for theyr lyfe is a maner of speakinge famyliar to the Hebrues, for that we saye, to defend their lyues, and shyfte them selues frō the cruel persequucyon of theyr enemyes.

¶ At the cōmaūdement of the kynge the Jewes put their aduersaries to death. The sōnes of Haman ex hāged. The Jewes kepe a feast daye in remembrāce of theyr delyuerāunce.

The.ix. Chapter.

IN the twelueth moncthe, that is the moneth Adar, vpō the thirteenth day, which the kynges wozd & cōmaūdemēt had appointed, that it shoulde be done, euen vpon the same day that the enemyes shulde haue destroyed the Jewes to haue oppressed thē, it turned contrary wise, euen that the Jewes should subdue theyr enemyes. Then geathered the Jewes together in their cyties wyth in all the landes of kynge Ahasuerus, to laye hande on soche as wolde do them euell, and no man coulde wythstande them: for the feare of them was come ouer all people. And all the rulers in the landes, and pryaces and Debtyes, and officers of the kynge promoted the Jewes: for ỹ feare of Mardocheus came vpon them. For Mardocheus was greate in the kynges house, & the repozte of him was noised in all lādes, how he increased and grewe.

Thus the Jewes smote al their enemies with a sore slaughter, & slew & destroyed, and did after their wil vnto such as were their aduersaries. And at the castel of Susā slew the Jewes and destroied fiue hundzeth mē: & slew Pharsandatha, Delphō, Aspatha, Phozatha, Adalia, Aridatha, Pharmastha, Arisai, Aridai, Waizatha, ỹ ten sonnes of Haman the sonne of Hamadatha the enemie of the Jewes: but on his goodes goodes they layed no handes. At the same tyme was the king certified of the nombze of those that were slayne at ỹ castel of Susan. And the kinge sayde vnto Quene Esther: The Jewes haue slayne & destroyed fyue hundzeth mē at the castel of Susan, & the ten sonnes of Hamā: What shall they do in the other lādes of the king? What is thy petition, that it may be geuen the? and what requyrest thou moze to be done? Esther sayd: Yf it please the kinge, let hym suffre the Jewes to mozowe also to do according vnto thys dayes cōmaūdemēt, that they may hange Hamās ten sonnes vpon the tree. And the kinge charged to dooso, & the cōmaundemēt was deuised at Susan and Hamans. x. sonnes were hanged. And the Jewes geathered thē selues togeather at Susan, vpon the fourteenth daye of the moneth Adar, and slewe thre hundzeth mē at Susan, but on theyr goodes they layde no handes.

As for the other Jewes in the kinges lādes, thei came together, & *stode for their lyues, & gat rest frō theyr enemyes: & slewe of their enemies fyue & seuētye thousand, how beit they layed no hādes on their goodes. Thys was done on the thirteenth day of the moneth Adar, and on the fourteenth daye of the same moneth rested thei, which day they ordeyned to be a daye of feasting and gladnesse. But the Jewes at Susan were come together both on the thyrteenthe daye, & on the fourteenth, & on the fyfteenth daye they rested, & the same daye ordeyned they to be a daye of feastinge & gladnesse. Therfore the Jewes that dwelt in the villages and vnwalled townes, ordeyned the fourteenth daye of the moneth Adar, to be a daye of feastinge and gladnes, and one sent gyftes vnto another.

And Mardocheus wrote these actes, & sent the writinges vnto al the Jewes that were in al the landes of king Ahasuerus, both nye and farre, that they shulde yearly receaue & hold the fourteenth and fyfteenth daye of thee monethe Adar, as thee dayes wherein the Jewes came to reste frō theyr enemyes, and as a monethe wherein theyr payne was turned to ioye, and their sorow into prosperite: that they shulde obserue ỹ same as dayes of wealth and gladnesse, & one too sende gyftes vnto another, and to distribute vnto the poore.

And the Jewes receaued it that they had begōne to do, and that Mardocheus wrote vnto them: how that Hamā ỹ sōne of Hamadatha all the Jewes enemie, had deuysed to destroye all the Jewes, & caused to caste Phur (that is Lott) for to put them in feare, & to bryng them to naught: and how Hester wente and spake to ỹ kinge, that thorow letters his wycked deuyce (which he ymagined agaynst the Jewes) might be turned vpon his owne heed, and how he & his sonnes were hanged on the tre. For ỹ which cause they called this day Phurim after the name of *Phur, accozdyng to all the wozdes of this writinge: & what they them selues had sene, and what had happened vnto them.

*That is, Lot.

And the Jewes set it vp, & toke it vpon them & their sede, & vpō all soch as ioyned thē selues vnto them, that they wolde not misse to obserue these .ii. dayes yearly, accordynge as they were wzytten & appointed, how ỹ these dayes are not to be forgotē, but to be kept of childers childzē amōge al kinredes in all lādes & cytyes. They ỹ dayes of Phurim, which are not to be ouerslipte amōge the Jewes, & the memoryal of them oughte not to perysshe from theyr sede.

And quene Hester the daughter of Abihaill and Mardocheus the Jewe wzote with all auctozyte, to confirme this seconde wrytinge of Phurim, and sente the letters vnto al the Jewes in the hūdzeth & seuē and twentie landes of the empyre of Ahasuerus, wyth frendly and faythful wozdes, to confirme these dayes of Phurim, in theyr tyme appoynted, accozdynge as Mardocheus ỹ Jewe and Hester ỹ quene had ordeyned concernynge them: lyke as they vpon their soule and vpon their sede had cōfirmed ỹ actes of the *fastynges & of hir cōplaynte. And Hester cōmaunded to stablish these actes of this Phurim, & to wryte them in a boke.

AND ỹ king Ahasuerus laied tribute vpon the lande, and vpō the Iles of ỹ see. As for all the wozke of hys power

For Mardocheus the Iewe was the second next vn to kynge Ahasuerus, and greate amonge the Iewes, & accepted amõge the multitude of hys brethren, as one that seketh the welth of hys people, & speaketh the beste for all hys sede.

¶ The Boke of Job.

¶ Job is plaged of God, by the losse of hys goodes and chyldren.

The. I. Chapter.

A IN the land of Hus ther was a man called Job: an innocẽt & vertuous man, soch one as feared God & eschued euell. This man had. vii. sonnes, & thre daughters. Hys substaunce was. vii. M. shepe. iii. M. camelles. v. C. poucke of oxen. v. C. she asses and a very great housholde: so that he was one of the most principal men among al them of the east countrey. And his sonnes went, and made bãkettes: one daye in one house, another day in another, and sente for theyr thre systers to eate and drincke wythe them. So when they had passed ouer the tyme of their bankettinge round about, Job sent for them, and clensed them agayne, & gat vp earlye, and offred for euery one a burntoffringe. For Job thought thus: peraduenture my sonnes haue done some offence, and haue bene vnthankfull to God in theyr hertes. B And thus dyd Job euery daye. Now vpõ a tyme, whẽ the  seruãtes of God b* came and stode before the Lord, Sathã came also among them. And the Lord sayde vnto Sathan: From whẽce comest thou? Sathan answered the Lord, and sayde: I haue gone about thee lande and walcked thorowe it.

Thẽ sayd the Lord vnto Sathan: hast thou not cõsydered my seruaunt Job, how that he is an innocẽt & vertuous mã: soch one as feareth God, & eschued euell, & that there is none lyke him in the land? Sathã answered, & sayde vnto the Lorde: Doth Job feare God for nought? hast thou not preserued hym, his house, & al his substaũce on euery syde? hast thou not blessed the workes of his handes? Is not his possession encreased in the land? But laye thyne hand vpõ him a little, touche once all that he hathe, and (I holde) he shall curse the to thy face. And the Lord said vnto Sathã: lo al that he hathe, be in thy power: onelye vpon hym selfe se that thou laye not thine hande. Then went Sathã forth from the Lorde.

Now vpõ a certayn day whẽ his sõnes and daughters were eating, and drinking wyne in their eldeste brothers house, there came a messenger vnto Job, & sayd: Whyle ỹ oxẽ were a plowing, & the Asses going in the pasture besyde thẽ: ỹ Sabees came in violently, and toke thẽ al away: ye they haue slayne thy seruaũtes with the sword, and I only ranne my waye, to tell the.

And whyle he was yet speakinge, there came another, & sayd: The fyre of God is fallen from heauen, it hath consumed, and burnt vp al thy shepe & seruauntes: and I only ranne my way, to tel the. In ỹ meane season whyle he was yet speakinge, there came another, & sayde: The Caldees made thre armies, & fel in vpõ thy camels, which they haue caried away, yea and slayne thy seruaũtes with the sword: and I only am gotte away to tel the: Whyle he was speaking, there came yet another, & sayde, Thy sonnes & daughters were eatinge & drincking wyne in their eldest brothers house, & sodenly ther came a mighte great wynde out of the South, & smote the. iiii. corners of the house: which fell vpõ thy childre, so that they are dead, and I am gotte awaye alone, to tell the.

Then Job stode vp, & rent hys clothes, shaued his head, fel downe vpõ the groũd worshipped, & sayd: Naked came I out of my mothers wõbe, & naked shall I turne thyther agayne. The Lorde gaue, and the Lord hath taken away * now blessed be ỹ name of the Lord. In al these thinges did Job not offend, * nor murmured folishly agayn. ỹ God.

Of Job.

The Notes.

 By the seruãtes of god here vnderstande, not only angelles, by whõ he ordereth ỹ course & workes of ỹ worlde, but also ỹ god ly chosen, whom he continually careth and prouydeth for, Job. i. a.

b* Came & stode before the lorde. Thyncke not that god some time apeareth to the angelles, and sometime not: for the good angelles do alwayse se the face of god, Nether cõmeneth God ether with ỹ angelles or with ỹ deuell with bodely speache but ỹ holy ghoost in the scriptures speaketh many thinges vnto vs accordyng to oure fealynge, and bycause a maner of speakyng familiar to vs, attributyng appearyng speakyng enquiryng & answerynge to God and to aungelles, whyche thynge man only vseth, to thyntẽt ỹ we ther by maye the easelyar perceaue hys meanynge. The commynge of the aungelles here is no nother thing than to geue accoũtes of ỹ office inioyned thẽ: which they geue, knowinge ỹ God seyth with what truste they did it: and to geue thankes, and wayte for their reward. They came (sayth Origen) honouring magnifienge, prayslynge, geuynge thankes. Of Sathan also writeth he thus He came, nether with goyng to, or cõmynge in, but he came in thought, councel, & most wicked desyre to accuse ỹ ryghtwesse before God. Hys thought & desyre are taken as cõminge. The deuill then is counted to haue come into the syght of god, not that the most wycked came in deade in the syght of the good God, but because his cruel & most wicked thoughte came into the syght of god. And thus euen nowe a dayes also commeth the deuyll wyth them in to ỹ sight of God, in ỹ he dayly accuseth, sklaundethe faute, berethe, persecutethe and troublethe the godlye.

¶ Job is plaged wt soare bules, & afterward is mocked of his wife. Hys frendes visite him, & haue compassion on hym.

The. ii. Chapter.

A IT happened also vpõ a tyme that when ỹ seruaũtes of god came & stode before the lord, Sathã came amõg them, & stode before hym. a* And the Lord sayde vnto Sathan: From whence commeste thou? Sathan answered and sayde: I haue gone about the lande, and walcked thorowe it.

Thẽ said the Lorde vnto Sathan: hast thou noted sydered my seruaũt Job, how ỹ he is an innocent and vertuous mã soch one as feareth God, & eschueth euell, and B that there is none like him in ỹ land? But thou mouedest me against him, to punysh him: yet is it in vaine, for he cõtinueth still in his godlynesse. Sathã ãswered ỹ lord, and sayde: Skinne for skynne: yee a man wyll geue al that euer he hath, for his life. But laie thyne hãd vpon him, touche him once vpõ the bone & flesh, and (I holde) he shal course the to thy face. Then sayd the lord vnto Sathan: lo, there hast ỹ him in thy power, but spare his lyfe.

So wẽt Sathan forth from the Lord, & smote Job wyth maruelous sore byles, from ỹ sole of the fote vnto his crowne: so that he sat vpon the ground in the asshes, and scraped of the filthe of his sores wt a potsherde.

Then saide his wife vnto him: Doest ỹ C cõtinue in thy perfectnes? curse god, and di. But Job said vnto her. Thou speakest like a folish woman. Seynge we haue receaued prosperite at the hãd of god, wher fore shulde we not be cõtẽt with aduersyte also? In all these thynges, did not Job synne with his lippes.

Now when Jobs frendes herd of al the trouble, that happened vnto hym, there came thre of thẽ, euery one from his owne place: namelye, Eliphas the Thamanite, Baldad the Suhite, and Zophar ỹ Naamathite.

For they were agreed together to come, D to shewe theyr compassyon vpon him, & to comfort him. So when they lyft vp their eyes a farre of, they knewe him not.

Then they cryed, and wepte: then euery one of them rente hys clothes, & sprynckled dust vpon their heades in ỹ aire. Thet sat them downe by him also vpõ ỹ groũd vii. dayes & vii. nightes. Nether was there eny of thẽ that spake one word vnto hym, for they sawe that hys payne was verye greate.

The Notes.

a* God is here described alsynge and demaũding, not that he vnto whom al thinges ar knowẽ shuld therby learne any thing: but that the decreates & rãkour of Sathã which alwayes lyeth in wayt, might be vnto vs the better knowen, to thyntent that we shoulde walke the moare warely.

¶ The wordes of Job, wherin he declareth ỹ this present life is myserable: & that ỹ deeth of the ryghtwes is ioyouse and fortunable.

The. iii. Chapter.

AFter thys opened Job hys A mouth, and *cursed his day and sayde: lost be that daye, wherin I was borne, and the nyghte, in the whyche it was sayde: there is a man child conceaued

The same daye be turned to darcknesse, & not regarded of God from aboue, neather be shyned vpō with lighte: but be couered with darcknesse, and the shadow of death, Lett the dimme cloude fal vpon it, and let it be lapped in with sorow Let the darcknesse ouercome that nyghte, let it not be reckened amonge the dayes of the yeare, ner counted in the monethes: Desypsed be that nyght, & discommended: let * them y curse the daye, euen those that be ready to rayse vp mournynge geue it also theyr curse. Lett the starres be dymme thorow darcknesse of it, Lett it loke for light, but let it se none, neither the sprynge vp of the fayre morynyng: because it shut not vp the wombe that bare me, ner hydd these sorowes fro myne eyes.

Alas, why dyed I not in y byrth? Why did not I perish, as sone as I came out of my mothers wōbe? Why set they me vpō their knees? Why gaue they me sucke vnto their brestes? The shulde I now haue lyē stil, I shuld haue slepte, & bene at rest: like as y kynges and lordes of the erth, which buyld them selues speciall places: As the prynces y haue great substaūce of gould, and their houses ful of siluer. O that I vntirlye had no beynge, or were as a thynge borne out of tyme (y is put aspde) ether as yong childzen, which neuer saw the lyght Ther must y wycked ceasse fro theyr tyrānye, ther soch as are ouer labourd be at rest: ther ar those lett out fre, which haue bene in preson: so that they heare nomore the voyce of the oppressoure: There are small & greate: the bonde man, and he that is fre from hys master.

Wherfore is the lyght geuen to him y is in mysery? and lyfe vnto thē, that haue heuy hertes? Whyche longe for death, yf it come not: & searth for it moare then for treasure whyche also wolde be exceadynge glad, & reioyce yf they found theyr graue. That shulde be ioye to the man whose waye is hyd, * whiche God kepeth backe from him. For my syghes come before I eate, & my roarynges fal out like flowyng water. For y thing y I feared, is come vpon me: & the thyng that I was afraied of, is happened vnto me. Was I not happi? Had I not quyetnes? Was I not in rest? And now commeth soch misery vpon me.

Understād, to death so that he can not obtayne to dye, which thinge he so greatlye desyreth.

a* Curssed hys daye. Lyke as a man heuing an impostume. (Sayth the Chrisostome) yf he be cut of the Surgeō, hauing nothig wherwith he may resyst, during the time of his cutting, holdeth fast y thinges y be nye him & is redy to byte thē that stand by him, & yet can do no thing vnto thē: euē so Job fearing y greuous senes of blaspheming & curssing, doth wrēge to vnpurely thinges, & speaking after y maner of y cōmē people, which impute their misery to the influēce of y starres, & to the daye of their birth, curseth his day, y is, testifieth w curssing, how bitter a lyfe he lyueth, & vnto how greate miseries he was borne (as we cōmōly say) in an vnhappy houre, euē as thoughe now a dayes a mā repenting his synnes, should say. Wo is me wretch. In an vnhappye houre was I borne which with my dedes ha ue denyed my maker, wo worth it. &c.

b* They that curse the daye, are those that are wery of theyr lyfe, in so moche that they fall in dede to curssinge.

¶ Job is reprehended of impacience & infidelite, and of the presumption of his owne righteousnes.

The. xiii. Chapter.

THē answered Eliphas y Themanite & sayde vnto him: Yf we begin to commen with the peraduēture thou wilt be discontente, but who can withhold him selfe frō speaking: Beholde, thou hast bene a teacher of many, & hast comforted the weery handes.

Thy wordes haue set vp those that were fallē, thou hast refreshed the weake knees But now that the plage is come vpon the thou shrinkest away: now that it hath touched thy selfe, y arte saynte harted. Is not this thy feare, thy stedfastnes, thy pacience, & the perfectnesse of thy wayes? Considre (I pray the) whoeuer perysshed being an innocēt? Or, whē were y godly destroied? As I haue sene them that plow vanitie & sow malicie reape y same. With the blast of god dyd they perysh, & with the breth of his āger cōsumed they away. The * roaryng of the lion, the voice of the lyonesse, & the teeth of the lyons whelpes are broke The līō perisseth, for lacke of pray, & the lyons whelpes are scattered abrode.

And vnto me was y word hidde, & mine eare hath receaued a litel therof. In y phā tasyes and thoughtes of the vysions of y night, whē slepe cometh on mē: feare came vpō me & drede & made my bones to shake And whē y wind passed by before my presence it made the heares of my flesche stand vp. He stode there and I knew not his face, an image ther was before me & there was sylnes, so that I heard thys voyce.

b* Shal mā be more iust than God? Or shall man be purer thā hys maker? c* Behold ther is no trust to his seruātes, & in his aungelles hath he found frowardnes. How moche more in them that dwell in houses of claye, whose foundatyon is but erth: whych shalbe cōsumed by the Moth. They shalbe smytte frō the morynyng vnto the euening: yee they shal perish euerlastingly, & no mā thinck therō. Is not their dignitie take away w thē, they shal die and not in wysdome.

The Notes.

a* By y roaryng, the voyce, & the teethe, are vnderstand the blaspehmyes & bachytinges that ar vsed agaynste the innocent, as it is sayde Prouer. xxx. b. By the symylitude of the lyon he meanethe, that the wycked shall perish how great or myghtye soeuer they be.

b* Shal mā be more iust: &c. Of this principle wyll Elyphaces reason thus agaynste Job. Yf God wolde destroye an innocent, it shulde folowe that mā were more vyghtwes & pure thā god, but this is impossible, for the contrary is shewed vnto me by reuelacyon.

c* Behold their is no trust &c. He laboureth in confirming that which he had before propounded. The summe of y reason is, Angeles ar not purer thā god, ergo not men.

d* Dignitie, sygnifyethe here whatsoeuer thei haue wherin they excell other, whether it be riches or honour, power or cōning &c. For none of these shal redeame thē frō deeth.

¶ The end of a fole. The rightwelnes of god. The Lord chastenethe his, and delyuereth them agayne.

The. v. Chapter.

CAlme me one els, yf thou cāst find eny: yee loke about y, vpon eny of y holy mē. As for y folish mā displeasure killeth him & anger slayethe y ignorant. I haue sene my self, when the folysh was depe roted, that his bewty was sodēly destroied, that his childzē were wythout prosperite or health: that they were slayne in the dore, and no mā to deliuer thē: that hys haruest was eaten vp of the hungry: that the wearyed mā had spoyled it, and that the thurstye had dronke vp hys ryches. For it is not the erth that bringeth forth trauayle, nether cōmeth sorow oute of the grouēd: but it is mā, that is borne vnto misery, lyke as the byrde for to fle.

But now wil I speake of the lord, and talke of god: which doth thinges, that are vnsercharable, & marueylous without nom bre: which geueth rayne vpō the earthe, & poureth water vpō al thinges: whych setteth vp them of low degre, & sendeth prosperite, to those that ar in heuynes: Which destroieth the deuyses of the sotyll, so that they ar not able to perfourme y thinges y they take in hande: whych compasethe the wyse in their owne craftynesse, and ouerthroweth the coūcell of the wicked. In so moch that they runne in to darcknesse by fayre daye, & grope about them at y none daye, lyke as in the nyghte.

And so he deliuereth the poore from the sweard, from theyr mouth, & frō the hand of y cruell, that y poore maye haue hope, & that the mouth of the oppressoure maye be stopped.

Behold, happye is the man, whō God punysheth: therfore, despyce not y y chastenynge of the Almyghty. For though he make a wounde, he geueth a medycyne againe: though he smyte, his hand maketh whole agayne.

a* He delyuereth the oute of syre troubles, so that in y seuēth there cā no harme touch y. In y middeste of hōger he saueth the from deathe: and when it is warre, frō the power of the swearde.

He shal kepe the from the perlous tong so that whē trouble commeth, thou shalte not neade to feare. In destructiō & derth y shalt be mery, & shalt not be afrayed for y beastes of y erthe: But the catels in the land shalbe confederate with the, and the beastes of the fealde shal geue the peace.

* Yee thou shalt know, that thy dwelling place shal be in reste: thou shalte beholde thy substaūce, & be no more punysshed for synne. Thou shalte se also, that thy sede shal increace, and that thy posterite shalbe as the grasse vpon the erth. Thou shalt come to thy graue in a fayre age, lyke as the corne cheewes are broughte in to y barne in due season. Lo, this is y matter as we our selues haue proued by experiēce. Therfore now that thou heareste it, take better hede to thy selfe.

The Notes.

a* He delyuereth the &c. Thys sentence proponded after y maner of a Prophecie signifyeth all one wyth that of Paull. 1. Cor. x. c God is faythfull whych shall not suffre you to be tempted aboue your strengthe, but shal in the myddes of the temptacion make a way to eskape out. Eliphas meanethe: that

He hath bereft wrapt the in many miseries, but when the seuenth comethe, and when it shall seame to hym that the offence is sufficiētly punished & that thou hast left thine impacyence (for that lapeth he to Job, though vnsutly) then wyl he prosper the w so great health, þ thou shalt afeer leade thy life most fortunately.

¶ Job answereth, that his payne is more greuous. then his faute, yet not withstāding he delyteth therin

The. vi. Chapter.

IOb answered, and said: O þ my misery were weyed, & my punyshmente layed in the balaunces: for then shulde it be heuyer, then the sande of the see. Thys is the cause, that my wordes are so sorowfull.

For* the arowes of þ almighty ar in me, whose indignacyō hath drōcke vp my spyrete, & the terryble feares of God fyght against me. Doth the wyld asse roare whē he hath graſſe? Or cryeth the oxe, when he hath fodder ynough? That which is vnsauery, shalt it be eaten with oute salte, or is ther any taste in þ whyte of an egge. The B thinges that some time I might not awaye wythal, are now my meate for very sorow. O that I myghte haue my desyre: O that God wolde graunte me the thyng, that I longe for: That he wolde beginne & smite me: that he wold let his hand go, & hew me downe. Thē shuld I haue some cōfort: yee I wolde desyre him in my payne, þ he shuld not spare, for I wyll not be agaynste þ wordes of the holy one.

What power haue I to endure? Or, what is mine ende, that my soule myghte be pacīēt? Is my strength the strength of stones? Or, is my flesshe made of brasse? Is it not so that ther is in me no help? b* that my substaunce is taken fro me. He þ is in tribulacion ought to be comforted of his neyghbour: * but the feare of þ lord is cleane awaye: Wyne owne brethren passe ouer by me as the water broke, that hastely runneth thorow the valleyes. But thei that feare the hore frost, the snow shal fall vpon them.

C When their time cōmeth they shalbe destroied & perysshe: and when they be set on fyre, they shalbe remoued out of their place, for þ pathes that they go in, ar croked: they hast after vayne thynges, and shall perish. Consyder the pathes of Theman, & þ wayes of Saba, wherin they haue put their truste. Cōfounded are they, þ put eny cōfidence in them: For when they came to opteine þ thinges þ thei losed for, thei were brought to confusion.

Euen so are ye also come vnto me: but now that ye se my mysery, ye are afrayed. D Did I desire you, to come hither? Or, to geue me eny of youre substaūce? To deliuer me frō the enemyes hād, or to saue me frō the power of the mightie? Teach me & I wil holde my tonge: and yf I do erre, shewe me wherin.

Wherfore blame ye then þ wordes, þ are well & truly spoken: whiche of you cā reproue the? Sauing only that ye are sotyll to check mens sayinges, & can speake many wordes in þ wynd. Ye fall vpō the fatherles, & go about to ouerthrow your owne frend. Wherfore loke not only vpō me, but vpō youre selues: whether I lye, or no. Turne into youre owne selues (I pray you) be indifferēt iudges, & consyder mine vngultines: whether ther be eny vnryghtuousnes in my tōg, or vaine wordes in my mouth.

The Notes.

a* The Arrowes of the almyghtye after some mennes oppynyon, ar the sorowes of his iudgemente & hys wrath: after some other, they are þ trouble which the law moueth in the hertes of mē, while thei ther by ar stirred to hate thē selues, and so are healthfully pyl led. as it is sayd Psal. xxxviii. a. Some againe expounde them to be thee crosse of myserie & wretchednesse wherin God had nowe wrapped hym. For the Sapnetes (saye they) receaue they? crosse of the hand of God. The same wyl, that this sētence be a increasing & amplifying of that, which his aduersary had fearcely layde agaynste hym. Eliphas in the begynnynge of the fourthe Chapter had sayde, that the plage was come vpō hī & had touched hym. With this (say they) meatethe he now. Beholde it not oneiye touched me, but woundeth me wyth Arrowes, & those venoumed wyth venoume, hapely w þ gall of dragōs, w which touching, both my bloude warmeth wood, & al my spyrete is supped vp. Moreouer god hath not onely throwē these dartes vpō me, but also his dreadful fares þ is, what soeuer he hath þ is terrible, saieth he on me. b* That my substaunce is take frō me. The Chald interp. hath. Wysdome is departed from me, and that, after Rab. Mos. the wyse dome of dyssuyng iudging & tryng of thynges. As th ought be shuld say, so soare is my greefe, seyth my helpe is taken frō me, þ I am not permytted to breathe so longe, til I may call to remembraunce what is meete acceptable to god. Some read. Is not al þ strēgth of myne infourcemēt gone from me.

c* But

c* But the feare of the Lord & c. As though he sayde. But alas, now adayes, there is no feare of the lord leaft: and therefore it is no maruel, yf charite also which is ioyned to þ feare of God, be not in vse.

¶ Job sheweth that this life is but a batayle or warfare.

The. vii. Chapter.

IS not the lyke of man vpon erth a very batail? Ar not his dayes lyke þ dayes of an hyred seruaūt? For like as a bōde seruaūt desireth þ shadow, & as an hyreling wold faine haue an ende of his worke: Euen so haue I laboured whole monethes lōg (but in vaine) & mant a carefull nyghte haue I tolde. When I laied me downe to slepe, I sayde: O when shal I rise? Agayne, I lōged for the night. Thus am I ful of sorow, tyll it be dark. My flesh is clothed wyth wormes, fylthynesse & dust: my skinne is witherred, & crombled together: my dayes passe ouer more spedely thē a weuer cā weue oute his webbe: & are gone, or I am a ware. O
B remembre, þ my lyfe is but a wynde, and that myne eye shal no more se þ pleasures thereof, yee and that none other mans eye shall se me eny more. For yf thou fastenest thine eyes vpō me, I come to naught like as a cloude is cōsumed & vanisshed away euen so he that goethe downe to hell, commeth no more vp, ner turneth agayne into hys house, nether shall hys place knowe him eny more.

C Therfore I wil not spare my mouth, but will speake in þ trouble of my spyrete, in þ bytternes of my minde wil I talke. Am I a see or a walfysh, þ thou kepeste me so in prison? When I thynke: my bedd shal cōforte me, I shall haue some refreshing by talking by my self vpon my couch. Thē troublest thou me w dreames, & makest me so afrayed thorow visions, þ my soule wisheth rather to be strāgled, & my bones
D to be deed.

I cā se no remedy, I shall lyue no more: O spare me thē, for my dates ar but vaine. What is mā, that thou hast him in such re putacyon, & setteth so much by him? Thou takest diligēt care for hym, & sodēly doest thou trye hym.

Why goest þ not fro me, ner letteste me alone, so longe tyll I swalow downe my spetle? I haue offended, what shal I do vn to the, O þ preseruer of men? Why hast þ made me to stād in thy way, & am so heuy a burden vnto thy self? Why doest þ not forgeue me my sinne? Wherfore takest þ not away my wyckednes. Beholde, nowe must I slepe in the duste: & yf þ seekeste me to morow in þ morning, I shalbe gone.

¶ Job is reprehended and noted to haue deserued his payne. A description of hypocrisie.

The. viii. Chapter.

THē answered Baldad þ Suhite, & sayde: How long wylt
A thou talke of soche thynges? how longe shall thy mouthe speake so proude wordes? Doth God peruerte the thyng that is lawfull? Or, doth the Almyghtye destroy the thing that is right? When thy sonnes synned agaynst him, dyd not he punysh them for theyr wyckednesse? If thou woldeste now resorte vnto god by tymes, and make thyne humble prayer to þ Almightye: yf thou woldest liue a pure and a godly life: shulde he not wake vp vnto the immediatlye, & geue the, the bewtie of righteousnes agayne? In so moch, that whereas soeuer thou hadest lytle afore, thou shuldest now haue greate aboundaunce. Enquere
B of them that haue bene before the, & searche dylygently amonge thy forefathers: Namely, that we are but of yesterdaye, and cō syder not, that oure dayes vpon earth are but a derke shadowe. They shal shew the, they shall tell the, yee they wyll gladly cōfesse the same.

Way a rysshe be grene without moystnesse? maye þ grasse growe wout water? No: but (or euer it be shot forthe, & or euer it be gathered) it witherethe, before eny other herbe. Euē so goeth it w all thē, that forget God: & euen thus also shal the hypocrites hope come to naught. His cōfydēce

Oft time a thing doth flourysh, & mē thynke þ it maye abyde þ sonne shynyng: it shooteth forth þ braunches in his gardē, it taketh many rotes, in so moch that it is lyke an house of stones.

But yf it be take out of his place, euery mā denieth it, saying: I know the not. Lo, thus is it: w him, þ reioyseth in his owne voynges: and as for other, they grow out of the earth.

Behold, God wyl not cast awaye a vertuous mā, nether wyl he helpe the vngodly. Thy mouth shal be fyl w laughyng, & thy lyppes wyth gladnes. They that hate the shall be cōfounded, and the dwellynges of the vngodly shall come to naught.

¶ Job declareth the benefites of god, & that mānes ryghtewesnes is nothynge.

The. ix. Chapter.

IOb answered, & sayd: As for a that, I know it is so of a trueth, that a man compared vnto God, can not be iustified. If he wyll argue withe hym, he shall not be able to answere him vnto one amonge a thousande. He is wyse of herte, and mighte in strēgth. Who euer prospered, that toke parte agaynste hym? * He translatethe the mountaynes, or euer they be aware, and ouerthroweth them in hys wrath. He remoueth the earth oute of her place, that her pylers shake w al. He commaūdeth the Sonne, and it ryseth not: he closethe vp the starres, as it were vnder a sygnet. He him self alone spredeth out the heauens, and goeth vpon the waues of the see. He maketh the baynes of heauen, the Ozions, the. vii. starres and the secret places of the south. He dothe greate thinges, soche as are vnsearchable, yee and wonders without nombre.

b If he came by me, I might not loke vpō him: yf he went his way, I should not perceaue it. If he be hasty to take eny thing away, who will make hi restore it agayne? Who wil say vnto him: what doest thou? He is god, whose wrath no mā may withstāde: but the proudest of all must stoupe vnder him. How shuld I thē answere him? or what wordes should I fynd out against him? Yee though I be righteous, yet wil I not geue hi one worde againe, but meekely submitte my self to my iudge. All be it & I call vpon hym, & he heare me, yet am I not sure, y he hath herd my voyce: he troubleth me so with the tempest, & woundeth me out of measure without a cause. He wyll not let my spyrete be in rest, but fylleth me wyth bytternesse.

If men wil speake of strength, he is the strongest of al: yf men wil speake of righteousnes, who darre bemy record, b* If I wil iustifie my self, my owne mouth shall condēne me: yf I wil put forth my self for a perfect mā, he shal proue me a wicked doer: for y I shuld be an innocēt, my cōsciēce knoweth it not, yee I my self am weery of my life. This one thig wil I say: he destroyeth both y righteous & vngodly. And though he slay sodenly withe the scourge, yet laugheth he at the punishmēt of the innocēt. As for the world, he geueth it ouer in to y power of the wycked, soch as y rulers be, wherof al lādes are ful. Is it not so: wher is there eny, but he is soch one?

My dayes haue bene more swyft then a runner: they are gone sodenly, & haue sene no good thyng. They are passed away, as the shippes that be good vnder sayle, & as the Aegle that hasteth to y pray. When I am purposed to forget my cōplaynynges to chaung my countenaunce, & to cōforte my self: then am I afraied of al my worke, for I know, thou fauourest not an euell doer. If I be the a wicked one, why haue I labourede in vaine? Though I washed my self w snow water, & made myne handes neuer so clene, yet shuldest y dyppe me in the myer, & myne owne clothes shulde defyle me. For he y I must geue answere vnto, & with whom I go to lawe, is not a mā as I am. Nether is ther any dayesmā to rebuke both the partes, or to laye hys hand betwixte vs. Let hi take his rod away fro me, yee let him make me no more afrayed of him, & then shal I answere hym wout eny feare. For as lōg as I am in soch fearfulnes, I cā make no answere: And why? it greueth my soule to lyue.

a* God trāslateth the mountaines, not only these of y erth, but also the arrogāt & proude tyrāntes, & the great reaulmes of the world, which by a borowed speache are often times in the Scripture sygnyfyed by mountaynes & hilles. So trāslated he Pharao. Exodi. xiiii. g & kynge Senacherib. Esaie. xxxvii. g.

b* Here is it good to se y Job presumethe not of his owne rightwelnes, but plainelich confessethe hym selfe vnrighteous & a synner before god, although before the worlde he had lyued blameleslie. God loketh on the hearte thoughe men looke but onely on y outewarde appearaunce. His aduersaryes thoughte that he shulde neuer haue had soche a crosse layde on hym, in asmuch then he had also outewardly & openly lyued in wyckednesse. To y answerethe Job in dyuerse places that he therein was not culpable, and therfore accuseth as it were after the maner of mē, the iudgement of God, concernynge soche as are outwardlye ryghtwes: & studious se to lyue vertuously: namely soche a lyue without blame amonge men, & that dothe entende & do well to all men, and yet are wrapped in many myseries and wretchednes ofte time ouer cruel. And herin lieth the cheke of y cōtrauersy betwyxt Job and his aduersaryes, that Job defendeth hym self not to haue deserued his punishment by his outward lyuynge: where as his aduersaryes armed only with manly and fleshly wyt, thought god to be vnrighteous, yf he wolde so greuously punishe hym that had not bene outwarde synne against him. Job, hys conscyence bearynge hym witnes, had lyued innocentelye and strayghtelye, & hurte no man, had alwayes feared God, and worshypped him onely, his children also had honourtured to the feare of god, and couldest no man be accused of wyckednesse. Yet wytnesseth he iustlye here (as al y godly do) that he was not vtterly with out sinne, for other wyse had he bene a liar. i. Johñ. i. If we say, we haue no sinne, we decaue our selues, & truth is not in vs. Wherefore in the places where he sayethe that he hathe not deserued his punishmēt, and that shulde seame to shew him blameleslie, know, that he speaketh of his outward maner of liuing, not of the inward thoughtes and desyers of the hearte, wherin he was vndouted an offender.

¶ Job is weery of his life, & secreth out his fragilite before God. He desyre the tyme to repēte. A description of deeth.

The. x. Chapter.

NEuertheles, now will I put forth my wordes: I wil speake out of y very heuinesse of my soule, & wil say vnto god: O do not cōdēne me, but shewe me the cause, wherefore thou iudgeste me on this maner. Thynckest thou it well done, to oppresse me, to caste me of (being a worke of thy handes) and to mayntene the councell of the vngodlye? Haste thou flesshy eyes then, or doest thou loke as mā loketh? Are thy dayes as the dayes of mā, and thy yeares as mans yeres? that thou makest soche inquysycion for my wickednesse, & searchest oute my synne? where as (notwithstandynge) thou knowest that I am no wycked persoone, and that there is no man able to delyuer me out of thine hāde. Thy hādes haue made me, & fashioned me altogether roūd about, wylt y then destroy me sodenly? O remēbre (I beseke y) how y thou madest me of the moulde of y earth, & shalt bryngе me to earth agayne. Hast y not mylked me as it were mylck? & turned me to cruddes lyke chese? Thou hast couered me wythe skynne & flesh, and ioyned me together w bones & synowes. Thou haste graunted me lyfe, & done me good: & y diligēt hede that thou tokest vp on me, hath preserued my spyrete.

Though y hydest the thynges in thyne hert, yet am I sure, that y remembrest the al. Wherfore didest thou kepe me, when I synned, & hast not clēsed me fro mine offēce? If I do wickedlye, wo is me therfore: If I be ryghteous, yet darre I not lift vp my heade: so ful am I of confusyon, & se myne owne mysery.

Thou huntest me out (beynge in heuinesse) as it were a Lion, and troublest me oute of measure. Thou bryngest freshe witnesses against me, thy wrath increasest thou vpon me, very many ar the plages y I am in. Wherfore hast thou brought me out of my mothers wombe? O that I had perysshed, & that no eye had sene me. If thet had caried me to my graue, as sone as I was borne, then shoulde I be nowe, as though I had neuer bene.

Shal not my short life come soone to an ende? O hold y fro me, let me alone, that I maye ease my self a lytle afore I go thyther, frō whēce I shal not turne agayne. Namely, to that land of darcknesse & shadow of death: yee into that darck clowdy lād & deadly shadow, wher as is no ordre, but terrible feare as in the darcknesse.

¶ Job is vniustly reprehended of Sophar God is in cōprehensible. He is mercyfull to the repentaunt

The. xi. Chapter.

THē answered Sophar y Naamathite, & sayd: Should not he that maketh many wordes be answered? Should he y babbleth moch, be cōmēded therein? Should men geue eare vnto the onlye? Thou wilt laugh other mē to scorne, and shal no body mocke the agayne? Wylte y say vnto God: The thing that I take in hād is perfect, & I am clene in thy sighte? O that God wolde speake, & open his lippes against the, that he might shew y (out of hys secrete wysdome) howe manyfolde hys Lawes is: then shuldest thou knowe, that God had forgotten the, because of thy synnes.

Wilt thou find out god w thy sekynge? wilt thou attayne to y perfectnesse of the allmightie? He is hier thē heauen, what wilt thou do? Deper thē the hel, how wylt thou thou the knowe him? His length exceadeth the legth of the erthe, & his bredth ye bredth of ye see. Though he turne all thynges vpside downe, close the in, or thrust them together, who darre check him therfore?

For it is he that knowethe the vanyte of men: he seyth their wickednes also, thoughe he not the consydre it? A vayne body exalteth hym selfe, & the sonne of man is like a wyloe asses foale. If thou haddest now a right hert, and lyftedst vp thyne handes towarde hym: yf thou woldest put awaye the wyckednesse whych thou hast in hand, so that no vngodlynesse dwelt in thy house: Then myghtest thou lyft vp thy face wythout shame, the shuldest thou be sure, and haue no nede to feare.

Then shuldest thou forget thy misery, & thyncke nomore vpon it, then vpō the waters that rūne by. The shuld thy life be as cleare as the noone day, and spryng forth as ye morynyng. Then myghtest thou haue confort, he, in ye hope that thou hast: & slepe quyetly, whē ye arte buryed. The shuldest thou take thi rest, and no man to make the afraied, yee many one shuld set much by ye. As for ye eyes of ye vngodly, they shalbe consumed, & not escape: their hope shalbe mysery and sorow of mynde.

¶ Job in shewing his parpence declareth ye myghe and power of God.

The. xii. Chapter.

SO Job answered, and saide: The (no doute) ye ar ye men alone, & wysdom shal perysshe wt you. But I haue vnderstādig as wel as ye, & am no lesse the ye. Yee who knoweth not these thinges? Thus he that calleth vpon God, and whō God heareth, is mocked of his neighbour: the godly and innocent mā is laughed to scorne. Godlinesse is a light despysed in the hertes of the ryche, and is set for the to stōble vpō. The houses of robbers are in wealthe & prosperyte & they ye inalpcyoulye medle agaynst God, dwell without care: yee God geueth all thynges rychelye wyth hys owne.

Aske the catell, & they shal informe the: the fowles of ye ayre, & they shall tell the: Speake to ye earth, & it shall shewe ye: Or to the fysches of the see, and thei shal certifye the. What is he, but he knoweth ye the hand of the lord made al these? In whose hande is the soule of euery lyuing thyng, & the breth of all men. Haue not the eares pleasure in hearing, & the mouth in tastynge the thing that it eateth? Among old persones there is wysdome, and amōg the aged is vnderstandinge. Yee wythe God is wysdome and strēgth, it is he that hath councell and for knoweledge. If he breake downe a thing, who can set it vp againe? If he shut a thynge, who wyl open it. Behold, yf he withholde ye waters, they drie vp: Yf he lett them go, they destroye the earth. Wyth hym is strength and wysdō: he knowethe bothe the dysceauer and hym that is disceaued.

He carpethe away ye wise mā, as it were a spoyle, & bringeth ye iudges out of theyr wyttes. He lowseth the gyrdle of kynges, & gyrdeth their lopnes with a bond. He ledeth awaye the preastes into captyuyte, & turneth the myghtye vpsyde downe. He taketh the verite frō out of the mouthe, & disapointeth the aged of their wisdō. He poureth out contempt vpon Prynces, & cōfortheth them that haue bene oppressed. Loke what lyeth hyd in darcknesse, he declareth it openly: and the very shadowe of death bryngeth he to light. He both increaseth the people, and destroyeth thē: He maketh thē to multyplie, & dryueth thē away. He chaūgeth the herte of the Prynces and kinges of the earth, & disapoynteth thē: so that they go wandryng out of the waye, & grope in the darck without light, stakerynge to and fro lyke droncken men.

The. xiii. Chapter.

LO, al this haue I sene wythe mine eye, heard with mine eare, & vnderstād it. Loke what ye know ye same do I knowe also, nether am I inferior vn to you. Neuertheles I am purposed to talke wt the almightye, & my desyre is to comē with god. As for you, ye are worckmasters of lies, & vnprofytable Phisicias al to gether. Wolde God ye kept your tonge, that ye might be taken for wyse men. Therfore, heare my wordes, & pondre the sentence of my lyppes. Wyll ye make answere for God wyth lyes, and maynteyne hym with disceate? Will ye accepte the person of God, & intreate for hym? Shall that help you, when he calleth you to rekōnyng. Thynke ye to begyle him, as a mā is begyled? Ye shall punish you, & reproue you, yf ye do secretly accept any persoune. Shall he not make you afrayed, when he sheweth hym selfe? Shall not his terrible feare fall vpon you? youre remembraūce shalbe lyke vnto the duste, & youre bodyes shalbe turned to claye. Hold your tonges nowe, and let me speake, for there is some thinge come in to my mynde. *a Wherfore do I beare my flesh in my teth, & mine soule in mine hādes? Lo, ther is nether cōfort nor hope for me, yf he wil slay me. But yf I shew & reproue mine owne waies in his syght, he is cuē the is me that maketh me whole: & why? there maye no hypocryte come before hym. Heare my wordes, & pōder my sayinges wt youre eares. *b Behold, now haue I prepared my iudgmente, and know I shalbe found rightwes. What is he, that wyll go to lawe with me? For yf I holde my tōge, I shall die. Neuertheles graunte me two thinges, and then wyll I not hyde my selfe from the.

Withdraw thyne hand frō me, & let not the fearfull dreade of the make me afrayed. And then sende for me to the lawe, & I maye answere for my selfe: or els, let me speake, & geue thou the answere. Howe greate are my mysdedes & synnes? Let me know my trāsgressions & offences. *c Wherfore hydeste thou thy face, and holdeste me for thyne enemye? Wilt thou be so cruel & extreme vnto a flying leafe, & folow vpō drie stubble? that thou laiest so sharpely to my charge, & wylt vtterly vndo me, for ye synnes of my youth? Thou hast put my fote in the stockes: thou lokest narowlye vnto al my pathes, & marckest the steppes of my fete: wher as I (notwithstanding) must cōsume lyke as a foule carīō, and as a cloth that is moth eaten.

*a Wherfore &c. These both ar prouerbially spoken, of them that offer their lyues to Jeopardy, and spare not thē selues. For he spareth not hym self that feareth hys flesshe with his teeth: and agayne he that beareth his soule in his hande, carpeth it as a thyng ready to be solde, euē as thoughe he wolde streight leaue it, and cast it of.

*b Behold &c. this is his meaning. The time of my cōtēpcyon was this, thus dyd I order and defende my cause agaynste your reasons that my hope is to be iustified. Armed wyth this fayth: I come without feare vnto iudgemente. He will not pronounce hi vnrightwes that so vnfaynedly hath trusted to hys mercye. Hipocrites, they nier they ar to iudgement the moare the feare: I the nyer I am to dreth the more strong is my hope.

*c Wherfore hydest thou my face. What is hyding of his face meaneth loke Deu. xxxi. d.

¶ Job declareth the like of a mā, & prophecyeth of ye resurrecyon. Hope sustayneth the godly. yet they obtayne that they loke for.

The. xiiii. Chapter.

MAn that is borne of a womā, hath but a short tyme to lyue, & is ful of diuerse miseries. He cōmeth vp & falleth away lyke a flour. He fleeth as it were a shadowe, & neuer cōtinueth in one state. Thinkest thou it nowe well done, to open thine eies vpō soch one, & to bringe me before ye in iudgmēt? Who cā make it cleane that commeth of an vncleane thinge? No body. The dayes of mā ar short, & nōbre of hys monethes are knowne onelye vnto the. Thou haste apoynted him his boūdes, he can not go beyonde them. Go from hym, that he maye reste a lytle: vntyll his daye come, whyche he lokethe for, lyke as an hyrelynge dothe.

If a tre be cut downe, ther is some hope yet, that it wyll sproute and shutte forthe the braunches agayne: For though a rote be waren olde & deed in the grounde, yet when the stock getteth the sent of water, it wyll budde, and bringe forth bowes, lyke as whē it was fyrste planted. But as for man when he is deed, perysshed & consumed awaie, what becommeth of him? The floudes when they be dryed vp, and the ryuers whē thei be emptie, are killed agayne thorow the flowyng waters of the see: but whē man sleapeth, he ryseth not agayne: vntill the heaue perish: he shall not wake vp nor ryse out of his slepe. O ye thou woldest kepe me, and hyde me in ye hell, vntyll thy wrathe were stylled: and to appoynte me a time, wherin thou myghtest *remēbre me. Maye a dead man lyue agayne? All ye dayes of this my pilgremage am I lokinkyng, whē my chaūginge shal come. If ye woldest but call me, I shoulde obey the: only despise not the worke of thyne owne handes.

For thou hast nombred all my goinges, yet be not thou to extreame vpon my synnes. Thou hast sealed vp mine offences, as it were in a bagge: but be merciful vnto my wyckednesse. The mountaines fal awaye at the laste, the rockes are remoued out of their place, the waters pearse thorow the very stones by lytle & litle, the floudes washe away the gravell & earth: Euen so destroyest thou the hope of man in lyke maner. Thou preuailest against him, so that he passeth awaye: thou chaungest his estate, & puttest him fro the. Whether his chyldre come to worshippe, or no, he can nott tell: And yf thei be vnder of low degre, he knoweth not. While he liueth, his flesh muste haue trauayle: & whyle the soule is in him he must be in sorowe.

¶ Eliphas reprehendeth Job because he aggreggeth with wordes & purposes to him self. He describeth the curse that falleth on the wicked reckening Job to be one of the number.

The. xv. Chapter.

THen answered Eliphas the Themanite, & said: *‡ Shulde a wyse man answere in the spyece of wind, & fyl his belly wyth the wind of the est? Thou reprouest with wordes, that at nothing worth: & speakest vnthinges, which can do no good. As for thame, yt haste set it aside, els wolddest not make so manye wordes before god: but thy wickednes teacheth thi mouth, & so thou hast chosen the a craftie tonge. Thine owne mouth condemneth thee, & not I: yee thyne awne lippes shape the answere. Art thou the fyrst man, that euer was borne? Or, waste thou made before the hilles? hast thou herde the secrete counsell of god, that al wysdome is to litle for the? What knowest thou, that we know not? What vnderstandest thou, but we can the same? With vs are olde and aged men, yee sothe as haue lyued longer then thy forefathers.

Thinckest thou it a smal thynge of the consolacions of God? & are they with the *‡ lytynge wordes? Why doth thyne heart make the so proude? Why standest thou so greatly in thine owne conceate? Where vnto loke thyne eyes, that thy mynde is so puft vp against god & lettest such wordes go out of thi mouth? What is man, that he shulde be cleane? what hath he (which is borne of a woman) wherby he might be knowen to be righteous? Behold ther is no trust to hys sainctes: yea the * very heuens are not cleane in his sight. How much more the an abhominable and vyle man, which b * drinketh wickednes like water? I wyl tel the, heare me: I wyl shew the a thing, that I know: which wyse men haue tolde, & hath not bene hyd fro their fathers: vnto whom onely the lande was geuen, that no straunger shulde come amonge them.

The vngodly despayreth al the dayes of his lyfe, & the nombre of a tyrantes yeres is vnknowen. A fearful sounde is euer in hys eares, & when it is peace, yet feareth he destruction: He beleueth neuer to be deliuered out of darckenesse, the swearde is allwaye before his eyes. Whe he goeth forth to get his lyuing, he thinketh playnly, that the daye of darkenesse is at hand. Sorow and carefulnes make him afrayed, & compasse him rounde aboute, lyke as it were a king with his host ready to the battel. For he hath stretched out his hand against god, and armed him self against the almightie. He runneth proudly vpon him, & with a stif necke fighteth he against him: wher as he coureth his face with fatnes, and maketh hys body wel lykinge. Therfore shall hys dwelling be in desolate cyties, & in houses whych noman inhabiteth, but are become heapes of stones.

He shal not be rich, neither shal his substaunce continue, nor encrease vpon earth. He shal neuer come out of darckenesse, the flame shall dryue vp his braunches, with the blast of the mouth of god shal he be taken away. He wyll neither applye hym selfe to faythfulnes nor truth, so sore is he disceaued with vanite.

He shal perishe afore hys tyme be wore out, and his hand shal not be grene. He shalbe pluckte of as an vnrypinelye grape fro the vine, & shal let his floure fal, as the olyue doth. For the congregation of ypocrites is vnfruteful, & the fyre shal consume the houses of soch, as are gredy to receaue giftes. He conceaueth trauaile, he beareth mischefe, & his body bringeth forth disceat

The Notes.

*‡ That is, Shuld a wyse man speake vayne wordes, & should he hym selfe, be vayne and puffe

puffe vp with vnprofytable & tryflinge doctrine. The east wynde dryeth vp all thinges, & therfore by a dely filled with it, is signifyed by a borowed speache, a stomacke or hert, oute of whyche proceadethe soche false doctryne as dryethe vp the moystnes of the soule in tryflyng out the trueth.

*‡ Some reade, secret. The whole sentence doth Rab. mose thus expound. God can yet confort yt againe in this life, & regardeth yt so lytel his comfortes & takest them for a lye: Other. thus: Seame the comfortes of men of grauitie by Idad & Sophar vnworthie for yt, and seme they to the eyes.

a* Under the name of yt heuens vnderstandeth he the aungelles.

b* To drynke wyckednes like water, is, to be fylled with wyckednesse. It is a maner of, speaking of the Hebrues, so to drink shrowdfulnes signifieth to be filled therwith, after as in the. xxiiii. a.

¶ Job repeting his mysery, sayth that he suffereth more then hys wyckednesse hath deserued.

The. xvi. Chapter.

THen Job answered, and sayde: I haue oft times herd soch thinges. Wiserable geuers of comfort ar ye, al the sorte of you. Shall not thy vaine wordes come yet to an ende? Or, hast thou yet eny more to sai? I could speake, as ye do also. But wolde god, that youre soule were in my soules steade: then shulde I heape vp wordes agaynst you, and shake my heade at you. I shuld confort you with my mouth, and release your payne with yt talkyng of my lyppes. But what shall I do? For all my wordes, my sorow wyll not ceasse: and thoughe I holde my tonge, yet will it not departe fro me. And nowe that I am full of payne, and all that I haue destroyed (wherof my wytnesses beare wytnesse) ther standethe vp a dyssembler to make me answere wyth lyes to my face. He is angrye at me, he hateth me, and gnasshethe vpon me with his teeth. Myne enemie shouleth vpon me with his eyes.

They haue a * opened their mouthes wide vpon me, and smytten me vpon the cheke despytefully, they haue cased the selues thorow mine aduersite. God hath geuen me ouer to yt vngodli, & deliuered me into yt handes of yt wycked. I was some tyme in wealth, but sodenly he hath brought me to nought. He hath take me by yt neck, he hath rent me, & set me, as it were a marke for him to shute at. He hath copased me rounde about with his dartes, he hath wounded my loynes, and not spared. My bowels hath he pored vpon ground. He hath geuen me one wounde vpon another, and is fallen vpon me lyke a giaunte. I haue sowed a sack cloth vpon my skinne, & lie with my strength in the dust.

My face is swolle with weppyng, & myne eyes ar waxe dimme. Howbeit there is no wyckednesse in my handes, and my praier is cleane. b * O erth, couer not my bloude, & let my crieng synd no towme. For lo, my witnesse is in heaue, & he yt knowethe me, is aboue in yt heygth. My frendes laughe me to scorne, but myne eye poureth out teares vnto god. Though a body might plete with God, as one man doth with another, yet the nombre of my yeares ar come, and I must go the waye, from whence I shall not turne agayne.

The Notes.

a* To open their mouthes, signifyethe to threaten with most extreame & cruel punishment, & to reproue with shamefull, & spyteful wordes, as in the Psal. xxii. c.

b* O earth couer not my bloude, that is, as Rabi. Abraha expoundeth it, hyde not my bloude so but that it be auenged, lest not the auengemente therof be vnknowen, but open vnto all mens eyes: as was the auengemente of Dathan and Abiram, whom the earth swalowed Num. xvi. e. Or may also expound it thus, Hyde not my bloude, but let it testifye and witnesse myne innocencye, as dyd the bloud of Abell, of whom we reade yt his bloud cried from the erth. Gene. iiii. b.

¶ Job saith that he consumeth away, and yet doth patiently abyde hys

The. xvii. Chapter.

MY breth faileth, my dayes are shortened. I am had at deathes doze. I haue disceaued no man, yet muste myne eye continue in heynesse. O deliuer me, and set me by the: who shall then be able to thruste my handes to geather? Thou hast withholde their hertes fro vnderstandynge, therefore shall they not be lyft vpon hye. He prompteth hys frendes parte of hys good, but his owne children spoke it. He hath made me as it were a by worde of the comon people. I am his gestynge stocke amonge the. My countenance is heuye for verye anger, & the members of my bodye are become lyke a shadowe. Vertuous men therfore shal wel consydre this, & the innocent shall take part against the ypocrite.

The rightcous wil kepe his waye, & he that hath cleane hãdes, wil euer be stróger & stróger. As for you, turne you, & get you hence, for I cannot se one wyse mã amóg you. My dayes ar past, my thoughtes are vanished awaye, which haue vexed myne herte, chaunging the night in to daye, and the light into darckines. Thoughe I tarye neuer so moche, yet the graue is my house, and I must make my bed in the darcke. I cal corruptiõ my father, & the wormes call I my mother & my syster. What helpeth then my longe tarpeng? Or, who wyl fulfyl the thing, that I loke for? All that I haue, shal go downe into the pytt, & lye wyth me in the dust.

Baldad reherseth the paynes of the vnfaythfull & wycked.

The.xviii.Chapter.

Thou Job and such as you.

THe answered Baldad ỹ Suhite, & sayd: whé wyl ye make an ende of youre wordes? Marcke well, & consydre, we wyll speake also. Wherefore ar we cõted as beastes, & reputed so vyle in youre syghte? Why destroyest thou thy selfe wyth anger? Shal ỹ earth be forsake or the stones remoued oute of theyr place because of the? Shall not the lighte of the vngodly be put oute? ye ỹ flame of his fyre shal not burne. The light shalbe darcke in hys dwelling, & hys candle shalbe put out wyth e hym. Hys presumptuous goinges shall be kept in, & hys owne councell shall cast hym downe. For hys fete shalbe take in the net, and he shall walcke in the snare. Hys fote shalbe holden in the gylder, and the thurste shall catche him. The snare is layed for hym in the ground, and a pitfall in the waye.

Fearfulnes shal make him afrayed on euerye syde, that he shal not knowe, where to get out. Hõger shalbe his substaunce, & myshfortune shal hange vpõ him. He shall eate the strength of his skinne, a* the first borne of death shal eate hys membres. All hys cõfore & hope shalbe roted out of his dwellinge, berye fearfulnesse shall bringe hym to the king. b* Other men shal dwell in hys house (wherin nowe is none of hys) and brymstone shall be scatered vpon hys habitation. Hys rotes shalbe dryed vp beneth, and above shall hys harvest be cutte downe. Hys remẽbraunce shal perishe frõ the earth, and hys name shall not be prayse in the stretes: he shalbe dryuen frõ the lyght into darknes, and be cast cleane out of the world. He shal nether haue chyldre nor kynsfolckes amonge hys people, nor eny posterite in hys countrey: younge and olde shall be astonished at hys death. Suche are nowe thee dwellynges of thee wycked, and thys thee place of hym that knoweth not God.

The Notes:

a* That is, an horrible and sodayne death Some reade the prince of death.

b* Or, he shal dwel, that is to saye his wyfe wythoute hym.

Job receyueth his myseryes and grevouse paynes He prophesieth of the generall resurrection.

The.xix.Chapter.

IOb answered: & sayde: howe long wyl ye vexe my mynde: & trouble me wythe wordes? Lo, ten tymes haue ye reproued me: are ye not ashamed, for to laugh me to skorne? yf I go wrong I go wrong to my selfe. But yf ye wyl enhaunce youre selues agaynste me, & accuse me to be a wicked person because of ỹ shame that is come vpõ me: knowe this then, that it is God, whych hath handled me so violentlye and hath compased me aboute with his scourges. Behold, though I crye, yet violence is done vnto me, I cannot be herde: Though I complayne, ther is none to geue sentence wyth me. He hath hedged vp my path, I cãnot get away, he hath set darckne in my gate. He hath spoyled me of myne honoure & take the a* crowne awaye fro my head. He hathe destroyed me on euerye syde, & I am vndone: My hope hath he taken away fro me, as it were a tre pluckte vp by the rote. His wrath is kindled agaynst me, he taketh me, as though I were hys enemye.

His men of warre came together, which made theyr way ouer me, and besieged my dwelling roundeabout. He hath put my brethre farre away fro me, & soch as were of myne acquayntaũce, are become straũgers vnto me. Myne owne kinsfolke haue forsake me, & my frẽdes haue put me oute of remẽbrãce. The seruãtes & maydens of myne owne house take me for a stráger, & I am become as an aleaũt in their syghte. Whe I cal vpon my seruãt, he geueth me no answere: no though I pray hym wt my mouth. Myne owne wyfe maye not abyde my breth, I am layne to speak faire vnto the children of mine awne body. Ye ỹ very desert fooles despise me, & whe I am gone from them, they speak euil vpon me All soche as were my moste familiers, abhorre me: & they whom I loued best, are turned agaynst me. My bone hangeth to my skinne, & my flesshe is awaye, only there is left me the skynne about my teth. Haue pyte vpõ me, haue pyte vpõ me (O ye my frẽdes) for the hand of the lord hath touched me. Why do ye persecute me b* as God, & c* are not satisfyed of my flesshe?

O that my wordes were written, O ỹ they were put in a boke: wolde God they were grauen wt an yron penne in leade or in stone. For I am sure, that my redemer lyueth, & that I shall ryse out of the earth in ỹ latter daye: that I shall be clothed againe wt this skynne, & se god in my flesh. Yee I my selfe shall behold him, not wyth other but wythe these same eyes. My reynes ar consumed within me, whe ye saye: Why do not we persecute hi: we haue foũde an occasyon againste him. But beware of the swearde, for the swearde wylbe auẽged of wyckednesse and be sure, that ther is a iudgemente.

a* Rabi Abraham vnderstandethe by the croune, the dignitye that comethe to the ryche by the meanes of theyr rychesse: for al mẽ haue the ryche in honoure, all thoughe some vnderstande thereby his chyldren, as in the Bzouer. The crowne of olde men are theyr childrens chyldren. Other some, vnderstand the vprightye that came vnto him of his wysdom & cunninge. So Jobs meaning is, that of a worshypfull & ryche man, he is become poore and despysed.

b* The Hebrues reade as they do, meaninge the cruell which are not satysfyed wythe his flesshe, soche wold he not that his frendes shuld counterfet.

c* Are not satysfyed of my flesshe. To eate & be satisfyed of a mannes flesshe, is a borowed speache take both in the good & euel part. In the good parte it sygnyfieth to loue, to iudge kyndly, and then at the length to fall to prayeing. In the euell parte, it is cruelly and beastly to inuade, & (as it were) to teare with spiteful and haynouse wordes.

Sophar saith, that the vnfaithful, the couetouse and the wycked shall haue a shorte ende.

The.xx. Chapter.

THen answered Sophar the Naamathite, & said: For the same cause doo my thoughtes cõpel me to ãswere. And why? my mynde is tossed here and there. I haue sufficyently herd thy checkynge and reproofe, therfore am I purposed to make answere after myne vnderstandyng. Knowest thou not thys, namelye: that from the begynnynge (euer sence the creacion of man vpõ earthe) the praise of the vngodly hathe bene shorte, and that the ioye of ypocrites cõtinued but ỹ twinklynge of an eye? Though he be magnifyed vp to ỹ heaue, so that his head reacheth vnto the cloudes: yet he perisheth at ỹ last lyke dounge: In somoch that they whych haue sene hym, saye: Where is he? He vanysheth as a dreame, so that he cã no more be founde, & passeth away as a visyon in the nyghte. So ỹ the eye which saw hym before, getteth now no sight of him, & his place knoweth hym nomore. His children go a begynge, theyr hãdes bring thẽ to sorow and heynesse.

Frõ his youth his bones ar full of vice, which shall lie downe wt hym in ỹ earthe. Whe wyckednes is swete in hys mouth, he hideth it vnder his tõg. That he fauoureth, ỹ wyll he not forsake, but kepethe it close in his throte. The meate ỹ he eateth, shall be turned to the poysõ of serpentes, wtin his body. The ryches that he deuoureth, shall he perbreake agayne, for God shall draw them out of his belye a* he shal suck ỹ serpentes heed, & the adders tonge shal slay him: so that he shal nomore se the ryuers & brokes of hony & butter: But laboure shal he, & yet haue nothinge to eate. Great trauayle shall he make for ryches, but he shall not enioye thẽ. And why? he hath oppressed the poore, & not holpe thẽ: houses hath he spoyled, & not builded thẽ. Hys belye coude neuer be filled, therefore shal he perish in his couetousnes. He deuoured so gredely, that he left nothyng be hid, therfore his goodes shalnot prospere. Though he had plenteousnesse of euerye thynge, yet was he poore, and therfore he is but a wretch on euery syde.

For though the wicked haue neuer somoch to fil his belye, yet god shal send hys wrath vpon him, & cause hys battayll to vaygne ouer hym: so that yf he fle the yron weapēs, he shalbe shot wyth the cele bowe. The arowe shalbe take forth, & go out at his backe, and a glistering sweard thorow the gall of hym, feare shal come vpon him. * There shal no darknes be able to hyde him. And vnkindled fyre shal cōsume him and loke what remayneth in hys house, it shalbe destroyed. The heauen shal declare hys wyckednes, & the earth shall take part agaynst him. The substaunce that he hath in his house, shalbe taken away & perysshe, in the daye of the Lordes wrathe. This is the portion that thee wycked shall haue of God, and thee heretage that he maye loke for of the Lord.

The Notes.

* He shal flee the serpētes head. ỳ is, he shalbe subiect to all cursednes & suffer al maner sorowes. It is soch a maner of speach as is before in the .xv. b. of drinking wickednes. * That is, he cannot hyde hym from perelles.

¶ Iob recyteth the prosperite of ỳ wicked, & after describeth theyr sodayn ruyne and destruction.

The .xxi. Chapter.

Iob answered, & sayd: O heare my wordes, & amende your selues. Suffre me a lyttle, & I may speake also, and then laughe my wordes to scorne, yf ye wyll. It is wyth a man, that I make this disputatiō. Which yf it were so, shulde not my spyryte be then in sore trouble. Marke me wel, be abashed, & lay your hāde vpon your mouth. For whē I ponder & consydre this, I am afrayed, & my flesh is smytten wyth feare. Wherfore do wicked men lyue in health and prosperite, come to theyr olde age, & increase in ryches? Theyr chylders chyldren lyue in theyr syght, and theyr generacion before theyr eyes. Theyr houses at safe from al feare, for the rodde of God doth not smyte thē. Their bullock gendreth, and that not out of tyme: theyr cowe calueth, and is not vnfruteful.

They send forth their childrē by flockes, & theyr sonnes leade ỳ daūce. They beare with them tabrettes and harpes, and haue instrumētes of musycke at their pleasure. They spende theyr dayes in welthynesse: but sodenlye they go downe to hell. They saye vnto God: go from vs, we desyre not the knowledge of thy wayes. What maner of felowe is the Almightie, ỳ we shulde serue hym? What profyt shulde we haue, to submyt oure selues vnto hym? Lo, ther is vtterly no goodnes in thē, therfore wyll not I haue to do wythe the counsell of the vngodly. Howe ofte shal the candle of the wicked be put out, howe ofte cometh their destruction vppon them? O what sorowe shall God geue them for theyr part in his wrath? Yea they shalbe euen as chaf before the wynde and as dust that the storme carryeth awaye.

¶ And thoughe God saue theyr chyldren frō soch sorow, yet wyl he so reward them selues, that they shal know it. Their owne destruction and myserye shall they se with their eyes, & drinke of the fearful wrath of the Almightie. For what careth he, what become of his housholde after hys death, whose monethes passe away swyfter then an arow. In as moche then as God hathe the hyest power of all, who can teache hym any knowledge? One dyeth now when he is myghtie and at his best, riche, & in prosperite: euē when hys ‡ bowelles are at the fattest, & his bones ful of marye. Another dyeth in sorowe & heuynesse, & neuer hadd good dayes. Howe slepe they both a lyke in the earth, & thee wormes couer the. But I knowe what ye thynke, yea and what ye ymagin against me vnrighteousli. For ye saye: where is the Princes palace, where is the dwellyng of the vngodly: Aske eny man that goeth by the waye, & (yf he wyll not regarde their tokens & dedes) he shall tel you, that the wycked is kepte vnto the day of destruction, and that the vngodlye shalbe brought forth in the day of wrath. Who darre reprouе him for his wayes to his face, who rewardeth him for the vngraciousnes that he doth? Yet shall he be brought to hys graue, and watch among ỳ heape of the dead. Then shal he be layne to be buryed amonge the stones by ỳ broke syde. All men must folowe hym, & there ar innumerable gone before hym. O how vayne is the comforte that ye geue me? Are not youre answeres cleane contrarye to tyght and treuth?

¶ Eliphas reprehendeth the Job of vnmercyfulnesse.

The .xxii. Chapter.

So Eliphas the Themanyte gaue answere, & sayd: Maye I a man be cōpared vnto God in wysdō, though he seme to hym self, for to be lyke hym? What pleasure hath god in that thou art righteous? Or what doth it profite hym, that thy wayes are perfecte? Is he afrayed to reprouе thee, & to steppe forth with the into iudgement? Commeth not this for the great wickednes, & for thy ne vngratious dedes which ar innumerable? Thou hast take the pledge frō thy bre thrē for noughte, and robbed the naked of theyr clothing: To soch as were wery, hast thou geuen no water to drinke, thou haste withdrawē bred frō the hungrye: Shuld soche one then as vseth violence, wronge and oppression (doinge all thing of parcialite, & hauinge respect of personnes) dwell in the lande? Thou haste sente wyddowes awaye emptye and oppressed 'the pooze fatherlesse.

Therfore art thou cōpased about with snares on euery syde, & sodēly vexed with feare. Shuldest thou thē se no darknesse? Shuld not the waterflode rūne ouer the? Now because ỳ God is hyer thē the heues and because thou seyst ỳ the starres are so hye, wilt thou therfore saye: Tushe, howe shuld God know? Doth his dominiō reache beyond the cloudes? Tush, the cloudes couer him that he may not se, for he dwelleth in heauē. Wel, thou wilt kepe the olde way, that al wicked men haue gone: bothe olde & young, whose foūdatiō is a rūning water, which saye vnto God: go frō vs, & after this maner: Tush, what wyl the Almightie do vnto vs, whet as he (not with standing) fylleth their houses w al good. Which meaning of the vngodly be farre from me. For with ioye shal ỳ godly, & with gladnes shal the innocent se, that their increase shal be hewen downe, & their posterite consumed with fyre.

Therfore reconcile the vnto God, & be content, so shal al thinges prosper w ỳ righte wel. Receaue the law at his mouth, and laye vp his wordes in thine hert. For yf ỳ wilt turne to the Almightie, thou shalt stā de fast, & al vnrighteousnes shall be farre from thy dwellinge: He shall geue the an harueste, which in plenty & aboundaūce shal exceade the dust of the erth, & the golde of Ophir, like ryuer stones. Yea the Almighty hys owne selfe shalbe thine harueste, & the heape of thy moneye. Then shalt thou haue thy delyte in the Almightie, & lyft vp thy face vnto God. Then shalte thou make thy prayer vnto hym, & he shal heare ỳ, and thou shalt kepe thy promyses. Then, loke what thou takest in hand, he shal make it to prosper with the, & the lighte shal shyne in thy wayes. For who so humbleth hym selfe, hym shall be set vp: and who so lokethe meakelye, shall be healed. Yf thou be innocent, he shall saue the: and thorowe thee vnclenesse of thyne handes shalte thou be delyuered.

Iob affirmeth that he both knoweth & feareth the power & sentence of the iudge, & sayth that he hathe walked in hys ryghteousnesse.

The .xxiii. Chapter.

Iob answered, and sayd: My saying is yet this daye in bitternes, & my hāde heuy amōg my groninges. O ỳ I myghte se him & fynde hym: O that I myghte come before hys seate, to pleate my cause before him, and to fyl my mouth wyth argumētes. That I myght knowe, what answere he wolde geue me: & that I myghte vnderstande, what he wolde saye vnto me. Wyl he pleate agaynst me wyth hys greate power and strength, or wyll he leane hym selfe vtterlye vpon me? Oh no: let hym not do so wyth me. But lette hym geue me lyke power to go to the lawe, then am I sure to win my matter. For though I go before, I fynde hym not: Yf I come behynde, I can get no knowledge of him: Yf I go on the left syde to ponder his wordes, I cannot attayne vnto them. Agayne yf I go on the righte syde, he hydeth hym selfe, that I cannot se hym. But as for my waye, he knoweth it: and tryeth me as the golde in the fyre.

Neuertheles my fete kepe his path, hys hye strete haue I holde, and not gone oute of it. I haue not forsake the cōmaūdemēt of his lippes, but loke what he chargedme with his mouth, ỳ haue I shutte vp in my herte. It is he him self alone, who wyl turne him backe? He doth as him listethe, and bringeth to passe what he will. He rewardeth me into my bosome, & many other thinges mo doth he, as he may by hys power. Thys is the cause, that I shrincke at hys presence, so that when I consydre hym, I am afrayed of him. For in so moche as he is God, he maketh my herte soft: & seynge

that he is Almightie, he putteth me in fea re. Thus cā not I get out of darknes, the cloude hath so couered my face.

¶ Job declareth the wyckednes of mē, & sheweth what curse belongeth to the wycked.

The .xxiiii. Chapter.

WHy seyng then that there is no tyme hyd frō ỹ Almigh tye, howe happeneth it, that they which knowe hym, wyll not regard his dayes? For so me men there be, that remoue other mens landemarkes: that robbe them of their cat tel, and kepe the same for theyr owne: that dryue away the asse of the fatherlesse: & take the wyddowes oxe for a pledge: that thrust the poore out of the waye, and op presse the symple of the worlde togeather.
Behold, the wylde asses in the deserte goo by tymes, as theyr maner is, to spoy le: yee the very wylderneſſe mynystrethe foode for their children. They reape the corne feld that is not their owne: & gather the grapes out of his vineyard, whō they haue oppressed by violence. They ar the cause that so manye men are naked and bare, haynge no clothes to couer them & kepe them from colde: So that when the showers in the mountaines haue rained vp on them, & they be all wet, they haue none other succoure, but to kepe them among the rockes.

They spoile the sucking fatherles chil dre, & put the poore in preson: In somoch that they let the go naked wout clothing, & yet the hungrye beare the sheeues. The poore ar faine to labour in their oyle mil les, ye & to treade in their wyne presses, & yet to suffre thirst. The whole cittie cryeth vnto the lord with syghyng, the soules of ỹ slaine make their complaynte. But God destroyeth them not for all this, where as they (not withstandinge) are rebellious & dy sobedient enemyes: whych seke not his lighte & waye, ner turne agayne in to hys path. Tymely in the morninge do they aryse, to murther the symple and poore, & in the nyght they go a stealynge.

The eie of the vngodly is like ỹ aduou terer, ỹ watteth for ỹ darcknesse, & sayeth thus in him selfe: Tush, ther shal no mā se me, & so he disgiseth his face. In ỹ nighte season they search the houses, and hide the selues in the day tyme, but wyl not know ỹ light. For as soone as the day breaketh, the shadowe of death cōmeth vpō them, & they go in horrible darknes. The vngodli es very swyft: O ỹ his porcion also vpon

For they mainteine ỹ baren, & make thē ỹ they cā not beare, & vnto widowes they do no good. They pluck downe ỹ mightie vā theyr power, & when they thē selues ar got be safe, yet they wil not receaue it, for their eyes loke vpon their owne wayes. They are exalted for a lytle, but shortly are they gone, brought to extreame pouerte, & take ¶ Baldad proueth that no mā is cleane & with out synne before God.

¶ Job sheweth that the wysdom of God is vnsearchable.

The .xxviii. Chapter.

THere are places where syluer with the ryuer of water parteth he a sunder the straūge people, ꝑ knoweth no good neyghbourheade: soch as are rude, vnmanerly & boysterous. He brigeth sode out of ꝑ erth, & that which is vnder, cōsumeth he wt fyre. There is founde a place, whose stones are cleane Saphirs, & wher ꝑ clottes of ꝑ erth are gold. Ther is a way also ꝑ ꝑ byrdes know not, that no vulturs eye hath sene: wherin ꝑ prowde & hye mynded walke not, & where no lyon cōmeth: Ther putteth he his hand vpō the stony rockes, and ouerthroweth the mountaines. Riuers flow out of the rockes, & loke what is pleasaunt, his eye seyth it. Out of droppes brigeth he great floudes together, & the thinge that is hyd bringeth he to light. Howe cōmeth a mā thē by wysdome? Wher is ꝑ place that mē fynde vnderstanding? Verely no mā can tell howe worthy a thing she is, neyther is she founde in the lande of ꝑ lyuyng. The depe saieth: she is not in me. The see sayethe: she is not withe me. She can not be gotten for the most fine golde, neither may ꝑ price of her be bought wyth enye moneye: No wedges of golde of Ophir, no precyous Onix stones, no Saphirs mai be cōpared vnto her. No, nether gold ner Chrystal, nether swete odours ner goldē plate. There is nothing so worthy, or so excellent, as ones to be named vnto her: for perfect wysdome goeth farre beyō de them al. The Topas that cōmeth oute of Inde, maye in no wise be lickened vnto her: yee no maner of apparell howe pleasaunt and fayre so euer it be.

From whēce then cōmeth wysdome? & wher is the place of vnderstanding? She is hyd frō the eyes of al men, yee & frō the foules of ꝑ aire. Destructiō & death saie: we haue herd tel of her wt our eares. But God seyth her waye, & knoweth her place. For he beholdeth the endes of the world & lokcth vpō al that is vnder heauen. Whē he weied ꝑ wyndes, & measured ꝑ waters: when he sett the rayne in ordre, & gaue the mightie floudes a law: Thē did he se her, thē declared he her, prepared her & knewe her. And vnto man he said: Behold, to feare ꝑ Lord, is wysdome: & to forsake euell, is vnderstandynge.

The. xxix. Chapter.

MOreouer Job proceaded and went forth in his communication, sayig: O yf I were as I was in ꝑ monethes by past, & in ꝑ dayes when God preserued me: whē his lyght shyned vpō my heade: when I went after the same lyght & shyning euē thorow the darknes. As it stode wt me, when I was welthi & had ynough: whē God prospered my house: whē ꝑ Almightie was with me: when my housholde folckes stode about me: whē my wayes rāne ouer wythe butter, & when the stonye rockes gaue me riuers of olie: when I wēt thorow the citie vnto the gate, & whē they set me a chaire in the strete: whē the yōge men (as soone as they sawe me) hidd them selues, & when thee aged arose, and stode vp vnto me: when the princes left of their talking, & laied theyr hād to their mouth: when the myghty kept styl their voyce, & whē their tōges cleued to the rofe of their mouthes. When al they that heard me, called me happye: and when all they that sawe me, wysshed me good. For I deliuered the poore when he cryed, and the fatherlesse that wanted help. He that should haue ben loste, gaue me a good worde, and the wydowes herte praysed me. And why? I put vpon me *righteousnesse, which couered me as a garmente, and equyte was my crowne. I was an eye vnto the blind, and a fote to ꝑ lame. I was a father vnto thee poore, and when I knewe not their cause, I sought it out diligently. I brake ꝑ chaftes of the vnryghteous, and pluct ꝑ spoyle out of their teth.

Therfore, I thought verelye, ꝑ I shuld haue dyed in my nest: & ꝑ my dayes shuld haue bene as many as ꝑ sandes of the see. For my rote was spred out by ꝑ water side, & ꝑ dewe lai vpō my corne. Mine honoure encreased more & more, & my bowe was euer the stronger in my hād. Unto me mē gaue eare, me they regarded, & wt sylence they taried for my counsel. If I had spoke, they wolde haue it none other wayes: my wordes were so well taken among them. They wayted for me, as the erth doth for ꝑ rayne: & gaped vpon me, as the grounde doth to receaue thē *latter showers. Whē I laughed, thei knew wel it was not earnest:

nest: & this testymony of my countenaūce pleased thē nothing at al. When I agreed vnto their waye, I was the chefe, & sat as a king among his seruauntes: Or as one that comforteth sorowe as he in heynesse.

¶ The great delyghte of men & curisse of God that Job lacketh.

The. xxx. Chapter.

BUt now they ꝑ are myne inferiours & yōnger then I, haue me in derisiō: yee euē they, whose fathers I wold haue thought scorne to haue set vpō ꝑ dogges of my catel. The power & strength of theyr hādes might do me no good, & as for their age, it is spēt & past away wtout any profit. For very mysery and honger, they wēt aboute in ꝑ wildernesse lyke wretches & beggers, pluckinge vp herbes frō among the bussches, & ꝑ junipers rote was their meate. And whē thei were dryuen forthe, men cried after them, as it had bene after a theefe. Their dwelling was beside foule brookes, yee in ꝑ caues & dēnes of the earth. Upon ꝑ bryre heeth wēt they aboute cryinge, & in the brome hylles they gathered them together. They were ꝑ children of fooles & vylaynes, which are deed away frō the world. Now am I their sōg, & am become theyr teasting stock: they abhorre me, they flē farre fro me, & saine my face with spetle. For the lord hath opened his quiuer, he hath hytt me, & put a brydle in my mouth. Upō my right hād thei rose to geather agaynste me, they haue hurte my fete, made a waye to destroye me, and my pathe haue they clene marred. It was so easy for thē to do me harme, that thei needed no mā to helpe them. They fell vpon me, as it had bene the breakyng in of waters, & came in by heapes to destroye me. Fearfulnesse is turned agaynst me.

Myne honoure vanysheth away more swyftly thē wind, & my prosperite departeth hēce like as it were a cloud. Therfore is my mind poured ful of heuynesse, & the dayes of trouble haue take hold vpō me. My bones ar pearsed thorow in ꝑ nyght sea̅on, & my synewes take no rest. With al their power haue thei chaūged my garmente, & girded me therwt, as it were wt a coate. I am cuē as it were clay, & am become like asshes & dust. Whē I crie vnto the, ꝑ doest not heare me: & though I stād before ꝑ, yet thou regardest me not. Thou art become myne enemye, & wt thy violent hād ꝑ takeste part agaynst me. In times past thou didest set me vpō hie, as it were aboue ꝑ winde, but now hast thou geuē me a very sore fal. Sure I am, ꝑ thou wilt deliuer me vnto death: wher as a lodgyng is prepared for al men lyuing. Now vse not mē to do violēce vnto thē, ꝑ are destroyed al ready: but wher hurte is done, there vse thei to helpe. Did not I wepe in ꝑ tyme of trouble? Had not my soule cōpassiō vpon ꝑ poore? Yet neuertheless where as I loked for good, euel happened vnto me: and where as I wayted for lyght, there came darknesse. My bowels seeth wtin me, & take no rest, for ꝑ dayes of my trouble are come vpō me. Mekely & lowly came I in, yee & wout any displeasure: I stode vp in the congregacyon, & cōmuned with them. But now, I am a cōpanion of dragons, & a felow of Estriches. My skinne vpō me his turned to black, & my bones are brent with heate: my harp is turned to sorow, & my pype to weppynge.

The. xxxi. Chapter.

I *Made a couenaunt wythe mine eies, ꝑ I wolde not loke vpon a dāsel. For howe greate a portiō shal I haue of god frō aboue? & what enheritaūce from ꝑ almightie on hye? As for ꝑ vngodly & he ꝑ iopneth him self to ꝑ cōpanie of wicked doers shal not destructiō & misery come vpō hi? Doth not he se my wayes, & al my goynges. If I haue cleued vn to vanite or yf my fete haue runne to dysceaue: let me be weyed in an euen balaunce, that God mai se my innocēcie. If so be that I haue withdrawne my fote oute of the right way, yf my heart hathe folowed mine eie sight, yf I haue stayned or defiled my handes: Then is it reason ꝑ I sowe, & another eate, yee that my generacion and posterytie be cleane roted oute. If my herte hathe lusted after my neyghboures wyfe wyfe, or yf I haue layde wayt at his doze.

D Oh thē let my wyfe be another mās harlot & let other lye wyth her. For this is a wyckednes & synne, that is worthy to be punis shed, yea a fyre that vtterly shulde consu-B me. & rote out al my substāce. Dyd I euer thinke scorne to do right vnto my seruāts & maydes, whē thei had any matter agaīst me. But seing & God wyl syt in iudgemēt what shal I do? And for so moch as he wil nedes viset me, what answere shal I gene him? He that fashioned me in my mothers wōbe, made he not hym also? were we not both shapē a lyke in our mothers bodies?
Whē the poore despyseth any thing at me, haue I denied it them? Haue I caused the wyddow stand wayting for me in vayne?
Haue I eatē my porciō alone, that the fa-therles hath had no part wt me? for mercy grew vp with me fro my youth, & cōpassiō C fro my mothers wombe. Haue I sene any mā perish thorow nakednes & wāt of clothing? Or any poore man for lack of raynmēt, whose sides thanked me not, because he was warmed with & wolle of my shepe Dyd I euer lift vp myne hand to hurt the fatherles? yea in the gate wher I sawe my self to be in auctorite: thē let myne arme fal fro my shulder, & myne arme holes be broke frō the toyntes. For I haue euer feared & vengeaūce & punishmēt of God, & knew very wel & I was not able to beat his burthē. Haue I put my trust in golde?
Or haue I sayd to the fynest golde of all:
thou arte my cōfydence? Haue I reioyced because my substāce was great, & because my hand gat so moch? Did I euer greatly D* regard the rysinge of & sunne? or had I the going downe of the moone in great re-putatiō? Hath my hert medled pryuely wt any disceat? Or, did I euer kisse mine own hande? that were a wyckednesse worthy to be punished, for then shuld I haue denied the God that is aboue. Haue I euer reioy-sed at the hurt of myne enemy? Or was I euer glad, & any harme happened vnto hi?
Oh no. I neuer suffred my mouth to doo D soch a syn, as to wysh him euel. Yet thei of mine owne houshold saye: who shal let vs to haue our belly ful of his flesche? I haue not suffred a straūger to lie wout, but ope ned my dozes vnto hi. Haue I euer done a my wicked dede wher thorow I shamed my self before men: or any abhominatiō, & I was faine to hide it? For yf I had feared ani great multitude of people: or yf I had bene diseised of the simple. O thā shuld I haue bene afrayed. Thus haue I quyetly spēt my life, & not gone oute at & doze. O that I had one which wold heare me. Lo, this is my cause. Let & almighty geue me āswere: & let him that is my contrary party, sue me wt a libel. Then shall I take it vpon my shulder, & as a garlād about my head. I haue told & nōber of my goinges, & deliuered thē vnto hym as to a Prynce.
But yf case be that my* lād crye agaīst me, or & the forowes therof make any cōplaynt: yf I haue eatē & frutes therof vn payed for, yee yf I haue greued any of & plowme, thē let thystles grow in steade of my wheate, & thornes for my barlye.

Here ende the wordes of Job.

The Notes.

a* To make a couenaūt with his eies, is,
to mortifie & cōcupiscēce of the hert, that cōmeth by the meanes of the eie: wheche is to pluckе out the eye, as is saide Mat. v. e.

b* To regard the rysyng of the sonne & the going downe of & mone, is, to be glorious in prosperite, & to vse the thinges of this worlde to pleasure. Jere. xvii. c. For on them that be in prosperite is the sonne counted to shine, & the mone to go downe prosperously & pleasāly: & on the contrary parte, to thē that be in tribulacyō, are both the sonne & & mone coū ted cloudy and darcklome.

c* The lande cryeth agaynst him, whē the housband men defrauded of their wages crie therfore agaynste hym: so the hyre of & work men cryeth. Jaco. v a. And the forowes make lamentacion, when they & plowe the grou de and make the forowes, are deprayued of theyr dutye.

¶ Eliu after the other had fynished theyr communication, reproueth them of folishnes. Age maketh not a man wyse, but the spyrite of God.

The. xxxii. Chapter.

SO these thre mē wold stryue no more with Job, because he held hi self a rightuous mā.
But a* Eliu the sonne of Ba rachel the Bussite of & kynred of Rā, was very sore displeased at Job & he called him self iust before god. And wt Jobs thre frindes he was angrye also, because they had foūde no reasonable an-swere to ouercome him. Now tarryed Eliu tyll they had ended theyr cōmunicatiō wt Job, for why they were elder then he.
So when Eliu the sonne of Barachell the Bussite sawe, that these thre men were not

not able to make Job āswere, he was mis-content: so that he gaue answere him selfe, and sayd: Consydering, that I am young & ye be mē of age, I was afrayed, & durst not shew forth my minde, for I thoughte thus wythin my selfe: Jt becommeth olde men to speake, & the aged to teache wisdō.
Euery mā (no doute) hath a mynde, but it is the inspiratiō of & Almyghtie & geueth vnderstanding. Al mē are not wise, nether doth euery aged man vnderstand the thin ge that is lawful. Therfore wyl I speake also (in so farre as I may be heard) & wyll shew you myne opinion. For when I had wayted tyl ye made an ende of your talkin ge, & heard your wisdō, what argumentes ye made in your cōmunicatiō: yea when I had diligētly pondred what ye said, I foū de not one of you that made any good argumēt against Job, or & directly coud ma ke answere vnto his wordes: lest ye shuld prayse your selues, to haue foūd out wysdō: because it is God that hath cast hi out, D & no mā. Neuertheles, seynge he hath not spokē vnto me, therfore wyl not I āswere hym as ye haue done (for they were so abashed, that they could not make answere nor speake one word) but in so moch as ye wyl not speake, standing styl lykedom mē and makinge no answere: I haue a good hope for my parte to shappe hī an āswere, and to shewe him my meanyng. For I am ful of wordes, & the spyrte & is within me, compellethe me.

Beholde, I am as the new wyne, whyc-che hathe no vente, and burssteth the newe vessels in sunder. Therefore wyll I speake, that I may haue a vente: I wyll open my lippes, & make answere I wyll regarde no maner of personne, no mā wil I spa
re. For yf I wold go aboute to please mē, I knowe not howe sone my maker wolde take me awaye.

The Notes.

a* S. Hierome in his treatise of & tradicīons of the Hebrues vpō Genesis sayth, that this Eliu was & Balaā, of whō is spokē Nu

¶ Eliu sheweth wherin Job offēdeth. Wythe God may we not strue, nor curiously searche oute hys workes.

The. xxxiii. Chapter.

THerfore heare my word? (O Job) & herkē vnto me al, that I wyll saye. Beholde, I wyl open my mouthe, and my tōge shal speake out of my thawes. My her te shal ordre my wordes a right, & my lyp-pes shal talk of pure wisdō. The spyrite of god hath made me, & & breth of & Almyg tie hath geuen me my lyfe. Jf thou canst, then geue me answere: prepare thy selfe to stande before me face to face. Behold, before god am I euē as &, for I am fashyo-ned & made euen of the same mould. Ther fore, thou nedest not be afrayed of me nether nedest thou to feare, that my auctoryte shalbe to heuy for the. Now haste thou spoken in myne eares, & I haue herde the voice of thy wordes: I am clene wout any faute, I am innocent, & there is no wyc kednes in me. But lo, he hath piked a qua rell againste me, & taketh me for hys enemy: he hath put my fote in & stok, & loketh narowly vnto all my pathes. Behold, vnto these vnreasonable wordes of thyne wyl I make answere.

Shulde god be reproued of mā? Why doest & then stryue agaynste him, because he geueth & no accōptes of al his doinges?
For whē god doth once cōmaund a thing ther shulde no man be curious, to searche whether it be ryght. Jn dreames & visiōs of the nyght season (when slombringe cōmeth vpō men, that thei fal a slepe in their beddes) he rowndeth thē in the eares, he in fourmeth them, and sheweth them playne ly, & it is he, which wdrawēth mā from euyll, delyuereth hym from pryde, kepethe hys soule from destruction, & his lyfe frō the swearde. He chastenethe hym wythe sycknesse, & bryngethe hym to hys bed: he lateth sore punishment vpon his bones, so that hys lyfe maye awaye with no bred, & hys soule abhorreth to eate anye dayntye meate: Jn so moch that his body is cleane consumed awaye, & his bones appeare no more. His soule drawēth on to destructiō, That is, an & his life to death. Now yf ther be a* mef instructor senger (one among a thousande) sente for vp & wordes to speake vnto man, and to shew him the of god.
ryghte waye: then the Lorde is mercyfull vnto hym, & sayeth. He shall be deliuered, that he fal not downe to destructiō, for I am sufficiently reconciled. Than his flesh (which hath bene in misery & trouble) shal be as it was in hys youthe. For yf he submyte hym selfe vnto God, he is gracyous, & shewethe hym hys couēnaūce toy-fully, & rewardeth man for his rightuousnes. Soche a respecte hathe he vnto men. Therfore let a mā confesse (and say) I offended, but he hath chastened & reformed me: I dyd vnrightuously, neuertheles he hath not recompensed me therafter. Ye he hath deliuered my soule frō destructyon, & my lyfe, that it seith the lyghte. Lo, thus worcketh God alwaye with man, that he kepeth hys soule from perysshynge, & letteth hym enioye the lyght of the lyuynge. Marcke wel (O Job) and heare me: holde the stil, vntil I haue spoken. But yf thou hast any thinge to saye, then answere me, & speake, for thy answere pleaseth me. If thou hast nothinge, then heare me, & holde thy tonge, so shall I teache the wysdome.

Elihu prayseth the iustice of god, whych iudgeth the worlde, and gouerneth all.

The. xxxiiii. Chapter.

Elihu proceading forth in hys cōmunicacyon, sayde: Heare my wordes (O ye wyse men) herke vnto me, ye y haue vnderstanding. For like as the mouth taisteth y meates, so y eare proueth & discerneth the wordes. As for the iudgemēt let vs seke it out amōge our selues, y we may knowe what is ryght. And why: Job hath sayd: I am ryghtuous, but god doth me wronge. I muste neades be a lyer though my cause be right, and violently I am plaged where as I made no fawte: wher is ther soche one as Job, y drynketh vp scornefulnes like water: whyche goeth in y cōpany of wicked doers, & walketh vp vngodly mē? For he saith: Thoughe a mā be good, yet is he naught before God. Therefore herken vnto me, ye that haue vnderstandynge.

Farre be it from God, that he shoulde medle with wickednes: and farre be it frō the almyghtye, y he shulde medle vp vnrighteous dealyng: but he rewardeth the worthes of man, and causeth euery mā to fynde accordinge to his wayes. For sure it is, that God condemneth no mā wrōgously, and the iudgement of the Almyghtie is not vnryghtuousse. Who ruleth y erth in hys steade? Or, whom hath he set to gouerne the whole worlde? To whom hathe he geuen hys herte, for to drawe his spirite and breth vnto hym? All fleshe shal come together vnto naught, & all men shal turne againe vnto earth. If thou now haue vnderstāding, heare what I saye, & herke to the voyce of my wordes.

Maye he be made whole, that loueth no right? If thou were a very innocent man, shuldest thou then be pu[illegible]ished? For he is euē the same, that knoweth the rebellious kinges, & saieth to Princes: Vngodly mē are ye. He hath none respecte vnto the persones of the lordye, & regardeth not the riche more then poore. For they be all the worke of his handes. In the twyncklynge of an eie shall they be slayne: & at mydnyght, when the people & the tyrauntes rage, then shall they perysh, & be take awaie wythout handes. And why? hys eyes loke vpon the wales of man, and he seith al his goynges. There is no darknes nor thycke shadowe, that can hyde the wycked doers frō hym. For no man shalbe suffred to go vnto iudgment with God.

Many one, yee innumerable doth he punish, and setteth otherin their steades: For he knoweth their euell & darcke worckes, therfore shal they be destroyed. They that were in the steade of Sears, dealte lyke vngodly mē. Therfore turned they backe trayterously & vnfaithfully from hym, & wolde not receaue his wayes. In so moch that they haue caused the voice of y poore to come vnto hym, & now he heareth the cōplaynte of soche as are in necessyte. If he deliuer and graūt pardon, who wil iudge or condemne? But yf he hyde away hys countenaūce, who wyl turne it about againe, whether it be to the people or to any mā? For the wickednesse and synne of the people, he maketh an ypocryte to reygne ouer them. For so moch then as I haue begonne to talke of God, I wyll not hyndre y. If I haue gone a mysse, enfourme me: yf I haue done wrōg, I wil leaue of. Wylt thou not geue a reasonable answere? Art thou afrayed of any thynge, seynge thou begānest fyrst to speake, & not I? For els the mē of vnderstandyng & wysdom, that haue herd me, might say: What causte y speake? As for Job he hath neither spoke to the purpose nor wyselye. O father, lett Job be wel tried, because he hath turned hym self to the wycked: yee aboue his synnes he hathe blasphemed, whyche offence he hath done cue before vs, in that he stryueth agaynst God with hys wordes.

Neither doth godlynes profet, or vngodlynes hurte to God, but to man.

The. xxxv. Chapter.

Elihu spake more ouer, & said: Thinkest thou it righte that thou sayest: I am rightuous before God? Seing y sayest so, how doest thou knowe it? What thinge hast thou more excellent the I, that am a synner? Therfore wyll I geue answere vnto the and thy frendes: loke vnto the heauēn, & beholde it: consydre the cloudes, howe they are hyer then thou. Yf thou synnest, what doest thou vnto hym? Yf thyne offences be manye, how getteste thou his fauoure? Yf thou be ryghtuous what geuest thou him? Or what receiueth he of thy hādes? Of soch an vngodly person as thou, & of the sonne of man that is righteous as thou pretendest to be: there is a greate crye and complaynt made by the that are oppressed wyth wyolence, yea euerye man complaineth vppon the cruelt arme of tyrauntes. For soch one neuer sayth Where is God that made me? and that shyneth vpon vs, that we myghte prayse him in the nyghte? Wyhych geueth vs more vnderstanding thē he doth the beastes of the earth, and teacheth vs more thē the foules of heauen.

Yf any soche cōplayne, no man geueth answere, & that because of the wickednesse of proud tyrauntes. But yf a man call vpō God, doth not he heare him? Doth not the Almightye accepte hys crye? Whan thou speakest then, thulde not he pardon the, yf thou open thy self before him, and put thy trust in him? Then vseth he no violence in his wrath, neither hath he pleasure in curious and depe inquisicyōs. Therfore hath Job opened hys mouth but in vayne, and folishly hath he made so many wordes.

Elihu sheweth wherfore God punisheth and correcteth.

The. xxxvi. Chapter.

Elihu proceaded forth in hys talkynge and sayde: Holde the styl a lyttle, and I shall shewe thee, what I haue yet too speake on Goddes behalfe. I wyll open vnto the yet more of myne vnderstanding standing, and proue my maker righteous. True ar my wordes, & no lye: & the knowledge wher withal I argue agaynst the, is perfect. Behold, God casteth not away the mighty, for he him self is mighty in power and wysdome.

As for the vngodlye, he preserueth the not, but helpeth y poore to theyr ryght. He turneth not his eyes away frō the ryghteous, he setteth vp Kynges in their trone, & confirmeth the, so that they alway syt therin. But yf they be layde in preson and chaynes, or bound with the bondes of powerte: then sheweth he the theyr worckes & dedes and the synnes where with they haue vsed cruell violence.

He with punishing and nurturinge of them, roundeth them in the eares, warneth them to leaue of frō theyr wyckednes, and to amend. Yf they now wyl take hede and be obedient, they shal were out their dayes in prosperite, & theyr yeares in pleasure & ioye. But yf they wyll not obeye, they shal go thorowe the swearde, & perysshe or euer they be aware. As for soche as be fayned, dissemblers and ypocrites, thei heape vp wrath for them selues: for they call not vpon hym, thoughe they be his presoners. Thus theyr soule perysheth in folyshnes, and theyr lyfe with the condemned. The poore deliuereth he out of his straytnesse, and comforteth soch as be in necessite and trouble. Euen so shall he kepe the (yf thou wylte be content) from the bottomlesse pyt that is benethe: and yf thou wylte holde the quyet, he shall fyll thy table wyth plenteousnesse.

Neuertheles thou hast condemned the iudgement of the vngodly, yea cue soch a iudgemēt & sentēce shalt thou suffre. For the shal not thy cause be stylled with cruelte, nor pacified wyth many gyftes. Hath God ordened the, that the glorious lyke of the, & al soch mighty men shuld not be put downe? Prologue not thou the tyme, tyll ther come a nyght for the, to set other people in thy stede. But beware that thou turne not & syde to wickednes and synne, whiche hytherto thou haste chosen more then mekenesse. Beholde, God is of a myghtye power: Where is there soche a gyde and lawe geuer as he? Who wyll reproue him of his waye? who wyll saye vnto him saye vnto him: thou hast done wrong.

O consyder how greate & excellet hys
D workes be, whom all men loue & prayse:
yee wonder at hym, & yet they se hym but a farre of. Beholde, so greate is God, that he passeth oure knowledge, nether are we able to come to the experyence of hys yea-res. He turneth the water to smal droppes he dryueth hys cloudes to geather for to rayne, so ỹ they poure downe and droppe vpon men. He can spredе out the cloudes (a couerynge of hys tabernacle) and cause hys lyghte to shyne vppon them, & to couer the botom of the see. By these thinges gouerneth he hys people, & geueth thē a-boundaunce of meate. In ỹ turnyng of a hande he hydeth the lyght, & at hys cōmaū demente it commeth agayne. The vplyng therof sheweth he to hys frendes and to the catell.

¶ Elihu pronyth that the wisdom of god is vnsearcheable.

The. xxxvii. Chapter.

AT this, my herte is astonied, &
A moued out of his place. Hea re thē ỹ soūd of his voyce, & the noyse ỹ goeth out of hys mouth. He gouernethe euery thig vnder ỹ heuē, & his light reacheth vn to the ende of the world. A roaring voyce folowth hym: for hys glorious maiestye geueth soch a thōdre clappe, ỹ (thoughe a mā heare it) yet may he not perceue it after ward. It geueth an horrible sownde, whē god sēdeth out hys voyce: greate thynges doth he, which we cā not cōprehēd. When he cōmaundeth the snowe, it eraltеth vpō the earth: As soone as he geuethe ỹ rayne a charge, immedyatlye the showers haue
B their strengthe, and fal downe. He sēdethe feare vpon euery mā, that they might kno we their owne workes. The beestes crepe into their dennes, & take their reste. Oute of the south commethe the tempeste, and colde out of the north.

At the* breth of God, the frost cōmeth,
& the waters are shed abrode. The cloudes do theyr laboure in geuinge moystnesse.
the cloudes poure downe their rayne. He distributeth also on euery syde, according as it pleaseth hi to deale out hys workes, ỹ they maye do, whatsoeuer he cōmaundeth them thorow the whole worlde: whether it be to punishe any lande, or to do good vn to them, that seke hym.

Herken vnto thys (O Job) stand styl, & consyder the wonderous workes of God. ¶ Arte thou of councell wyth God, when he dothe these thinges? When he causeth the lyghte to come forth of hys cloudes? Arte thou of his cōcell, when he spredethe oute the cloudes? Haste thou the perfect knowledge of hys wonders? & howe thy clothes are warme, when the lande is styl thorowe the South wynde? Hast thou helped hym to spreade out the heauen, which is to loke vppon, as it were caste of cleare metal?
Teach vs what we shal say vnto him, for we are vnmete because of darknes. Shal it be told him what I saye? Should a man speake, or shuld he kepe it backe? For eue ry man seyth not the lyght, that he kepethe cleare in ỹ cloudes, which he clensed whan he maketh the winde to blowe. Golde is brought out of ỹ North, but the prayse & honour of Gods feare, commeth frō God hym self. It is not we that can fynd out ỹ almightye: for in power, equitie, & righte-ousnes, he is hyer thā can be expressed. Se inge thē that euery body feareth hym, why shulde not all wyse men also stande in feаre of hym.

The Notes.

ge & vehemēt wind/as is the north winde.

naunce therof vpon the erth? Moreouer, leth the vehemēt waters of ỹ heauen? who who prouidethmeate for the raué, whē his

¶ The Notes

a* He sayth not ỹ heauē was made before he sayth he had a dwelling place and that he neaded no earthly mansyon: for then was he was no man by or helped him/when he made rituall natures.

The. xxxix. Chapter.

KNowest thou the tyme when rekenest thou the monethes after they en-thou truste hym, because he is stronge, or or cõmytte thy labour vnto hym: Mayest thou beleue hym, that he wyll bryng home the corne, or to carye anye thinge vnto the barne? The Estrich (whose fethers ar fayr̃er than the winges of the sparow hauke) whē he hath layd hys egges vpō the grou̇de, he bredeth thē in the duste, & forgetteth them: so that thei might be trodē with fete or broken with some wylde beast. So har de is he vnto hys yonge ones, as thoughe they were not hys, and laboureth in vayne without any feare. And that because God hath taken wysdom from him, & hath not geuen hym vnderstanding. When his ty me is, he lyeth vp on hye, & careth neyther for horse nor man.

Hast thou geuē the horse hys strength, or learned him to bowe downe his neck w̄ feare: that he lettethe hym selfe be dryuen forth like a grashopper, wher as the stoute neyenge that he maketh, is fearful? he brea keth the ground with the hoffes of his fe te chearfully in his strength, & runneth to mete the harnest men. He layeth a syde all feare, hys stomack is not abated, neyther starteth he a back for any swerd. Though the quyuers rattle vppon him, though the speare & shylde glystere: yet rusheth he in fearsely, and beateth vpon the ground. He feareth not the noyse of the trōpettes, but as soone as he heareth the shawmes blow tusche (sayth he) for he smelleth the battel a farre of, the noyse, the Captaynes and the shoutinge.

Commeth it thorow thy wysdom, ỹ the Goshauke flyethe to warde thee South? Doth the Egle mount vp, and make hys nest on hye at thy commaundement? He a bydeth in the stony rockes, & vpon the hye toppes of harde mountaynes, wher nomā can come. From thence may he behold his prey, and loke farre about wyth his eyes. Hys younge ones are fedde wyth bloude, and where anye dead bodye lyeth, there is he immediatly.

Moreouer, God spake vnto Job & said: Can he ỹ stryueth wyth the almightye, be at rest? Shuld not he whiche disputeth w̄ God, geue him an answere? Job ānswered the Lord, sayeng: Beholde, I am to vyle a person, to answere the, therfore wyll  I laye my hād vpō my mouth. Once or twyse haue I spokē, but I wyll saye nomore, Job humbleth hym self vnto god, the discripcyō of an Elephant, Leuiathan.

The. xl. Chapter.

THē spake the Lord vnto Job out of ỹ storme, & sayd: Eyrd vp thy loynes lyke a mā, and tel me the thinges that I wyll aske the. Wolt thou disanull my iudgement? Or wilt thou condēne me that thou thy selfe mayest be made righteous? Is thyne a* arme then lyke the arme of God? Maketh thy voyce soch a sounde as his doth? Thē arme thy self with thine owne power, vp, decke the in thy holy arayment poure oute the indignacīō of thy wrath: se that thou caste downe all the proude, loke well, that thou makest all soche as be stub burne, to obeye: treade all the vngodly vn der thy fete, cast them downe into the myre and couer their faces wyth darknes. Thē wyl I confesse also, that thyne owne right hand hath saued the.

Behold, b* Behemoth (whō I made w̄ the) whiche eateth haye as an ore: lo, howe stronge he is in hys loynes, & what power he hath in the nauel of his bodye. He sprē deth out his tayle lyke a Cedre tree, al hys vaynes are styf. His shinnes ar like pipes of brasse, hys rygge bones are lyke staues of yron. First when God made him, he ordened the wyldernesse for hym, & the mōtaynes shuld geue him brasse, wher all the beastes of the filde take their pastyme. He lyeth amonge the reedes in the Mosses, the fennes hyde hym with their shadowe, and the wyllowes of the broke couer hym rōnd about. Lo, without any labour myght he drinke out of the whole floude, & suppe of Jordan without any trauayl. Who darre laye hand vpō him openlye, & vndertake to catch hym? Or, who darre put a booke thorowe hys nose, & laye a snare for hym?

Darrest thou draw out c* Leuiathā w̄ an angle, or binde his tonge with a snare? Cānst thou put a ring in the nose of him, or bore hys chaftes thorowe wyth a naule? Wyll he make many sayre wordes with ỹ (thinkest thou) or flatter the? Will he make a couenaūt with the? Or art thou able for to cōpel hym to do the continuall seruice?

Wylte

Wylte thou take thy pastyme wythe hym as with a byrd, or geue him vnto thy maydens, that thy cōpanions may hew him in peces, to be parted amonge the marchaūte men? Canst thou fyll the net with his skin or the fysshe pannier with his head? Darrest thou laye hand vpon hym? It is better for the to consyder what harme myght happen the ther thorow and not to touche hym. For when thou thinkest to haue hold vpon hym, he shal begyle the: Euery man also that seyth hym, shall go backe. And why? ther darre none be so bolde as to ray se hym vp.

The Notes.

a* Arme for power, strength or might: as in Psalm. lxxxix. a b* Ye Hebrues vnderstād by Behemoth ỹ greatest beast in the earth that is an Elephant. Other vnderstand therby any earthly beaste that is great: but vnto an Elephant do al the properties here recyted right wel agre wherfore it seameth moste agreable to the trueth, that by the worde be signified an Elephant.

c* Leuiathan as diuerse learned man expounde, signifieth the greatest fysshe that lyeth in the see, whych is a whalle.

Of the same Leuiathan whereof is mencioned in the Chapter afore.

The. xli. Chapter.

WHo is able to stande before me? Or, who hathe geuen me anye thinge afore hand, that I am bounde to reward him agayne? All thynges vnder heauen are myne. I feare hym not, whether he threaten or speake fayre. Who lyfteth hym vppe, and stryppethe hym oute of hys clothes, or who taketh hym by the dyst of hys bydle? Who openeth the doore of hys face? for he hath horrible teeth round about. Hys bodye is coured wythe scales as it were wythe shyldes, lockte in, kepte, and well compacte together. One is so ioyned to another, that noo ayre can come in: Yea one hangethe so vppon another, and stycketh so together, that they cānot be sundered. Hys neesynge is lyke a glysterynge fyre, and hys eyes lyke the morowe ge shyne. Oute of hys mouthe go torches and fyre brandes, out of hys nostrels ther goeth a smoke, lyke as oute of an hote seethinge pott. Hys breethe maketh the coales burne, the flame goeth oute of hys mouth. In hys neck remaynethe strengthe, and before hys face sorowe is turned to gladnes. The membres of his body ar ioyned so strayte one to another, and cleue so fast to gether, that he can not be moued.

Hys herte is as herde as a stone, & as faste as the stythye that the hammer man smiteth vpon. When he goeth: the myghtiest of all are afrayed, & the waues heup. If he drawe out the swearde, there maye nether speare, ner brestplate, abide hym. He setteth as moche by a strawe as by yrō, and as moche by a rotten stocke as by metall. He starteth not away for him that bendeth the bowe: and as for flyng stones he careth as moche for stubble as for the. He counteth the hammer no better then a strawe, he laugheth hym to skorne that shaketh the speare. He treadethe the gold in the myre lyke the sharpe pottsherdes. He maketh thee depe too seethe and boyle like a potte, and stereth the see together lyke an oyntemente. The waye is light after hym, the depe is hys walkynge place. Upon earthe is there no power lyke vnto hys, for he is so made that he feareth not. If a man wyll consyder all hye thynges, this same is a kynge ouer all the chyldre of pryde.

The repentaūce of Job. He praieth for his frendes, & his goodes are restored double vnto hym.

The. xlii. Chapter.

THē Job answered the Lord, and sayd: I knowe that thou hast power ouer al thinges, & ỹ ther is no thought hyd vnto the. For who can kepe hys owne counsell so secrete, but it shalbe knowne? Therfore haue I spoken vnwysely, seynge these thinges are so hie, & passe mine vnderstandyng. O herken thou vnto me also, and lett me speake: answere vnto the thinge that I wyll aske the. I haue geuē dylygent eare vnto the, & now I se the w̄ myne eyes. Wherfore I geue myne owne self ỹ blame, & take repentaūce in ỹ duste and asshes.

Now when the Lorde had spokē these wordes vnto Job, he saide vnto Eliphas the Themanite: I am displeased with the and thy two frendes, for ye haue not spokē the thyng that is ryght before me, lyke as my seruaūt Job hath done. Therfore take. vii. oxen and. vii. rammes, and go to

Mat.v.c te Job praye for you. Him will I accept, & not deale wythe you after youre folysh nes: in that ye haue not spoken the thyng whych is ryght, lyke as my seruaunt Job hathe done.

So Eliphas the Themanite, Baldad & Suhite & Sophar the Naamathite went their waye, & dyd accordyng as the Lorde
C cōmaunded the. The lord also accepted & personne of Job, & the Lorde turned him vnto Job, whē he prayed for hys frindes:
Yee the Lorde gaue Job twyse as moche as he had afore.

And then came there vnto him all hys brethren, all his sisters, with all them that had bene of his acquaintaunce afore, and ate bred with him in hys house, wondryn ge at hym, & comfortynge him ouer al the trouble, that the Lorde had broughte vp-on him. Euery man gaue him a shepe and a Jewell of golde.

And the Lorde made Job rycher then D he was before: for he had .xiiii. M. shepe.
vi. M. camels, a. M. youck of oxen, and a M. asshes. He had chyldren also. vii. son-nes and .iii. daughters. The fyrste called Day: the second Nouerte: & thyrd Fl plen teousnes. In al ỹ land were none fou de so fayre, as ỹ doughters of Job, & their father gaue them enherytaunce amonge their brethren.

After this lyued Job .cxl yea res, so ỹ he saw his childrē, & his childrēs children to the fourth generacyō.

And so he dyed, being olde and of a per-fecte age.

The fyrst psalme.

C Those that forsake the counsels and tradicions of the wicked, and wholy geue them selues to know the Lawe of God, and to shewe it in theyr lyuinge: doth this Psalme pronounce blessed, both here and in the worlde to come: & the contrary parte, in both the worldes, miserable and wretched

A Blessed is the manne that goeth not in the counsel of the vngodly: that abideth not in a* ỹ waye of synners b* and sitteth not i the sea-te of the scornefull.

But delyteth in the law of the Lord, and exercyseth hi selfe in his lawe, bothe day and night.

Suche a man is lyke a tree planted by the water syde, that bryngeth forthe hys frute in due season.

Hys leaues shall not fall of, & looke what soeuer he doth, it shall prosper.

B As for the vngodly, it is not so with them: but they are lyke the dust, whyche the wynde scatereth awaye from ỹ face of the grounde.

Therfore the vngodly shal not be able c* to stand in the iudgement, neither the synners in the congregation of the righteous.

For the Lord alloweth ỹ way of the righteous, but the waye of the vngod-ly shall perish.

The notes.

a* The waye of synners, is, their maners & ordinances, in whych they walke as it were in a waye. Waye in the scripture is take for whatsoeuer we do or go about, be it good or cupll, as in the laste verse of this Psalme.

b* To sytte in ỹ seate of ỹ scorneful, is, to cōspire with them, and to become felowes of their mischefe as in the Psal. xcv. b.

c* To stande in iudgemente, is, to wynne the processe, and to haue sentence pronounced on theyr sy-des: as to robbe iudgemente, is, to let the processe trueth. Esa. x. a. So then this text meaneth nomore but that the wycked shall haue suche a terrible sen tence geuen vpon them, that they shall not be able to abyde, when the Lorde shal come to the general iudgement it meaneth not the wycked shal not ap peare in the iudgement.

a* To the Chaunter in b* Neginoth A Pſalme of Dauid

a* That is here translate / To the Chaunter / is in Hebzue Lamnazeah: which wozd after the mynde of Abiah. Ezra & Dauid kimhi, expositours in Hebzu synglyeth, To the cheefe of the syngers: which we comonly call in Englysh, setter of the queare oz chaunter This interpretacyon also do both the most & the best learned of the Latinistes best alowe, & therfore haue I followed the same the whole Pſalter thozow expressing it by this wozde, Chaunter. Notwithstandinge diuers Authoures do diuerslye interprete it. Some saie that it signifieth, To the victozy oz ouercome, to the victozye: which may thus agre and concord together yf thou take a Pſalme to be a stryuing & an exhortacion to put our trust in God, beinge sure to obtaine the victozy. And where som interpret vnto y ende, vnderstande euen the same for therfore do we put oure truste in god, that we maye come to the ende of the victozy. Som translate the tytle thus: A vehement and often made exhortacion in instrumentes of musyke. a Pſalme of Dauid, that is as they them selues expond it a Pſalme reuelate to Dauid, for Dauid is in Hebzu y dative case not the genetyfe.

But as for me, I wyl come into thy house, euen vpō the multytude of thy mercy: and in thy feare wil I wozshyp towarde thy holy temple.

Lede me (O Lozd) in thy ryghtuousnesse because of mine enemyes, & make thy waye playne before me.

For there is no faithfulnes in ther mouthes: they dissemble & their hertes their thzote is an open sepulchze: with their tonges they disceaue.

Punyshe them (O God) that they B may perysh in theyr owne ymaginacyōs cast them out because of the multitude of their vngodlynesse, for they rebell agaynst the.

And where god, iudgeth w tranquylite & peasablenes, & hath neither auger oz furi in him yet cannot the scripture shew vnto vs what God shall appeare vnto them that shal feale his iudgement: but if it speake after our maner, of God as though it spake of a man as in the Pſal. ii. c Loke after i the Pſal. xxviii. a. c * My bones are vexed. &c. He brought me forth alſo into lyberte: and delyuered me, becauſe he had a fauour vnto me.

The Lorde ſhall rewarde me after my rightuous dealing, and accordyng to the clennelle of my handes ſhall he recompence me.

For I haue kepte the wayes of the Lorde: and haue not behaued my ſelfe wickedly agaynſt my God

For who is God but the Lorde? Or who hath any strenght, but our God?

It is God that girded me with strength, and made my waye vncorrupte.

He hath made my fete lyke hertes fete, & set me vpon hye.

He teacheth myne handes to fyght, & maketh myne armes to breake euen a bowe of stele.

Thou hast made myne enemies to tourne their backes vpõme, thou hast destroyed them that hated me.

They cried but there was none to helpe them: yee euen vnto the lord but he herde them not.

I wyll beate them as small as the dust claye in the winde. I will cast the out as the claye in the stretes.

Thou shalte delyuer me from the stryuinges of ỹ people, thou shalt make me the i* heade of the Heathen.

The sheweth that it is the commaundemēt of god and a special good thing, perfectly to remembre the actes and deades of ỹ lord done to his people. Thē saith he, that all though they were vnfaithfull, yet dyd he wonders in Egipte, and brought them frō thence, and though they prouocked hym to angere the wylderneße, gaue them abondantlye hys benefytes. And after that, when they were destroyed which came forth of Egipt, for their wickednes: yet brought he their sones (although thei folowed ther fathers vnfaithfulnes, & despised the wonders done in the wildernes for their fathers) into the land promessed, & droue out ỹ inhabiters: in which, although he often punyshed them greuously, whē they prouoked and tempted him, & at the last in tokē of a grate feruent wrath, byside their great slaughter sufferred also the Arcke to be taken from them in the time of Eli the Priest: yet behild he thē fauorablye againe, geuing them Dauid to their king, and restoaring godlynes againe at Jerusalē. in which this he also prophecyeth of Christ vnder the shadow of Dauid

An instruccyon of Asaph.

A HEre my lawe, O my people, encline your eares vnto the wordes of my mouth.

I wyl open my mouth in parables, and speake of thinges of olde.

Which we haue herd and knowē, & such as our fathers haue tolde vs.

That we should not hyde them frō the childrē of the generacions to come, but to shewe the honour of the Lorde, his myghte and wonderfull worckes ỹ he hath done.

He made a couenaunt wyth Jacob, and gaue Israel a lawe, which he commaunded oure forefathers, to teache their children.

That their posterite myght knowe it, & ỹ childrē which were yet vnborn.

To thintent that when they came vp, they myght shew their childrē the same.

That they also might put their trust i god, & not to forget what he had done but to kepe his commaundementes.

And not to be as their forefathers, a* frowarde and ouerthwarte generacion, a generacyon that set not their hert a right, and whose spyrite was not true towarde God.

Lyke as the childrē of b* Ephraim, which beig harnessed and carieg bowes, turned them selues, back in the time of battayll.

They kept not the couenaunt of god & wolde not walke in his lawe.

They forgate what he had done, and the wōderful worckes that he had shewed for them.

Marueles thynges dyd he in the syght of our fathers in the lande of Egipte, euen in the felde of c* Zoan.

He deuided the see and let them go thorow it, and made ỹ waters to stand lyke a wall.

In the day tyme he led them with a cloude, and all the nyght thorow with a lyght of fyre.

He cloue the hard rockes in ỹ wilderneße, & gaue them drinke therof, as it hath bene out of the greate deaphe.

He brought waters out of the stony rocke, so that they guished out lyke the ryuers.

Yet for al this they sined agaīst him, and prouoked the moost hyeste in the wyldernes,

They tempted god in their herts, and requyred meate for their lust.

For they spake agaynst god, & said: yee yee, god shal prepare a d* table in ỹ wilderneße, shal he?

Lo, he smote the stony rocke, that the watery streames gusshed out, & ỹ streames flowed w all: but how cā he geue bred & prouide flesh for his people?

When ỹ Lord hearde this, he was wroth: so ỹ fyre was kindled in Jacob & heup displeasure agaynste Israell:

Because they beleued not in God & put not their trust in hys helpe.

So he commaunded the cloudes above & opened the doores of heauen.

He rayned downe Manna vpon them for to eate, and gaue thē bred frō heauen.

Then ate the angels e* fode, for he sent them meate ynoughe.

He caused the East wynde to blowe vnder the heauē, & thorow his power he brought in the south wynde.

He made flesh to rayne vpon thē as thicke as dust, and fethered foules like as the sande of the see.

He let it fall amonge their tentes rounde aboute their habytacions.

So they ate and were fyled, for he gaue them their owne desyre.

They were not dysapointed of their lust.

But while ỹ meate was yet i their mouthes: the heuy wrath of god came vpō thē, slew the e* welthiest of thē, & smote downe the chosen men of Israel.

But for al this they sinned yet more, & beleued not his wonderous worckes.

Therfore their dayes were consumed in vanite, and sodenly their yeares were gone.

Whē he slew them they sought him, & turned them early vnto God.

They thought then that god was their succoure, & that the hye God was their redemer.

Neuertheleße they did but flatter him in their mouthes, and dyssembled with him in their tonges.

For their herte was not whole with him, nether continued they in this couenaunt.

But he was so mercyful, ỹ he forgaue their mysdoedes, and destroyed thē not.

Yee many a tyme turned he his wrath awai, and wold not suffre his whole displeasure to aryse.

For he consydered ỹ they were but f* flesh euen a mynd that passeth away and commeth not agayne.

O how oft haue they greued him in the wildernesse?

How many a tyme haue they prouoked hym in the deserte?

They turned backe, and tempted god & moued the holy one in Israel.

They thought not of his hand, in the day when he delyuered them from the hande of the enemye,

How he had wrought his miracles in Egypte, and his wondres in ỹ land of Zoan.

Howe he turned their waters in to bloude, so that they might not drincke of the ryuers.

How he sent lice amōg them, to eate thē vp, & frogges to destroy them.

How he gaue their frutes vnto the catyrpyller, and their labour vnto ỹ grashopper.

How he bett downe their vynеyardes wt hayle stones, and their molbery trees with the frost.

How he smote their catel wt hailestones, and their flockes with hote thōderbolces.

How he set vpon them ỹ furiousneße of his wrathe, anger and displeasure: with trouble and sending i of euel Angels.

When he made awaye to his fearful indignacīō, and spared not h* their soules frō death, yee & gaue their e* catell ouer to the pestylence.

When he smote all the fyrstbōrne in Egypt, the most principall and myghtyest in ỹ dwellynges of h* Ham.

But as for his owne people, he lead them forth like shepe, and carted them in ỹ wildernesse lyke a flocke.

He brought them out safely, ỹ they should not feare, & ouerwhelmed their enemyes with the see.

He carped them i* vnto the borders of his Sanctuary: euen into thys hil. which he purchased with his righthād

He dyd cast out the heathen before thē, caused their lande to be deuyded amonge them for an heritage, & made ỹ tribes of Israel to dwel in their tentes

For al this they tempted & displeased the most hye god, and kept not his couenaunt.

But turned their backes, and fell awaye lyke their forefathers, startynge aside lyke a broken bowe.

And so they greued him w their hyplaces, and prouoked hym with their ymages.

When god heard this, he was wroth, & toke sore displeasure at Israel.

So that he forsoke the Tabernacle

So the Lord[m] *awaked as one out

He smot his enemies in ỹ hinder par-tes, and put them to a perpetual cham.

He refused the tabernacle of Jo-

Neuertheleſſe, he chose the tribe of Juda, euen the[n] *hyll of Sion which he loued.

And there he buylded his temple on hye, & layed ỹ foūdacyon of it like the grouīd, ỹ it might perpetually endure.

He chose Dauid also his seruaunt, & toke him awaye frō the shepe foldes.

As he was folowynge the powes

A prayer of Moses the man of God

LOrde thou art our refuge from one generacio to another.

Before the mountains were brought forthe, or euer the earth & the worlde were made, thou arte God from euerlastyng and world without ende.

Thou turnest man to destruction, Agayne, thou saiest: come again ye chyldren of men a*.

For a thousand yeares in thy sight are but as yesterdaye that is past, and lyke as it were a nyght watch.

As sone as thou scatterest the, they are euen as a slepe, and fade awaye sodenly like the grasse.

In the morning it is grene and groweth vp, but in the euenyng it is cut downe and wythered.

For we consume awaye in thy displeasure, and are afrayed at thy wrath full indignacion.

Thou settest oure mysdedes before the, & oure secrete sinnes in the light of thy counten aunce.

For when thou art angry, al our dayes are gone, we bringe oure yeares to an ende, as it were a tale that is tolde.

b* The daies of our age are .iii. score yeares and ten: and thoughe men be so strong yt they come to .iiii. score yeares, yet is their strength then but labour & sorow: so soone passeth it away, and we are gone.

But who regardeth ypower of thy wrathe, thy fearfull and terrible displeasure?

O teach vs to nombre oure dayes, that we may applye oure hertes vnto wysdome.

Turne thy agayne (O Lord) at the last, and be gracious vnto thy seruauntes.

O satisfie vs with thy mercy, and that soone: so shall we reioyce and be glad al the dayes of oure lyfe.

Comforte vs againe, now after the tyme that thou haste plaged vs, and for the yeares wherin we haue suffred aduersyte.

Shewe thy seruauntes thy worcke, & their chyldren thy glory.

And the glorious maiesty of the lord oure god be vpō vs: O prospere thou the worcke of our handes vpon vs, O prospere thou our handy worcke.

THe Lorde is king, be the people neuer so vnpacient: he sytteth vp A on the Cherubins, be the earthe neuer so vnquiet.

The Lorde is greate in Sion, and hye aboue all people,

O let men geue thanckes vnto thy great & wonderful name, for it is holy

The kinges power loueth iudgmēt, thou prepareste equite, thou executeste iudgment & righteousnes in a* Jacob.

O magnifye the Lorde oure God, fal downe before his b* fote stole, for he is holy.

Moses and Aron amonge his prie B stes, and Samuel amonge such as cal vpon his name: these called vpon the lorde, and he heared them.

He spake vnto them out of the clou dy pyler, for they kept his testimonies. and the lawe that he gaue them.

Thou heardest them (O Lorde our God) thou forgauest them O god, and punishest theer owne inuentions.

O magnifie the lorde oure God, & worshippe him vpon his holy hyl, for the lorde our god is holy.

C He moueth to the prayse of God i the holy assēble.

A Psalme of prayse.

BE ioyfull in God (all yee A landes) serue the Lord w gladnes, come before hys presence with ioye.

Be ye sure that the lord he is God: It is he that hath made vs, and not we our selues: we are but hys people, and the shepe of his pasture.

O go your waie into his gates the with thanckesgeuing, and into his co urtes with prayse, be thanckefull vnto him, and speake good of his name.

For the lord is gracious, his mercy is euerlasting, and his truth endureth from generacion to generacion.

C The. ci. Psalme.

C He promiseth that he will execute the office of a godlye holy prynce, that is to say, that he will both iuge innocently, and also oppresse the euell and auaricious good.

A Psalme of Dauid.

I Mi longe chalbe of mercī and iug A gemente, ye vnto the, O Lorde, will I synge.

O lett mee haue vnderstandinge in the waye of Godlynes, vntill the time that thou come vnto me: and so shall I walcke in my house w an innocēt hert.

I wil take no wicked thing in hand I hate ỹ sinne of vnfayth fulnesse, t B shall not cleue vnto me.

a* Afroward herte shall departe fro me I will not knowe a wicked parson

Whoo so pryuely sclaundereth hys neyghboure, him wyl I destroye: who so hath a proude loke and an hy stoma ke, I maye not away with him.

Myne eyes shal loke for such as be faythfull in the lande, that they maye dwell wythe me: and who soo leadeth a godly lyke, shalbe my seruaunt.

There shall no deceatfull personne dwell in my house, he that telleth lyes shall not tary in my sighte.

I shall sone destroye all the vngod lye of the lande, that all wicked doers may be roted out of the citie of the lord.

The Notes

a* That is afrowarde hert which fayneth to seke the honoure of god, and yet in dede seke nothynge lesse, as he sayth Prouer. vi, b

The. cii. Psalme.

C A vehement bewayling of the misery of the holy people, in which they were almost oppressed w innumerable iniuries of the borderers and people that dwelt nere vnto them, at their returne from Babilon, when they came to repayre the temple & citie of Hierusalem.

C A prayer of the afflict, when he was in woo, and poured oute his complaīte before the Lorde.

I HEare my a* prayer, O Lorde, and A let my crienge come vnto the:

Hyde not thy face fro me in ỹ time of my trouble enclyne thine eares vnto me when I call, O heare me, and that ryght sone.

For my dayes are consumed awaye lyke smoke, and my boones are brente vp as it were a fyre brande.

My hert is smyten downe and wi thered lyke grasse, so that I forget to e te my b* breade,

For the voyce of my groninge, my bones will scarce cleue to my flesh

I am become lyke a pelican in the wyldernes, and lyke an hole in a bro ken wall.

I wake, and am euen as it were a sparow, sittinge alone vppon the house toppe.

Myne ennemies reuyle me all the B daye longe, they laugh me to scorne, and are swoorne together against me.

I eate asshes with my breade, and me gle my drinke with wepinge.

And that because of thine indigna cion & wrath, for thou hast take me vp and cast me awaye.

My dayes are gone lyke a shadowe and I am withered lyke grasse.

But thou, O lorde, endurest for euer and thy remembraunce thorow al gene rations.

Aryse therfore and haue mercye vpon Sion, for it is time to haue mercy vpō her, yea the time is come.

And why: thy seruaunts haue a loue C to her c* stones, and it pitieth them to see her in the dust.

The hethen shall fere thy name, O Lorde, and all the Kinges of the earth thy maiestie.

For the Lorde shall buildevp Sion & shall appeare in his glorye.

d* He turneth hym vnto the prayer of the poore destitute, and despiseth not their desyre.

This shalbe written for those that comeafter, that the people which shall de borne, maye prayse the lorde:

For he loketh downe from hys sanc tuary, out of heauen doth the lorde be holde the earth.

That he may heare the mourning of suche as be in captiuitie, and dely uer the chyldren of deathe.

That they may preach ỹ name of ỹ lord in Sion, and his worshippe at Je rusalem.

When the people are gathered to D gether and the kigdomes also to serue the lorde.

He hath brought downe my strength in my turney, and shortened my dayes.

Yet wil I say: O my God, take me not awaye in the myddest of myne age: as for thy yeares, they endure thorow out all

all generacions.

Thou Lord in the beginnyng, hast layed the foundacion of the earthe &, ỹ heaues are the worckes of thy handes.

*Hebre x.d * They shall perishe, but thou shalt endure: they al shall ware olde as doth a garment, and as a vesture shalt thou chaung them, & they shalbe chaunged.

But thou art the same, and thy yeares shall not fayle.

The childrẽ of thy seruauntes shal contynue, and their sede shall prospere in thy sight.

The Notes

a* True prayer is an earnest and affectuous cõmunication of the hert with God, and a diligent consyderacion of the thinges, that want in vs, conceryning the seakyng of his glory, and doyng his will: wt a burninge and feruent desire of the spyrite, that requyreth him to repayre and amende ỹ, which wanteth in vs. Psalme. v. & Prouer. xv. d. Euery godly wyth, is also, a good prayer.

b* Wredde for any wauer of fede.

c* Stones here signifye, the men vpon whome the Churche of God is edyfied and buylded, as in 1. Pet. ii. a. Indye assyninge stones are made a spyrituall houses, &c.

d* God is counted to loke or to turne him, to whatsoeuer he approueth and alloweth, and to what so euer he is pleased with. Jerem v a Thou. O Lord lokest only on faith & truth.

¶ The ciii. Psalme.

The prayseth ỹ goodnes of god toward mẽ, which both forgeueth them their sinnes and abundauntly destributeth vnto them worldly goodes.

Of Dauid.

A PRayse the Lorde, O my soule, and al that is within me prayse his holy name:

Prayse the Lorde O my soule, and forget not all his benefites.

Which forgeueth all thy synnes, & healeth al thine infirmities.

Which saueth thy life from destruccyon, & crowneth ỹ with the mercy, and louynge kyndnesse.

Which satisfieth the desyre with good thynges, makyng the ponge and lustye as an Aegle.

The Lord executeth ryghteousnes and iudgement, for al them that suffer wronge.

B He shewed his wayes vnto Moses & his workes, vnto ỹ childrẽ of Israel.

The Lorde is full of compassyon and mercy, a* longe sufferinge, and of greate goodnesse.

He will not alwaye be chyding, neyther will he kepe hys anger for euer.

He hath not dealt with vs after our sines, nether rewarded vs accordig to our wickednesse.

For loke howe hie the heauẽ is ic̃ parysen of the earthe, so greate is his mercy also toward them that fere him.

Loke how wyde ỹ east is frõ ỹ west, so farre hath he set our sines from vs.

Yee like as a father pitieth his owne chyldren, euen soo is the Lorde mercyful vnto them that feare him. C

For he knoweth wherof we bemade, he remembreth that we are but dust.

That a mã in his time is but as is grasse, & floryeth as a flour of ỹ feld.

For as sone as the wind goeth ouer it, it is gone, and ỹ place therof knoweth it no more.

But the mercyfull goodnesse of the Lorde endureth for euer and euer, vpõ them ỹ feare him, & his righteousnesse vppon their chylders childeren.

Such as kepe hys couenaunte ād thincke, vpon his commaundements to do them.

The Lorde hath prepared hys seate in heauen, and his kingdome ruleth ouer all.

O prayse the Lorde, ye aungels of his, ye that be mightie in strength fulfillynge his cõmaundements that men may heare ỹ voyce of his wordes.

O prayse the Lorde all, ye hys hostes, ye seruauntes of hys, that do his pleasure.

O speake good of the Lorde, all yee workes of his in euery place of dominiõ: prayse thou the Lord, O my soule.

The Notes.

a* The Lord is long suffering, which is more then patient: for he not onely suffereth but also differeth vengeaunce, desyryng the amendment of the sinner louing better to pardon and forgeue thẽ to punish Rom. ii. a Ether despisest thou the ryches of his goodnes, pacience & longe sufferaunce. &c

The. ciiii. Psalme.

The prayseth God for the creacyon of al things, & for his godly gouernaunce therof.

BRayse ỹ Lord O my soule: O lord my God, thou art become exceadig glorious, thou art clothed wt maiesty and honoure.

Thou deckest thy self with light as it were with a garment, thou spredest out the heauen lyke a curtayne.

Thou boltest it aboue with waters thou makest the cloudes thy charet, & goest vpon the wynges of the wynde.

*Thou makest thine angels spyrites, and thy ministers flammes of fyre.

Thou hast layed the earth vpon her foundacion, that it neuer moueth at eny tyme.

Thou couerest it with the depe like as with a garment, so that the waters stande aboue the hylles.

But at thy rebuke they flie, at ỹ voice of thy thonder they are afrayed.

(Then are the hylles sene aloft and the valleys beneth i their place which thou hast appointed for them.) b

Thou hast set thẽ their boundes, which they maye not passe, that they turne not agayne to couer the earth.

Thou causest the welles to sprynge vp among the valleis, & the waters to runne amonge the hylles.

That all beastes of the felde maye haue dryncke, & ỹ the wilde asses may quench their thyrste.

Aboue vpõ ỹ hylles haue the foules of the ayre their habitacion, and syng amonge the braunches.

Thou watrest the hylles from aboue, the earth is fylled with the frutes of thy worckes.

Thou bryngest forth grasse for ỹ catel and gren herbes for the seruyce of mẽ.

Thou bryngest fode out of ỹ earth: wine to make glad ỹ hert of man, otle to make hym a cheatful countenaunce and bred to strength mans herte. C

The trees* of the Lorde are full of sappe, euen ỹ trees of Libanus whiche he hath planted.

There make the byrdes their nestes, and the fyre hylles are a dwellyng for the storcke.

The hilles are a refuge for the wild goates, and so are the stony rockes for the conyes.

Thou hast appointed the Moone for certaine seasons, the Sunne knoweth hys goinge downe.

Thou makeste darcknesse, that it may be night, wherin al the beastes of the forest do moue.

Yee and the ponge lions which rore after their prat, and seke their meate at God.

But whẽ the sũne ariseth, thei get thẽ awaye together, and lye them downe in their dennes.

Then goeth man forth to his worcke, & to tyl his lande vntyll the euenynge.

*O Lord, how manifold are thy workes, rightwisely hast thou made thẽ al: yee ỹ earth is full of thy riches.

So is this greate & wyde see also, wherin are thinges creepinge innumerable, both small & greate beastes. D

There go the shippes ouer, and ther is that b Leuiathã, whome thou haste made, to take his pastime therin.

They wayte al vpõ the, that thou mayest geue them meate in due season.

When thou geuest it them, they gather it: when thou openest thyne hand, they are filled with good.

But when thou hidest thy face, they are sorouful: yf thou takest away their breth, they dye, & are turned agayne to their dust.

Agayne, when thou letest thy breth goo forthe, they are made, and so thou renuest the face of the earth.

The gloryous maiesty of the Lorde endurethe for euer, and the Lorde c reioyslethe in hys worckes.

The earthe trembleth at the loke of him, he doth but touch the hylles & they smoke.

I wyll synge vnto the lorde as longe as I lyue, I wyl prayse my god while I haue my beynge.

O that my wordes myght please hi, for my ioye is in the lorde.

As for sinners, they shalbe cõsumed out of the earth, and the vngodly shal come to an ende: but prayse thou ỹ lorde, O my soule. Prayse the euerlastig.

O ye sede of Abraham his seruaūt, ye chylderen of Jacob his chosen.

He is the Lorde our God, whose punischementes are thorowe oute all the worlde.

That he myght enfourme his princes after his wyl, and teach his senatours wisdome.

Jsrael also came into Egipte, and C Jacob was a straunger in the land of Ham.

Prayse the euerlastinge.

D Geue thankes vnto the Lord, for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer. v

Who can expresse the noble actes of the Lorde, or shewe forth al his prayse, Blessed are they that alwaye keape iudgement, and do righteousnes.

Remembre vs, O Lorde, according to the fauour that thou bearest vnto thy people: O visite vs with thy sauinge health.

That we myght see the pleasure of thy chosen, that we myght reioyce in ꝑ gladnes of thy people, and geue thankes with athyne enheritaunce.

We haue sinned with oure fathers, we haue done amisse, we haue delt wickedlye.

B Our fathers regarded not thy wonders in Egypte, they kepte not thy great goodnesse in remembraunce: but were disobedient at the see, euen at the reed sea.

Neuertheles he helped them for his names sake, that he might make his power to be knowen.

He rebuked the red see, and it was dryed vp: so he led them thorow the deepe as in the wylderneſſe.

Thus he saued them from the hand of the hater, and delyuered them from the hande of the enemye.

*As for those that troubled them the waters ouerwhelmed them, there was not one of them lefte.

Then beleued they in his worde, and sange prayse vnto him.

But within a while they forgat his workes, & wold not abyde his counsel.

A lust came vpon them in the wyldernesse, so that they tempted God in the deserte. C

Yet he gaue them their desyre, and sent them ynough at their wylles.

They angred Moses in the tentes, and Aron the sayncte of the lorde.

So the earth opened and swalowed vp Dathan, and couered the congregacion of Abraham.

The fyre was kynled in their company, the flame brent vp the vngodly.

*They made a calfe in Horeb, and worshipped the molten ymage.

Thus they turned their dglorye ito ꝑ similitud of a calfe, ꝑ eateth haye.

They forgat God their Sauiour. which had done so grete thinges i egpt. D

Wonderous workes in ꝑ lād of c Ham, & feareful thinges in ꝑ reed see.

So he sayde he wolde haue destroyed the, had not Moses his chosē stād before him in that gap: to turne away his wrathful indignacion, lest he shold destroye them.

Yee they thoughte scorne of that pleasaunt land, and gaue no credence vnto his worde.

But murmured in their tentes, and herkened not vnto ꝑ voice of the lord.

Thē lyft he vp his hand agaynst the to ouerthrow them in the wyldernesse.

To cast out their sede amōge the nacions, and to scatter them in the landes.

They ioyned the selues vnto Baal Peor, and ate the offeringes of ꝑ dede. E

Thus they prouocked him vnto anger w their owne inuencyons, and the plage was greate among them.

*Then stode vp Phinehes and executed iustice, and so the plage ceased.

And that was coūted vnto him for ryghteousnes, amonge all posterites for euermore.

They angryd hym also at the waters of stryfe, so that Moses was punyshed for their sakes.

Because they prouocked his spyrite & he told them playnely w his lippes:

Nether destroyed they the Heathē as the Lord cōmaunded them.

But were mengled among the Hea then, and lerned their wozckes.

In so moch ỹ they wozshipped their ymages, whyche turned to their owne decaye.

Yee they offred their sonnes & their daughters vnto deuels.

And shed ỹ innocẽt bloude of their sõnes & of their daughters, whom they offred vnto ỹ ymages of Canaan, so ỹ ỹ lande was defyled with bloude.

Thus were they stained with their owne wozckes, and wente a whozynge with their owne inuencyons.

Therfoze was the wzath of ỹ Lozd kindled against his people, in so moch ỹ he abhozed his owne inheritaunce;

And gaue them ouer into ỹ hãde of the Heathẽ, & they that hated thẽ, were lozdes ouer them.

Their enemyes oppzessed thẽ, and had them in subiectyon.

Many a tyme dyd he delyuer thẽ, but they pzouoked hi with their owne inuencyons, and were bzought downe foz their wickednesse.

Neuertheless when he sawe their aduersite, he herde their complaynt.

He thought vpon his couenaunt, & pytied them, accozdyng vnto the multitude of his mercyes.

Yee he made al those that had led them awaye captyue, to pytie them.

Delyuer vs, O Lozd our god, and gather vs from amonge the Heathen: ỹ we may geue thãckes to thy holy name, & make ouꝛ boast of thy pzayse.

Blessed be the Lozd God of Israel frõ euerlasting, & wozld without ende, & let all people say: Amen, Amẽ. Pzaise the euerlastynge.

Let them geue thanckes whom the lozde hath redemed, and delyuered frõ the hand of the enempe.

And gathere them out of the landes, from the East, from the west, from the Nozth and from the*a South.

They wente astraye in the wildernesse in an vntroden waye, and found no citie to dwel in.

Hongrie and thirsty, and their soule faynted in them.

So they*b cryed vnto the Lozd in their trouble, and he delyuered thẽ frõ their distresse.

He led them fozth by the right waye, that they might go to the cytie where they dwelt.

O that men wolde pzaise the goodnesse of the lozd, and the wonders that he doth foz the childzen of men.

Foz he satisfyed the emptye soule, & fylled the hongrie soule with good.

Because they were not obedient to ỹ cõmaundemẽtes of God, but lightly regaded ỹ councel of the most highest.

So they cryed vnto ỹ lozd i their trouble & he delyured thẽ out of thir distres.

He sent his wozd and healed them, and saued them from destruction.

O that men wolde pzayse the goodnesse of the lozd, and the wonders that he doth foz the childzen of men.

That they wolde offre vnto him ỹ sacrifice of thanckesgeuige, and telle out his wozckes with gladnes.

They that go downe to the see in shippes, and occupye their busynes in greate waters.

These men se the wozkes of ỹ lozd, and his wonders in the deape.

Foz at his wozd, the stozmy wind ariseth, and lifteth vp the waues therof.

They are carped vp to the heauen, and downe agayne to the deapth, their soule meltety awaye in the trouble.

They rele to and fro, they stackerlyk a dzonke mã, & are at their wyttes end.

So they crye vnto the Lozde in their trouble, and he delyuereth them out of their distresse.

He maketh the stozme to ceasse, so ỹ the waues are styl.

Then are they glad because they be at rest, and so he bzyngeth them vnto the hauen where they wold be.

For the mouth of the vngodly, yee and the mouth of the deceatful is opened vpon me, and speake against me with false tonges.

They compasse me about with wordes of hatred, and fight against me without a cause.

For the loue that I had vnto them, they take nowe my contrary parte, but I geue my selfe vnto prayer.

Thus they reward me euel for good, and hatred for my good wyl.

Set an vngodlye man to be ruler ouer hym, and let Satan stand at his right hande.

When sentence is geuen vpon him, let him be condẽpned, and let his prayer be turned in to synne.

*John. xvii Actu. i, d *Let his dayes be fewe, and his bishopricke let another take.

Let hys childrẽ be vagabunnes, & beg their bred: let them seke it, as they B that be destroyed.

Let the extorcioner consume al that he hath, and let straungers spoyle hys laboure.

Let there be no man to pitye, nor to haue compassion vpon hys fatherlesse children.

Let his ende be destruction, and in þ next generacion let his name be cleane put out.

Let the wyckednes of hys fathers be had in remembraunce in the syghte of the lorde, and let not the synne of his mother be done awaye.

He clothed him selfe with curlinge lyke as with a rayment: yee it went in to his bowels lyke water, and like oyle in to his bones.

Let it be vnto him as the clothes þ he hath vpon hym, and as the girdel þ he is gyrded with all.

Let it thus happen from the Lord, vnto myne enemyes, and to those that speake euel agaynst my soule.

But deale thou with me, O lorde God, according vnto thy name, for swete is thy mercy.

O delyuer me, for I am helpelesse & poore, & my hert is wounded within me.

I go hence lyke the shadowe that departeth, and am driuen awaye as þ D grashoppers.

My knees are weake, through *fasting, mi flesh is dried vp for wante of fatnes.

I am becom a rebuke vnto thẽ they loke vpon me and shake their heades.

Helpe me, O lord my God, oh saue me for thy mercyes sake.

That they maye knowe, how þ this is thy hand, and that thou hast don it.

Though they curse, yet blesse thou: and let thẽ be confounded, that rise vp against me, but let thy seruaũt reioice.

Let myne aduersaries be clothed with their owne shame, as with a clocke.

H

Thou art my portion, O Lorde, I am purpoſed to kepe thy lawe.

I make my humble peticiõ in thy preſence, with my whole herte, O be mercyfull vnto me, accordyng vnto thy word.

I call myne owne ways to remẽbrance, & turne my fete into thy teſtimonies.

I make haſte, and prolong no time, to kepe thy commaundementes.

The congregations of ỹ vngodly haue robbed me, but I forget not thy law

At mydnight ſtande I vp, to geue thãckes vnto the, for the iudgmentes of thy ryghtuouſneſſe.

I am a companyon of al them that feare the, & kepe thy cõmaundemẽtes.

* The earth, O Lorde, is ful of thy mercy. O teach me thy ſtatutes.

Teh.

I O lord, thou haſt dealt frẽdly wt thy ſeruaunt, accordyng vnto thy worde.

O learne me thy kyndneſſe, nourture & knowledge, for I beleue thy commaundementes.

Before I was troubled, I went wrõge, but now I kepe thy worde.

Thou art good & frendly, O teach me thy ſtatutes.

The proude ymagin lyes vpon me, but I kepe thy commaundemẽtes with my whole herte.

Their herte is as fat as brawne, but my delyte is in thy lawe.

It is good for me yͭ I haue bene in trouble, yͭ I maye learne thy ſtatutes.

The law of thy mouth is dearer vnto me, then thouſandes of golde and ſyluer.

Jod.

K * Thy hãdes haue made me & faſhioned me, O geue me vnderſtanding, yͭ I may learne thy commaundemẽtes.

They yͭ feare the, wil be glad when they ſe me, becauſe I put my truſt i thy worde.

I knowe, O lord, that thy iudgmẽtes are ryght, & that thou of very faithfulneſſe haſt cauſed me to be troubled.

O let thy merciful kindneſſe be my cõforte, accordynge to the promes that yͭ haſt made vnto thy ſeruaunt.

O let thy louing mercies come vnto me, that I may lyue, for thy law is my delyte.

Let the proude be cõfounded, which handle me ſo falſlye.

But let ſuch as feare the, and know thy teſtimonies, be turned vnto me.

O lett my herte be vndefyled in thy ſtatutes that I be not aſhamed.

Caph.

L My ſoule longeth for thy ſauinge health, for my truſt is in thy worde.

Myne eyes longe ſore for thy worde, ſaying: O whẽ wilt thou comfort me?

For I am become lyke a botell in yͤ ſmoke, yet do not I forget thi ſtatutes.

How many are the dayes of thy ſeruaunt? When wylt thou be auẽged of myne aduerſaryes?

The proude haue digged pyttes for me, which are not after thy lawe.

All thy cõmaundementes are true, they perſecut me falſli, O be thou my helpe.

They haue almoſt made an ende of me vpon earthe, but I forſake not thy commaundemẽtes.

O quicken me after thyloving kindnes, & ſo ſhall I kepe the teſtimonyes, of thy mouth.

Lamed.

O lord, thy word endureth for euer in heauen.

M The trueth also remaineth frõ one generacion to another: thou haſt layed yͤ foũdacion of the earth, and it abideth.

They continue this daye accordyng to thine ordinaunce, for al thinges ſerue the.

If my delyte were not in thy lawe, I ſhulde peryſhe in my trouble.

I wyll neuer forget thy commaundements, for with them yͭ quickeneſt me.

I am thyne, O thy helpe me, for I ſeke thy commaundementes.

The vngodly laye wayte for me to deſtroy me, but I cõſidre thi teſtimonies.

I ſe yͭ al thinges come to an ende, but thy cõmaundement is exceadig broade.

Mem.

O What loue haue I vnto thy lawe! al the day longe is my talkynge of it.

N Thou thorow thy commaundemẽt haſt made me wiſer thẽ mine enemies, for it is euer by me.

I haue more vnderſtãdig thẽ al myne teachers, for thy teſtimonies ar my ſtudi.

Yee I am wyſer then the aged, for I kepe thy commaundementes.

I refrayne my fete from euery euyl waye, that I maye kepe thy wordes.

I ſhrynke not from thy iudgementes, for thou teacheſt me.

O howe ſwete are thy wordes vnto my throte?

Yee more then hony vnto my mouthe.

Thorow thy cõmaũdemẽtes I get vnderſtãdig, therfor I hate al falſe waies.

O Nun.

Thy word is a * lanterne vnto my fete and a lyght vnto my pathes.

I haue ſworne and am ſteadfaſtly purpoſed, to kepe the iudgementes of thy righteouſnes.

I am troubled aboue meaſur, quicken me, O Lorde, accordinge vnto thy worde.

Let the free wyll offeringes of my mouth pleaſe the, O Lorde, and teach me thy iudgementes.

* My ſoule is alway in my hand, yet do not I forget thy lawe.

The vngodlye haue layede a ſnare for me, but yet I warue not I from thy commaundementes.

Thy teſtimonies haue I claymed as myne herritage for euer: and whye they are the very ioye of my herte.

I applye myne herte to fulfyll thy ſtatutes alwaye, euen vnto the ende.

Samech.

P I hate the vngodly, but thy lawe do I loue.

Thou arte my defence and ſhylde, my truſt is in thy worde.

Awaye frõ me, ye wicked, I wyl kepe the commaundementes of my God.

O ſtablyſh me accordyng vnto thy worde, that I may lyue and let me not be diſapointed of my hope.

Holde thou me vp, and I ſhalbe ſafe: yee I ſhall euer be talkinge of thy ſtatutes.

Thou treadeſt downe al them that depart from thy ſtatutes, for they ymagyn but diſceate.

Thou putteſt awaye al the vngodlye of the earth lyke droſſe, therfor I loue thy teſtimonies.

My fleſh trembleth for feare of the, and I am afrayd of thy iudgementes.

Ain.

Q I deale with the thing that is lawful and righte, O geue me not ouer vnto myne oppreſſours.

Be thou ſuertye for thy ſeruaunte, to do hym good, that the proude doo me no wronge.

Myne eyes are waſted awaye with lokyng for thy health, and for the worde of thy righteouſnes.

O deale with thy ſeruaunte accordyng vnto thy louing mercy, and teache me thy ſtatutes.

I am thy ſeruaunt, O graunte mee vnderſtandinge, that I maye knowe thy teſtimonyes.

It is time for the (O Lorde) to laye to thyne hand, for they haue deſtroyed thy lawe.

For I loue thy commaundements aboue gold and precious ſtone.

Ther fore holde I ſtreyght all the commaundementes, and all falſe wayes I vtterly abhorre.

Phe.

R Thy teſtimonies are wounderfull, therfore doth my ſoule kepe them.

When thy worde goeth forth, it geueth lyght and vnderſtandynge, euen vnto babes.

I open my mouth and drawe in my breth, for I deſyre thy commaundemẽtes.

O loke thou vpon me, and be merciful as thou vſeſt to do vnto thoſe yͭ loue thy name.

Order my goinges after thy worde that no wickednes raygne in me.

O delyuer me from thy wrongeous dealynges of menne, and ſo ſhall I kepe thy commaundements.

Shew the lyght of thy countenaunce vnto thy ſeruaunt and lerne me thy ſtatutes.

Myne eyes guiſhe out with water becauſe men kepe not thy lawe.

Zade

S Righteous arte thou, O Lorde, and true is thy iudgemente.

Thy teſtimonies that thou haſt commaunded are exceading e, righteouſe and true.

My zele hath euen conſumed me, becauſe myne enemyes haue forgotten thy wordes.

Thy worde is tryed to the vttermoaſt, and thy ſeruaunte loueth it.

I am ſmall and of noo reputacion yet do not I forgett thy commaundmentes.

Thy righteouſnes is an euerlaſtinge righteouſnes, and thy law is true.

Trouble and heuyneſſe haue taken holde vpon me, yet is my delyght in thy commaundementes.

The righteouſnes of thy teſtimonyes is euerlaſtinge, O graũte mee vnderſtan derstandinge, and I shall lyue.

Koph.

C I call with my whole herte, heare me, O Lorde, I wyll kepe thy statutes.

Yee euen vpon the do I call, helpe me and I shal kepe thy testimonies.

Early in the mornynge do I ✱crye vnto the, for in thy woorde is my trust

Myne eyes preuente the night watches, that I might bee occupyed in thy woordes.

Heare my voyce, O Lord, accordig vnto thy louinge kindnes, quicken me according as thou art wonte.

They drawe nye that of malice persecute me, and are farre from thy lawe.

Be thou nye at hand also, O Lord, for thy promises are faythfull.

As concerninge thy testimonies, I haue knowen eversins the beginning, that thou hast grounded them for euer.

Res.

O consydre myne aduersitie, and delyuer me, for I do not forgett thy lawe.

Maynteine thou my cause and defende me, quicken me accordinge vnto thi woorde.

Health is farre from the vngodlye for they regarde not thy statutes.

Greate is thy mercye, O Lord, quicken me as thou art wonte.

Many there are that trouble me, & persecute me, yet do not I swarue from thy testimonyes.

It greueth me, when I see, that the transgressours kepe not thy lawe.

Consedre, O Lorde, how I loue the commaundementes, O quicken mee w thy louinge kindnesse.

Thy worde is true from euerlastinge, al the iudgementes of thy righteousnes endure for euer more.

Sin.

h✱ The Prynces persecute me with outcause, but my herte standeth in awe X of thy woordes.

I am as glad of thy worde, as one that findeth great spoyles.

As for lyes, I hate and abhore the, but thy lawe do I loue.

i✱Seuen times a day do I prayse the because of thy righteous iugmentes.

Greate is the peace that they haue whiche loue the lawe, and they are not offended at it.

Lorde I loke for thy sauyng helth, and do after thy commaundementes.

My soule kepeth thy testymonies, and loueth them exceadyngly.

I kepe thy commaundementes and testymonyes, for all my wayes are before the:

Thau.

Let my complaynt come before the, O Lorde, geue me vnderstanding, according vnto thy worde.

Oh let my supplicacyon come before the, deliuer me according to thy promes.

My lippes shal speake of thy prayse, seynge thou hast taught me thy statutes.

Yee my tonge shal syng of thy word, for al thy commaundementes are right.

Let thyne hande helpe me, for I haue chosen thy commaundementes.

I long for thy sauinge health, O lord, and in thy lawe is my delyte.

Oh let my soule lyue and prayse the, that thy iudgmentes may helpe me.

I go astray, like a shep that is lost: Oh seke thy seruaunt, for I do not forget thy commaundements.

By hearynge, the wyse man shall come bymore wysdom: and by exercise he shalbe more apt to vnderstād wysdom & the interpretacion therof. The wordes of the wyse, and the darcke sayings of the same. The feare of ỹ Lord is ỹ beginnynge of wysdome. But b* fooles dispyse wysdome & instruction. My sōne, heare thy fathers doctrine, & forsake not the lawe of the mother: for that shall bynge c* grace vnto thy heade, & shalbe acheme about thy necke. My sonne, consent not vnto sinners, yf they entyse the, & say: come with vs, let vs* ley waite for blode, and lurcke pryuely for the innocēt without a cause: let vs swalow thē vp lyke the hell, let vs deuoure thē quicke & whole as those that go downe into ỹ pyt. So shall we fynde all maner of costely ryches, & fyll oure houses with spoyles. Cast in thy lot among vs, we shall haue all one purse.

My sonne, walcke not thou wythe thē, refraine thy foote from their waies. For their fete rūne to euel, & are hastie to shede bloude. But e* in vaine is the net layed forth before the byrdes eyes. Wisdome crieth without, & putteth forth her voyce in the stretes. She calleth before the congregacion in the open gates, & sheweth her wordes thorow the cytye sayinge: O ye chyldren how longe wyll ye loue chyldyshnesse how longe wyll the f* scorners delite in scorninge, and the vnwyse be enemyes vnto knowledge. O turne you vnto my correccion: lo, I wyll expresse my minde vnto you, make you vnder stand my wordes* Seing then that I haue called, & ye refused it: I haue stretched out my hand, & no man regarded it, but al my councels haue ye despysed and set my correccios at naught. Ther fore shall I also laugh in your destruction, & mocke you, when the thing that ye feare commeth vpon you: euen whē the thinge that ye be afrayed of, falleth in sodenly lyke a storme, & our mysery lyke a tempest: yee whē trouble & heuynesse commeth vpon you. Then shall they cal vpon me, but I will not heare they shall seke me early, but they shall not finde me: And ỹbecause they hated knowledg, & receaued not the feare of ỹ lorde but abhorred my Councell, and despised my correccon. Therfore shall they eate ỹ frutes of their owne waye, & be fylled wt their owne coūcels. For ỹ turnig awaye of ỹ vnwise shal slay thē & ỹ prosperite of foles shalbe their owne destrucciō. But who so herkeneth vnto me, shal dwel safely, & haue ynough wout any feare of euyll.

For yf thou cryest after wysdome, & callest for knowledge: yf thou seketh after her as after money, & dyggest for her as for a treasure: then shalte thou vnderstande the feare of the Lorde, and fynde the knowledge of God. For it is the Lorde ỹ geueth wysdome, oute of his mouth cōmeth knowledge & vnderstandynge.

B He preserueth the welfare of the righteous, and defendeth the ỹ walke innocẽtly: he kepeth thẽ in the right path, and preserueth the waye of hys sayntes.

Then shalt thou vnderstande righteousnes, iudgement and equitte, ye and euery good pathe. If wisdom entre into thyne hert, & thy soule delyte in knowledge, then shall counsell preserue ỹ and vnderstanding shall kepe ỹ. That thou mayst be delyuered from the euell waye, and from the man that speaketh frowarde thynges. That thou mayest be delyured also from the straunge woman, and from her that is not thyn owne: which geueth swet wordes, & forsaketh the husbande of her youthe, and forgetteth the couenaunte of her God. D For her house is enclyned vnto death, and her pathes vnto hell. All they that go vnto her, come not agayne, nether take they holde of the way of lyfe. That thou mayest walcke in the good waye and kepe the pathes of the righteous. The.iii.Chapter.

A My Sonne, forgette not my lawe, but let thine herte kepe my commaundements. For they shal prolonge the dayes and yeares of thy lyfe, & bringe the peace. Let mercy and faythfulnes neuer go from thee: bynde them about thy necke, and wryte thẽ in ỹ tables of thyne hert. So shalt ỹ fynde fauour & good vnderstandyng in the syghte of God and men. Put thy trust in the Lord with all thyne hert, & leane not vnto thyne owne vnderstandyng. In all thy ways haue respect vn- B to hym, & he shall ordre thy goynges. Be not wyse in thyne owne conceate, but feare the Lorde, and departe from euell: so shall a* thy nauell be whole, & thy bones stronge.

Honour the Lord w thy substaunce, and with the firstlinges of all thyn encrease: so shal thy barnes be fylled w plenteousnes, and thy presses shall flow we ouer with swet wyne. My sonne, despyse not the chastenynge of the Lord neyther fainte when thou art rebuked of hym. * For whome the Lorde loueth hym he chasteneth: and yet delyteth i him, euen as a father in hys awn sonne. Well is him that findeth wisdo and obteyneth vnderstandig for ỹ gettinge of it is better then anye marchaundyse of syluer, and the profyt of it is better then golde. Wysdome is more worth then precious stones, and all the thinges that thou canst delyre, are not to be compared vnto her. She is a tree of lyfe to them that laye holde vpõ her, and blessed are they that kepe her fast.

Wyth wisdome hath the Lorde layd the foundacio of the earth, and thorow vnderstandinge hath he stablished the heauens. Thorowe his wisdomme the deapthes breake vp, & the cloudes drope downe of the dew. My sonne, let not these thynges departe from thyne eyes, but kepe my lawes and my counsel: so shall it be lyfe vnto thy soule, and grace vnto thy mouthe. Then shalt thou walke safely in thy waye, & thy fote shall not stomble. If thou sleapest, thou shalt not be afrayd but shalt take thy rest and slepe swetlye. Thou needest not to be afrayde of anye sodeyne feare, neyther for the violente pusshing in of the vngodly, when it cõmeth For the Lorde shall besege the, and kepe thy fot that thou be not take. Folow not a wycked man, and chose none of his wayes: for the lorde abhorreth the froward, but his secrete is amonge the righteous. The curse of the Lorde is in the house of the vngodlye, but he blesseth ỹ dwellynges of ỹ righteous. As for the scorneful, he shal laugh thẽ to scorne, but he shall geue grace vnto the lowlye. Take fast hold of doctrin, let her not go: kepe her for she is thy lyfe. Come not in the C path of the vngodly, and walke not in the waye of the wycked. Eschue it, & go not therin: departe a syde, and passe ouer by it: For they can not slepe, except they haue fyrst done some mischefe: nether take they any rest, except they haue fyrst done some harme. For they eate the bred of wyckednesse, and dryncke the wyne of robbery: The path of the righteous shyneth as the lyghte, and is euer brighter and brighter vnto the perfect day. But the way of ỹ vngodly is as ỹ darckns, wherin D men fal, or they be a warre. My sonne, marcke my wordes, & encline thyne eare vnto my sayinges. Let them not departe from thyne eyes, kepe them euen in the myddest of thyne herte. For they are lyfe vnto all those that fynde them, & health vnto all their bodyes. of a righteous man is a wel of lyfe, but the mouthe of the vngodlye is full shame, and presumptuous.
Euel wil stereth vp strife, * but loue C couereth the multitude of sinnes. In the lippes of him that hath vnderstan ding a man shal fynde wisdome, but ỹ rodde belongeth to the backe of the fo lyshe. Wyse mē layē vp knowledg but ỹ mouth of ỹ folysh, is nye destruccyō.
The ryche mannes goodes are hys stronge holde, but pouertie oppresseth the poore.
The righteouse laboureth to do good but the vngodly vseth his encrease vn to synne. To take hede vnto ỹ chas tening of nurtoure, is the waye of lyfe but he that refuseth the to be reformed goeth wronge. Dissembling lipps kepe hatred secretly, & he that speaketh any sclaunder, is a foole. Where mo ch babbling is, there must nedes be of fence: he that refrayneth his lippes is wysest of al. An innocēt tōg is a great tresur, but ỹ hert of the vngodlye is no thyng worth. The lippes of ỹ righ tuous fede a whole multitude, but fo les shal dye in theyr owne foly. The blessynge of the Lord maketh rich but as for careful trauaile, it doth nothyng therto. A fole doth wickedly ma-keth but a spoyle of it: neuertheles it is wysdom for a man to beware.
The thinge that the vngodly is afrayed of, shall come vpon them: but rightuous shal haue their desyre.
The vngodly is lyke a tēpest that seth ouer, & is no more sene, but the ri tuous remayneth sure for euer. As vi-ger is to the tethe, and as smoke is vn to the eyes, euē so is a slouthfyl person to thē ỹ sende him forth. The feare of ỹ Lord maketh a long lyfe, but the ye res of the vngodly shalbe shortened.
The pacīēt abydyng of the righteous shalbe turned to gladnes, but the hope of the vngodly shal perysh. The way of the lord geueth courag vnto ỹ godly but it is a feare for wicked doers. The righteous shal neuer be ouerthrowen but the vngodly shal not remayne in the land. The mouth of ỹ iuste wil be talkynge of wisdome, but the tonge of the frowarde shal perish. The lippes of the ryghtuous are occupyed in acep table thynges, but the mouth of the un godly taketh them to the worst.

The. xi. Chapter

A False balaunce is an abhomi nacyon vnto ỹ lord, but a true weight pleaseth him. Where pryde is, there is shame also & confusiō:
but wher as is lowlines, ther is wisdō

The innocent dealinge of the iust shal lede them, but the vnfaythfulnesse of ỹ despysers shalbe their owne destruction. *Riches helpe not in the daye of vengeaunce, but rightuousnesse deliuereth from death. The rightuousnes of the innocẽt ordreth his waye, but the vngodly shall fall in his owne wickednesse. The tyghtuousnesse of the iust shall deliuer them, but the despysers shalbe taken in their owne vngodlynesse. *When an vngodly man dyeth, hys hope is gone, the confydence of ryches shal perish. The righteous shalbe deliuered out of trouble, & the vngodly shal come in his steade. Therow the mouthe of the dessembler is his neyghbour destroyed, but thorow knowledge shall the iuste be deliuered. When it goeth well with the ryghtuous, the cyty is merye: and when the vngodly perysh, there is gladnesse. When the iust are in weale they florishe prosperously: but when the vngodly haue the rule, it decayeth. A man bringeth vp a slaunder of his neyghbour, but a whyse man wyll kepe it secret. A dessemblyng person wyll vncouer preuethinges, but he that is of a faythful hert, wyll kepe councel.

Where no good councell is there the people decaye: but where as many are that geue councell, there is wealth.

He that is suertye for a straunger, hurteth him selfe: but he ỹ medleth not wt suretyshyppe, is sure. A gracyous woman maintaineth honesty, as for ỹmighty, they mayntaine riches. He ỹ hath a gentle lyberal stomack is mercyfull: but who so hurteth his neighbour, is a tirant. The labour of ỹ vngodly prosperyth not, but he ỹ soweth rightuousnes, shal receaue a sure rewarde. Like as rightuousnes bringeth lyfe: euen so to cleue vnto euel, bringeth death.

The Lorde abhorreth the a fayned herte, but he hathe pleasure in them ỹ are vndefyled. It shal not helpe ỹ wicked, though they lay al their hãds together, but ỹ sede of ỹ rightuous shalbe preserued. A faire womã wtout discretion, is like a rig of gold in a swines snoute. The iust labour for peace, ertã quillite, but ỹ vngodly for disquietnes.

Some man geueth out his goodes, and is the richer, but the nygarde (hauyng ynough) wyl departe frõ nothing, and yet is euer in pouertie. He that is liberall in geuyng, shall haue plentye: & he that watereth, shalbe watered also him selfe. Who so hoordeth vp hys corne, shalbe cursed among the people: but blessinge shall lyght vpon his head ỹ selleth it. He that laboreth for honestie kyndeth hys desyre: but who so leketh after mischef, it shal happen vnto hym. He that trusteth in his riches, shall haue a fall, but the rightous shal florish as the greane leafe.

Who so maketh disquietnes in his owne house, he shall haue wynd for hys heritage, and the foole shalbe seruaunt to the wyse. The frut of the rightuous is as the tre of lyfe, a wyse mã also winneth mens soules. * If the rightuous be recompensed vpon erth, how much more then the vngodly and the synner?

The .xii. Chapter

Who so loueth wysdom, will be content to be reformed: but he that hateth to be reproued, is a foole. A good man is acceptable vntoo ỹ Lorde, but the wicked wyll he condemne. A man can not endure in vngodlynes, but the rote of the rightuous shal not be moued. A stedfaste woman, is a *crowne vnto her husbande: but she ỹ behaueth her selfe vnhonestlye is a corruptyon in hys boones. The thoughtes of the rightuous are righte, but the ymagination of the vngodly are deceatefull. The talking of the vngodly is howe they maye laye wayte for bloud, but the mouthe of the ryghtuous wyll deliuer them. Ouer thou canst turne the about, ỹ vngodly shalbe ouerthrowen but the house of ỹ rightuous shal stande. A man shall be commended for hys wysdõ, but a fole shalbe despysed. A symple man which laboureth and wanteth breade. A rightuous man regardeth the lyf of hys catel, but the vngodly haue cruell hertes. He ỹ tylleth his lãd shal haue pleteous nes nesse of bread: but he ỹ foloweth ydylnes, is a very foole.

The desyre of the vngodly hunteth after mischefe, but the rote of the rightuous bringeth forth frute. The wycked falleth in to ỹ snare thorow themalyce of his owne mouth, but ỹ iust shall escape out of parel. Euery man shal enioye good, a cordyng to the innocencye of his mouth, and after the worckes of his handes shal he be rewarded. Loke what a *foole taketh in hand, he thynketh it wel done: but he that is wyse, wyl be councelled. A foole vttereth hys wrath in al the haste, but a discrete mã forgeueth wronge.

A iust man wyl tel the truth, and shew the thinge that is right: but false wytnesse disceaueth. A sclaunderous person pricketh like a swerd, but a wyse mans tonge is wholsome. A true mouth is euer constant, but a dessemblinge tonge is sone chaunged. They ỹ imagyn euel in their minde, wyll disceaue: but ỹ counsellers of peace shal haue ioye folowig them. There shal no myshappe happen vnto the iust, but the vngodly shal be filled wt misery. The Lord abhorreth disceatful lyppes, but they that labour for trueth please him. He ỹ hath vnderstanding can hide hys wysdom, but an vndiscrete hert telleth out his foolishnesse. A dilygent hand shal beare rule, but the idle shalbe vnder tribute. Heuines discorageth ỹ hert of mã, but a good word maketh it glad agayne. The rightuous is liberal vnto his neighbour, but the waye of the vngodlye wyl disceaue them selues. A dysceatful man shal fynde no vauntage, but he ỹ is conten with that he hath is more worthe then golde. In ỹ way of rightuousnes, ther is life, as for any other way it is ỹ path vntodeate.

The xiii. Chapter

A Wyse sonne wil receaue his fathers warninge, but he ỹ is *scorneful, wyl not heare when he is reproued. A good man shal enioye the frut of his mouth, but he that hath a froward mynde shalbe spoyled. He ỹ kepeth hys mouth, kepeth his lyfe: but whoo so ỹ speaketh vnaduised, fyndeth harme. The slougarde wolde fayne haue, & can not get his desyre: but ỹ soule of the dylygẽt shal haue plenty. A righteous man abhorreth lyes but the vngodly shameth both other ãd him selfe. Righteousnes kepeth the innocente in ỹ way, but vngodlynes shal ouerthrowe the synner.

Some men are ryche, though they haue nothyng: agayne som men are poore, hauing great riches. Wyth goodes euery man delyuereth hys lyfe, and the poore wyl not be reproued. The lyght of the ryghtuous maketh ioyful, but ỹ candle of the vngodly shal be put out. Amonge the proud there is euer stryfe, but among those that do al thynges wt aduisement there is wisdome. Hastely gotten goodes are sone spente, but they that be gethered together with the hãd, shall encrease. Long tarying for a thig that is dysered, greaueth the herte: but when the desyre cometh it is a tre of lyfe. Who so despyseth the word, destroyeth hym selfe: but he that feareth the cõmaundment shall haue peace. The law is a well of lyfe vntoo the wyse, that he maye kepe him from the snares of death. Good vnderstandinge geueth fauour but harde is the waye of the despysers. A wyse man doth all thynges with discretion, but a fole wyl declare hys foly. An vngodly messenger bryngeth mischeafe, but a faythfull ambassadour, is wholsom: he that thynketh scorne to be reformed: cometh to pouertye and shame but who so receaueth correction, shal com to honor. Whe a desyr is brought to passe it deliteth ỹ soule: but foles abhorre hym ỹ eschueth euell. He ỹ goeth in ỹ company of wyse men, shalbe wise but who so is a cõpanion of foles, shal be hurte. Mischefe foloweth vpon synners, but ỹ rightous shal haue a good rewarde. Which theyr children childre shall haue in possession, for the ryches of the synners is layd vp for the iuste.

There is plenteousnes of fode in ỹ feeldes of the poore, and shall bee increased creased out of measure. He that spareth the rodde, hateth his sonne: but who so loueth hym, holdeth hym euer in nourture. The rightuous eateth, and is satisfyed, but the bely of the vngodly hath neuer ynough.

The Notes.

a ✱ Of this is spoke in the ynyenth Chapter. b

The. xiiij. Chapter.

A Wyse woman vpholdethe her house, ut a folish wyfe plucketh it downe whoo so feareth the lord, walketh in the right path: & regardeth not him that abhorreth the wayes of ỹ Lorde. In the mouth of the folysh is ỹ boastinge of Lordshyppe, but the lyppes of the wyse wyll be ware of suche. Where no a ✱ oxen are, there the crybbe is emptie: but wheare the oxen laboure there is moch frute. A faythfull wytnesse wyll not dissemble, but a falsse recorde wyll make a lye. A scornefull body seketh wysdome, and fyndeth it not: but knoweledg is easye to come by, vnto hym that wyl vnderstand. Se that thou meddle not with a foole, and doo as though thou haddeste no knoweledge. The wysdom of hym that hath vnderstanding is, to take heade vnto hys waye, but the folysshnes of the vnwyse deceaueth. Foles make but a spoorte of synne, but ther is fauorable loue amõg the rightuous. The herte of hym that hath vnderstading wyll nether dyspayre for any sorowe, nor be to presumptuous for anye soden ioye.

B The houses of the vngodly shall be ouerthrowne, but the tabernacles of ỹ rychtuous shall so florysh. There is a b ✱ waye whych some men thynke to bee rycht, but the ende therof leadeth vnto death. The herte is sorowfull euen in laughter, & the ende of mirth is heynesse. An vnfaythfull personne shal be fylled with hys owne wayes, but a good man wyll beware of suche. An ignorant body beleueth all thynges but who so hath vnderstãdinge, loketh well to hys goynges. A wyse man feareth, and departeth from euell: but a fole goeth on presumptuously. An vnpatient man dealeth folyshlye, but he ỹ is well aduised, doth otherwayes. The ignorante haue folysshnes in possession, but the wyse are crowned w̃ knowledge. The euel shal bowe them selues before the good, and the vngodly shall wayte at the doores of the rightuous. The poore is hated euẽ of his owne neybours, but the rych hath many frendes.

C Who so despyseth his neyghboure, doth amis: but blessed is he ỹ hath pytie of the poore. They ỹ imagin wickednes, shall be disapeinted: but they that muse vppon good thynges, vnto such shal happen mercy and faythfulnesse. Dilygent labour bringeth ryches, but wher many vayne woordes are, truly ther is scarcenesse. Ryches are and ornamente vnto the wyse, but ỹ ignorauntce of ỹ fooles is very folysshnes. A faythfull witnes deliuereth soules, but a lyer deceaueth them. The feare of the Lorde is a strong holde, for vnto hys he wyll be a sure defence. The feare of the Lord is a wel of lyfe, to auoyde the snarys of deth. The increase & prosperitie of ỹ cõmens is ỹ kynges honour, but ỹ decay of the people is ỹ confusyon of the prince. Pacience is a token of wysdom, but wyath and hastie displeasure is a tokẽ of folysshnes. A mery hert is the lyfe of the body, but raueour consumeth awai the bones. He ỹ doth a poore mã wrong, blasphemeth hys maker: but who so hath pytie of the poore, doth honoure vnto God. The vngodly is afrayd of euery parel, but ỹ rightuous hath a good hope euen in deathe. Wysdome resteth in the herte of hym that hath vnderstãding, and he wyll teache them that are vnlerned. Righteousnes setteth vp the people, but wickednes bryngethe folke to destruction. A discreate seruant, is a pleasur vnto the kynge, but one that is honest prouoketh hym vnto wrathe.

¶ The. xv. Chapter.

A Softe answer putteth downe displeasur, but frowarde wordes prouoke vnto anger. A wys tong commendeth knoweledge, a foolysh mouth blabbeth out nothynge but folysshnes.

The

The eyes of the Lorde loke one euery place, both vpõ the good and badd.

A wholsome tonge is a tree of lyfe, but he that abuseth it, hathe a broken minde. A foole despiseth his fathers correction, but he that taketh hede whãe he is reproued shall haue the moare vnderstandynge.

In the house of the rightuous are greate ryches, but in ỹ increase of ỹ vngodly ther is mysorde. A wisemouth poureth oute knoweledge, but the herte of the folysh doth not so. The lorde abhorreth the sacrifyce of the vngodly but the prayer of the ryghtuous is acceptable vnto him. The waye of the vngodly is sã abhomination vnto ỹ lord, but who so folowethe rightuousnes, him he loueth. He that forsaketh ỹ right streite, shalbe sore punyshed: and who so hatetheorrection, falleth into death. Thehel wher paine is knowne vnto the Lord, how moch more then the hertes of men? A scornful bodye loueth not one that rebuketh hym, nether wyll he come amonge the wise. A mery herte maketh a chearfull countenauuce, but an vnquyet mynde maketh it heuy. A wyse hart wyll seke after knowledge, but the mouthe of fooles medleth with foolysshnesse. All the dayes of the poore are myserable, but a quyete herte, is as a continuall feast. Better is a lytle w̃ the feare of the lorde then greate treasure, for they are not witthoute sorowe. Better is a messe of potage w̃ loue, then a fat ore with euel wyll.

C An angry man stereth vp strife, but he ỹ is patient stylleth discorde. The waye of ỹ slouthfull is ful of thornes, but ỹ strete of ỹ rightuous is wel cleansed. A wyse sonne maketh a glad father, but an vndiscrete body shameth his mother. A fole reioyseth in foolishe thinges, but a wyse man loketh well to his owne goinges. Vnadvysed thoughtes shal come to naught, but where as men are that can geue counsel, there is stedfastnesse. O how ioyfull a thynge is it, a man to geue a conuenient answere? O howe pleasaunt is a worde spoken in due season. The waye of lyfe leadethe vnto heauen, that a man shulde be ware of hell beneth.

The Lorde wyl breake downe ỹ house of ỹ proude, but he shal make fast ỹ borders of ỹ widdow. The lord abhorreth the ymaginacõs of ỹ wicked, but pure wordes are pleasaũt vnto hi. D

The couetous mã roteth vp his owne house, but who so hateth rewards, shal liue. A rightuous mã museth in his minde how to do good, but the mynde of ỹ vngodly ymagineth, how he may do harme. The lorde is farre from the vngodly, but he heareth ỹ prayer of ỹ rightuous. Lyke as the clearnesse of the eyes reioyseth ỹ herte, so dothe a good name fede the bones. The eare that herkneth vnto wholsome warnig, and enclineth therto, shal dwel among the wise. He that refuseth to be rebous med, despyseth his owne soule: but he that submitteth him selfe to correccyon, is wyse.

¶ The. xvi. Capter.

A THe feare of the Lorde is ỹ ryght scyence of wysdome, & lowlynes goeth before honour. ✱ a A man may well purpose a thynge in hys herte, but the answere of the tonge cõmeth of the Lorde. A mã thinketh e al his wayes to be cleane, but it is the lord ỹ fashioneth the myndes. Cõmytte thy workes vnto ỹ Lorde, and loke what thou deuyseste, it shall prospere. The lorde doth al thynges for his owne sake, yee & when he kepeth ỹ vngodly for the daie of wrath. The lorde abhorreth all presumptuous & proude hertes, ther may nether stregth ner power escape. With louynge mercy, & faithfulnesse synnes be forgeuen, and who so feareth the Lorde eschueth euell. Whe a mãs wayes please the lorde, he maketh hys verye enemyes to be hys frendes. Better is it to haue a lytle thynge w̃ rightuous, then great rentes wrõgously gotte. A mãs deuyseth away in his hert, but it is ỹ lord ỹ ordereth hys goinges. When the prophecy is in ỹ lippes of the king, his mouth shalnot go wrong in iudgment. B

A true measure & a true balaunce are

ar the Lozdes, he maketh al weyghtes.
A It is a greate abhominacyō when kinges are wicked, foz a kinges seate shulde beholden vp w̄ rightuousnesse.
Ryghtuous lyppes are pleasaunte vnto kynges, and they loue hym ꝑ speaketh ꝑ trueth. The kynges displeasure is a messaūger of death, but a wise man will pacifye hym. The cherefull countenaunce of ꝑ kyng is lyke, & his louynge fauoure is as ꝑ euenyng dewe. To haue wisdome in possessiō is better then golde, and to get vnderstandinge, is moze worth then syluer.
The path of the reghtuous eschueth euel, & who so loketh wel to his wates, kepeth his owne soule. Presumptuousnes goeth before destruccīō, and after a proude stomake there foloweth a fall. Better is it to be of humble mynde with the lowly, then to deuyde the spoyles w̄ the proude. He that handleth a matter wysely, optey nethe good: & blessed is he, ꝑ putteth his trust in the Lozde. Who so hath a wyse vnderstandynge, is called to councel: but he ꝑ can speake fayre getteth moze ryches. Understandyng is a wel of lyfe
C vnto him that hath it, as foz the chastening of foles, it is but folyshnes. The hert of the wise enfourmeth his mouth, & amendeth the doctrine in his lyppes. Fayre wozdes are an hony combe, a re freshyng of the mynde, & health of the bones. *There is awaye ꝑ men thinke to be right, but the ende therof leadeth vnto death. A troublous soule disquieteth her selfe, foz her owne mouth hath brought her therto. An vngodly person ſterreth vp euel, and in his lips he is as an whote burnīg fyre:
A frowarde body causeth stryfe, & he ꝑ is a blabbe of his tonge, maketh deuysyon amounge Princes. A wycked man begileth his neighbour, & leadeth him the waye ꝑ is not good. He* ꝑ
D wyncketh with his eyes, ymagyneth mischefe: & he that byteth his lippes, wyll do some harme. Age is a crowne of worshyp, yf it be founde in ꝑ way of ryghtuousnes. A patient man is better then one stronge: & he ꝑ cā rule his selfe is moze worth then he ꝑ wynneth a cyttye. The lottes are caſt into the lappe, but their fall standethe in the Lozde.

*Of this ye haue before in the.x. Chap. b,

The.xvii.Chapter.

Better is a dzye mozsel with A quietnesse, then a full house ſmany fatcatel with strife.
*A discrete seruaunte shal haue moze rule then ꝑ sonnes ꝑ haue no wysdome, & shall haue like heritage with the brethrē. Like as siluer is tried in the fire & golde in ꝑ foznace, euē so doth ꝑ Lozd proue the hertes. A wicked body holdeth moch of false lippes, & a dessemblig personne geueth eare to adeceatfull tōge.
*Who so laugheth the poze to scozne, blaspheməth his maker: & he ꝑ is glad of another mās hurt, shal not be vnpunished. Chyldets chyldzen are a woz shyppe vnto the elders, & the fathers are the honour of ꝑ children. In eloquent speach be cōmethe not a foole, a dessembling mouth also beseməth not a prince. Liberalyte is a precious
B stone vnto him that hath it, foz where soeuer he becōmeth, he prospereth.
Who so couereth an other mans offence, seketh loue: but he that discloseth the faute, setterthe frendes at variaunce. One repzoke doth moze good to him ꝑ hath vnderstādinge, then an C. stripes vnto a foole. A seditious personne seketh mischefe, but a cruel messaūger shalbe sente agaynst hym.
It were better to come agaynst a she Bere robbed of her whelpes, then agaynst a foole, in his folyshnes.
*Who so rewardeth euell foz good, the plage shal not depart frō his house
He ꝑ loweth discozde & stryfe, is like one ꝑ diggeth vp a water bzoke: but ā
C opē enemy is like ꝑ water ꝑ breaketh out & rēneth abzoade. The lozd hateth as wel him ꝑ iustifieth ꝑ vngodly, as him ꝑ cōdēpneth ꝑ innocēt. What helpeth it to geue a foole money in his hād, wher as he hath no mīd to by wisdō? He is a frēde ꝑ al way loueth, & i aduersyte a mā shal know who is his brother: who so promiseth by ꝑ hād, & is suerti foz a nother, he is a foole. He ꝑ loueth strife, delyteth in synne: and who so setterthe his doze to hye, seketh after a fall.

Pro.xviii.b. Deu.xvi.a. Esa.lv.b.

Who so hath a frowarde herte obteineth no good: & he ꝑ hath an ouerth warte tonge, shall fall in to myschefe.
An vnwise body bzingeth him selfe into sozowe, and the father of a foole can haue no lope. A merye herte maketh a lustye cozage. but a sozowfull mynde dzieth vp the bones. The vngodly taketh gifres out of the bosom, to wreste the wayes of iudgment.
Wysdome shyneth in the face of hym that hath vnderstandynge, but the eyes of fooles wandze thozow out all landes. An vndiscrete sonne is a greke vnto his father, & an heuynesse vnto his mother that bare hym. To punish the innocent, & to smyte the princes ꝑ geue true iudgment, ar both euel.
*He is wyse & discrete, ꝑ tempereth his wozdes: & he is a man of vnderstā dinge, ꝑ maketh moch of his spzete: yee a very foole (when he holdeth his tonge) is counted wyse, and to haue vnderstanding, when he shutteth his lippes.

The.xviii.Chapter.

A Who so hath pleasure to sow dyscozde, pyketh a quarell in euery thynge. A foole hath no delyte in vnderstā dynge, but onelye in thole thynges wherin his hert reioyseth.
Where vngodlynes is, there is also disdayne: and so there foloweth shame and dishonoure: The wozdes of a mās mouth are lyke depe waters, and the well of wysdome is lyke a full streame.
It is not good to a*tegarde the personne of the vngodly, oz to put backe the righteous in iudgemente. A fooles lyppes are euer bzawling, & his mouthe pzouoked vnto battayll. A fooles
B mouth is his owne destruction, & his lyppes are ꝑ snare foz his owne soule.
The wozdes of a sclaunderer are very wounded, & go thozow vnto ꝑ vnmost partes of the body. Who so is slouthful & slacke in his labour, is ꝑ brother of him that is a waster. The name of the Lozde is a strōge castel, the righteous flyeth vnto it, & shalbe saued.
But ꝑ rych mans goodes are his strōg holde, yee he taketh them foz an hy wal
C rounde about him. After pzyde cōmeth destruccīō, & honour after lowlynes.
*He ꝑ geueth sentēce in a matter before he heare it, is a foole, & woorthye to be cōfounded. A good stomacke dziuethe awaye a mans disease, but whē the spzete ys vexed, who maye abide it? A wysse herte labourethe foz knowledge, & a pzudente eare seketh vnderstandynge. Liberalyte bzyngeth a man to honour & woz shipe, and setteth hi among great men. The righ tuous accuseth him selfe first of al, yf his neyghboure come, he shal fynde hi.
D The lot pacifieth ꝑ variaunce, & parteth the mightie a sunder. The vnite of bzethzen is stronger then a castel, & they ꝑ holde together are like the barre of a palace. A mans bely shalbe satisfyed with ꝑ frut of hys own mouth, and with ꝑ encreale of his lippes shal he be fylled. Death and lyfe stād in ꝑ powr of the tonge, he that loueth it, shal enioye the frute therof. Who so fyndeth a wyfe fyndeth a good thing and receaueth an wholsome benefite of ꝑ Lozd: The pooze maketh supplicacyon and pzayeth mekely, but ꝑ rich geueth a rough answere. The.xix.Chapter.

Better is the pooze ꝑ liueth godly,
A then the blasphemer that is but a fole. Where no discrecion is, there the soule is not well: & who so is swyfte one foote, stōbleth hastely. Folishnesse maketh a mā to go out of his waye, and then is his herte vnpacient agaynste the Lozde: Ryches make many frendes, but the pooze is forsake of his owne frendes. A false witnesse shall not remayne vnpunished, & he ꝑ speaketh lyes shall not escape. The multitude hangeth vpon greate men, & euery man fauoureth him ꝑ geueth rewardes. As foz the pooze, he is hated amonge all his brethzē: yee his owne frēdes forsake him, & he that geueth credēce vnto wozdes, getteth nothing:
He ꝑ is wyse, loueth his owne soule:

and who so hath vnderstanding, shall prospere. A false witnesse shal not remayne vnpunyshed, and he that speaketh lyes shal perisshe. Delicate ease becommeth not a foole, much more vnseemelye is it, a bonde man to haue the rule of princes. A wyse man putteth of displeasure, and it is his honour to let some fautes passe. The kynges displeasure is lyke the roaring of a Lyō, but his frendshyp is like the dewe vpō the grasse. An vndiscrete sonne is ỹ heynes of his father, and a brawling wyfe is like ỹ topp of an house, where thorow it is euer dropping.

House and ryches maye a mā haue by ỹ heritage of his elders, but a discrete woman is the gyft of the Lord.

Slouthfulnes bringeth slepe, and an ydel soule shall suffer honger.

Who so kepeth the cōmaundement, kepeth his owne soule: but he ỹ regardeth not his waye, shal dye. He ỹ hath pitie vpon ỹ poore, lendeth vnto the Lord: and loke what he layeth out, it shal be payed him agayne. Chasten thy sonne while ther is hope, but let not thi soule be moued to slaye him. For grate wrath bringeth harme: therfore let him go, and so maiest thou teach hym more nurtoure.

O geue eare vnto good councell, & becontent to be reformed, ỹ ỹ mayst be wyse here after. There are many deuyces in a mans hert, neuer theles the cōcel of the Lord shal stande. It is a mans worshipe to do good, and better it is to be a poore man, then a dyssembler. The feare of the Lorde preserueth the life, yee it geueth plentuousnes, without ỹ vysytacion of any plage. A slouthful body shutteth hys hand in to his bosome, so that he can not put it to his mouth. *If thou smitest a scornefull person, ỹ ignorant shal take better hede: and yf thou reprouest one ỹ hath vnderstanding, he wyl be ỹ wiser.

He ỹ hurteth his father or shutteth out his mother, is a shamefull and an vnworthy sonne. My sonne, heare no more the doctrine ỹ leadeth the awaye from ỹ wordes of vnderstanding.

A false witnes laugheth iudgement to scorne, and ỹ mouth of the vngodly eateth vp wickednes. Punishmentes are ordeyned for the scorneful, and stripes for fooles backes.

a *Of this is spokē in the xyenth Chapter. b

The. xx. Chapter.

Wyne is a voluptuous thinge, and dronckenes causeth sedicīō: who so delyteth therin, shal nether be wyse. The kynge ought to be feared as the roaring of a lyon, who so prouoketh hi vnto anger, offendeth agaynst hys owne soule. It is a mās honaur to kepe hym selfe from stryfe, but they ỹ haue pleasure in brawlinge, are fooles euerone. A slouthful body will not go to plow for cold, therfore shal he go abegging in Sommer, & haue nothing. Wyse counsell in ỹ hert of mā is like a water in ỹ depe of ỹ earthe, but he ỹ hath vnderstanding, bringeth it forth. Many ther be yͤt called good doers, but where shall one fynde a true faithfulmā? Who so ledeth a godly & an innocent lyfe, happie shal his childrē be whom he leaueth behynde hym. A kynge that sytteth in iudgment, and loketh well aboute hym, driueth away all euell. *Who can saye: my herte is cleane, I am innocēt frō synne. *Iob. xv. a. Eccle. vii. a

To vse two maner of weights, or two maner of measures, both these ar abhomynable vnto the Lorde. A chylde is knowne by his conuersacyon, whether his workes be pure & ryght. As for the hearynge of the eare & the syght of ỹ eye, the Lord hath made thē both. Delyte not thou in slepe, lest thou come vnto pouerte: but opē thine eyes, & thou shalt haue bred ynough. It is naught, It is naught (say men) when they haue it, but when it is gone they geue it a good word. A mouth of vnderstanding is more worth then golde, many precious stones, & costely Jewels. Take his garmēt that is suertye for a straunger, & take a pledge of hym for the vnknowne mans sake: Euery mā liketh the bred that is gotten wyth disceate, but at the laste hys mouth shalbe filled with grauell.

Thorow councell the thinges that men deuyse go forwarde: and wyth discrecion ought warres tobe taken & handē.

Medle not with him that bewrayeth secretes, and is a sclaunderer, and disceaueth with his lippes. Who so curseth hys father and mother, hys light shalbe put out in the myddest of darckenesse. The heritage that cōmeth to hastely at the fyrst, shal not be prayssed at the ende. Saye not thou: I wyl recompence euel, but put thou thy trust in the Lord, and he shal defende the. The Lorde abhorreth two maner of weyghtes, and a false balaunce is an euel thinge. The Lord ordereth euery manes goinges, for what is he, that vnderstandeth his owne wayes? It is a snare for a man to blaspheme ỹ which is holy, and then to go about wͤ vowes. A wyse kynge destroyeth ỹ vngodlye, and bringeth the whele ouer them. The lanterne of the Lord is the brech of man, and goeth thorow all the inward partes of the body. Mercy and faithfulnes preserue the kyng, and wͤ louinge kyndnes his seate is holden vp. The strength of yonge men is their worshyp, and a graye head, is an honour vnto ỹ aged. Woundes driue awaye euel, and so stryppes the inward partes of the body.

The. xxi. Chapter.

The kynges hert is ỹ hand of the Lorde, lyke as are ỹ ryuers of water: he maye turne it whither so euer he wil. Euery man thinketh his owne waye to be right, but the lord iudgeth the hertes. To do rightuousnesse and iudgemente is more acceptable to the Lord then sacrifice. A proude loke, a proude stomacke, & the lanterne of the vngodly is synne. The deuyces of one that is dilygente, bring plenteousnes: but he that is vnadvysed, commeth vnto pouerte. Who so hoordeth vp ryches with the disceatfulnes of his tong, he is a foole, and lyke vnto thē that seke their owne death. The robberies of the vngodly shal be their owne destruccion, for they wold not do the thyng that was right. The wayes of the frowarde are straunge, but the worckes of hym that is cleane, are ryght.

* It is better to dwel in a corner vnder the house toppe, then wͤ a brawlyng woman in a wyde house. The soule of the vngodly wysheth euel, and hath no pytye vpon his neyghboure. *When the scorneful is punished, the ignorāt take the bester hede: and when a wyse man is warned, he wyl receaue ỹ more vnderstandyng. The rightuous enkourmeth the house of the vngodly, but the vngodlye goo on styll after their owne wickednesse. Who so stoppeth his eare at the crye of the poore, he shal crye him selfe and not be herde. A preuy rewarde pacifyeth displeasure, and a gyfte in the bosome stylleth furyousnesse. The iust delyteth in doynge the thinge that is right, but the workes of wickednesse abhorre the same.

The man that wandereth out of the waye of wysdome, shal remayne in the congregacīō of the deed. *He that hath pleasure in banckettes, shall be a poore man: Who so delyteth in wyne and delicates, shal not be ryche. The vngodly shal be geuen for the rightuous, & ỹ wicked for the iust. *It is better to dwel in a wylderneße, then with a chyding and an angry woman. In a wyse mans house, there is greate treasure & plentuousnesse, but a folysh body spendeth vp al. Who so foloweth ryghtuousnesse and mercy fyndeth bothe lyfe, rightousnes & honour. A wyse man wynneth ỹ citie of ỹ mighty, & as for ỹ strength ỹ they trust in, he bringeth it downe. Who so kepeth his mouth and his tōg the same kepeth his soule from trouble. He that is proude and presumptuous, is called a scorneful mā, which i wrath darre worcke maliciously. The voluptuousnesse of the slouthful is his owne death, for his handes wyl not labour: He coueteth and desyreth all the daye longe, but the rightuous is alwaye geuing and kepeth nothing backe. *The sacrifice of the vngodly is abhomynacion, for they offer the thynge that is gotten, wyth wickednes. A false wytnesse shall perysshe, but he that wyll be contente to heare, shall all waye haue power to speake him selfe.

An vngodly man goeth forth rashly, but ỹ iust reformeth his owne waie.

A * Good name is more worth then greate ritches, and louyng fauour is better then syluer and golde.

A * Eccle.xli Eccle.vii.a.

Whether riches or pouerte do mete vs, it cōmeth al of God. A wyse man seeth the plage and hydeth hym selfe, but the folysh go on styll and are punished. The ende of lowlynes and the feare of God, is riches honour, prosperitie and helth. Speares and snares are in the waye of the frowarde, but he that wyll kepe hys soule let hym flee frō suche. If thou teachest a chylde in his youth what waye he should go, he shal not leaue it when he is olde. The ryche ruleth the poore, & ỹ borower is seruaūt to ỹ lēder: He ỹ soweth wyckednes shal reape sorowe, and ỹ rod of his plage shall destroye hym. * A louynge eye shalbe blessed, for he geueth of his bred vnto the poore. Cast out the a* scorneful man, and so shall stryfe goo oute wyth him, yee, variaunce and sclaunder shal cease. Who so delyteth to be of a cleane hert and of gracious lyppes, the king shall be hys frend. The eyes of the lord preserue knowledg, but as for the wordes of the desyptefull, he byngeth thē to naught. The slouthfull body sayth: ther is a lyon without, I might be slayne in the stret. The mouth of an harlote is a depe pyt, wherin he fallyth that ỹ lorde is angry wyth al.

A Make not thy boost of to morow, for ỹ knowest not what maye happen to daye. Let a nother mā prayse the, and not thyne owne mouth: ye other folkes lippes, & not thine.

The stone is heuy, and the sande weyghtye: but a fooles wrath is heuyer then they both.

Wrath is a cruel thinge, and furyous nesse is a very tempest: ye who is able to abyde enuye? An open rebuke is better then a secrete loue. Faithful are thes * woundes of a louer, but the kysses of an enemy are disceatful. He that is ful, abhorreth an honye combe: but vnto him that is hongry, euery sower thinge is swete. He that oft tymes flyeteth, is like a byrde that forsaketh her nest. The hert is glad of a swete ointment and sauoure, but a stomacke that can gaue good councel, reioyseth a mānes neyghboure.

Thyne owne frende and thy fathers frend le ỹ forsake not, but go not to thy brothers house in time of thy trouble.

Better is a frend at hand, then a brother farre of.

My sonne, be wyse, & thou shalt make me a glad hert: so that I shal make answere vnto my rebukes. A wyse man seynge the plage wyl hide him self, as for fooles they go one styll, and suffer harme. * Take his garment that is surtye for a straunger, and take a pledge of him for the vnknowne mās sake

C He that is to hasty to prayse his neighboure aboue measure, shalbe taken as one that geueth him an euil report. A brawling woman & the rofe of ỹ house droping in a raynye daye, maye wel be compared to gether.

He that refrayneth her, refrayneth ỹ wind, & holdeth oyle fast in his hāde. Lyke as one pyron whetteth a nother, so doth one man cōfort another. Who so kepeth his fygetre, shall entoye the frutes therof: he that wayteth vpō his master, shal come to honoure. Lyke as in one water there apeare dyuers faces, euen so dyuerse men haue diuers hertes. Lyke as hel and destruccyō are neuer ful, euen so the b * eyes of men cā neuer be satisfied. Syluer is tryed in ỹ moulde, and golde in the fornace, and so is a man, whenhe is openlye praysed to his face. Though thou shuldest bray a foole with a pestell in a morter lyke otemeele, yet wyl not his folysshe go from him. So that thou know the nōber of thy cattel thy selfe, and loke wel to thy flockes. For ryches abyde not alway, and the c * crowne endureth not for euer. The hey groweth, the grasse commeth vp, and herbes are gathered in the mountaynes. The lambes shal cloth the, and for the goates thou shalt haue money to thy husbandry. Thou shalt haue goates mylke ynough the to fede the, to vphold thy housholde, and to sustayne thy maidens.

The. xxviii. Chapter

The vngodly a * flieth noman chasyng him, but the righteous standeth styke as a lyon. Because of synne the lande doth oft chaung her prince: but thorow men of vnderstanding & wysdom, a realme endureth long.

One poore mā oppressing another by violence, is like a continual rayne ỹ destroyeth the frute. They that forsake thy lawe, prayse the vngodly: but such as kepe the lawe abhorre them. Wicked mē discerne not the thynge that is right, but they ỹ seke after the Lorde, discusse al thinges.

A poore man ledinge a godly lyfe, is better thē the riche ỹ goeth in froward wayes. Who so kepeth the lawe, is a childe of vnderstandinge: but he ỹ fedeth riotous men, shameth his father. Who so increaseth his rices by b * vsurye and wynning, let him gather thē to helpe the poore with al. He that turneth away his eare from hearinge ỹ lawe, his prayer shal be abhorred. Who so leadeth the rightuous i to an euel waye, shal fal in to his owne pyt, but the iust shal haue the good in possession. The ryche man thinketh hym selfe to be wyse, but the poore that hath vnderstandinge c * cā perceaue him wel ynough.

When rightuous men are in prosperite rite, then doth honoure florish: but whē the vngodly come vp, the state of men chaungeth. He that hideth his synnes, shal not prospere: but who so knowledgeth them and forsaketh thē, shal haue mercy. Wel is him that standeth al waie in awe: as for him that hardeneth his hert, he shal fal in to mischefe. Like as a roaringlyon ād an hongry beare, euen so is an vngodly prince ouer the poore people.

Where the prince is without vnderstanding, there is greate oppressiō & wronge: but if he be such one as hateth couetousnesse, he shal longe rayne. He ỹ by violence shedeth eny mās bloud, shal be a rennagate vnto his graue, & no man shall be able to succoure him.

Who so leadeth a godly and an innocent lyfe, shalbe safe: but he that goeth frowarde wayes, shal ones haue a fal.

germ.b. Esdras

* He that tylleth his lād, shal haue plēteousnesse of breed: but he that foloweth ydilnes, shal haue pouerte ynough.

A faithful man is greatly to be commended, but he that maketh to muche haste for to be riche, shal not be vngiltie. To haue respecte of personnes in iudgement is not good: And whye he wil do wrong, ye euē for a pece of bred.

D He that wyl be rich al to soone, hath an euel eye, and cōsidereth not, that pouerte shal come vpon hi. He that rebuketh a man, shal fynde more fauoure at the last, thē he ỹ flatteth hi. Who so robeth his father and mother, and sayeth it is no synne: the same is like vnto a murtherer. He that is of a proud stomacke stereth vp stryfe: but he ỹ putteth hys trust in the Lord, shalbe wel fedd. He ỹ trusteth in his owne hert, is a foole: but he that dealeth wysely, shalbe safe.

He that geueth vnto the poore, shal not want: but he ỹ turneth away hys eyes from such as be in necessitie, shall suffer greate pouerte him selfe.

When the vngodly are come vp, men are fayne to hide them selues: but whē they perish, the rightuous increase.

a * This slight is the feare wherof is spoken in the liii. Psalme b. They are afrayede where no feare is &c. Which thinge chaunceth when al thynges are done in vnbelefe, for want of ỹ knowledge of god.

b * Some reade vsury and vnmeasurable gaynes, shal gather them to do almes to the poore. That is to saye, by him that shal haue thē after him.

c * Some reade, searcheth it, that is to saye, to iudg better of his condition: and not streyghte wayes to thincke him wyse because he is ryche.

The. xxix. Chapter.

He that is stykenecked & wyl not be refourmed, shal sodenlye be destroyed wyth out eny helpe. Where the ryghtuous haue the ouer hande the people are in prosperite: but where the vngodlye beareth rule, there the people mourne. Who so louyth wysdōe, maketh his father a glad man: * but he ỹ kepeth harlottes, spendeth awaye ỹ he hath. With true iudgment ỹ kynge setteth vp ỹ lande, but if he be a man ỹ taketh giftes, he turneth it vpsydowne. Who so flattereth hys neyghboure, layeth a net for hys fete: The synne of the wickhed is his owne snare, but the ryghtuous shall be glad & reioyce. The ryghtuous consideryth ỹ cause of the poore, but the vngodly regardeth no vnderstandinge. Wicked people bring a citie in decaye, but wise men set vp agayne. If a wyse man go to lawe with a foole (whether he deale with him frendlye or roughly) he getteth no rest. The bloudthyrsti hateth ỹ rightuous, but ỹ iust a * seke his soule. A foole poureth out his spyrte altogether, but a wyse man kepeth it in til afterward. If a prince delit i lyes, al his seruauntes are vngodly. The poore & the lender mete together, the Lord lightneth both their eyes. The seate of the kyng that faithfully iudgeth ỹ poore, shal continue sure for euer more. The rood and correccion myn stre wisdom, but if a child be not loked vnto, he bringeth his mother to shame. Whē the vngodly com vp, wickednesse enc reaseth: but the rightuous shal se their fal.

Nurture thy sonne with correccion, and he shal comfort the, yee he shal do the good at thine herte.

Where no b * Prophecye is, there the people perisshe: but wel is him that kepeth the lawe. A seruaunte wyll not be the better for wordes, for though he vnderstande, yet wyll he not regarde them.

Ye

Yf thou lepst a man that is hastye to speake vnaduised, thou mayest trust a foole more then hym. He that deliberately bringeth vp his seruaunt frō a chyld, shal make hym his master at length. An angry man stereth vp strife, and he that beareth euell will in his mynde, doth moch euell. After pryde cōmeth a fall, *but a lowely spirite bringeth greate worshyppe. Who so kepeth company with a theefe, hateth his owne soule: he heareth blasphemyes, & telleth it not forth. He that feareth men, shal haue a fall: but who so putteth his trust in ỹ Lord shal come to honour. Many there be that seke the prices fauoure, but euery mans iudgemēt commeth frow the Lorde.

The wordes of Agur the sonne of Jaketh.

THe prophecye of a true faythful man, whom God hath helped, who God had cōforted & norysshed. For though I am lest of al, & haue no mans vnderstandyng (for I neuer lerned wysdome) yet haue I vnderstādyng, & am wel informed godly thinges. Who hath clymmed vp into heauen? Who hath come downe from thence? Who hathe holde the winde fast in his handes? Who hath cōprehēded the waters in a garmēt? Who hath set al the ēdes of ỹ world? What is his name or his sonnes name? Canst thou tell? * Al the wordes of God are pure and cleane, a* for he is a shylde vnto al them, that put their trust in him. Put thou nothinge therfore vnto his wordes, lest he reproue the, and thou be found a lyar. Two thinges I require of the, that thou wylt not denye me before I dye.

* Psalm.xviii. Deute.iiii.a. Prouer.xxx.d

Remoue fro me vanite and lyes: geue me neither powerte nor riches, only graunt me a necessary liuing. Lest yf I be to ful, I denye the, and saye: what felow is ỹ lorde? And lest I beig constrained thorow powerte, fall vnto stealynge, & forsweare the name of my God. Accuse not a seruaunt vnto his master, lest he speake euell of the also, and thou be hurte. He that bringeth vp an euel reporte vpon the generacion of his father and mother, is not worthy to be commended.

The generacyon that thynke them selues cleane, shal not be clensed from their fylthynesse. There are people ỹ haue a proude loke, and cast vp their eyes. This peoples teth are swerdes, and with their chafte bones they cōsume and deuoure the symple of ỹ earth, and the poore from a mong men. This generacyon, which is like an horsleche, hath two daughters: the one is called fetch hyther, and the other bring hither.

There be thre thinges that are neuer satisfied, & ỹ fourth saith neuer ho. The hel, a womans wombe, and the earthe hath neuer water ynough. As for fyre, it sayeth neuer, hoo. Who so laugheth his father to scorne, and setteth his mothers commaundemente at naught: the rauens pycke oute his eyes in the valleye, and deuoured be he of the yonge Egles.

There be thre thynges to hye for me, & as for the fourth, it passeth my knowledg. The way of an Egle in the aire, the waye of a serpent ouer a stoone, the waye of a shepe in the see, and the way of a man with a yōg womā. Suche is the waye also of a wyfe that breaketh wedlock, which wypeth her mouth like as when she hath eaten, & sayeth: As for me, I haue done no harme. Thorowe thre thinges the earthe is disquieted, and the fourth may it not beare: Thorow a seruaunt that beareth rule, thorow a fole ỹ hath great riches, thorow an ydle howswyfe, & thorow an handmayden that is heyre to her mastres. There be foure thinges in the earth, the which are very lytle: but in wysdome they exceade the wise: The Emmettes are but a weake people, yet gather they their meate together in the harueste.

The Conyes are but a feble folke, yet make they their couches amonge the rockes. The grashoppers haue not a gide, yet go they forth together by heapes. The spider laboureth: with her hādes, and that in the kynges palace.

There be thre thinges that go stifly, but the going of the fourth is the goodlyest of al. A Lyon, which is kynge of beastes, & geueth place to no mā: A cocke readye to fyght: A rāme and a kynge that goeth forth with his people. Yf ỹ be so foolish to magnifie thy self, or medle with any such thing, then lay thine hande vpon thy mouth. Who so chyrneth milck, maketh butter: he that rubbeth his nose, maketh it blede: and he ỹ causeth wrath, bringeth forth strife.

¶ The fyrst Chapter.

THese ar the wordes of the preacher, the sōne of Dauid, kīg of Ierusalem. a* All is but vanyte (sayeth ẏ preacher) al is but playne vanyte: For what cis hathe a man, of al the labour ẏ he taketh vnder the Sunne? One generacion passeth awaye, another commeth, but the earth abydeth styl. The Sōne aryseth ẏ Sunne goeth downe, and returneth to his place, that he may there ryse vp agayne. The winde goeth toward the South, & fetcheth his cōpase about vnto ẏ North, & so turnethito hi self agai. All flouds runne in to the see, & yet the see is not fylled: for loke vnto what place the waters runne, thence they come agayne. All thinges are so hard, ẏ no mā cā expresse thē. * The ey is not satisfyed wᵗ syght, the eare is not fylled wyth the hearynge. The thing ẏ hath bene cometh to passe agayne, & ẏ thig ẏ hath ben dō, is done again, ther is no new thig vnder ẏ sunne. Is ther eny thyng wherof it maye be sayde: lo, this is newe? For it was long a goon the tymes ẏ haue bene before vs. The thing that is past, is out of remembrance: Euen so the thinges that ar for to come, shal no more be thought vpon among thē that come after. I my selfe the Preacher, beyng kyng of Israell & Ierusalē, applied my mynde to seake out & searche for the knowledge of all thynges, ẏ ar done vnder heauē. Soch trauayle & labour hath god geuen vnto b* ẏ childzen af mē, to exercyse them selues therin. Thus I haue considred al the thinges that come to passe vnder the Sunne, and lo, they are al but vanyte & vexacyon, of mynd. The croked cānot be mayde straight, & ẏ faultes cā not be nombred. I cōmend with mine own hert, saying: lo, I am cō to a great estate, & haue gottē more wisdō, thē al they

¶ The. ii. Chapter.

THen sayd I thus in my herte: Nowe goo to, I wil take myne ease, and haue good dayes. But lo, that was vanite also: in so moch ẏ I sat debnto laughter: thou arte madde and to myrth: what doest thou?

So I thought in my herte, to withdraw my flesh from wyne, to apply my mynde vnto wysdome, & to cōprehende folishnes vntill the tyme ẏ (amōg al ẏ thinges which are vnder ẏ Sunne) I might se what were best for men to do, so longe as they lyue vnder heauen.

I made gorgious kayse workes. I buylded me houses, & plāted vineyardes. I made me orchardes & gardens of pleasure, & plāted trees in thē of all maner frutes. I made poles of water, to water ẏ greue & frutefull trees with al. I bought seruātes & maydēs, and had a greate howshold. As for catel, & shepe, I had more substaunce of thē, thē al they ẏ were before me i Ierusalem. I gathered syluer and gold together, euen a treasure of kinges & lādes.

I prouyded my syngers and wemē which could playe of instrumentes, to make men myrth & pastime. I gat me drinckig cuppes also & glasses.) Shortly) I was greater & in more worshipp, then al my predecessours in Ierusalē. For wysdome remayned wᵗ me: & loke whatsoeuer myne eyes desired, I let thē haue it: & wherī soeuer my hert delited or had any pleasure, I wᵗ helde it not from it. Thus my herte reioyced in al

ẏ I dyd, & this I toke for the prayson of all my trauayle. But when I consydred al the workes ẏ my handes had wrought, & al the labours ẏ I had take therin: lo, al was but vanyte & vexatiō of mynde, and nothyng of eny valu vnder the Sunne. Thē turned I me to cōsidre wisdō, error & folishnes (for what is he amōg mē, ẏ mighte be cōpared to me ẏ kyng in soch workes?) & I saw ẏ wisdō excelleth folishnesse, as farre as lyghte dothe darcknesse. * For a wyse mā beareth his eyes about i his head, but ẏ foole goeth in the darcknesse. I perceaued also ẏ thet both had on end. Then thoughte I in my minde: If it happen vnto the foole as it doth vnto me, what nedeth me then to labour eny more, for wysdome? So I cōfessed within my herte, ẏ this also was but vanite. For ẏ wyse are euer as lytle in remembraunce as ẏ folish, & all ẏ dayes, for to come shalbe forgotte, yee ẏ wyse mā dieth as wel as ẏ foole. Thus begāns I to be weery of my lyfe, in so moche, ẏ I coulde away wᵗ nothinge ẏ is done vnder ẏ Sūne, for al was but vanyte & vexacyon of mind: Ye I was wery of my labour, wᵗ I had take vnder ẏ Sūne, because I should be faine to leaue thē vnto another mā, ẏ cōmeth after me for who knoweth, whether he shalbe a wyse mā or a fole? & yet shal ye be lorde of al my labours, which I wᵗ such wisdome haue take vnder ẏ Sūne. Is not this a vayne thinge? So I turned me to reasayne my minde frō al such trauayle, as I toke vnder the Sūne: for so moch as a man should weery him selfe wᵗ wisdome, wᵗ vnderstādyng & opportunite, & yet be fayne to leaue his labours vnto another, ẏ neuer swett for thē. This is also a vayne thing & a great misery. For what getteth a mā of al the labour & trauayle of his mynde, ẏ he taketh vnder ẏ Sūne, but heuinesse, sorowe & disquietnesse al ẏ dates of his life? In so moch ẏ his herte cānot rest in ẏ nyght. Is not this also a vaine thig? Is it not better thē for a mā to eate & drincke? & his soule to be mery i his labour? Ye I saw ẏ this also was a gift of god: For who maye eate, drincke, or bringe eny thynge to passe without hym?

And

And why? he geueth vnto man, what it pleaseth him: whether it be wysdome, vnderstandyng, or gladnesse. But vnto ỹ synner he geueth wertues & sorow, ỹ he maye gather & heape together the thinge, ỹ afterwarde shalbe geuē vnto him whom it pleaseth God. This is now a vayne thinge, yee a very disquietnesse and vexacyon of mynde.

The. iii. Chapter.

A EVery thynge hathe a tyme, yee all that is vnder ỹ heauen, hath is cōuenient season. There is a tyme to be borne, & a tyme to dye.

There is a tyme to plante, & a tyme to plucke vp the thynge, that is planted.

A tyme to slay, & a time to make whole.

A tyme to breake downe, and a tyme to buylde vp.

A tyme to wepe, and a tyme to laugh:

A tyme to mourne, & a tyme to daunce:

A tyme to cast away stones, and a time to gather stones to gether:

A tyme to enbrace, & a tyme to refraine from enbracynge:

A tyme of warre, and a tyme of peace:

What hath amā els (ỹ doth any thing) but weerynesse & laboure? For as touchinge the trauayle and carefulnesse which god hath geuen vnto men, I se ỹ he hath geuē it them, to be exercysed in it. Al this hath he ordened maruelos goodly to euery thing his due tyme. He hath planted ignorannce also in ỹ hertes of men, ỹ they shuld not fynde out ỹ ground of his workes, which he doth

C frō ỹ beginning of ỹ ende. So I perceaued, ỹ in these thinges there is nothing better for a man, then to be mery & to do well so lounge as he lyueth.

For al that aman eateth & drinckethe, yee what soeuer a man enioyeth of all his labour, that same is a gyft of god.

I cōsydered also ỹ what soeuer God doth, it cōtinueth for euer, & ỹ nothing cā be put vnto it nor take frō it: & ỹ god doth it to the intent, ỹ men shuld feare him. The thing ỹ hath bene, is now: & ỹ thing ỹ is for to come, hathe bene a fore tyme, for god restoreth agayne the thinge that was paste. Moreouer, I sawe vnder the sunne vngodlynesse in D the steade of iudgement, & iniquite in steade of rightuousnesse. Then thought I in my mynde: God shal seperate the rightuous from the vngodly, & thē shalbe the tyme and iudgmente of all councels & workes. I cōmened w mynne owne hertte also concerninge the childzen of men: how God hath chosen them, & yet letteth them apeare as thoughe they were beastes. for it happeneth vnto men, as it doth vnto beastes, as the one dyethe, so dyethe the other: yee they haue both one maner of byrth, so that (in this) a man hath no prēmynēce aboue a beast, but al are subdued vnto vanite. They go al vnto one place, for as they be alle of dust, so shal they al turn vnto dust agayne. Who knoweth *the spirite of mā ỹ goeth vpward, & ỹ byrth of the beest that goethe downe to the earth? Wherfore I perceaue, ỹ ther is nothinge better for a man, thē to be ioyful in his labour, for ỹ is hys portion: But who wyl bryng him to se ỹ thyng that shal come after him?

The. iiii. Chapter.

SO I turned me, & cōsydred al ỹ violent wronge ỹ is done vnder the sunne: & behold, the teares of soch as were oppressed, & ther was no man to comfort thē or ỹ wolde delyuer & defēd thē frō ỹ violence of their oppressours. Wherfore I iudged those that are deed, to be more happye thē soche as be a lyue: yee hym that is yet vnborne to be better at ease then they both, because he seith not the mysterable workes ỹ are done vnder ỹ sunne.

Agayne

B Againe, I sawe that al trauaile and dilygence of labour was hated of euery man. This is also a vayne thyng, & a vexacyon of mynde. The foole foldeth his handes together, and eateth vp his owne flesh. One hande full (saith he) is better with rest, then both the handes full with labour and trauayle. Moreouer, I turned me, and beholde yet another vanyte vnder the Sonne. Ther is noman, no mo but him selfe alone, hauinge neither childe nor brother: yet is there no ende of his carefull trauayle, hys eyes can not be satisfyed wyth ryches, (yet doth he not remembre him selfe, & saye:) For whom I do take soche trauayle? For whose pleasure do I thus consume awaye my lyfe? This is also a vayne and myserable thynge. Therfore two ar better then one, for they may wel enioythe profyt of their labour. If one of them fal, his companion helpeth him vp agayne: But wo is him that is alone, for yf he fal, he hathnot another to help him vp. Agayne, when two slepe together, they are warme: but how can a bodye be warme alone? One maye be ouercome, but two may make resistāce: A thre folde cable is not lyghtlye broken. BE not hasty w thy mouth, & lett not thyne hert speake eny thynge rashlye before god. For God is in heauē and thou vpon earthe, ther fore let thy wordes be fewe. For where moche carefulnesse is, there are manye dreames: and where many wordes are, there men may heare fooles. * If thou make a vowe vnto God, be not slacke to perfourme it. As for folish vowes, he hath no pleasure in them. If thou promyse eny thinge, paye it: for better it is that thou make no vow then that thou shuldest promyse, and not paye. Vse not thy mouth to cause thy flesche for to synne, that thou saye not before the angell: my foolishnesse is in the fau te: For then God wilbe angrie at thy voyce, & destroye al the workes of thyne handes. And why? were as are many dreames and many wordes, ther are also dyuerse vanyties: but loke ỹ thou feare God. If ỹ seyst the poore to be oppressed & wrongeously dealt w al, lo ỹ equyte and ỹ right of ỹ lawe is wrested in ỹ land: maruel not ỹ at soch iudgment, for one greate man kepethe touch with another, and ỹ myghty helpe thē selues together. A labouring mā slepeth sweetely, wether it be little or moch ỹ he eateth: but ỹ aboundaunce of the rich wyl not suffre hym to slepe.

is better to geue care to the chastenig lyke the crackynge of thornes vnder a

Who so doeth wronge,maketh a wise

a foole. Saye not thou: What is ỹ that were no wyse question. Wyse

These.ii. thinges also haue I consyred in the tyme of vanyte: ỹ the iust man perisheth for his rightuousnes wyckednesse. Therfore be thou nether to rightuous ner ouer wyse,that thou perish not: be nether to vnrightuous also ner to folysh, lest thou dye before thy tyme. It is good for the to take hold of this,and not to let ỹ go out of thy hand. For that he feareth God, shal escape them all.

Wysdom geueth more corage vnto the wyse, then ten myghtie men of the lishnes of the vngodly,and the errour of doting fooles. And I founde,that a womā is bitterer thē death: for she is a very angle,her herte is a net,and her

Euen so who may saye vnto hi: what doest thou? Who so kepeth the cōmaū mans hert discerneth tyme and maner:

For euery thing wyl haue opportunitie and iudgement, and thys is the thing that maketh men ful of carefulnes and sorowe. And whych a man knoweth not what is for to come,for who wil tel hi?
Nether is there eny man ỹ hath pow-nor to haue eny power i ỹ time of deth, B it is not he also that can make an ende of the battel, nether maye vngodlynes

All these thynges haue I consydered,and applyed my mynde vnto euer ry worcke ỹ is vnder the Sonne: how one man hath lordshipe vpon another to his owne harme. For I haue oft seene the vngodly brought to their gra ues,and fallen downe from the hye & glorious place: in so much ỹ they were forgotten in the cytie,where they were had in so hye and greate reputacion.
This is also a vayne thing. Because now that euel worckes are not hastely punyshed,the hert of man geueth him selfe ouer vnto wyckednesse. But though an euel person offend an hun dred tymes,and haue a longe lyfe: yet C am I sure,that it shal go wel with thē before their eyes. Agayne,as for the vngodly, it shal not be wel with hym, nether shal he prolong his dayes: but euen as a shadowe, so shall he be that feareth not God.

Yet is there a vanyte vpō earth:

vnto whom it goth as though they had ỹ wozkes of ỹ ryghtuous. This me thynke also a vayne thynge. Therfoze I cõmẽd gladnes, because a mã hath no better thinge vnder the sun, then to eate & dzincke, and to be merye: foz that shall he haue his labour al the dates of his

*Some rede the Goddes: that is, Judges.

¶ A man wotteth not, by the righteousnes of his owne wozkes, whether he be wozthi of loue oz hate. A man ought to lyue merely with his wyf. A prayse of wysdome.

The. ix. Chapter.

FOz al these thinges purposed I in my mynde to seke out. The ryghtuous and wyse ye and their a wozkes also are in the hand of God: and b* there is no mañ knoweth ether ỹ loue oz hate of the thynge ỹ he hath before hi. It happeneth vnto one as vnto another: It goeth: w ỹ ryghtuous as w the vngodly: with ỹ good & cleane as with the vncleane: with hi ỹ offereth as with him ỹ offreth not: like as it goeth w ỹ vertuous, so goeth it also with ỹ sinner. As it happeneth vnto the pertured, so happeneth yt also vnto him ỹ is afraied to be fozswozne. Amonge al thinges ỹ come to passe vnder the sonne, this is a misery, ỹ it happeneth vnto al a lyke. This is the cause also ỹ the hertes of men are full of wickednesse, and madd foolishnesse is in their hertes as longe as they liue vntyl they dye.

B And why as longe as a mã lyueth, he is careles: foz a quicke dogge (saye they) is better then a ded liõ: foz they ỹ be in ỹng, know ỹ they shal die: but they ỹ be dede know nothig, nether deserue they eny moze. Foz their memozial is forgotte, so that they be nether loued, hated noz enuied nether haue they eny moze parte in the wozld, in al ỹ is don vnder the Sonne. Go thou thy waye then, eate thy bred w ioye, and dzincke thy wyne with gladnes, foz thy wozkes please God Let thy garmẽtes be alwaye whyt, & let thy head want none oyntment. Lyue thy self, to lyue ioyfully with thy wife whom thou louest, al the dayes of thy lyfe which is but vayne, ỹ god hath geuen the vnder ỹ Sunne al the dayes of thy vanite: foz ỹ is thy porcion in this lyfe, of all thy labour and trauayle ỹ thou takest vnder the sonne. What soeuer ỹ takest in hande to do, ỹ do with al thy power: foz amõg ỹ dedes, here as thou goest vnto, there is nether wozcke, councel, knowledge noz wysdome.

So I turned me vnto other thinges vnder the sonne, and I sawe ỹ in C running, it helpeth not to be swyft: in battayl it helpeth not to be stronge to fedyng, it helpeth not to be wyse, to ryches: it helpeth not to be suttel: to be had in fauour, it helpeth not to be connyng: but ỹ al lyeth in tyme & foztune. Foz a man knoweth not his tyme, but lyke as the fysche are take ỹ with angle and as the byrdes are catched with ỹ snare. Euen so are men taken in the perilous tyme, when it commeth sodeinly vpon them.

Thys wysdome haue I sene also D vnder the Sunne, and me thought ma greate thynge.

There was a lytel citie, and a few men within it: so there came a greate kynge and beseged it, and made great bulwarckes agaynste it.

And in the cytie there was founde a poore man (but he was wyse) whych with his wysdome delyuered the cyte: yet was there no ebodye, that had eny respecte vnto such a symple man.

Then sayede I, wysdome is better then strengthe. Neuertheles, a symple mannes wysdome is despysed, and hys wozdes are not herde.

A wyse mãs councel that is folowed in silence, is farre aboue the crying of a captayne amonge fooles.* Foz wysdõ is better then harnesse: but an vnthrift alone destroyeth much good.

b* Some reade: and man knoweth not her loue nor hatred: which is al before him. The sentence signifieth as much, as no mã knoweth whether God loue oz hate any man: Understand by the righteousnes of his owne wozckes.

¶ The difference betwene a fole and wyse man. Fortune and happy is that realme which hathe a wyse prynce.

The. x. Chapter.

DEed flyes ỹ corrupte swete oyntmente and make it to stynche, are somthig moze wozth then the wysdome & honoure of a foole. A wise mans hert is a vpon the ryght hande, but a fooles herte is vpon the left. A dotynge foole thynketh, ỹ euery man doth as foolyshly as him selfe. If a prince spyrite be geuen the to beare rule, be not negligent then in thyne office: foz so shall greate wyckednes be put down, as it were with a medecyn. A nother plage is there, which I haue sene vnder the sonne: namely, the ignorance that is commenly among prynces: that a foole setteth in grete dignite, and the rich are set downe beneth. I se seruauntes ride vpon hozses and prynces goinge vpon their fete as yt were seruauntes. * But he ỹ dygeth vp a pyt, shal fal therin him selfe: and who so breaketh the hedge, a serpente shal byt him. Who so remoueth stones shal haue trauayle with al: and he ỹ he weth wod shalbe hurt therwith.

When an yron is blunte, and the poynt not sharpened, it muste be whet agayne, and that w might: Euen so doth wysdome folow diligence. A babler of his tonge is no better then a serpent ỹ stingeth without hissing. The wozdes out of a wyse mans mouth are gracious, but the lyppes of a foole wil destroye him selfe. The begynning of his talking is fooly shnes, and the last wozde of his moth is greate madnes. A foole is so ful of wozdes ỹ a mã can not tel what end he wil make: who wil the warne hi to make a conclucio. The labour of ỹ folysh is greuous vnto the whyle they knowe not how to go in to the citie.

Wo be vnto the (O ỹ realme, and lande) whose kyng is but a chylde, and whose prynces ar early at their bãcketes. But wel is the (O thou realme & whose king is come of nobles, & whose prynces eate in due season, foz strength & not foz lust. Thozow slouthfulns ỹ balckes fal downe, and thozowe ydle handes it rũneth in at the houle. Meat maketh mẽ to laugh, and wyne maketh them mery: but vnto money are al thinges obediẽt. Wish ỹ king no cuel i thy thought, and speake no hurt of ỹ rich in thy preuy chamber: foz a bird of the ayze shal betraye thy voyce, & with her fethers shal she bewraye thy wozdes.

If a man lyue many yeares, and be glad in them al, let hym remembre the dayes of darckenes, whych shall be many: and when they come, al thynges shal be but vanyte. Be glad then (O thou yong man) in thy youth, and let thyne hert be mery in thy yong dayes, folow the ways of thyne owne hert, and the lust of thyne eyes: but be thou sure, that God shal bzynge the in to iudgment foz al these thynges.

Me thincke I heare ỹ voyce of my beloued: lo, ther cõmeth he hoppig vpõ ỹ mountaines, & leapig ouer ỹ litle hilles. My beloued is lyke a Roo or a yonge hart. Beholde, he standeth behynde our wall, he taketh in at the wyndowe, and pepeth thorow the grate,

HOw fayre arte thou: my loue, how fayre arte thou? thou hast doues eyes, besyde that which lyeth hyd within. Thy hearry lockes are lyke a flocke of shepe ỹ be clypped, which go fyrst vp from ỹ washinge place: where euery one beareth two twyns, & not one fruteful among them. Thy lyppes are like a rose coloured rybond thy wordes are louely: thy chekes are lyke a pece of a pomgranate besides ỹ which lieth hyd with in. The necke is like ỹ tower of Dauid buylded with bulwerckes, where vpon they hang a thousande shyldes, yee all the weapens of the gyauntes. Thy two brestes are like two twyns of ponge roes, which fede amonge the lylyes.

¶ The spouse speaketh to him self.

O ỹ I might goto ỹ mountaine of myrre & to the hil of frāckinsence: tyl ỹ daibreake, & tyl the shadowes be past away.

The voice of christ speakīg to ỹ church

Thou art al faire, O my loue, & no spot is ther i ỹ. Come to me frō Libanus, O my spouse, come to me frō Libanus: cō soone ỹ next way frō the toppe of Amana, frō ỹ toppe of Sanir & Hermō, frō the lyons dennes, and from the mountaynes of the leopardes.

Thou hast wonded mi hert, O mi sister, my spouse, thou hast wounded my hert, with one of thyne eyes, & with one chayne of thy necke. O how fayre and louely are thy brestes, my syster, my spouse? Thy brestes are more pleasaunte then wyne, and the smell of thine oyntementes passethe all spyces. Thy lyppes, O my spouse, droppe as the hony combe, pe mylke and hony, is vnder thy tōge, and the smell of the garmentes is lyke the smell of franckinsence. Thou arte a well kepte garden, O my Syster, my spouse, thou art a wel kept waterspryg, a sealed well. The frutes that sproute in the, are lyke a paradise of pomgranates with swete frute: as Cipresse, Nardus, Saffronne, Calmus, and all the trees of Libanus: Myrre, Aloes, ād all the best spyces. Thou art a well of gardens a well of lyuinge waters, whych renne downe from Lybanus.

¶ Christ calleth the heathen.

Up thou north wynde, come thou south wynde, and blowe vpon my garden that the smell therof maye be caryed on euery syde, ye ỹ my beloued may come into my garden, and eate of ỹ frutes and apples that growe therin:

¶ Christ speaketh to the church.

COme into my Garden, O my syster, my spouse: I haue gathered my Myrre, with my spise. I wyl eate my hony & my hony cōbe, I wyl dryncke my wyne and my mylke.

¶ Christ speaketh to the Appostles.

Eate, O ye frendes, dryncke, and be merry, O ye beloued.

¶ The voyce of the churche.

As I was a slepe, and my herte waking, I hearde the voyce of my beloued, when he knocked.

¶ Christ to the Church.

Open to me (sayde he) O my syster, my loue, my doue, my dearelynge: for my heade is full of dewe, and the lockes of my hear are ful of the nyght droppes.

¶ The voyce of the spouselle.

I haue put of my coate, how can I do it on agayne? I haue walked my fete how shall I fele them agayne?

¶ The voyce of ỹ church speking of Christ

But when my loue put in his hand at the hole, my hert was moued towarde hym: so that I stode vp to open vnto my beloued. My handes dropped with Myrre, and ỹ Myrre ranne downe by fingers vpon the lock. Neuertheless when I had opened vnto my beloued he was departed and gone awaye.

Now lyke as afore tyme when he spake, my hert could not longer refrayne: Euen so now I sought him, but I could not fynde him: I cryed vpon hym, neuertheless he gaue me no answere.

¶ The Churche complaineth of her persecuters.

So the watchmen that went about the citye founde me, smote me, & wounded me: Yee they that kept the walles, take away my garment fro me.

¶ The spouses speketh to her cōpanions

I charge you therfor, O ye daughters of Ierusalē, yf ye fynd my beloued, ỹ ye tell hym how that I am sycke for loue.

¶ The voyce of the Synagoge.

Who is thy loue above other louers, O thou fairest among wemē? Or what can thy loue do, more thē other louers, ỹ thou chargest vs so straytely.

¶ The Churche, answerig of Christ.

Is for my loue, he is whyte and redde coloured, a syngular personne among many thousādes: his head is the most fine golde, the lockes of his hearre are bussheh, browne as the euenynge: Hys eyes are as the eies of doues by the water brokes, washen with mylk, and remaining in a plenteous place: His chekes are lyke a garden bedd, wher in the Apotcaries plāt almaner of swete thinges: His lyppes droppe as the flowres of the most principall Myrre, hys handes are full of golde rynges & precyous stones. His body is as the pure yuery, decte ouer with Saphires: Hys legges are as the pylers of Marbel, set vpon fokettes of golde: His face is as Libanus, and as the Cedre trees: His throte is swete, yee he is altogether louely Soch one is my loue. O ye daughters of Ierusalē, soch one is my loue.

¶ The voyce of the Synagoge speaking to the Church.

Whither is thy loue gone then (O thou fayrest amonge women) whither is thy loue departed, that we may seke him with the?

¶ The. vi. Chapter.

¶ The voyce of the Church.

A MY loue is gone downe into his garden, vnto the swete smellyng beddes, ỹ he may refresh him selfe in the garden, & gather floures.

My loue is myne, and I am his, which tedeth amonge the lylyes.

¶ Christ to the Churche.

Thou art pleasaunte (O my loue) euen as lowlynesse it selfe, thou art fayre as Jerusalem, glorious as an armye of men, wt their banners. (Turne awai thyne eyes fro me, for they make me to proude.) Thy heartye lockes are lyke a flocke of goates vpon the mounte B of Galaad. Thy teth are lyke a flock of shepe that be clypped, which go out of the washinge place: where euery one beareth two twyns, and not one frute ful amonge them. Thy chekes are like a pece of a pomgranate, besyde es that which lyeth hyd within. There are thre score Quenes, feure score cõcubines & ponge women without nombre. But one is my doue, my derlinge. She is ỹ C onely beloued of her mother, and heare vnto her that bare her. When the daughters sawe her, they said, she was blessed: Yee the Quenes and concubynes praysed her.

What is she this, that peeth out as the mornyng rose, as the mone, excellente as the sunne, glorious as an armye of me with their baners.

¶ Christ to the Synagoge.

I went downe into the notte garde, to se what grew by the brokes, to loke yf the vineyarde flourished, and yf the pomgranates were not shot forth. D

¶ The voyce of the Synagoge.

Then the charettes of the Prince of my people made me sodenly afrayed.

¶ The voyce of the Churche callinge agayne the Synagoge.

Turne agayne, turne agayne, O ỹ Sulamite, turne agayne, turne agayne, ỹ we maye loke vpon the.

¶ The. vii. Chapter.

¶ Christ to the Synagoge.

What pleasure haue ye more A in the Sulamite, thã whẽ she daunceth amonge ỹ mẽ of warre?

¶ Christe to the Churche.

O how pleasaunt are thy treadynges wt thy shoes, thou princes daughter? Thy thinges are lyke a fayre iewel, which is wrought by a cõnyng worke maister: Thy nauel is lyke a round goblet, whiche is neuer without drinke: Thy wombe is lyke an heape of wheate sette aboute wt lylies: Thy two breastes are lyke two twynnes of yõge roes: Thy B necke is as it were a tower of yuory: thine eyes are like water poles in Hesebon, besyde ỹ porte of Bathrabbim: thy nose is lyke ỹ tower of Libanus, which loketh toward Damascus: That heade that standethe vpon the is lyke Carmel: the heare of thy heade is lyke the kynges purple folden vp in plates.

O how fayre & louely art thou, my dearlynge, in pleasures? Thy stature C is like a date tree, and thy brestes like the grapes.

¶ The spouse speakyng of the crosse.

I sayde: I wyll clymme vp into the date tree, & take hold of his braunches

¶ The spouse speakynge to the spousesse.

Thy brestes also shalbe as the vyne grapes, the smell of thy nostrels lyke ỹ smel of apples, & thy throte lyke ỹ best wine. This shalbe pure & cleare for my loue, his lippes & teth shal haue their pleasure. There wyll I turne me vnto my loue, & he shal turne hym vnto me.

¶ The churche speakyng to Christ.

O come on my loue, let vs go forth into ỹ feld, & take our lodging in the vyl D lages. In ỹ morning wyll we ryse by tymes, and go se the vyneyarde: yf it be spronge forth, yf the grapes be growne, & yf the põgranates be shot out. There wyl I geue the my brestes: ther shal ỹ Mandragoras geue their smel beside oure dores: there, O my loue, haue I kepte vnto the al maner of frutes, both new and olde.

His lefte hande lyeth vnder my heade, and his ryght hand embraceth me.

¶ The voyce of Christ.

I charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalẽ, ỹ ye wake not vp my loue, nor touch her, tyl she be content her selfe.

¶ The Synagog speakig of ỹ church

What is she this, that cõmeth vp from the wyldernes, and leaneth vpon her loue?

¶ The voyce of ỹ spouse before ỹ spousesse.

I am the same that waked the vp B amonge the apple trees, where thy mother bare the, where thy mother brought the into ỹ worlde.

¶ The Church speakynge to Christ.

O set me as a seale vpon thyne herte, any as a seale vpon thyne arme: for loue is mightye as the death, and gelousye as the hell. Her coales are of fyre, & a very flamme of ỹ Lorde: so that many waters are not able to quench loue, nether maye ỹ streames droune it. Yee yf a man wolde geue al the good of his C houle for loue, he shulde counte it nothynge.

¶ Christ speakynge of the churche to the Synagoge.

When our loue is tolde our ponge sister, whose brestes are not yet growne what shal we do vnto her?

¶ The answere of Christ for ỹ church.

Yf she be a wall, we shall buylde a syluer bowlwerck ther vpon: yf she be a tower, we shal faste her with borders of Cedre tree.

¶ The church answerethe to the Synagoge.

If I be a wal, & my brestes like towres, then am I as one that hath found fauoure in his syght.

The Synagoge speking to ỹ church.

Salomon had a vinyarde at Baal Hamon, this vineyarde delyuered he vnto the kepers: that euery one for the frute therof shoulde geue hym a thousand peces of syluer. D

¶ The voyce of Christ.

But my vineyarde, O Salomon, geueth the a thousand, and thre hundreth to the kepers of the frute. Thou that dwellest in the gardens, O let me heare the voyce, that my companions may herken to the same.

¶ The voyce of the church, speaking to Christ.

O get the awaye, my loue as a roo or a ponge herte vnto the swete smellynge mountaynes.

¶ The boke of the Prophete Esay.

¶ Esaye prophesyeth that the anger of God shall come vpon Jerusalem because of theyr synnes.

The first Chapter.

A THe prophecye of Esay the sonne of Amos, whych he shewed vpon Juda & Jerusalem: In the a*time of b* Ozias Joathan, Achaz, & Ezechias, Kings of Juda. Heare o heauē herkē O earth, for ỹ Lord speaketh, I haue nourished and brought vp chylderen, and they are fallen away fro me. An oxe knoweth hys lorde, and an asse hys masters stal, but Israell knoweth nothynge, my people hath no vnderstandinge. Alas for thys synfull people, which are expert in B blasphemyes, a frowarde generacion, vnnaturall chylderen. They haue forsakē ỹ Lord, they haue prouoked the holy one of Israell vnto anger, and are gone backwarde, wherfore shoulde yee be plaged any more? For they are euer fallyng awaye. The whole a* heade is syck, and the hert is very heuy. b* Frō the sole of the fete vnto the heade ther is no whole parte in al your body: but al at woundes, botches, sores & strepes which can nether be helped, bound vp, molyfyed, nor eased with any oyntmēt.

Your land lyeth waste, your cyties are brent vp, your enemyes deuour youre land, and ye must be fayne to stand, & loke vpon it: and it is desolate, as yt were with enemyes in a battel. Yea ouer* the daughter of Sion is lefte alone lyke a cotage in a vynyard like a watchehoule in time of warre, like a beseged citie. And excepte the lord of Hostes had left vs a few a lue: we shoulde haue bene as Sodoma, and like vnto Gomorra.

Heare the word of the Lord ye tyrantes of Sodoma, and herken vnto the lawe of our god, ỹ people of Gomorra

Why offre yee so many sacrifyces vnto me? I am discontēt for the brent-offrynges of wethers and with the fatnes of fed beastes. I haue no pleasure in the bloude of bullockes, lambes and gootes. Whē ye apere before me, who requyreth you to treade within me porches? Offer me no mo oblacions, for it is but lost laboure. I abhorre your incence, I maye not awaye with youre newmoones, your Sabothes & solempne daies. Your fastings ar also in vayne. I hate your newe holydayes and fastinges, euen fro my very herte They make me weery, I can not abide them. Though ye holde out your handes turne I mine eyes from you. And though ye make many prayes, yet here I nothing at al* for youre handes are ful of bloude.

Wash you, make you cleane, put awaye youre euel thoughtes out of my
C syght, cease from doing of euel & violence. Lerne to do right, applye youre selues to equite, delyuer the oppressed, helpe the father lesse to his ryght let, ỹ widdowes complaynt com before you. Now go to (sayth the Lord) we wil talke together. Is it not so? Though your synnes be as read as scarlet, shal they not be whyter then snowe? And though they wer like purple, shal they not be like white wolle? Is it not so? If ye be louing and obedient, ye shall enioye the best thinge that groweth in the land. But if ye be obstynate and rebellyous ye shalbe deuoured with the swerde: for thus the Lorde hath promysed with his owne mouth.

How happeneth it then that ỹ ryghtuous cytte, whych was full of equyte, is become vnfaythfull as an whore? ryghtuousnes dwelt in it, but now murtherers* Thy syluer is turned to drosse, and thy wyne myxt w̄ water. Thy princes are trayters and companions of theaues, They loue giftes altogether, & folow rewardes. As for ỹ fatherles, they helpe him not to hys ryght, nether wyll they let the widdowes cause com before them. Therfore speaketh the Lorde God of hostes the mighty one of Israell: ah I must ease me of myne enmyes and auenge me vpon them. And therfore I shall I lye my hande vpon the, and burne out thy drosse from the fynest āpurest, and put out al the lead and set thy iuges agayne as they were somtyme, and the Senatoures as they were from the begynnyng. Then shalt thou be called the rightuous cytte, the fayth full cytte. But Sion shall be redemed with equyte, and her captiuitie withe rightuousnes. For the transgressours and vngodly, and such as are becomme vnfaythfull vnto the Lorde, muſ̄ altogether be vtterly destroyed.

And except ye be ashamed of the oke trees wherin ye haue solaced, and of the gardens that ye haue chosen: yee shalbe as an oke whose leaues are fallen away, and as a garden that hathe no moysture. And as for the glorye of the thynges it shalbe turned to drye strawe & he that made thē to a sparcke And they shall both burne together, so that no man shalbe able to quench thē.

For the* lawe shal com out of Sion, and the word of God from Jerusalem, and shal geue sentence amōg the Heathen, and shal reforme the multitude of people:  So that they shal breake their swerdes &c. the. It is ye ỹ haue burnt vp my vyneyerde, the robbery of the poore is in youre house. Wherfore do ye op̄ presse my people, and marre the faces of the innocentes: thus shall the God of Hostes reuyle them.

Moreouer thus sayeth ỹ Lord: Seinge ỹ daughters of Sió are be cõ so proude, and com in with stretched out neckes, and with vayne wanton eyes: seynge thei come in tryppyngely nycely with their fete: Therfore shall ỹ Lorde* shaue the heades of ỹ daughters of Sion, and make their bewtye bare in ỹ daye. In that daye shall the Lord take awaye ỹ gorgiousnes of their apparel, & spanges, cheynes, partlettes, & colares, bracelets & hooues, ỹ goodly floured wyde & brodered ratment, brasshes & headbandes, rynges and garlandes, holy daye clothes & vales, kerchues & pynnes, glasses & smockes, bonettes and taches.

And in stede of good smell there shallbe stynck amonge them. And for their gyrdles there shalbe lowse bandes. And for wel sett heare there shalbe baldnes. In stede of a stomacher, a sack cloth, and for their bewte wyther̄dnes and sonne burnynge. Their husbandis and their myghtie mẽ shal perysh with the swerde in battell.

The notes:

a* That is, thou arte better apparelled, and richer then we, helpe vs with fode and other thynges necessarye. All the courses which the prophete here reciteth, were fulfilled in the destruction of Jerusalem.

b* Some reade: exactours or extorcioners. He noteth the couetousnes of prestes and pylates. God he re calleth the poore, widdowes, the fatherlesse, and all that are destitute of the comforte of thys worlde hys people: whom the pharisees then oppressed: now Prestes, and suche as falsely boaste them selues to be spirituall: Iustly called exactours, in as moch as they require their ryghte (as they call it) more by mens traditions, then by the worde of God: and doo not so feake soules to God, as many for them selues. Oppresse, that is, spoyle, pill, and euen haue, so that they leat leaue ought. What house, feld, or marchaudise is ther that rendereth them not some what? Whether ther be children chrystened, or mariages made, or men come to the table of the Lord: whether the locke be visited, ther is euer som what required. Furthermore they are not only accused to be couetous, but also to be women, that is, effeminate and womanly: because they moost fylthely & vdelly spende and waste that, which they haue scrapped with sudgyng, violence, and moost naughte factions.

c* To shaue the heddes of women is to make the comfounded and ashamed, for it is a shame to a woman to be shaue. 1. Corint. xi. a. So that the prophete herby signifieth, by a borowed speach, that Lorde shall make the doughters of Iurye confounded and vnderstande, the wemen of Iurye (by which ashamed, and bringe them to extreame adversitie and pouertie, and euen to nought. Iosephus maketh mencion that Jerusalem, whiche was the cheif Cyti therof, was ones so sampled by a certeyn woman of the citie ate her owne chylde. Likewise, som vnderstande euen here also by the daughters of ỹ the townes, vilages, and castels of lyon: as it doth in dede often signifye in the scriptures.

The .iiii. Chapter.

Of wante of men seuen women desyre to haue one man.

AT that time shall* their gates mourne & complaie, and they shal syet as desolate folck vpon the earth.

b Then shal seuen wyues take holde of one man, and saye: we wyl laye al oure meate and clothynge together in comẽ, only ỹ we may be called thy wyues, and that this shamful reproche maye be taken from vs. After that tyme shal ỹ c braunche of ỹ lord be bewtyful and myghtye, and the frute of the earth shalbe sayre and pleasaũt for those Israelites ỹ shal spyg therof. Then shal the remnaunt in Sion and the remaũt at Jerusalem be called holye: namelye al such as are wrytten among the lyuing at Jerusalem: what tyme as the Lord shal wash awaye the desolacion of the doughters of Sió, & pourg the bloud out from Jerusalem with the wynd of his smoke and fyre. Moreouer vpon all the dwellynges of the hyl of Sion and vpon their whole congregacion, shal the Lord prouide a cloude and smoke by daye, and the shyning of a flamyng fyre by nyghte: for vpon all their glory shalbe preserued. And Jerusalem shall be a tabernacle for a shadowe because of hete in the daye ty me, a place & refuge where a mã maye kepe him for wether and rayne.

The notes

a* The gates shal mourne and complayne, because not onely the soudyers shal perish with the swerd, but also the Iudges and geuers of sentence. He taketh the place of iudgment for the Iudges: for in Gates was iudgment wont to be geuẽ. Ruth iiii. Or, euen the gates shal be destroyed, and ne mã shal enter in nor go out therat, for ỹ gates mourne, if the people be not often sene in them.

b* Then shal vii wyues &c. The meanyng is. The .v. Chapter.

Of Christ and his vineyarde, wyth an execracyon of couetousnes and of dronckenes.

NOw well then, I wil singe mi beloued frende a songe of his vyneyarde. My beloued frende hath a vyneyarde in a very frutefull plenteous grounde. This he hedged, this he walled rounde about, & plãted it w goodly grapes. In ỹ myddest of it buylded he a towre, and made a* wynepresse therin. And afterwarde when he loked ỹ it shulde brynge him grapes, it brought forth thornes. I shewe yow now my cause (Oye Cytysens of Jerusalem & whole Juda:) Iudge I praye you betwixte me, & mi vineyard. What more coulde haue bene donne for it, that I haue not done? Wherfore then hath it geuen thornes, where I loked to haue had grapes of it?

Well, I shall tell you how I will do with my vineyard: I will take the b* hedge frõ it, that it maye perysh, & breake downe ỹ wall, that it maye be troden vnder fote. I wyl laye it waste, ỹ it shall nether be wissted nor cut, but beare thornes and breares. I wyl also forbyd the cloudes, that they shall not rayne vpon it. As for the vyneyarde of the Lorde of Hoostes it is the house of Israell, and whoole Juda his sayre plãtynge. Of these he loked for equyte but se there is wrõg: for rightuousnesse, lo, It is but mysery.

Wo be vnto you ỹ ioyne one house to another, & bringe one lande so nigh vnto another, tyll ye can get nomore grounde. Wyll ye dwell vpõ ỹ earth alone? The Lord of Hostes rownedeth me thus in myne eare: Shal not many greater & more gorgious houses be so waste, ỹ no mã shal dwell in the? And ten akers of vynes shall geue but a Quarte, and xxx. bushels of sede shall geue but thre. Wo be vnto them that ryse vp early to vse them selues in dronckennes, and yet at nyght are more superfluous wyth wyne. In those cõpanies are harpes and lutes, tabrettes & pypes, and wyne. But they regarde not the worcke of the Lorde, and consydre not the operacion of his handes. Therfor cõmeth my folke also in captyuite, because thei haue no vnderstandyng. Their glory shalbe myxte wyth hunger, and their pryde shalbe marred for thyrste. Therfore gapeth hell, and openeth her mouth maruelous wyde: that pryde, boostyng and wysdomme, with soch as reioyse therin, maye descende in to it.

Thus shall man haue a fall, he shalbe brought lowe, & ỹ hygh lokes of, ỹ proude layde downe. But ỹ Lord of Hostes, that holy God: shalbe exalted & vntouched, when he shal declare hys equyte and ryghtuousnesse after this maner: Then shall ỹ lambes eare theyr appointed fode, & shal fede plentously i the mountaynes. Wo be vnto vayne persones, that draw wyckednes vnto thẽ, as it were with a coorde: & synne, as it wer with a cart rop. Which vse to speke on this maner: let hym make haste now, and go forth with hys worke, that we may se it. Let the councel of the holy one of Israell come, and draw nye, that we maye knowe it.

Wo be vnto them that cal euel good, and good euel: which make darcknes lyght, and lyght darcknesse, that make sower swete, and swete sower. Wo be vnto them that are wyse in their owne sight, and thyncke them selues to haue vnderstandinge. Wo be vnto them, ỹ are connynge men to suppe oute wyne, and experte to set vp dronkennes. These geue sentence with the vngodly for rewardes, but cõdempne the iust cause of the rightuous.

Therfore lyke as fyre lycketh vpp the strawe, and as the flamme consumeth the stubble: Euen so (when their rote is full,) their blossome shall vanysh awaye lyke dust or smoke: for that despyse the law of ỹ lord of hostes, & blaspheme the woorde of the holye maker of Israell.

Therfore is the wrathe of the Lord kindled also agayn̄ st his people, and he c* shaketh his hande at them: ye he shall smyte so, that the hylles shall trẽble: And their karcases shall lye in the open stretes, lyke myre. After all this, the wrath of God shall not ceasse, but he shal stretch his hand wyder. And he shal geue a tokẽ vnto a straũg people, & call vnto the in a farre countre, & behold, they shal come hastely w spede. There is not one faint nor feble amonge them, no not a slogysshe nor slepery person. There shall not one of the put of the gyrdle from hys loynes, nor lowse they latched of his shue. Their arowes are sharpe, and their bowes bente. Their horse hokes are lyke flinte, and their cartwheles lyke a stormy wynd. Their crye is as it were of a lyon, and the roaringe of them lyke lyons whelpes. They shall roare, and hante the vp the praye, and no man shall recouer it or get it from them. In that daye thei shalbe so fearce vpon them, as the see. And if we loke vnto the lande, behold, it shall be all derckennes and sorow if we loke to heauen: beholde, it shall be darcke with carefull desperacion.

The Notes.

¶ Esay sawe the glorye of the Lorde, and was sent to prophesye the desolation of Iewrye.

¶ The vi Chapter.

A IN the same yere that kyng Ozeah dyed I sawe a* the Lord sitting vpō an hygh & glorious seate, and hys trayne fylled the palace. From aboue stode the Seraphins, wherof euery one had syx wynges. With twayne eche couered hys b* face, with twayn his fete, and with twayne dyd he flye. They cryed all eche one to other on thys maner: holy holy holy, is the Lorde of hostes. The whole worlde is full of his glorye. B Ye the geastes and dorpches moued at their crienge, and the house was full of smoke. Then I sayde: O wo is mee For I was astonished: that I, whych a man of vncleane lyppes, and dwell amonge people that haue vncleane lyppes also) shoulde se the kynge and Lord of hoostes with myne eyes:

Then flew one of the Seraphyns vnto me hauing a whote cole in hys hand, C whiche he hadde taken from the aulter with the tonges, & touched my mouth, & sayde: lo, this hath touched thy mouth, & thyn vnrighteousnes is take away, & thy synne forgeuen. After this I hert the voyce of the Lorde taking aduysement on this maner: whome shall I sende, & who wylbe our messengere then I sayd: here am I, send me. And he sayde: go, and tel this people a* ye shal heare in dede, but ye shal not vnderstād de, ye shall playnely se & not perceaue. Harden the hart of this people, stoppe their eares, & shut their yes, lest they se not w their eyes, heare not w their eares, and vnderstand not with their hertes, and conuerte and be healed.

Then spake I: Lorde how long? he answered: vntyl the cities be vtterly w out inhabitours, and the houses with out men, tyll the lande be also desolate, and lye vnbuylded. For the Lord shal take the men farre awaye, so that the lande shall lye waste. Neuertheles, the tenthe parte shall remayne therin, for it shall conuerte and be frutefull. And lykewyse as ỹ Terebintes & Okes trees bryng forthe their frutes, so shall the holy sede haue frute.

b* The aungels are counted to haue face, fete, and wynges, although they are in dede without a body or any bodelye membre, because that by the face or eyes we vnderstand knowledge: by the fete, dylygēt seruice, and by the wynges, quicke and readye expedicion, as in Ezechyel. i. b.

¶ The Sirians moue battell agaynst Jerusalem's virgyn shall beare a Chylde.

¶ The. vii. Chapter.

IT happened in ỹ tyme of Ahaz ỹ A sonne of Iohathā, which was ỹ sōne of Ozias kig of Juda: ỹ* Rasi the kyng of Siria, & Phaketh the sonne of Romeliah kinge of Israell: wēt vp toward Jerusalem to besege it, but wanne it not. Nowe when the house of Dauid (ỹ is Ahaz) herd word therof, ỹ Siria & Ephraym were confederate together: his herte quaked (ye & the herts all ofe his people) lykeas a tre in the felde, that is moued with the wynde.

Then sayde God vnto Esaye: go mete Ahaz (ỹ and thy sonne Sear Jasub) at ỹ head of ỹ ouerpole, in the fote path by Ahaz by the fullers grounde, and saye vnto hym, take hede to thy selfe and be styll, but fear not, nether be faynt harted, for these two tales: that is: for these two smokynge fyre brandes, the wrath and furiousnes of Razin the Sirian and Romeltes sonne: be cause that the kyng of Sirta Ephraim & Romeltes sonne haue wickedly conspired agaynst the, saying: We wyl goo downe into Juda, vexe them, and bryng them vnder vs, and set a kynge there, euen the sonn of Tabeel. For thus sayeth ỹ Lorde God ther to. It shall not so goo forth, nether come so to passe: for the head cytye of ỹ Sirians is Damascus, but the head of Damascus is Razin. And after fyue & thyrtye yeare, shall Ephraim be no more a people. And the chefe cytie of Ephraim is Samaria, but the head of Samaria is Romeltes sonne. And yf ye beleue not, there shal nor promyse be kepte with you. Moreouer, God spake vnto Ahaz, sayig: requyre atokne of the Lorde, thy God, whether it be towarde the depth beneth or towarde the height aboue. Then sayde Ahaz: I wyl requyre none, nether wyl I tempte the Lord. The Lorde answered: Then heare to, ye of ỹ house of Dauid: Is it not ynough for you, that ye be greuous vnto men, but ye must greue my God also? And therfore the Lorde shall geue you a token of hym selfe: Beholde, a virgin shall conceaue and beare a sonne, and shall cal his name a* Emanuel. Butter and hony shall he eate, that he maye know the euel, and chose the good. But or euer ỹ chylde come to knowledge, to eschue the euell and chose the good: The lande (that thou art so afrayde for) shal be desolate of both her kynges.

The Lorde also shall sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, and vpon thy fathers house (such as neuer came sence the tyme ỹ Ephraim departed frō Juda) thorow the kyng of ỹ Assirians. For at the same tyme b* shall the Lorde whistle for ỹ flies that are about ee the water of Egypt, and for the Bees in the Assirians lande. These shall come, and shall lyght al in the valeyes, in ỹ bawtes of stone, vpon all grean thynges, and in all corners.

At the same tyme shal the Lorde c* shaue d* the heatre of the head and the fete and the beerd cleane of, with ỹ c* rasoure ỹ he shal paye them withall be yonde the water: namely, with the kyng of the Assirians. At the same tyme shal a man liue with a cow, and two shepe.

Then because of the abundaunce of milck, he shal make butter and eate it. So that euerye one which remayneth in the lande, shal eate butter and hony. At the same time al vinyardes (though there be a thousand vynes in one, and were sold for a thousand siluerlinges) shalbe turned to breers and thornes. Like as they shal come in to the lande with arowes and bowes, so shall all ỹ land be come breres and thornes. And as for al hilles that now ar hewen downe, thou shalt not come vpon them, for feare of breres and thornes. But ỹ catel shall be dryuen thyther, and the shepe shal fede there.

The notes

The egipcians calleth he flyes, because ther be in Egipt many flyes: and the Assirians bees, because ther is in Assiria abundaunce of bees and honye. By the water of Egypte, he signifieth Nilus.

¶ The deliuerance of the lande by Emanuel. The stone of offence, at which many shal stomble

¶ The. viii. Chapter.

MOreouer the Lord sayde vnto me: Take the a greate leafe, & wrype in it, as men do with a penne, that he spede him to robbe, and haste him to spoyle. And immedetly I called vnto me faythful wytnesses Uzziah the preste, and Zachariah the sonne of Barachiah. After that went I vnto the Prophetisse, that nowe had conceaued and borne a sonne. Then sayde ỹ Lord to me: geue him this name: Maherschalal haschbas (that is: a spedie robber: an hasty spoyler). For why, or euer the chylde shal haue knowledge to saye: Abi and Imi, (that is father, and Mother): shall the ryches of Damascus and the substaunce of

of Samaria be taken awaye, thorow the kynge of the Assirians.

B The Lord spake also vnto me, sayinge: for so moch as the people refuseth the a* rennynge water of Silo, and put their delyte in Razin & Romelies sonne: Behold, ỹ Lord shal bringe vpō them: namely, ỹ kyng of ỹ Assirias with all his power. Which shall poure out his furiousnes vpon euery man & renne ouer al their banckes. And shal breake in vpon Juda, increasing in power, tyl he gett him bi ỹ throte. He shal fyll also the wydenesse of thy lande b* with hys brode wynges, O Emanuel. Go together ye people, & gather you, herken to all ye of farre countrees.

Muster you, & gather you: muster you & gather you, take your coūcel together, yet must youre councel com to nought, go in hande withal, yet shal it not prosper. Except Emanuel: (ỹ is god) be w

C vs. For the Lorde chastised me, & toke me by ỹ hāde, & warned me, saying vnto me: that I shuld not walcke in ỹ wate of this people. He sayd moreouer: rounde w̄ none of thē, whosoeuer sate: ponder people are bounde together. Neuer theles feare them not, nether be afraide of thē, but sanctyfye ỹ Lord of Hostes, lett hym be youre feare & drede. For he is ỹ sanctyfyeng & shoune to stombleat c* ỹ rock to fal vpō, a snar & net to both ỹ hous es: to Israel, & the inhabitours of Jerusalē. And many shall stomble, fall, and be brokē vpon him: yee they shalbe snared and taken. Now lape the witnesses together (sayde the Lorde) & seale ỹ lawe with my disciples. Thus I wayte vpon the Lorde yhath turned his face from the house of Jacob, & I loke vnto him. But lo, as for me, & ỹ children which ỹ Lord hath geuē me: we are atokē & a wondre in Israel, for the Lorde of Hostes sake, which dwelleth vpō the hyll of Syon. And therfore yf they saye vnto you: aske councell at ỹ sothesaiers, witches, charmers & conturers, then make them thys answere: Is there a people eny where, ỹ asketh not councell at his God: whether it be concernynge the dead, or the lyuynge.

If eny man want lyghte, let him loke vpon the lawe and the testymony, whether they spek not after this meanig. If he do not this, he stombleth and suffereth hunger. And if he suffer hunger, he is out of patience, and blaspheameth his kinge and his God. Then loketh he vpwarde, and downe warde to the earth, and beholde, there is trouble & darcknesse, veration is rouīd about hi, and the cloude of errour.

And out of such aduersite, shall he not escape.

a* He calleth ỹ kyngdom of Dauid, which figureth the kyngdome of Christ, the syluer rennynge water of Silo: which thing agreth very wel vnto Christe, ỹ was meke and lowly of hert. Mat. xi. d. He rayneth in sylē peasable consciences. & is a spryng at the fote of the hil of Sion: which hath not contynually water: but springeth certen houres and dayes, and commeth with a greate sound by ỹ bothom of the grounde, and ryses and boyles of an hard stony rocke. The maner of speking is borowed, of the despised ryuelnes of the water which signifieth the smal estimacion and powerty of the Christē.

And they stombled the sentence thus The Lord wyl be vnto the. ii. houses of Israel, that is, to the house of Juda and to the houses of the tribes: partly a sanctifieng (by which vnderstand helth and felycite) partly a ston to stomble at. So that some of both the houses shal be sanctified, and som shal stomble, but that chefely they of Jerusalem shal be snared. Who shal be sanctified, and who shal stomble and fal, doth S. ¶ The prophecyeth of Christis natiuites dominion, 3

EVen lyke as in time past it hath bene wel sene, that ỹ land of zabulon & the land of Nephtali (wher thorow ỹ see waye goeth ouer Jordane in to the lande of Galilee) was at ỹ fyrst in lytel trouble, but afterward sore vexed.

Neuertheles the people that haue dwelte in darcknesse, shall se a greate lyght. As for them that dwel in ỹ land of the shadowe of death, vpon thē shal the lighe shyne. Shalt thou multiply the people, and not increase ỹ ioye also? They shal reioyce before the euē as men make mery in harueste, and as men that haue gotten the victorye, when they deale the spoyle.

For

For thou shalt breake the a* pock of the peoples burthen: the staff of his shoulder and the rodd of his oppressours as in the b* daye at Madian.

Moreouer all temerarious and seditious pote (yee wher ther is but a cote fylde with bloude) shalbe burnt, & fede ỹ fyre. For vnto vs a child shalbe borne, & vnto vs a sonne shalbe geuen. Upon hys shoulder shall the kyngdome lye, & he shalbe called with his owne name: The wonderous geuer of councell, ỹ myghtie God, the euerlasting father, ỹ prynce of peace, he shall make no ende to encrease the kyngdome and peace and shall syt vpon the seate of Dauid and in his kingdom, to set vp the same, to stablish it with equyte and rygh tousnesse fro thence forth for euermore. This shal the gelusy of the Lorde of hostes bringe to passe. The Lord sent

C a worde in to Jacob, the same is come in to Israel. And ỹ people also of Ephraim, and they that dwel in Samaria, can saye with pryde and hye stomackes, on thys manr: The tyle workes is fallen downe, but we wil buylde it with harder stoues. The Wolbery timbre is broken, but we shal sett it up again w̄ Cedre. Neuertheles, thee Lorde shall prepare Razin the enemy against thē, & sorre their aduersatyes, ỹ the Sirians shal laye holde vpon thē before & the Philistines behynde, and so to deuoure Israel with open mouth.

After all this, the wrath of the Lord shall not ceasse, but yet hys hande shal be stretched oute styll. For the people turneth not vnto hym, that chastiseth them, nether do they seke the Lorde of Hostes. Therfore the Lorde shall rote oute of Israell both head and taple, braunche and twigge in one daye. By ỹ head is vnderstande the Sena toure and honorable man, & by the tatle, the Prophet that preacheth lyes. For all they which enfourme the people that thei be in arighte case, soch be dysceauers.

Soch as men thyncke also to be perfecte amonge these, are but cast awaye.

Therfore shall the Lorde haue no pleasure in their ponge mē, nether fauoure their fatherlesse & wydowes. For they are all togeither Ipocrittes and wicked, and al their mouthes speake foly. After al this shal not the Lordes wrath ceasse, but yet his hande shal be stretched out stil. For ỹ vngodly burne as a fyre in the bryers and thornes: And as it were oute of a fyre in a wood or a redde buesh, so ascendeth ỹ smoke of their pryde. D

For this cause shal the wrath of ỹ Lord of Hostes fal vpon the lande, & the people shalbe consumed, as it were with fire, no mā shal spare his brother. If a mā do turne hi to the right hand, he shal famish, or to the lyft hand to eate, he shal not haue ynough. Euery man shal c* eate the flesh of his owne arme: Manasses shal eate Ephrai, & Ephraim Manasses, & they both shal eate Juda. After al this shal not the Lordes wrath ceasse, but yet shal his hande be stretched out styl.

What wyl ye doin time of the visytacion and destruc cyon, that shall come from farre? To whoome wyll yee renne for helpe? or to whom will ye geue your honoure, that he maye kepe it: that ye come not amõ ge the prysoneres, or lie amonge the deed After al this shall not the wrath of the Lorde ceasse, but yet shall his hande be stretched out styll.

Wo be also vnto Assur, whych is A staf of my wrath, in whose hande ys the rod of my punyshment. For I shal sende hym among those ypocrytish people, amonge the people, ỹ haue deserued my displeasure shall I send him: ỹ he may vtterly robbe them, spoile thẽ, & treade thẽ do wne lyke the myre in the strete. Howbeit his meaning is not so, neither thinckeith his hert of this ỹ he shõ. but he ymagyneth only, how he may ouer thorow & destroye moch people for he sa ye th: are not my prynces all kynges, Is not[b] * Calno as easye to winne, as Charchamis? Is it harder to conquere Antiochia then Arphad? is it lighter to ouercome Damascus then Samaria? As wo say: I were able to wynne their kyngdom of the Idolaters, and them goddes but not Ierusalem and Samaria. Shal I not do vnto Ierusalem, and their ymages, as I dyd vnto Samaria and their ymages?

Wherfore the Lorde sayeth: As so one as I haue performed my whole worcke vpon the hyl of Syon, and Ierusalem, then wyll I also * visyte the noble and stoute kyng of Assiria, with his wysdome, and pryde. For he standeth thus in his owne conceate: Thys do I thorow the power of myne owne hãde/and thorow my wysdome: For I am wyse, I ambe that rem oue the landes of the people, I robbe their princes, & (like one of the worthyes) I dryue them from their hye seates.

My hand hath founde out the goodes D of the people: as were in a nest. And lyke as egges, that were layde here and there are gathered together: So do I gather all countrees. And there is no man that darse be so bold, as to touch a fether, that darre open his mouth, or once whisper.

But doth the axe boost it selfe, agaynst hi that heweth, ther with, or doth the sawe make eny brackynge agaynst hym that ruleth it? That were euen lyke as yf the rod dyd exalte it self, agaynst hym that beateth it: or as thoughe the staff shulde magnifye it selfe, as who saye: it were no wood

Therfore shal the Lord of hoostes send E him pouerte in his richeches, and burne vp his power, as it were with a fyre: But the light of Israel shalbe ỹ fyre his sanctuary shalbe the flamme, and it shal kindel and burn vp his thornes and bryers in one daye ye al the glorye of his woodes and feldes shal be consumed wt body and soule. As for hym selfe, he shal be as one chased awaye. the trees also of his feld shalbe of such anomber that a child maye tel them.

After that daye shall the remnaunte of Israell: and such as are escaped out of the house of Jacob, seke nomore con fort at hym that smote them but shal cõ fort them selues with faithfulnes and trueth in the Lorde the holy one of Israell. The remnaunt, ye and the hosterittle of Jacob, shall conuerte vn to God the myghtie one. For though ỹ F thy people (O Israell) be as the sande of the sea, yet shall but the remnaunte of them onely conuerte vnto hym. Perfecte is the iudgement of hym that flo weth in righteousnes, and therfor the Lorde of hoostes shall perfectly fulfyll the thinge that he hath determyned in the myddest of the whole worlde. Ther fore thus sayth the Lord god of hoostes: Thou my people, that dwellest in Sion, ben ot afrayde for the kinge of the Assyrians, He shall wagge his staf at the and beate the with the rodd as the Egipcians dyd some tyme: But soone after shal my wrath & mine indignacion be fulfilled against their blasphemyes.

The saluacion of the people.

Worcouer the Lord of hoostes shal pre pare a scourg for him like as was the punishment of Madian vpon ỹ mount of Oreb. And he shal lyft vp his rod ouer the se as he had sometime ouer the Egyptians. Then shal his burthen be take from thy shoulders, and his yocke from thy neck, ye the same yocke shall be corrupt for very fatnesse. He shal come to Riath, and go thorow to ward Migron. But at Machmas shal he muster his hoste, & go ouer the foorde * Gabaab shal be theyr resting place Rhamah shal be a frayed, Gabaah Saul shal fle a waye. The voyce of ỹ noyse of the horses (O daughter Gallim) shalbe herd vnto Lias and to Anathoth, which also shalbe in trouble. Madmena shal tremble for feare but ỹ cytezynnes of Gabim are manly, yet shalbe remayne at Nob that daye. After that, shal he lyft vp hys hande aga ynst the mount Sion, and agaynst ỹ hyl of Ierusalem. But se, the Lord god of hoostes shal take awaye the proude from thence, with feare. He shal hewe downe the proude, and fel the hie myn ded. The thornes of the wod shalbe roted out with yrõ, and Libanus shall haue a myghty fall.

[b] Or passage Vnder stand of Iordan.

The prophesieth of the natiuite of Christ & of his people: of the remnaunt of Israel, and of ỹ faith of the Heathen or gentils.

The .xi. Chapter.

AFter thys there shall come a rodd forth of the kynred of Iesse, and a blossõe out of his rote. The spyrete of the Lord shall lyght vp on it: the spyrete of wysdom and vnderst and ynge: thee spyrete of co uncell and strength. the spyrete of know ledge, and of the feare of God: and shal make him feruent in the feare of God.

For he shall not geue sentence after the thyng that shall be brought before his eyes, nether repproue a matter at ỹ fyrst he aryng: but wyth ryghtu ousne sse shall he iudge the poore, and withe holynges shal he reproue me the symple of the worlde.

He shall smyte the * worlde[b] * wyth the staf of his mouthe, & wt ỹ breath of hys mouth shall he slaye the wicked. Righteousnesse, shal be the gyrdle of his loynes, treuth and faythfulnesse, the gyrdynge vp of hys raynes. Then shal the wolfe dwell with the lambe, & ỹ Leoparde shal lye do wne by the gote Bullockes, Lyons & catell shall kepe company together, so that a lytle childe shall dryue them forth. The cowe & the Bere shal fede together, & their ponge. ones shal lye together. The Lyon shal eate straw like the oxe, or ỹ cowe. The chyld whyle he sucketh shal haue a de syre to the serpẽtes nest, & when he is we ned he shal put his hãd in to the Cocka tryceden nomã shal do euell to another, nomãshal destroy another, in al ỹ * hyl of my Sãctuary. For ỹ erth shalbe ful of the knowledge of the Lorde, uen as though the water of the se flowed ouer the earth.

Then shal the gentyles enquere after ỹ rote of Iesse (which shalbe set vp for a token vnto the Gentiles) for his dwel lynge shalbe glorious. At the same tyme shal the Lord take in hande againe, to conquere the remnaunt of his people which are left alyue. Frõ the Assirians, Egyptians, Arabians, Horitãs, Elamites, Caldeyes, Antiochiãs and Iland es of the see. And he shal sett vp a token among the Gentyles and gather toge ther the dispersed of Israell, yee & the out castes of Iuda from the foure cor ners of the worlde. The hatred of Eph zaim and the enmyte of Iuda shalbe cleane roted oute. Ephzaim shal beare no euell wyll to Iuda, & Iuda shal not hate Ephzaim: but they both together shal fly vpon the shoulders of the Philistines to warde the West, and spoyle them together that dwell towarde the East. The Idumytes and the Moabites shal let their handes fal and the Ammonites shalbe obedient vnto them.

The Lorde also shal cleue the tonges of ỹ Egyptyans see & with a mighty wynde shal he lyft vp his hande ouer Nilus, & shal smyte his seuen streames and make men go ouer dryshod. And thus shal he make a waye for his people, ỹ remaynyth frõ ỹ Assirias lyke as it happened to the Israelites what ti me they departed out of ỹ lãd of Egipt

a* The welles of the Sauiour are the word of god the doctryne of the gospel and promises of Christe, wherwith trembling soules and afflict consciences are refreshed out of these (saieth he) ỹ they shaldraw water, not out of mennes traditions: which are but podelles.

¶ The prophecieth the destruction of Babilon, ỹ captiuite, and the comming agayne of the people.

¶ The. xiii. Chapter.

A THis is ỹ heuy a* burthen of Babylon, which is the sonne of Amos dydst. b* Make some tokens to the hye c* hilles, call vnto them, holde vp your hande that the Prince maye go in at the doore. for I wyll sende for my d* debites and my gyauntes (saieth the Lord) and my wrath I wyl cal for soch, as triumphe in my glory.

Wyth ỹ, me thought I heard in the mountaines, people, like as it had bene of a great people: & a russhing, as though the kyngdomes of al nacyons had come together. (And the Lorde of Hostes was ỹ captayne of ỹ whole armye. As they had come not only out of farre countrees, but also from the endes of ỹ heauens: Euen the lorde hym selfe wt the mynysters of his wrath, to destroy the whole lande. Mourne therfore, for the daye of the lorde is at hande, & commeth as a destroyer from the almyghtye. Thẽ shal al handes beletten downe, and all mens hertes shal melt away, they shal stande in feare, carefulnesse and sorowe shal come vpon them, and they shal haue payne, as a womã ỹ trauayleth wt child. c* One shal euer B be a basshed of a nother, and their faces c* shal burne lyke the flamme.

For lo, the day of the Lorde shal come, terrible, full of indygnacyon and wrath, to make the land waste, and to roote out the synne ther of. For the sterres and planetes of heauen shall not geue their lyght, the sunne shalbe quenched in the rysynge, and the moone shal not shyne with hys lyght. And I wil punysh the wickednes of thes* worlde and the synnes of the vngodly, sayth the lorde. The hye stomakes of the proud wil I take awaye and wyll lay downe the boastinge of tyrauntes. I wyll make a man dearer then fyne golde, and a mã C to be more worthe, then a golden wedge of Ophyr. Moreouer, I wyll so shake the heauen that the earth shal remoue out of her place.

Thus shal it go wtth Babylon i the wrath of the Lord of Hostes in ỹ daye of his feareful indignacion. And Babilon shalbe as an hunted or chased doo and as a flocke wout a shepherde. Euery man shal turne to his owne people, and flee echone into his owne land. Who so is found alone, shal be thrust thorow. And who so gather together shal be destroyed wt the swerd. Their children shal be slayne before their eyes, their houses spoyled, and their wyues rauyshed. for lo I shal bring vp the Medes agaynst them which shall not D regard syluer, nor be desirous of golde then shal young mens bowes be knapped asunder. The Medes shal haue no pytie vpon women with chyld, and their faces shal not spare the children. And Babilon (that glory of kingdomes and bewtye of the Caldees honoure shal shall be destroyed, euen as god destroyed Sodome and Gomorra. It shal neuer be more inhabited, nether shal there be anye more dwellyng there, from generacion to generacion.

The Arabyans shal make no mo tentes ther, nether shal ỹ shepherdes make their folde there anye more: but wild b* beastes shal rye there, and the houses shalbe ful of greate Oules. Estriches shal dwel there, and Apes shal daunse there: the lytle Oules shal crye in the palaces, one after another, and dragons shal be in the pleasaunt parlours. And as for Babelõs tyme it is at hãd, and her dayes maye not be longe absent:

¶ The retourne of the people from captiuite. The prosperitye of the people of God, and affliccion of their enemyes. Th: pride of Babylon.

The. xiiii. Chapter.

BUt the Lorde wilbe mercyful vnto Jacob, and wyl take vp Israel agayne, and set thẽ in their owne lande. Straungers shal cleaue vnto them, and get thẽ to the house of Jacob. They shal take the people, and cary them home with them. And the house of Israel shal haue them in possesion for seruauntes and maydens in the lande of the Lorde. They shal take thos pyloners, whose captyues they had ben afore: and rule those that had opprest them. When the Lord now shal bringe the to rest, from the trauayle, feare, and harde bõdage that thou wast lade wt al: thẽ shalt thou vse this mockage vpõ ỹ king of Babilõ, & say te: How happeneth it that the oppressour leaueth of? Is the golden tribute come to an ende? Wouteles the Lorde hath broken the a* staf of the vngodly, and the scepter of the lordly. Which when he is wroth somtyme the people wt durable strockes, and in his wonders he persecuteth them: and taketh thẽ contynually. b* And therfore the whole worlde is now at rest and quyetnesse, and men synge for ioye.

Yee euen the fyre trees and Cedres of Libanus reioyce at thy fal, saying: Now that thou art layd downe, there come no mo vp to destroye vs c* Hel also trembleth at thy comming, al mighty men and princes of the earth, stepped forth before the. Al kynges of ỹ earth stand vp from their seates, ỹ they maye al (one after another) synge and speake vnto ỹ. Art thou wounded also as we art thou become lyke vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pride is gone downe to hel: Wothes shalbe laide vnder the, & wormes shalbe thy couering

How art thou fallen from heauẽ (d* O Lucyfer) thou fayre morning child hast thou gotten a fal euen to ỹ ground, ỹ ỹ (not withstanding e) dydest subdue the people? And yet ỹ thoughtest in thyne herte: I wyl clyme vp into heauen, and make my seate aboue the sterres of god, I wyl syt vpon the glorious mount towarde the North, I wil clyme vp aboue the cloudes, & wyl be like the highest of al. Yet darre I saye ỹ thou shalt be brought downe to the depe of hel. They ỹ se the, shal narowly loke vpon the, and thinche in them selues, saying: Is this the mã, ỹ brought al landes in feare, and made the kyngdomes afrayde: Is this he that made ỹ worlde in a maner waste, and laide the cities to the grounde, which let not his prisoners go home?

How happeneth it that the kynges of al people lye, euery one at home i his owne palace, with worshipe, and thou art cast out of thy graue lyke a wylde braunch: like as dead mens rayment ỹ are shut thorowe with the swerd: as they ỹ go downe to ỹ stones of ỹ depe:

as a deade coarse that is troden vnder fete: and art not buryed with them: Euen because that thou hast wasted thy land, and destroted thy people. For the generacion of the wicked shalbe with out honour, for euer. There shal away be sought to destroy their children, for their fathers wickednes: they shal not come vp agayne to possesse the lande, & fyl ỹ world full of castels and townes.

F I wyl stand vp against them (sayth the Lord of hostes) and root out the name and generation of Babilon (sayth the Lorde) and will geue it to the, Otters, and wil make water poddels of it. And I wyl swepe them out with the besome of destruccion, sayeth the Lorde of Hostes. The Lord of hostes hath swoorne an othe, saying it shal come to passe, as I haue determyned: & shalbe fulfylled as I haue deuysed. The Assirians shalbe destroyed in my lande, & vpon my mountaynes wyll I treade them vnder fote. Where thorowe hys yocke shal come from you, and his burthen shal be take from your shoulders. Thys deuyce hath God taken thorow the whole worlde, and this is his hãd stretched out ouer all people. For yf ỹ Lorde of Hostes determẽ a thing, who wyl disanulle it: And if he stretch forth hys hande, who wyl hold it in againe:

G The same yeare that kynge Ahaz died, God threatened by Esay on this maner: Reioyce not (ỹ whole Palestyna) as though the rod of him that beateth the were broken: for out of the serpentes rote, there shal waxe a kockatrice, and the frute shalbe a fyre worme. But the poore shal fede of the best thynges, and the symple dwell in safetye. Thy rotes wyl I destroy with hõger: and it shal slaye the remnaunt. Mourne yee portes, wepe ye cyties, and feare thou (O whole Palestina) for there shal come frõ the north a smoke, whose power no man maye abyde. Who shal then mayntayne the messages of ỹ Gẽtyles: But ỹ lord stablysheth Sion & ỹ poore of my people shal put their trust in him.

The notes.

a* By the staffe is vnderstand tyrranny, and by the kepter dominion.

b* Whyle Nabuchodonosor his childre lined ỹ people were not onlyoppressed, but also kynges and Princes, but when they were ones rydd out of the waye, then was mysserye and waylynge ended. By the worlde he signifieth the comens: and by figgtrees and cedres, the heades and rulers, as before in the .ix. c.

c* That is euen they that be in hel wil tremble, whẽ Nabuchodonosor commeth thether. It is figuratyp spoken to the further setting out of the mischef of Naburdonosor.

d* He compareth the death of Nabuchodonosor to the falling of Lucifer the morning sterre, whiche he calleth the childe of the morning, because it appereth onely in the morning. The meaning is: No such thinge ought to have happened vnto thẽ, that in earth wast lyke the morning sterre, which no mã can take out of heauen: And thou that wast comghtye, that thou destroyedst, what people ỹ wouldest and vnto whome it was a passyme to ouerthrowe nations, hast receaued such measure as ỹ thou ghtest. Such alike thinge is there in Ezec. xxviii. Against Kyng Cirus.

¶ The prophecy against Moab.

¶ The .xv. Coapter.

THis is the heuy burthẽ vpon Moab: Ar of Moab was destroyed (as me thought) in the nyght season: I The walles of Moab perysched in the nyght, and vanished away: They wente to Bayth and Dibon in ỹ hye places, for to wepe: Moab dyd mourne trõ Nebo to Medba: a* All their heades were colled, and al their beardes shaven. B In their stretes were they girded about with sacke cloth. In all toppes of their houses and stretes, was there nothing, but mournyng and wepyng. Hesebon and Eleale cried, that their voyce was herde vnto Jahaz. The worthyes also of Moab bleated and cryed for very sorowe of their myndes. Wo is my herte for Moabs sake: They fled vnto the cyte of Zoar, which is like a faire fruteful bullock, they went vp to Luhith, weping. The waye tow ard Horonaim was ful of lamentacon for the hurt. C The waters of Nimrim were dryed vp, ỹ grasse was wethered herbes destroyed and what newsfarye grene thing there was besyde. In like maner the thynge that was left them of their substaunce, they caryed it by water to Arsby. The crie went ouer ỹ whole lande of Moab: from Eglaim vnto Beer. was there nothing but mournynge. The waters of Dimon were full of bloude, for the enemye had sent thither a bonde of men, which as a lõ laye a wayte for the remnaunte of the land, and for them that were escaped.

The

a* In tymes past it was a token of mournynge, to shaue the heed and clippe the beard: and therfor saith the Prophete, that the Moabytes cut awaye their heares, for sorowe and carfulnes. Like thinge chaue ye in Jeremy. vii. f. Cut of thyne heare, and fall it awaye. &c.

¶ The destruccion Moab.

¶ The .xvi. Chaptter.

3 THen sent the Lordes of the lande a man of warre, frõ the rock that lyeth towarde the desert, a* vnto the hyll of the daughter of Syon,

(for as for the b* daugheters of Moab they were as it had bene a tremblynge hyrde, that is put out of her nest, by ỹ fery of Arnõ) which messenger sayde: gather your councel, come to gether, c* couer vs with your shadowe b* i the myddaye, as the nyght doth: hyde the chaled, and bewraye not them that are 15 fled, let the persecuted Moabites dwel amonge you, be oure open refuge agaynst ỹ destroyer: for the aduersary oppresseth vs, ỹ robber vndoeth vs, & the tyraunt dryueth vs out of oure lande. But the trone of your kingdom is ful of grace, therfore he that sytteth vpon it with kaythfulnesse and truthe in the houle of David, know the thing, and do his dilygence to help thorow, accordyng to equyte and rightuousnes.

As for Moabs pryde shal they answer, it is wel knowen. And al though they be excellent, proude, arrogant, and hye mynded: yet is their strength nothyng like. And therfore Moab complayneth vnto Moab, wher thorow they cõeal to mourne: & now that they be smytten, they take their deuyce beneth by ỹ byrche wal, and make their complaint.

C The suburbes also of Hesebõ were made waste, & ỹ Vines of ỹ gentiles, hewed downe ỹ byntardes of Sibma, which were plãted wt noble grapes, & spred vnto Jazer, & went vnto ỹ end of ỹ desert, whose braũches stretched their selues forth beyõd ỹ see. Therfore I mourned for Jazer & for ỹ vynyardes of Sibma wt grete sorow. I poured my teares vpõ Hesebõ & Eleale, for al the ryõges were layde downe: their harvest & gatherig of ther grapes: Mirth & there was gon out of ỹ feld & vintardes in so muche ỹ no mã was glad nor sõg. Ther wer no treder i to ỹ wineprzes esse, their mery chere was laid downe. Wherfore my bely tõbled (as it had bene a lute) for moabs sake, & min i ward D membres, for the byrch walles sake. For it happened thus also: when Moab saw ỹ she was turned vpsyde downe: she went vpõ hye in to her Sanctuary, to make her prayer there, but she myght not be helped. This is the deuyce, which he the Lord toke in hande at that tyme agaynst Moab. But now the Lord sayeth thus: In thre yeare shall the power of Moab with their põpe (whiche is greate) be mynyshed, lyke as the burthen of an hyred seruaunte. And as for ỹ remnaunt of thẽ, they shalbe lesse thenkewe, and not tekened moch worth.

The notes.

a* That is vnto the kingdom of Israel.

b* That is townes, cyties and vilages.

c* That is, refresh vs that are afflict, and geue vs a place to harbour in d* That is ỹ most precious hete of persecutiõ. So is ỹ middaie often taken, as in the Psal. xxxi. the sunne shal not burne the by daye

¶ The prophecy against damascus.

¶ The .xvii. Chapter.

THis is the heuy burthen vpon A Damascus: Beholde Damascus shal be no more a cytye, but ã heape of broken stones. The cytyes of Aroer shalbe waste: the cattell shall lye there, & noman shal fraye them awaye. Ephraim shal nomore be strõge, & Damascus shall no more be a Kyngdome. And as for the glory of ỹ remnaunt of ỹ Syrians, it shalbe as the glory of ỹ chyldrẽ of Israel, sayeth the Lorde of Hostes. At that tyme also shall the glory of Jacob be very poore, & his fatnes leane. It shal happẽ to thẽ, as whẽ one cheareth in harvest, which cutteth hys B hand full with ỹ sickle, & whẽ one gathereth cheaues together i ỹ valleye, of a* Raphaim, there remayneth yet some eares ouer: Or as when one shaketh ã olyue tree, wherin kyndeth but two or three olyue bezies aboue i ỹ toppe, & foure or fyue i ỹ braunches. Thus ỹ Lord God of Israel hath spokẽ, Thẽ shal mã consyder agayne vnto his maker, & turne his eyes to ỹ holy one of Israel. And shall not turne to ỹ aulters ỹ are ỹ worke of his owne handes, nether shall he loke vpon groues & ymages, which his fingers haue wrought. At ỹ same time shal their strõg cities be desolat lik as they were once ỹ for sake plowes & corn, wt they forsoke) for fere of ỹ chyldre of Israel. So shalt ỹ (O Damascus) be dessolate, because thou haste forgotten God thy sauyour, and haste not called to remembraunce the rock of thy strengthe.

Wherfore thou hast also set a fayre plant, and grafted a straung braunch. In the daye when thou dydest plant it, it was greate, and gaue soone ỹ frute of thy sede: But in the day of harueste ỹ shalt reap an heap of sorowes & mysteris

Wo be to the multitud of much people, that rusch in like the see, and to ỹ heape of folcke, that renne ouer al lyke greate waters. For thoughe so manye people encrese as the flowing waters, and though they be armed, yet they fle ferre of, and banysch awaye lyke ỹ dust with the wynde vpon an hyl, and as ỹ whyrle wynde thorow a storme. Though they be fearefull at nyght, yet in ỹ morning it is gone with them. Thys is their porcyon, that do vs harm, and heritage of them that robbe vs.

¶ A prophecy agaynst Egypt.

¶ The. xviii. Chaptter.

A WO be to the land of flyeng chyppes, which is of thys sede, ỹ floud of Ethiopia: which sendeth her messag ouer the see in chyppes of redes vpon the water: and sayeth: goo soone, and do your message vnto a straung and herd folke: to a fearefull people, and to a people that is further thē this: to a desperate and pylled folcke, whose lande is deuyded from vs with ryuers of water. Yee all ye ỹ syt in the compasse of the world, & dwel vpō the earth: when the token shalbe geuen vp on the mountaynes, then looke vp: and B when the Hoorne Blowethe, thenne herken to, for thus hath the Lord sayd vnto me. I laye me downe, and pōdred the matter in my house, at the Noone day, when it was hote: And there fel a misting shower lyke a dew, as it happeneth i Harueste. But ỹ frutes were not yet ripe cut of, & ỹ grapes wer but yōg & grene. Thē one smote of, ỹ grapes wt an hoke, yee he hewed downe also ỹ bowes & ỹ braūches, & did cast thē away. And thus they were layde waste, for ỹ foules of the mountaynes, and for the beastes of the earth together. So that the foules sat ther vpon, & the beastes of ỹ earth wintered there. Then shall there be a present brought vnto the Lorde of Hostes: euē that harde folke, that fearful folke, & that further is then thys: that desperate and pylled folkr (whose landis deuyded frō vs with floudes of water) vnto the place of the name of the Lorde of Hostes: euē vnto the hyll of Syon.

¶ The prophecyeth styll agaynst Egypt.

¶ The. xix. Chapter.

THys is the heuy burthē vpon Egipt: Beholde, the Lorde wylle ✳ ryde vpon a swyfte cloude, & com into Egypte. And the goddes of Egypt shall tremble at his cōmynge, & the hert of Egypte shall quake wyth in her. For thus sayeth the Lord: I wil stere vp the Egypcyans one agaynst another amōge thē selues, so that one shalbe euer agaynst his brother and neyghbour, yee one cyte agaynst another, & one kingdom agaynst another. And Egypt shalbe choked in her selfe. When they aske councel at their goddes, at their Prophets, their sothsayers & witches: then wyll I bryngе their counsell to naught. I wyll deliuer Egypt also into the handes of greuous rulers, and a cruell Kinge shall haue the rule of them. b ✳ The water of the see shalbe drowne out. Nilus shall syncke awaye, & be drōcke vp. The ryuers also shalbe drawn out, the welles shal decaye and drye awaye. Rede & rush shall fayle, ỹ grasse vp the waters syde or vpō the ryuers bāck, ye and whatsoeuer is sowed by the waters, shalbe wythered, destroyed, and brought to naught. The fyshers shal mourne, al soch as cast angles in the water, shall cōplayne, & they that spreade their nettes i the water, shalbe fayne hartted. Soch as laboure vpon flax & sylck, shal com to pouerte, & they also that weeue fine worckes. All the poundes of Egypte, all the pollycye of their Moates and dyches shall come to naught.

Yee the vndyscrete princes of Zoan, the coūcell of the wise Senatoures of Pharao, shal turn to foly (how se they darre boast and say of Pharaos behalfe: I am come of wyse people, I am come of the olde regall Progeny. But where are now the wyse men? Let them tell the and shew the, what the Lord of Hoostes hath taken in hand agaynst Egypt. Foles are those princes of Zoan, and prounde are the Princes of Noph: yee they deceue Egypt with theyr nobylitie of their stocke. For the Lorde hath made Egypt droncken with the spryte of errour, and they shal vse it in al matters: euen lyke as a dronken man goeth spewynge about. For Egipte shall lack good counsel, so that they shal not know what to do, nether beginig, nor ende nether vpon the lande nor water. Thē shall the Egipcians be lyke vntoo wemē, afrayd and astonyed, at the lyfting vp of the heade, which the Lord of hoostes shal lyft vp ouer them. The Lande of Juda also shal make the Egyptiās afrayde, who so doth but speake vpō it, shall put them in feare: And that because of the counsell, which the Lorde of hoostes hath deuised agaynst them. Then shall the fyue Cities of Egypte speake wyth the Cananites tonge, and sweare by the lorde of hoostes, and Heliopolys shalbe one of them. At the same tyme shall the lorde of Hoostes haue an aulter in the myddest of the land of Egypte, with this title therby. Unto the lord. Thys shal be a token or testymony vnto the Lord of Hostes in the land of Egypt, when they shal crye vnto hym, because of those that oppres them: that he shal sende them a. Captayne and a sauyoure to delyuer them.

Moreouer, Egypte shallbe boughte vnto the lord, & the Egipcians also shal know the lord at ỹ same tyme: they shal do hym reuerence with peace offerings, and with meat offrynges: they shal promyse hym offrynges: yee and paye hym also. Thus the lord shall smyte Egypt, and heale it agayne: and so shal they turne to the lord, and he shal haue mercy vpon ỹ, and saue them. Thē shal there be a comen waye out of Egypt in to Assiria. The Assiryans shall come in to Egypt, and the Egypcyans into Assiria. The Egipcians also and the Assirians shall both haue one Goddes seruyce.

Then shal Israel with honoure be the thyrde to Egipte and Assur. And the Lord of hosts shal blesse them, saying: Blessed is my people of the Egiptiās, Assur is the worcke of my handes, but Israel is myne enherytaunce.

The Notes

a ✳ To ride vpon a swyft cloude is, to vysit & punysch quyckely and with expedition: as the cloudes go swyftly in the ayre from region to regyon.

b ✳ The water of the see shalbe drawen out. &c. Egypt (as storyes shew) receaueth no rayne forth of ỹ ayre, but is ouer flowed with the water Nylus at certen times, xiiii, xv. vbi, cubytes hyght from ỹ ground: For yf it increase to any lesse heyght, the countrey eskapeth not a darth, saith Plin. And therfore by the fearsnes and want of water is the desolation of the lande described. Nilus is here called by diuers names, some tyme the see, some tyme riuers, some tyme welles, some tyme poundes. &c. For that floud runneth. vii. sonye waies, and it is caled the see, not only because the Hebrues cal al congregatiōs of waters ỹ see, generally: but also because it was of old tyme a constant opinion after the Storyes, that yt hath his original begynnyng from the Ocean see.

Ye maye also vnderstand by the dyches of Nilus, ỹ it ouerflowed not the lande, contrary to the old accustomed maner therof. Some had leuer haue thys to be figuratly applyed. As there be certen waters of the gospel, wich the holy goost geueth, so are ther also the troublous waters of Egipt, that is, of worldly doctrine. Therfore when the worde of God is ones herde, these watres drye vp: For ỹ holy goost repreheneth the worlde of synne, and openeth and declareth the worckes of darknes. In those waters do rede & rushe grow, that is, vayne & tryfling worckes, suche as are the worckes of hipocrites, which after the outward shew & apearāce seame grene & fresh, but are within vayne and nought worth.

¶ Agaynst egipt and Ethiopia

¶ The xx Chapter.

IN the same yere that Thartan cam to Asdod, wher Sargō the king of the Assirians sent hi what tyme as he also beseged Asdod, and wanne it the same season: Then spake the Lorde vnto Esay the sone of Amoz, saying: go & lowse of that sacke cloth from thy loynes, and put of thy shues from thy fete. And so he dyd, goyng nacked and barefote. Thē sayd the Lord: where as my seruaunt Esay goeth nacked and bare fote, it is a token and signifieng of ỹ thing, ỹ after thre yeare shal cōe vpō Egipt & Ethiopia. For euen thus shall the Kynge of the Assirians dryue both yong and old, as prisoners naked and bare fote, oute of Egipte and Ethiopia. And shall discouer the shame of Egept. They shall be also at their wyttes ende, and ashamed one of another: the Egipcy ans of the Mozpans, and the Mozpās of the Egipcians, at the sight of their glozy. a* Mozouer, they that dwel in ỹ Iles shal se euē the same daye: behold, this is oure hope, to whome we fled to seke helpe, that we might be delyuered from the kynge of the Assyrians. How wyl we escape.

The notes

a* Some reade: And he that dwelleth i this Ile shal se. Jerusalem and the lande of Juda is ruthly called an Ile, because it was beset rounde about with enemyes and wicked nacyons, as it had bene with the seas: therfore ought it to haue trusted to the only healpe and ayde of god. The church also is an Ile, that is troubled with diuers stormes, and that by the onely healpe of God is in safetye: For he suffereth not the persecuters to persecut any further, thē the church may suffer, or thē is profitable for it ¶ Agaynst babylon, I dumea Arabia.

¶ The .xxi. Chapter.

A THis is the heuye burthē of the a* waste see: A greuous vysyon was shewed vnto me, lyke as when a storme of wynd and rayne rusheth in from the wyldernes, that terrible lande. Who so maye deceaue (sayd the voyce) let him deceaue: who so maye dystroye, let him dystroye. Up Elam, belege it O Madai: for I wyll stynt all their grouynges. With thys, ỹ reynes of my backe were ful of payne: Panges came vpon me, as vpon a woman in her trauayle. When I herd it, I was a basshed: & when I loked vp, I was afraide. Myne hert panted, I trēbled for feare. The b* darcknes made me fearful in my mynde.

B Yee soone make ready the table (sayde this voyce) kepe the watch, eate & drynke: Up ye Captaines, take you to youre shylde, for thus the Lord hathe charged me: go thy waye, & set a watchman, ỹ he may tel what he seeth. And whē he had wayted dylygently he sawe two horsemen: the one rydinge vpon an Asse, the other vpon a camel. And the lyō cryed: Lord, I haue stand waytinge al the whole daye, & haue kept my watch all the nyght. With that came there one rydyng vpon a charete, which answered, and sayde: Babylon is fallen, she is turned vpsi downe, and all the ymages of her Godes are smytten to ỹ grounde. This (O my felow threshers & fanners) haue I herd of ỹ Lord of Hoostes the God of Israel, to shewe it vnto you.

¶ The heuy burthen of Duma.

One of Seir cryed vnto me: Watchemā what hast thou espied by night, watchman what hast thou espied by night. C The watchman answered: The daye breaketh on, and the night is commig: If your request bee earnest, then aske and come agayne.

¶ The heuy burthen of Arabya.

At euen ye shal abide in the wood in the daye towarde Dedanym. Mete the thurstie withwater (O ye Cytesins of Hema) mete those with bred that are fled. For they shall runne awaye from the weapen from the drawen sweorde, from the bent bow, and from the great battell. For thus hath the Lorde spokē vnto me, ouer a yeare shal al the power of Cedar be gone, lyke as when the office of the hyred seruaunt goeth oute: And the remnaunt of the good archers of Cedar shalbe very fewe: For the lorde God of Israell hath spoken it.

The Notes

a* By the waste see is vnderstande Babilon. It is so called, because of the exceding great cruelnes & tiranny wherwith is ererepsed the Jewes. Hereof is there a Prouerbe: Babylon is a see of euel lees, and euen the west of the see: that is the most pestuous and desolat place, and that is lest possible to be sayled thorow.

b* By darcknes here do some vnderstand tribulacion and aduersite as before in the .v.g. If we loke. &c. it shalbe al darknes and sorow.

A Prophecy against Jerusalem.

¶ The xxii Chapter.

THe heuy burthen vppon the a* valley of visions. What hast ỹ there to do, that thou clymmest vp into the house toppe, O thou Cite of myracles, seditious and wylfull? seinge, thy slayne men are neither kylled with swerde, nor dede in battell: for all thy captayns gat them to theyr horses, from the ordynaunce, yee they are altogether rydden awaye, and fledde far of. When I perceaued that, I sayde: awaye fro me that I maye wepe bitterly. Take no labour to persecute me as touchinge the destruction of my people. For this is the daye of the Lorde of Hoostes, wherin he wyl plage, tread downe, and wede out the valley of, by syons and breake down the walles, with such a cracke, that it shall geue a sou-

de in the mountaynes.

I sawe the Elamytes take the quyuers to carte & to horse, and ỹ the wales were bare frō harneste. Thy goodly valleys were ful of charettes, the horsemen made them soone to besege the gates. Then was the couerynge of Juda put from thence, and then was sene the sege of the timbre house. There shalt se the ryches in the walles of the cite of David, wher of there shalbe many. Ye shall gather together the waters of the lower pole, and tell the houses of Jerusalem, & breake of some of them to kepe the walles. And ye shall make a ppt betwixte the two walles of the water of holde pole, & nothinge regarde him, that toke it in hande, & made it. And at the same time shal the Lord of Hostes call men to weptinge, mournyng, to baldnesse and puttynge on of sack cloth. But they to fulfil their lust & wylfulnes, slaughter oxen: they kyll shepe, they eate costly meate, & drynke wyne, * let vs eate & drynck, for to morow we shall dye. Neuertheless when the Lorde of Hostes hearde of it, he sayd yee: yf this wickednes of youre shalbe remitted, ye must dye for it. This hath ỹ Lorde God of hostes spokē. Thus sayth the Lorde God of Hostes: Go in to the treasurye vnto Sobna the Gouernoure, & saye vnto him: What hast thou here to do? & from whence comest thou: that thou hast made the a graue here? For he had caused a costly tombe of stone to be made for hym selfe, & a place to lie in to be hewē out of a rock. Beholde, the Lorde shall cast the out by violence, he wyll deck the of another fashyon, & put vpon the a straunge cloth, he shall carye the ito a farre countre, lyke a bal with his hādes. There shalt thou dye, there shall the pompe of thy charettes haue an ende: thou vyleyn of the house of the Lorde: I wyll shutte the out of thyne office and put thy from thyne estate.

After this wyll I call my seruante Eliakim, the sonne of helkiah, and araye hym with thy cote, and gyrde him with thy gyrdle, and I wyll geue thee power into his hande. He shalbe a father of the citesyns of Jerusalem, & of ỹ kired of: Juda I wil also lay ỹ b* ket of Dauids house vpō his shoulders, & yf he open, no man shall shut: and if he do shut, no mā shall open. I wyll fasten him to a nayle in the place of the moost hyghe fayth ful nelle, & he shalbe vpon the glorious trone of his fathers house. They shal hāg vpōn al the glory of his fathers house, of ỹ child & childers childrē al apparel smal & great, al instrumētes of measure & mulyke. This shalbe topasse (sayeth ỹ Lord of Hostes) when the nayle that is fastened to the place of the hyghest fayth ful nelle, shalbe plucked of. And when ỹ weght that hangeth vpon it, shall fall, be brokē, & hewen i peces. For the Lord hym selfe hath sayde it.

The notes,

o* Jerusalem is caled the valey of vysiōs, because it had so many seers, that is, prophetes and techers in gods worde.

¶ A Prophecy agaynst Tyrus, and a promes to restore it agayne.

☞ The .xxiii. Chapter.

A N heuy burthen vpō Tyrus / Mourne ye shippes of Tharsis, for she is throwē downe to ỹ grounde, & cōquered of them that are come from Cethim. The indwellers of the Ilandes the marchautes of Sidon, and they that occupyed the see (of whom thou wast ful sometime) ate at apointe. For by se were ther frutes brought vnto ỹ, and all maner of corne by water. Thou wast the comen marcket of all people. Sidon is sory for it, yee & all the powre of the see cōplayneth, & sayeth: O ỹ I had neuer traueled with chylde, that I had neuer borne any, that I had nether norysshed boye, ner brought vp daughter.

B As soone as Egipte perceaueth it, she wylbe as sory as Tirus it selfe. Go ouer a* the see, mourne ye that dwel in ỹ Iles. Is not that the glorious cite, whiche hath bene of longe antiquite: whose netiues dwellyng farre of, commend her so greatly? Who hath deuysed suche thinges vpō Tirus ỹ crowne of al cities, whose marchaūts & captaynes wer ỹ highest & princypal of ỹ world

Euen the Lorde of hoostes hath deuysed it, ꝑ he may put downe all pōpe, & mynysh all the glory of ꝑ world. Go thorow thi lande (O thou daughter of the see) as men go ouer the water, and there is not a gyrdle more.

Thus the Lorde that remoueth the kyng, domes, & hath taken in hande a gaynst that myghtye Canaan to rote it out, hath stretched out his hand ouer the b* see, and sayde: From hence forth shalt thou make no more myrth (O ꝑ daughter of Sidon: for thou shalt be put downe of the Cethens. Stande vp therfore, and go where the enemye wyll cary the, where thou shalt also haue norest. Behold (for thine ensample, The Chaldees were soche a people, that noman was lyke them, Assur buylded them: he set vp hys castels and broke them downe agayne. And ther fore mourne (ye shyppes of the see) for youre power shalbe thrownе downe.

After that, shall the .lxx. yeares of Tyrus (euē as longe as their kynges lyfe was) be forgotte. And after .lxx. yeares, it shall happen to Tirus as with an harlot that playeth vpō a lute, Take thy lute (saye men to her) and go aboute the cytye, thou art yet an vnknowne wenche, make pastyme with dyuerse balettes, wherby thou mayest cō in to acquauntāūce. Thus shall it happen after .lxx. yeares. The Lorde shall vysyt the cytye of Tyrus, and it shall come agayne to her marchaundyse, & shal occuppe wyth al the kyngdomes that be in the worlde. But all her occuppynge and wynnynge shalbe halowed vnto the Lorde. For then shall they laye vpō thyng beynde them nor vpon heapes: but the marchaundyse of Tirus shal belonge vnto the eyteslyns of the Lorde, to ꝑ feadyng and sustennynge of the hungrye, and to the clothinge of the aged.

The notes.

a* Some reade: into Tharsus. He speaketh vnto the marchauntes of Egypte & to the marchāūtes of the Iles: ꝑ they now get thē to Tharsus, be cause Tyrus is destroyed.

b* He meaneth Tyrus, which standeth in the see.

¶ Prophecye vpon the tribulacyon that shall fall vpon the worlde, because of synne.

¶ The .xxiiii. Chapter.

Beholde, the Lord shall waste & plage the worlde, be shall make ꝑ face of the earth desolate, & scatre abrode the inhabytoures ther of. Then shall the a* preast be as the people, the master as the seruaūt, ꝑ dame lyke ꝑ maide, the seler like the byer, he that lendeth vpon vsury, like vnto him ꝑ borroweth vpō vsury, the creditoure, as the detter. Yee myserably shall the world be wasted & clene destroyed. For the Lorde hath so determed in him selfe. The earth shalbe heuye & decaye. The face of ꝑ earth shall perish & fall awaye, ꝑ proude people of the worlde shall come to naught. For the earth is corrupte of her indwellers.

For why: they haue offended the lawe, channged the ordinaunces, and made the b* euerlasting testament of none effect. And therfore shal the curse deuoure the earthe: for they that dwell theron haue synned, wherfore they shal be brēt also, and those that remayne, shalbe very fewe. The swete wyne shal mourne, the grapes shalbe weake, and al that haue bene merye in herte, shall syghe. The myrth of tabzettes shalbe layde downe, the cheare of the toyful shal ceasse, and the pleasure of lutes shal haue an ende: there shall no more wine be dronken with myrth, the beere shall be bytter to the that dryncke it, the wicked cities shalbe broken downe, all houses shalbe shutt, that no man maye come in.

In the stretes shall there be lyft vp a crye because of wyne, all mens chere shall vanysh awaye, and all ioye of the earth shal passe. Desolacion shal remayne in ꝑ cities, and the gates shalbe smitten wyth wastnes. For It shal happen vnto all Landes and to all people lyke as when a man smyteth downe the olyues/that are left vpon the tree: or seketh after grapes, when the wine gethering is out. And those same (that remayne) shal lyft vp theyr voyce/ and be glad/ & shall magnifye the glory of the Lorde euen from the see/ and prayse the name of the Lorde God of Israel, in the valeys and Ilondes. We heare songes song to the prayse of the righteous, trō al al the endes of the worlde. Therfore I muste speake: O myne vnfrutfulnes, O my powertie. Wo is me, al is full of synners, which offende of purpose and malyce. And therfore (O thou that dwellest vpō the earth) there is at hande for the, feare, pyt and snare. Who so escapeth thy terreble crye, shall fall into the pyt. And yf he come out of the pyt, he shalbe taken vō the snare. For the D wyndowes aboue shalbe opned, and the fondacion of the earth shal moue. The earth shall geue a greate crack, it shall haue a sore rupne, & take an horrible fall. The earth shall stacker lyke a droncken man, & be takē awaye lyke a tent. Her mysdedes shall lye so heuy vpon her, that she must fal, and neuer rise vp agayne. At the same tyme shall ꝑ Lord muster together the hye hooste above, and the kinges of the worlde vpon the earth. Theye shalbe coupled together as prysoners be, & shalbe shut in one warde and punished innumerable dayes. The Moone and the Sunne shalbe ashamed when the Lorde of hoostes shall rule them at Jerusalem vpon the mount syon, before and with hys excellent councell.

The notes

b* Some do vnderstande by the euerlasting Testament, not only that whych was made to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: but also the law of nature, which is written in oure hertes. Other vnderstande therby the lawe of charitie. For that is no new commaūdemēt, but a cōmaūdemēt frō ꝑ beginig. The lawe of charitye is ꝑ lawe of the spyrite. He that loveth hys neighbour hath fulfylled the lawe. Roma. xiii. Gal. v ¶ thankesgeuyng to God for hys workes.

¶ The .xxv. Chapter.

A Lorde, thou art my God, I wyl prayse the, and magnifye thy name: for thou hast wrought marueylous thinges to passe, according to thyne olde councels, truly and stedfastly: Thou makest of townes, heapes of stone: & of head cities broken walles: The palaces of the wicked destroiest thou out of the cittie, that they shal neuer be builded agayne. Therfore the very rude people muste magnifye the/ and the Cityes of the cruell Heathen muste feare the. For thou art the poore mans helpe, a strenght for the needefull in his necessitie, Thou art a defēce against euel weather, a shadowe agaynst the heat. But vnto the presumptuous, thou art lyke a stōrme whyrlewynde, that casteth down the B wall of the vngodlye: thou kepest me from heate, with the shadow of the cloudes, thou cutest of the braunches of Tirauntes.

Moreouer the Lorde of hoostes shall ones prepare a feast for al people vpon the hyll: A plenteous, costly, pleasaunt a* feast of fat and well fed beastes, of swete and moost pure thynges. Upon the b* hyll shall he take awaye the syde vale that hangeth before the face of all people, and the couerynge wherwith all gētyles are couered, as for deathe, he shall vtterly consume it. The Lord God shal wype away the teares from all faces, & take awaye the confusyon of hys people thorow the whole world. For the lorde hym selfe hath sayde it.

It the same tyme shall it be sayd: lo, this is our God, in whome we put our trust, and he hath healed vs. This is ꝑ Lord that we haue wayted for: Let vs C reioyse and delyte in hys helth: For the hande of the Lorde ceaseth vpon this hyll. But Moab shalbe threshen down vnder hym, like as the straw is troden vnder fete in a dōg hyl. For he shal stretche out hys hands vpon hym lyke as a swymmer doth to swymme, and wyth ꝑ power of hys handes shall be cast downe his pompe. As for his stōg holds and hye walles: he shal bowe them, cast them downe, and fell them to the ground vnto dust.

The notes

a* By ꝑ fest of fat & wel fed bestes, & of swete & moost pure thynges, is betokened the anger and indignacion of God as the scripture doth often signify the same vnder the name of a cuppe. zach. xii. a Beholde I wyl make Jerusalem a cuppe of surfet vnto al the people that are rounde about her.

b* By the hyl is meant the hyl of Sion, by whiche is sygured the church. There wyl the Lord iudge, & delyuer vs from al our enemyes. By the vale & couering, vnderstand, synne: wherin al men are founde gylty. Roma. iii. Al men haue synned. &c. From it hath the Lord delyuered al men, which beleue that he hath freely done it, of his only mercy for Christes sake, and not of their deserynges. Rom. iii. b ¶ Songe of the delyuerance of the people.

¶ The .xxvi. Chapter.

Then

A THen shall thys songe be song in the lande of Juda. We haue a stróg citie, the walles & the ozdynaunce shall kepe vs. a* Open the gates, that the good people maye goi, whych laboureth foz the trueth. And ỹ, which art the doar & hast the matter in hãde: shalt pzouyde foz peace, euẽ the peace that men hope foz i the. Hope styl in the Lozde, foz in the Lozde God is euerlastynge strength. Foz wht, it is he, ỹ bzyngeth lowe the hye minded cyteseyns, & casteth downe the pzoude cities. He casteth them to the grounde, ye euẽ into the myre, that they maye be troden vnder the fete of the symple, & with the steppes of the pooze. B Thou (Lozde) conlydzest the path of the rightuous, whether it be rycht, whether the waye of the rightuous be rycht. Therfoze (Lozd) we haue a respecte vntoỹ b* waie of thy iudgementes, thi name & thi remembzaunce reioyse the soule. Wy soule lusteth after the all the nyght longe, & my mynde hasteth frely to the. Foz as soone as thy iudgement is knowne to the wozld, then the inhabytours of the earth lerne ryghtuousnesse. But the vngodli (though he haue receaued grace) yet lerneth he not rightuousnes, but in ỹ place where he is pumyshed, he oefendeth, & feareth not the glozy of the Lozde. Lozde, they wil not se thyne hye hande, but they shal se it, and be confounded: when thou shalt deuour thẽ with the wzath of the people, & with ỹ fyze of thyne enemyes. But vnto vs, O Lozd, pzouyde foz peace: foz thou wozckest in vs all oure wozckes. O Lozde oure God, though soch Lozdes haue dompnacion vpon vs as knowe not the: yet graunte, that we may hope only in the, and kepe thy name in remembzaunce. The malycyous Tyzauntes when thei dye, are neyther in lyfe noz in the resurrection, foz thou visittest them and rootest them out, and destroyest all the memozial of them. Agayne, thou increcest the people, O Lozde, thou increacest ỹ people, thou shalt be pzayed and magnifyed in all the endes of ỹ wozld. The people ỹ seke vnto the in trouble, ỹ sam a ouerlitt wych they complaynokis vn to them a chastening befoze the. Lyke as a wyfe with chylde (when her trauel cometh vpon her) is ashamed, crieth ād & sufferеth the payne: Euen so are we, O Lozd, in thy sight. We are with chyld, we trauel, and beare, and with the spyte we bzynge foz the health, where thozow the earthe is vndestroyed, and the inhabitours of the wozld perish not.

But as foz thy c* dead men & ouis, that be departed, they are in lyfe andre surrectyon, They lye in the earth, theye wake, and haue poyse: foz thy dewe is a dew of lyfe and lyght. But the place of the malycyous Tyzauntes, is fallen awaye. So go now my people into thy chamber, and shut the dooze to the, and sufferе nowe the twinclinge of an eye, til the wzath be ouerpast. Foz beholde, the Lozd wyll go out of his habitacion, ād visite the wickednes of them that dwel vpon erth. He wyll dyscouer the bloud ỹ she hath deuoured, she shall neuer hyde them, that she hath murthered.

And ỹ proude crowne of ỹ dronkē Ephzaemites, shall be troden vnder fote. And as foz ỹ faydynge floure, the glozi of his pompe, which is vpō the toppe of the plenteous valley: it shall happen vnto him, as to an vntymely frute befoze the haruest come. And then shall the Lozd of Hostes be a b* ioyfull crowne, and a glozious garlande vnto the remnaunt of his people. Vnto the lowly, he shalbe a spzete of iudgement, and vnto them that dzyue awaye the enemyes from the gates, he shalbe a spzete of stregth. But they go wzong, by the reason of wyne, they fall & stacker because of stróge dzincke. Yes euẽ the pzestes and pzopheres the selues go amysse, thei are dzonken with wine, & weake brained thozow stróg dzincke. They erre in sepnge, and in iugdment they fayle. And therfoze the Lozde also shall speake with lispynge lippes and with astraunge languange vnto this people to whom he spake afoze of this maner: This shal bzynge rest, yf one refresh the weery, yee this shall bzynge rest. But they hade n owyll to heare. And therfoze the Lozde shall answere their stubbournes, Cõmaunde that may be cõmaunded, byd ỹ maye be bydde. foz byd that maybe foz bydden, kepe backe ỹ mai bekept back, her altlether a litle That they maiego foz th, fal backward be bzoled, snarde & take. Smyteth he not his smyter, as euel as he is smiten him self: Destroyeth he not the murtherers, as he is murthered? Euery man recompenceth with the measure that he receaueth: He museth vpon hys looze wynde, as vpon the dayes of extreame heate. and therfoze shal the iniquite of Jacob be thus reconsyled. & so shal he take away al ỹ frut of his sinnes

As foz aulter stones, he shall make them all as stones beaten to poulder: ỹ grouis and Idolles shall not stande.

The strong cities shall be desolate, and the fayze citys shallbe lefte lyke a wylderne. The catell shall fede and lye there, and the chepe shal eate it vp. Theie harueste shalbe bzent, their wiues which were theyr beutie when they cam forth: shalbe defyled foz it is a peple without vnderstanding, and therfoz he that created them, shall not fauour them, and he that made them, shall not be mercyefull vnto them. In that tyme shall the Lozd shute from the swyfte water of Euphzates, vnto the riuer of Egipte. And there shall the chylderen be chosen out one by one. Then shall the great trompette be blowen, soo that those whiche haue bene destroyed in the Assirians lande, and those that ye scattered abzoad in Egypte: shall come and wozshyppe the lozde at Jerusalem vpon the holy mount.

WO be to the crowne of pzyde, to the a* dzonkē Ephzaemites, and to the faydyng flouer, to the glozye of hys pompe, that is vpon the toppe of the plenteous valley: whych the men be ouerladen wyth wyne. Beholde, the strength and power of the Lozde, shall breake into the land on euerye syde, lyke a tempest of hail, ỹ beareth down stróge holdes, and lyke an horrible, myghti and ouer flowynge water,

For withdiscreate wyll we escape, and with nymblenes wyll we defende oure selues. Therfore sayth the Lord God: Beholde, I wyll laye a stone in Sion, a great stone, a costly a* corner stone for a sure foundacyon: that whoso putteth his trust i him, shal not be confounded. Ryghtuouses wyll I set vp agayne in ỹ balaunce, and iugment iỹ weightes, The tempest of hayl shall take awaye your refuge, that ye haue to discreaue withall: & ỹ ouerflowynge waters shal breake downe youre stronge holdes of dissimulacion. Thus the appoyntment ỹ ye haue made wt death, shalbe done awaye: and the cõpcion that ye made with hel, shal not stande. When ỹ great destruccion goeth thorow, it shal all to treade you. It shal take you quyte a waye before it. For it shall go forth early in the morynge, and contynue onli that daye & that night. And ỹ very feare only shal teach you, whẽ ye heare it For the bedde shall be so narow that a mã con not lye vpõ it: And ỹ couerynge so small, that amã maye not wynde him selfe therin. For the Lorde shall steppe forth as he did vpõ & moũte a* Perazim and shall take on as he dyde vpon the* dale of Gabaon: that he maye bringe forth his deutce, b* his straunge deuice and fulfyll his worcke, his wonderfull worcke. And therfore make no mockes at it, that youre captiuite increase not: for I haue herde the Lorde of Hostes saye, that there shall come a soden destruccion & plage vpon the whole earth. Take hede, and heare mi voice, ponder and mercke my wordes wel. Goeth not the housbande man euer in due se a son earnestly to hys lande: he moweth & ploweth his grounde to sowe. And when he hath made it playne, he soweth it wt fetches or comyn. He soweth the wheate and Barlye i their place. Milium and Rye also in their place. And that he maie doth ryght, his God teacheth him and sheweth him. For he treadeth not ỹ fytches out with a waine, nether bringeth he the carthare & there ouer the comin, but he thressheth the fytches oute with a flaile, and the comin with a rod. As for ỹ wheate, he grindeth it to make bred ther of, In as moch as he con not bringe it to passe with treadynge out. For nether ỹ broysynge ỹ the cart wheles make, ner his beastes cangrind it. Thys and soch lyke thynges come of the Lorde of Hostes whych is marueleous in coũcel, & great in rightuousnesse.

¶ The destruccion of Ierusalem, Against the commaundementes of men

¶ The. xxix. Chapter.

Wo be vnto the O Ariel, thou citie that Dauid wãne. Take yet somme yeares, & let som feastes yet passe ouer: then shall Ariell be besieged, so that she shal be heuy and sorouefull, & shal be vnto me euen as a lyõ. For I wyl lay sege to the round about, & kepe the in wt towers, and graue vp dykes against the. And thou shalt be brought lowe, and speake out of the earth, and thy wordes shall go humbly out of ỹ grounde. Thy voyce shal come out of the earth, lyke the voyce of a witch, & thy talkynge shall groane out of the myre. For the multytude of thyne enemyes a* shalbe lyke mealdust. b* And the nombre of tyrauntes shalbe as the dust that the wynde taketh awaye sodenly. Thou shal be vysited of ỹ Lorde of Hostes with thonder, earthquake, & wyth a greate crack, wt the whyrle wynd, tempest, and with the flame of a consuming fyre. But now the multytude of all the people, that went out against Ariel: the whole hoste, the stronge holdes, and segeris lyke adre ame which appeareth in the nyght: It is lyke as whẽ an hungry mã dreameth that he is eating, and when he awaketh, he hath nothynge: lyke as when a thirstie man dreamethe that he is drinkynge, and when he awaketh, he is faynte, and his soule vnpacient.

So is the multytude of al people ỹ muster thẽselues against ỹ hil of Sion. But ye shalbe at your wits end, ye shalbe astonished: ye shal stacker, & rele to & fro a* ye shalbe dronke, but not of wyne. Ye shal stacker, but not throu dronkenes: For ỹ lord shal geue you an hard slepyng spyrit, & hold down your eyes: namelt your Prophets & heades which shuld se, thẽ shal be couered. & all visyõs shalbe vnto you as the wordes that stande in a sealed letter, whẽ one offreth it to a mã that is lerned, & sayeth: rede vs this letter. Then he answereth: I cã not rede it, for it is shutt. But yf it be geuen to one ỹ is not lerned, or sayde vnto him: rede this letter: Then sayeth he: I can not reade. Therfore thus sayeth the Lord: For so moch as this people draweth nye me wt their mouth, & prayseth me hyghly wyth their lyppes (where as their herte neuerthelesse is farre fro me, & the feare which they owe vnto me, ỹ turne they to mens lawes & doctrines) therfor wil I also sheu vnto this peple a maruelous, terrible & great thig Namely this: I wyl destroy ỹ wisdõ of their wyse, & ỹ vndrstãdig of their lerned mẽ shal perish. Wo be vnto thẽ ỹ seke so depe, to hyde their ymaginacyõ before lorde, which reherce their coũcels in ỹ darknes, and said: who seith vs, or who knoweth vs: Wherch ymaginatiõ of yours is euẽ as whẽ ỹ potters clay taketh ad uplemẽt, as though ỹ worke myght saye to the worckmaster: make me not, or as whẽ an erthe vessel say th of ỹ potter: he vnderstãdeth not. b* Se ye not ỹ it is hard bi ỹ Libanus shalbe turned in to Charmel, & ỹ Charmel shalbe takẽ as a wod: Thẽ shal deaf mẽ vnderstãde ỹ wordes of ỹ boke & eyes of blind shal se without ani cloude or darckenes. The oppressed shal holde a mery feast in the Lord, & ỹ poore people shal reioyse in ỹ holy one of Israel. Thẽ shall the furyous people ceasse, & ỹ mockers shalbe put away, & al thei ỹ dowrõg shalbe plucked out, soche as laboure to draw men vnto sinne: & that disceue him, which reproue thẽ, in ỹ gate, & soch as turne good persons to vanite. And therfor ỹ Lord (euẽ ỹ defender of Abraham) sayth thus vnto ỹ house of Jacob: Now shal not Jacob be ashamed, nor his face cõfoũded, whẽ he sitteth amõg his chyldre (whõ my hãdes haue made) soch as hallow mi name amonge thẽ: ỹ they mai sanctify ỹ holy one of Jacob, and feare the God of Israell: & ỹ they whych a fore tyme were of an erroneous spyrit, haue now vnderstandynge, and ỹ soch as before could not speake, are now lerned in my lawe.

a* Shalbe lyke mealedust: that is shalbe so wanye, and as vnable to be nombred as mealedust.
b* And the numbre of tyrauntes shalbe &c. Is who shuld saye the most heuy and cruel enemyes ỹ wil be vpon you in amomẽt sodenly, might and that quyckely be ouercome of the Lord as the dust is taken awaye with the wynde: as it happened vnto Senna cherib: yet shal it not be so then, but as I wyl nowe shew the: thou shalt be visyted and punished of the Lord, euen as when al thinges trẽble for feare of ỹ thonder which no mã cã eschue: & as whẽ the earthquacke sheketh al ỹ there is wt horrible & fereful soũd, & storm & tempest shal ouerthrow ỹ: and wyth the flame of fyre shalt thou be deuoured.
c* That is ye shalbe dronke ỹe ye shal not wete what to do, ye shalbe so clene destitut of coũcel: not of the wyne ỹ ye shal drinck, for ye shal suffer extreme thirst & ỹ wyne of recreacion & mirth shal ye not taste of. Ye shal be feble, & fal as ye go ye shal be rennagates for the confusiõ feare, hatt, and perfectiõ of al mẽ: not for dronckenes or stroge drinck, which he shal want Some expoũ this sentence of thẽ ỹ be dronken in hipocresy and dyssimulacion: & of them that be full of the rightuousnes of their owne workes.
d* Iesaye though he should saye: It is not longe that goodly trees (which are signified by Libanus) shal be turned into plaine feldes: And ỹ ỹ playne feldes (which are signified by Charmel) shall become rough and full of bushes. The tyme that Christ shulde come is the shorte tyme that he meaneth, whiche the scripture doth oft call a short tyme. Then shall the vnfrutefull, rough, and wooddy heathenesse (which is vnderstand by Lybanus) be turned vnto the religion of Christes congregation or church, and vnto the true seruyce of the true God (which is vnderstand by Charmell) that frutefull & wel tylled feade.
¶ A curse agaynst them that forsake the counsel of God and seeke vnto the counsel of men. Aye threatneth the reste of the people, which e after the destruction of Ierusalem went into Egypt.

¶ The. xxx. Chapter.

Vnto be to those chyldren (sayeth ỹ Lord) which take coũcell, but not at me: whych take a webbe in hande, but not after mi will: that they maye heape one synne vpon another. Thei goo downe into Egipte (and aske me no councell) to seke helpe at the power of Pharao, and com forte in the shadowe of the Egyptians. But Pharaos helpe shalbe your confusyon, and the comforte i the Egyptians shadowe shalbe your owne shame. Youre rulers haue bene at Zoan, & youre messaungers come vnto Hanes. But ỹ shall al be ashamed of the peple ỹ may not help you, which shal not bring you strẽgth or comforte, but shame & confusyõ. Your beastes haue borne burthes vpō their backes tōwarde the South, thorowe the waie that is full of parell and trouble, because of the lyon & lyones, of the Cockatrice and flutynge dragon. Yee the Mules bare youre substaunce, and the Camels brought your treasure vpō their croked backs, vnto a peple ẏ cannot helpe you. For the Egyptians helpe shalbe but vayne and lost. Therfore I tolde you also that your pryde shulde haue an end. Wher fore go hence & wryte thē thys in theyr tables and note it in a boke: ẏ it may remayne by their posteritt, & be styll kept For it is an obstinate people, vnfayth full childeren, childeren that will nott heare the lawe of the Lorde.

They darre saye to the Prophetes: C Intromitte your selues with nothing, and vnto the Sothsayers: tel vs of no thyng for to come, but speake frendlye wordes vnto vs, and preache vs fal se thynges. Treade out of the waye, goo out of the path, turne the holy one of Israel from vs. Therfore thus sayth the holy one of Israell: In as moche as ye haue cast of youre bewtie, and cōforted youre selues with power and nymblenes/and put youre confydence therin: therfore shall ye haue thys myschefe agayne for youre destruction and fal, lyke as an hye wale, that falleth because of some ryft (or blast) whose breakinge cometh sodenlye.

And youre destruction shalbe lyke as an erthen pot, which breketh no mā touchinge it, and breaketh so sore, that a man shal not fynde a sheuer of it too fetche fyre in, or to take water wyth all out of the pytte. For the Lord God, cuē the holy one of Israell hath promysed thus. With styll sittinge and rest, shall ye be healed, in quyetnesse & hope shall your strenght lye. Notwithstāding ye D regarde it not, but ye wyl saye: No, for thus ar we constrayned to flē vpon hors les, And therfore shall ye flye, we must ryde vpon swyft beastes, and therfore your persecutours shal yet be swyfter. A thousande of you shall flē for one, or at the moost for fyue, which do but one ly geue you cuel wordes vntyll ye bee desolate as a ship mast vpō ā hye mountayne/and as a beaken vpon an hill.

Yet standeth the Lord waytynge, that he maye haue mercy vpon you, and lyfteth him selfe vp, ẏ he may receiue you to grace. For the Lorde God is tyghtuous. Happye are all they that wayte for hym. For thus (O thou people of E Syon and ye cyttisens of Jerusalem) shall ye neuer be in heupnes, for doutlesse he wyll haue mercy vpon the. As soone as he heareth the voyce of thy crye, he wil helpe the. The Lord geueth you the a*bred of aduersyte, and the water of trouble. But thine instructer flyeth not farre from ẏ, yf thyne eyes lo ke vnto thyne instructoure, and thyne eares harken to hys word, that cryeth after the and sayeth: this is the waye, go thys, and turne neither to the tyght hande nor to the lefte.

Moreouer, yf ye destrope the syluer F worke of your Idoles, and cast away the golden coapes that ye decke them wyth all (as fylthynes) & saye gett you hence: Then wyll he geue rayne to the sede that ye shal sowe in the earth, and geue you breade of the encrease of the earth, so that al shalbe plentuous and aboundaūt. Thy catell also shall he fede in the brode medowes, yet thine oxē and Mules that tyll the grounde, shal eate good foder, which is purged with ẏ fanne. Goodly ryuers shall flow out of al his mountaines and hylles. In the daye of the greate slaughter when the towers shal fal, the moone shal shine as ẏ sonne, and the sonne shyne shal be seuen folde, and haue as moche shyne, as in seuen dayes beside.

In that daye shal the Lorde bynde vp the brosed sores of his People, and heale their woundes. Beholde the glory of ẏ Lord shal come from farre, his face shall burne, that no man shalbe able to abyde it, his lyppes shal wagge for very indygnacyon, and hys tonge shalbe as a consumynge fyre. Hys breath like a vehemēt flood of water, which goeth vp to the throte. That he may take awaye the people, which haue turned them selues vnto vanyte & the bridle of errour, that lyeth in other folkes chawes.

But ye shall synge, as ẏ vse is in ẏ night of the holy solempnitte. Ye shal reioyse reioyse tō youre harte, as they ẏ come with the pype, when they go vp to the mount of the Lord, vnto the rock of Israel. The Lord also shal set vp the power of hys voyce, & declare hys terrible arme, with hys angrye countenaūce, yre and the flame of the consumynge fire, with earthquake, tempest of wind, & gayle stones. Then shal the Assyrians feare also, because of the voyce of the Lorde, which shall smyte him wyth rodde. And the same rodde which the Lorde wyl sende vpon him, shal moued the whole foundacyon: with trompet, with noyse of warre and batell to destroye. For he hath prepared ẏ fyre of pyne from the beginnynge, yee euen for kynges also. This hath he made depe & wide, ẏ nothing therof is fyre and wood innumerable, whith the breath of the Lorde kyndleth, as it were a matche of brymstone.

a* The bredde of aduersitye & the water of trouble do signifye a lyfe full of aduersitie & trouble. Esech. iiii. d The cursed ryth them that forsake God, and seke for the helpe of men.

The.xxxi. Chapter.

A WO be vnto them that go downe into Egipte for help, and trust in horses, & comforte them selues in charettes, because they be many, & in horse men because they be lusty & strōg. But they regarde not ẏ holy one of Israel/ & they aske no questyō at the Lorde. Wher as he neuertheles plageth the wicked/ & set goeth not from his worde/ whenbe he stepeth forth/ & taketh the victori against the housholde of the frowarde/ & agaynst the helpe of euell doers. Now the Egypcyans are men/ & not God/ and their horses flesh & not spyrete. And as soone as the Lord stretcheth out his hande/ then shall the helper fall/ and he that shulde haue bene helped & shal al together be destroied. For thus hath the Lord spoken vnto me: B Lyke as the lyon or lyons whelpe roareth vpō the praye that he hath gotten, and is not afrayed, though the multytud of shephardes crye out vpon him/ nether abashed for al the heape of thē: So shall the Lorde of Hostes come downe into the mount of Sion/ & defende his hyll. Like as byrdes flotre about their nestes/ so shall the Lord of Hostes kepe, saue and defend and deliuer Jerusalem. Therfore, O ye chil dren of Israell, turne agayne, lyke as C ye haue exceaded in your goynge back. For in that daye euery man shal caste out his Idols of syluer and gold, whi che ye haue made with your sinful handes. a* Assur also shalbe slayne with ẏ swerde, not with a mans swerde. And swerde shal deuoure him, but not a mā es swede. And he shal flē from the slaughter/ and his seruauntes shalbe takē prysoners. He shal go for feare to hys stronge holdes, and his Princes shall flē from his badge. Thus hath ẏ Lord spoken, whose lyght burneth in Sion. and his fyre in Hierusalem.

What is he among vs (ſay they) that wyll dwell by that conſumyng fyre? whyche of vs maye abyde that euerlastinge heate? Come ye, Heythen & heare/ take hede ye people. ¶ Jerusalem is assieged by Sennaherib, in ỹ time of kyng hezekiah.

C Nthe .xiiii. yeare of kyng Hezekiah, cã Sennaherib kynge of the Assyrians dowe, to laye syege vnto all the stronge cyties of Juda. And the kyng of ỹ Assyrians sent Rabsakeh frõ Lachis towarde Jerusalem, agaynst kynge Hezekiah, with a greuous Hoste, which set him by the condyte of the ouerpole in the way that goeth thorow the fullers lande. And to him there cam forth vnto hi Eliakim Helkiahs sonne ỹ Presidẽt, Sobna the Scribe & Joah Asaphs sonne the secretory. And Rabsakeh sayde vnto them: Tell Hezekiah, that ỹ greate king of Assyria sayeth thus vnto him: What presumption is this, that thou trustest vnto? Thou thinckest (peraduentur) that thou hast councell and power ynough to maynteine this warre: or els wherto trustest thou, that thou castest thy selfe of fro me? lo, ỹ puttest thy trust in a broke staf of rede (I meane Egipt) which he ỹ leaneth vpon, it goeth into his handes & shutteth him thorowe. Euen so is Pharao the kyng of Egypte vnto all the that trust in him. But yf thou wouldest saie to me: we trust in the Lord our God: Is not God idede: whose hye places & aulters.

Hezekiah toke down, & comaũded Juda and & Jerusalẽ, to worshyp only before ỹ altar. Ihinke ỹ, ỹ hast made a cõdictiõ wt my Lord the kyng of ỹ Assirias, ỹ he should geue ỹ .ii. thousãd horses: art ỹ able to set men ther vp? Seing now that thou cãst not resist the power of the smallest pynce, that my Lorde hath, how darrest thou trust in the charettes and horsemen of Egypt? Moreouer, thynckest thou that I am come downe hyther, to destroye thys land without the Lordes wyll? The Lord sayd vntome, go down into the Land, that ỹmayest destroy it.

Then sayde Eliakim, Sobna and Joah vnto Rabsaketh: speake to vs thi seruaunts (we praye the) in the Syrias language/for we vnderstande it well: And speke not to vs in the Jewes tõg, lest the folke heare, whiche lyeth vpon the wall. Then answered Rabsakeh: Thincke ye, that the kynge sent me to speke thys only vnto you? Hath he not sent me to them also, that lye vpon the wall? ỹ they be not cõpelled to eat their own dõg, & drinke their oune stale wt youre

And Rabsaketh stode styl, and cried with a lowd voyce in the Jewes tong, and sayde: Now take hede, how ỹ great kyng of the assirians geueth you warnynge. Thus sayth the kynge: Let not Hezekiah disceaue you, for he shall nott be able to delyuer you. Moreouer let not Hezekiah comfort you in the Lord, when he sayth: The lorde without doute shall defend vs & shal not geue ouer thys cytie into the handes of the kyng of the assirians, beleue hym not. But thus sayth the kyng of Assiria: opteyn my fauour, enclyne to me: so may euerman eniope hys vyneyardes and figg trees, & drinke ỹ water of his cisterne: vntil ỹ time ỹ I come my selfe, and bryng you into a land that is lyke your owne, wher in is wheate and wyne, whiche is both sowen with sede/and planted with vyneyardes. Let not Hezekiah disceaue you, when he sayeth vnto you: the Lorde shal delyuer vs. Wyght the Goddes of the Gentiles kepe euery mãs lande, frõ the power of the king of the Assyrians? Wher is the God of Homath & Arphad? Where is the God of Sepharuaim? And who was able to defende Samaria out of my hande? Or wheth of al goddes of the landes/hath delyuered the countre out of my power, so ỹ ỹ Lord shuld delyuer Jerusalem fro my hand? Vnto the, Hezekiahs messaungers held their tunges, and answered not one word: for ỹ kyng had charged them, that they shulde geue hym none answere. So came Eliakim Helkiahs sonne the Presidẽt, Sobna the scribe, and Joah Asaphs sonne the secretary/ vnto hezekiah with rent clothes, & told him the wordes of Rabsaketh.

¶ Hezekiah humbleth him self before the lord. The armye of Sennaherib is slayne of the Aungell of ỹ Lord: & he him selfe is kylled of his owne sonnes.

¶ The .xxxvii. Chapter.

A When Hezekiah heard that he rent his clothes, & put on a sack clothe, and went into the temple of ỹ lorde. But he sent Eliakim the Presydent, Sobna the Scrybe, wythe the eldest prestes clothed in sack/ vnto the prophet Esay ỹ sonne of Amoz, and they sayde vnto him: Thus sayeth Hezekiah: This is the day of trouble, of plage, and of wrath: lyke as when a chyld cometh to the byrth, but the woman hath no power to bryng it forth.

The Lord thy god (no dout) hath wel consydred the wordes of Rabsakeh, whom his Lord the kyng of the Assirians hath sent to, defye and blaspheame the lyuing God: with suche wordes as the Lord thy God hath heard ryght wel. And therfore lyft vp thy prayer for the remnaunt, that yet are left. So the seruauntes of kynge Hezekiah cam to Esay.

And Esay gaue them this answere: B Saye thus vnto your lord: thus saeth the Lorde: Be not afrayed of the wordes that thou hast herd, wherwith the kyng of the Assyrians, seruãtes haue blaspheamed me. Behold, I wyl cause a wynd go ouer him, & sone as he heareth it, he shal go agayne into his countre, there wyl I destroye him with the swerde. Nowe when Rabsakeh returned, he founde the kyng of Assyria laying syege to Lobnah, for he had vnderstãd/ ỹ he was departed from Lachis. For there came a rumoure, that Tharhakah kynge of Ethiopia was come forthe to warre agaynst him.

And

And when the kyng of Assyria hearde that, he sent other messaūgers to kyng Hezekiah, with this cōmaundemēt:
Saie thus to Hezekiah kyng of Juda: Let not thi God deceaue the, in whom thou hopest, & sayest: Jerusalē shal not be geuē in to the hādes of the kyng of Assyria. For thou knowest wel how the kynges of Assyria haue handled al the landes that thei haue subuerted, and hopest thou to escape? Were the people of the Gentiles (whō mi progenytours cōquered) delyuered at any tyme thorow their goddes? As namely, Gozan/ Haran, Rezeph, & the chyldren of Eden, which dwell at Thalassar. Where is ye kyng of Hemah, & ye kinge of Arphad, & the king of the cytye Sepharnaim, Ena and Iua? Now when Hezekiah had receaued the letter of the messaungers, & red it, he wēt vp into ye house of the Lord & opened the letter before the Lorde. And Hezekiah prayed before ye Lorde on this maner: O Lorde of hostes, thou God of Israel, which dwellest vpon Cherubin. Thou art the God, that only is God of all ye kyngdomes of the world, for thou only hast created heaue & earth. Encline thine eare Lord & consydre, open thyne eyes, O Lord, & se, & pōdre al ye wordes of Sennaherib, which hath sent hys embassage to blaspheme the liuinge God. It is true, O Lord, that the kynges of Assyria haue conquered all kyngdomes & landes, & cast their goddes in the fyre. Not withstandynge those were noo goddes, but the workes of mens handes, of wod or stone, therfore haue they destroied thē: Delyuer vs then, O Lorde oure God, frō the handes of Sennaherib, that al kingdomes of the earthe mate knowe, that thou only art the Lorde. Then Esay the sonne of Amos sent vnto Hezekiah, saienge: Thus sayth ye Lord God of Israell: Where as thou hast made thy prayer vnto me, as touching Sennaherib, thys is the answere, that the Lorde hath geuē concernyng him: De spysed art thou, & mocked,  O daughter of Syō) he hath shokē his head at the, O daughter of Jerusalem. But ye Sēnaherib, whō hast ye defyed & blasphemed? And against whō hast ye lifted vp thy voice, & exalted thy proud lokes ouer agaynst the holy one of Isral. Thou ye seruauntes haste blasphemed the Lord, ād thus holdest thou of thy self: I couer the hye motūaynes, and sides of Libanus with my horsemen. And there wyll I cut downe the hye Cedre trees and the kayrst Fyrre trees. I wyll vp into the heyght of it, & into ye thickest of his tymbre woddes. If there be not water, I wyl graue and drynche. And as for waters of defence/ I shal dri thē (sayst thou) hast thou not hearde, what I haue taken in hande, and broughte to passe of olde tyme? That same wyl, I do now also: Waste, destroye, and bringe stronge cities vnto heapes of stones. For their inhabitours shalbe lyke lame men, brought in fere and confounded. They shalbe like ye grasse and grene herbes in the felde, lyke the hey vpon house toppes, that wethereth a fore it be growen vp.

I know thy waye, thy goyng for th and thy cōmyng home, ye & thy madnes agaynst me. Therfore thy furyousnesse agaynste me, and thy pryde is come before me. I wyl put [b]*a ringe in thy nose, and a bridle bit in the chawes of ye, & turne ye aboute, euen ye same waie thou camest. I wyll geue the also this token (O Hezekiah (this yere shalt thou eate that is kepte in store, ād the nexte yeare such as groweth of hym selfe, ād in ye thyrd yeare ye shal sowe and reape, yea ye shall plante vyneyardes, and eate the frutes therof.

And such of the house of Juda as are escaped, shal come together, and the remnaunt shal take rote bynethe, and bringe forth frute aboue. For the escaped shall go out of Jerusalem, and the remnaunt from the mount Syon. And this shall the gelousy of the Lord of hostes bring to passe. Therfore thus saieth the Lorde, concernyng the kyng of ye Assyrians: He shall not come in to the cytie, and shall shote no arowe into it, there shall no childe hurte it, neither shal thei greaue aboute it. The same waye that he came, shall he retourne, and not come at this cytie, saieth the Lord. And I wil kepe and saue the citie (saieth he) for myne owne, and for my seruaunte Dauids sake.

*Thus the aungel went forthe, & slwe of the Assirians hoste, an clxxxv. thousand. And when men arose vp early (at Jerusalem:) Behold, al laye full of deade bodyes. So Sennaherib the kynge of the Assyrians brake vp / and dwelt at Ninive. Afterward it chaunsed, as he prayed in the temple of Nesrah his God/ that Adramalech & Sarazer his owne sonne slwe hym with ye sword/ and fled in to the lande of Ararat. And Asar had on hys sonne regned after him.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

In those dayes sayth Hezekiah sicke vnto ye death: and the Prophet Esay the sonne of Amos came vnto him, and sayde: Thus commaundeth the Lord: Set thyne house in ordre: for thou must dye, & shalt not escape. Then Hezekiah turned his face toward the wall, ād prayed vnto the lorde/ and sayde: Remembre (O Lord) ye I haue walked before the in [a]* treuth and a stedfast hert, and haue done the thing ye is pleasaūt to ye. And Hezekiah wept sore. The said God vnto Esay: go & speke vnto Hezekiah: ye Lord God of Dauid thy father sendeth ye this word: I haue harde thy prayer, and consyred thy teares: beholde I wyll put fyftene eares mo vnto thy life, and delyuer the and the cytie also, from the hand of the kyng of Assiria, for I wyl defend the citi. And take the this token of the Lord/ that he wyll do it, this he hath spoken: Beholde, I will returne the shadowe of Ahaz dial/ ye now is layed out wyth the Sunne, and bringe it ten degrees back warde. So the Sunne turned ten degrees backward/ ye which he was descended afore.

A thanckesgeuing, which Hezekiah kynge of Juda wrote, when he had bene licke, & was recouered.

[b]*I thought I shulde haue gone to ye gates of hell in my best age, and haue wanted the residue of my yeares.

I spake with in my selfe: I shal neuer vtter the Lorde God in this lyfe: I shall neuer se man amonge the dwellers of the worlde. Myne age is folden vp together, and taken awaye fro me, lyke a shepherdes cotage: my lyfe is shē of, lyke as a weeuer cutteth of his webb.

Then chatered I lyke a swalowe/ and lyke a crane, and mourned as a doue.

What shal I speke or saie, tha the mat this do? ye I may lyue out all my yeares, yee in the bytternesse of my lyfe?

Verely (Lord) men must lyue in bitternesse, & all my life must I passe ouer therin: For thou raysest me vp, and wakest me. But lo, I wylbe wel contēt with this bytternes.

Neuertheles my cōuersacyō hath so pleased the, that thou woldest not make anende of mi lyfe: so ye thou hast cast all my synnes behynde thy backe.

Delyuer vs (O Lord) and we wyl synge prayses in thy house, al ye dayes of our life. And Esay sayde: take a playster of fygges, & laye it vponthe sore, so shal it be whole. Then sayd Hezekiah: O what a great thing is this, that I shal go vp into the houle of the Lorde.

The Notes

a* Trueth for pureues, as in the Psal.lii.d. But lo, thou haste a pleasure in the truth. &c. That is, in pureues: in true and perfecte rightuousnes.

b* That is, I thought I shulde haue gone to my graue, and haue dyed in my best age. &c. The Hebru word signifyeth both Hell and graue, ppt or dych. That maye ye perceiue in Gene.xlii.g. where Jacob sayth, that if any myschfortune should happen vnto Ben Jamymin hys Journey into Egypte with hys other brethren, hys graye heade shulde be brought with sorow vnto his graue: where the comen transl. readeth hel, for graue. As for Hezekiah, he neyther feared hell nor purgatory/as ye may well se by that he a lytell before sayth: Remembre O Lorde, that I haue walcked before the in truth and a stedfast herte, and haue done the thing that is pleasaunte to the: which thynge who so dothe, neadeth not to feare any of those two places. Beysdes that, the dunce mē and sophysters them selues, whych were (as moost learned men thyncke) the Inuentours and Fynders, ye and the verye makers of purgatorye, saye that before the time of Christes commynge, ther was no such place: so that Hezekiah is by theyr sentence cleane quite of that place: and of hell doth sentence of ꝑ worde of God quyte him, which sayth: There is no condempnation to them that are in Christe Jesu. Roman.viii.a

c* I thought I woulde. &c. but he brused my bones lyke a lyon. &c. As who shulde saye: I thought to haue lyued longe: but the Lorde toke me as it had ben a lyon and feble my boones & strenght: and so trouble me with the greuous Panges of my dysease, as though he woulde in one daye haue made an ende of me. Such a greuous sykenes do lerned men thincke that Dauid also laboured with, when he sayde: O Lorde heale me, for all my bones are vexed. Psal vi.a. and.xxxviii.a.

d* For hell prayse ꝑ not the. &c. the meanyng is. Se I now dye, I can not prayse the in thy temple. For the deade and buryed can not loue and prayse the: w their materyall tonges or hertes. Neyther can my death, nor my burieng, be at thys season for the setting out of thy glorye. For all the Godly wylbe feared w. s thy iudgement: And the wicked wyl imputte my death to the ouerthrowing of ydolatrye, and to the putting downe of the brasen serpent.

e* They that goo downe into the graue, praysle not thy truth, that is, hope not for the truth of thy worde ly promyses, which thou hast promysed vnto such as walcke vndefyledly in thy lawe. Deute.xxviii. They cannot reioyce of theyr health, when all hope of recouering is past. But if thou graunt a man his lyfe, if any man recouer hys sykenes and lyue: he shal acknowledge thy goodnes, euen as I nowe geaue thankes vnto thee, for the benefytte of my healthe which thou hast restored me.

The.xxxix. Chapter.

* Hezekiah is reproued of Esai, because he shewed his treasure vnto the Emaladors of Babylon.

a AT ꝑ same tyme Merodach Baladam, Balada his sonne kynge of Babilon, sent letters and presentes to Hezekiah.

For he vnderstode howe that he had bene sick, and was recouered agayne. And Hezekiah was glad therof, & shewed the ꝑ cōmodityes of his treasure, of siluer, of gold, of spyces & rotes, of precious oyles, all that was in his cuborde and treasurhouses. There was not one thyng in Hezekiahs house, ād so thorow out all hys kyngdom, but he let them se it,

Then came Esaye the Prophete to b king Ezekiah, & sayd vnto hym: what haue the men sayde: and frōm whence cam they vnto the: Hezekiah answered they cam out of a farr countre vnto me out of Babylō. Esay sayd: what haue they loked vpon in thyne house: Hezekiah answered: All ꝑ is in myne house haue they seene: and there is nothinge in my treasure/but I shewed it them.

Then sayde Esay vnto Hezekiah: c
Understande the worde of the Lorde of Hostes: Beholde the tyme wyll come/ that euery thynge which is in thyne house/and al that they progenytouresha ue layde vp in stoare vnto this daye/ shalbe caried to Babylon/and no thinge left behinde. This saieth the Lorde: Yee & parte of thy sonnes/that shall come of the/& whō thou shalt get/shalbe caried hēce/& become gelded chamberlaynes in the king of Babylons courte: Then sayde Hezechiah to Esay: Now d
God prospere his owne councel/which thou hast told me. He sayde more ouer: So that there be peace and faythfulnesse in my tyme.

The.xl. Chapter.

BE of good chere my people/be of f good chere (sayeth youre God) cō fort Jerusalem/and tell her: that a* her trauayle is at an ende/that her offence is pardoned/that she hath receaued of the Lordes hande sufficiēt correccyon for all her synnes. A voyce crieth: Prepare ye waye for the Lorde in ꝑ wyldernesse/make streyght ꝑ path for oure God in the deserte. Let all valleyes be exalted/& euery mountayne and hyll be leyed lowe. What so is croked/ g let it be made streyght/& lett the rough places be made playne feldes. b* For ꝑ glory of the Lorde shall apeare/and al flesh shall se it, for why/ the mouth of the Lorde hath spoken it.

The

Hezekiah

The same voyce speake: Now crye And I sayde: what shal I crye: Then speake it: that all flesh is grasse, and ꝑ all the bewty therof, is as the floure of the felde. When the grasse is withred, the floure falleth awaye. Euen so is the people as grasse, when the breath of the Lord bloweth vpon them. Neuertheles whether the grasse wyther, or the floure fade awaye. Yet the worde of oure God endureth for euer. Moreouer the voyce cried thus: d* Go vp vnto the hyl (O Sion) thou ꝑ bringest good tydinges, lyfte vp thy voice lyfte it vp wout feare, and saye vnto ꝑ cyties of Juda: Beholde your God, beholde the Lord, euē the Almightie shal come w power, and beare rule w hys arme. Behold, he bringeth his treasur w hi, and hys workes go before hym. He shal fede his flock lyke an herdmā. He shal gather the lambes together w his arme, and carye them in hys bosome, and shal kyndely intreate those ꝑ beare yonge.

Who hath holden the waters in his fyst: Who hath measured heauē w his spāne, and hath comprehended al ꝑ earth of the: worlde in thre fingers: Who hath weied ꝑ mountaies & hilles: Who hath reformed the mynd of the Lorde: Or who is of hys councel to teach hi: At whom hath he asked coūcel to make hym vnderstand, and to lerne him the waye of iudgemene: to teache him science: and to instruct him i the waye of vnderstandyng. Beholde, al people are in comparision of hym, as a droppe to a boket full, and are counted as the lest thinge that the balaun ce, weyeth. Behold, the Iles are in comparision of him, as the shadow of the sonne beame. Libanus is not sufficient to mynistre fyre for his offringe, and all the beastes therof are not ynough to one tarfyre. Al people in comparisyon of hym are reckened as nothing, ye vaine vanyte and emptynesse.

To whom then wyl ye liken God: or what symylitude wyl ye set vp vnto hi: Shal ꝑ caruer make him a carued ymage: and shall the goldsmyth couer him with golde, or cast hym in to a fourme of siluer plates: Moreouer shal the ymage maker (that the poore man whych is dysposed, may haue some thyng to set vp also) seke out & chuse a tre, ꝑ is not rotten, & caue ther out an ymage that moueth not: Knowe ye not thys: Heard ye neuer of it: Hath it not bene preached vnto you sēce the begynning: Haue ye not bene informed of this, sence the foundacion of the earth was layde: That he sytteth vpon the cyrcle of the worlde, and that al the inhabitours of the worlde are in cōparison of hym, but as grasshoppers: That he'spreadeth out the heauens as a couering that he stretcheth them oute as a tent to dwel in. f

That he bringeth Princes to nothyng and the iudges of the earth to dust: so that theye be not planted nor sowen agayn neyther their stocke rooted agayn in the earth: For as sone as he bloweth vpō them, they wether and fade away, lyke the strawe in a whyrlewynd.

To whome now wil ye lyken me, & whom shal I be like, saith the holy one Lyft vp your eyes on hye, and consyder. Who hath made those thynges, which come out by so greate heapes: & he can cal them al by their names. For there is nothing hyd vnto the greatnes of his power, strength & mighte How may then Jacob thincke, or how maye Israel saye: My wayes are hyd from the Lord, and my God knoweth not of my iudgemētes. Knowest ꝑ not or hast thou not herd, ꝑ the euerlastige God, the Lorde which made al the corners of the earthe, is nother werye nor faynt: and that his wysdom can not be comprehended: but that he geueth strēgth vnto the weery, and power vnto ꝑ faynt: Childrē are weery and faynte, and the strongest men fal: But vnto them that haue the Lord before theyre eyes, shal strength be encreased. Aegles wynges shal growe vpon them: Whē they runne, they shal not fail: and whē they go, they shal not be wery. g

This glorye shal al flesh se, that is, al men, as well the Iewes as the Gentyls that beleue. Lyke sayyng have ye after in the.lx.a The glorye of the lorde shal ryse vpon the.&c.

c* Al the bewtye therof is as the floure, &c. that is, al the good doyng, al the good lyuynge, al the holynes and vertue, al ỹ righteousnes ther of, &cetera is of no valure: It dureth no longer then the floure of the felde. Only Christ is our ryghteousnes, and holynes, &c, i, cor i.d.

d* Spon and Ierusalem (by which vnderstande, ỹ churche of the faithful) do preache and bynge good tidynges) that is, shew the grace & health that hath bene long wayted for, and that is now obtayned & geuen by Christ. Mat xiii, Luk, ii, b.

¶ Of ỹ goodnes & mercy of God toward ỹ people

¶ The.xli. Chapter

BE stil (ye Ilandes) and herken vnto me. Be strong ye people, Come hyther, and shew your cause, we wil go to the lawe together. Who raiseth vp the iust from the ryling of ỹ Sunne, and calleth hym to go forthe? Who caseth downe ỹ people, and subdueth the kynges before hym: that he maye throw them al to the ground with his sweard, and scater them lyke stuble with his bowe? He foloweth vp on them, and goeth safely him selfe, & cometh in no fote path with his fete. Who hath made, created, and called ỹ generacion from the begynninge? Euē I the Lorde, which am the fyrste, and with the last.

Beholde ye Iles, that ye maye fear, and ye endes of the earthe, that yee maye be abashed, drawe nye, and come hither. Euery man hath erected hys neyghboure, and brother, and bydden hym be strong. The Smyth confortes the moulder, and the Iron smyth the hammer man, seyeng: It shalbe good, that we fasten thys casse worcke: and then they fastened it with nayles, that it shoulde not be moued. And thou Israel my seruaunt: Iacob my electe sede of Abraham my beloued, whome I led from the endes of the earth by ỹ hand: For I called the from farre and sayde vnto the. Thou shalt be my seruaūt: I haue chosen the, and wyl not caste the awaye: be not afrayed, for I wyll be with the. Looke not behind the, for I wyl be thy god, to strengthe the, helpe the, and to kepe the with this ryght hand of myne.

Behold, all they that resyst the, shal come to confusion and shame: and thyne aduersaries shalbe destroyed & brought to naughte. So that who so leaketh after them, shal not fynd them. Thy destroyers shall perysh, and so shall they that vndertake to make battel against the. For I thy Lorde and god, wil strengthen thy tyght hande. Euen I that saye vnto the: Feare not, I wyl helpe ỹ. Be not afrayde thou lytell wormе Iacob/and thou despysed Israel for I wil helpe the, saith the Lorde, and the holy one of Israell thyne auenger. Behold, I wyll make the a treadinge cart and a new flayle, that thou mayest threshe & grynde the mountaynes, and bynge ỹ hylles to moulder. Thou shalt fanne them, and the wynde shal carye them away, and the whyrlwynde shall scatter them. But thou shalt reioyse in the Lorde, and shalt delyt in prayinge the holy one of Israell.

When the thirsty and poore seke water and finde none, and when their tōg is drye of thyrst: I geue it them saith ỹ Lorde. I ỹ God of Israell forsake thē not. a* I bringe forth floudes in thes hylles/and welles in the playn feldes, b* I turne the wyldernes to ryuers / & the drye lande to condtthes of water. I plante in the waste ground trees of Cedre, Boxe/Wyxte and Olyues. And in the drye I set Fyxte trees/Elmes/& Hawthornes togetether. All thys do I th at they all togethet may see and marke/perceue with their hertes and consdre, that the hande of the Lord maketh these thynges, that the holy one of Israell bryngeth them to passe. Stande at youre cause (sayth the Lorde) ād bring forth youre stroungest grounde coū celeth the kyng of Iacob. Let the goddes come forth them selues, and shewe vs the thynges that are passe, that they be. Let them declare them vnto vs, that we maye take them to harte, and knowe them therafter. Either let them shewe vs thynges for too come and tell vs what shalbe done hereafter: so shall we knowe that they bee goddes. Shew some thyng, ether good or bad, so wyll we other knowledg the same, and tell it out.

Behold/ye goddes are of naught, and your makyng is of naught/but abhomynacion hath chosen you. Neuerthelesse/I haue waked vp one from ỹ North, and he shal come. And an other frō the East, which shal cal vpō my name, and shal come to the Princes, as ỹ Potter to his claye, and as the Potter treadeth downe the myre. Who tolde that afore: So wyl we confesse and saye / ỹ he is righteous. But there is none ỹ sheweth or declareth any thing, ther is none also that heareth your wordes. Beholde, I wyl fyrste graunte them of Sion and Ierusalem to be Euaunge listes. But when I consyder: there is not one amongethem that prophecieth, nether (when I aske him) that answereth one word. Lo, wicked are thei and vayn wt ỹ thynges also ỹ they take in hande, ye wynd ar they & emptynes, with theyr ymages together.

a* I bringe forth floudes in the hilles, &c. In highe places that be easy to se, wher vnto ỹ thursty maye come come, wil I prepare, not lytel welles, but grete floudes of holy doctrine: and in playne feelds lowe places sprynges and fountaines: that the lame or slouthful shal haue no excuse, but that al ỹ thyrsty may come to the word of lyfe.

b* I turne the wildernes in to ryuers. &c. That is: I make the doctryne of truth so general and so easy to all men, that where as were before waste wyldernesses (by which vnderstande ỹ erroures of the Heathen wher with they had made all vnfruteful: & drye) shal now by the grace of the holy goost, be ryuers of the water of verite. Where al was ful of Idolatrye, of abhominacions & of stynking erroures: there shall the hertes of the chosen be watered wyth godly wisdom, throw the gospel and glad tydinges: & shall be indued with faithe, wher by they maye bothe prospre them selues and other: & so shal they be fruteuill. Wyldernes is often thus taken, as before in the.xxxv.a

¶ The commyng of Christ and his baptysm,

¶ The xlii. Chapter.

BEholde now therfore, this is my seruaunte whome I wyll kepe to my selfe: mine elect, In whome my soule lyketh. I haue put my spirite vpon hym, he shal bring forth iudgemente and equyte amonge the Gentyls. He shal not be an out cryer, ner an hye mynded person. Hys voyce shall not be heard in the stretes. A bruised rede shall he not breake, and

& the smokyng flax shal he not quench: but faythfully and truly shall he geue iudgement. He shal nether be out of hert ner hastye, that he maye restore ryghteousnes vnto ỹ earth: and the Gentyles also shall kepe his lawes. For thus sayeth God the Lorde vnto him (euē he that made heauens, & spred thē abrode & set forth the earth with her increse: which geueth breth vnto ỹ people that is in it, & to them that dwell therin) I the Lorde haue called the in righteousnesse, & led the by the hande. Therfore wyl I also defende the, and geue the for a couenaunt of the people, & to be ỹ lyght of ỹ Gentiles. That thou mayest open the eyes of the blynde, let out the prisoners, & them that sit in darcknesse, out of the dongeon house. I my selfe/whose name is the Lorde, whych geue my power to none other, nether myne honoure to the Goddes: shew you these newe tydynges, and tel you thē or they come, for olde thynges also are com to passe.

Synge therfore vnto the Lordes a new song of thankes geuyng, blow out his prayse vnto the ende of the world. They that be vpon the see, & al that is therin, prayse him, the Iles & they ỹ dwell in them, Let the wildernes with her cities lyft vp her voyce, the townes also ỹ bein Cedar, Let thē be glad that syt vpon rockes of stone: and let thē cry doune from the hy mountaynes: ascrybyng hi among the gentyles. The lord shall come forthe as a gyaunte, and take a stommake to him lyke as a fresh man of warre. He shal roare and crye, and ouercome hys enemyes.

I haue long holden my peace (saith the Lorde) shoulde I therfore be styll, & kepe sylence for euer? I wyll crye lyke a trauelyng woman, and once wyll I destrope them and deuoure. I wyll make waste both mountayn and hyll, and dry vp euery grene thig that groweth therein. I wyll drye vp the floudes of water: and dryncke vp the ryuers. I wyll bringe the blynd into a strete, that they knowe not: and leade them into a fote path that they are ignorant in. I shal make darknes lyghte before them, and the thyng that is croked to be streight.

These thinges wil I do, and not forget them. And therfore let them conuerte, and be ashamed earnestly, that hope in Idoles, and say to fashioned ymages, ye are our godes.

Heare, O ye deaf men, and sharpe your sightes to se (O ye blynde.) But who is blinder, then my seruaunt? Or so deaf, as my a* messaungers, whome I sent vnto them? For who is so blind as my people, and they that haue the rule of them? They are lyke, as if thou vnderstoudest much, and keptest nothing: or yf one herde wel, but were not obedyent. The Lord be merciful vnto them for his ryghtuousnes sake, that his word might be magnyfied and prayed. But it is a mysch euous and wycked people. Their younge men belōge al to the warre, and shalbe shut into prison houses.

They shalbe carred awaye captyue, and no mā shal lowse them. They shal be troden vnder fote, and no man shall laboure to bryng them agayne. But who is he amonge you, that pondreth this in hys mynde, that consydereth yt? & taketh yt for a warnig in tyme to cōe?

Who suffred Jacob to be troden vnder fote, and Israel to be spoyled? Dyd not the Lord? Nowe haue we synned agaynst hi, & haue had no delyte to walcke in hys wayes, nether bene obedyent vnto his lawe. Therfore hath he poured vpon vs hys wrathful displeasure, and strong batel, which maketh vs haue to do on euery side, yet wil we not vnderstande: He burneth vs vp, yet sycketh it not in to our hertes.

The notes

a* Messaungers. He meaneth the hygh prestes, & those yt had cure of ỹ people. Those shuld haue taught the other, but they were blyndest of all, as Christ declareth in the gospell. Such ther be at all tymes, and shalbe vnto the worldes ende.

¶ God promiseth to sende hys Christ, whych shall delyuer hys people. He forgeueth synnes for hys owne sake.

¶ The. xliii. Chapter.

But now, the Lord hath made the O Jacob ād he that facioned ỹ O Israel, saith thus. Fear not, for I wil defend the. I haue called the by name, thou arte myne owne.

When thou wenteste in the water, I was by the, ỹ ỹ strōg floudes shuld not pluck the awaye. When thou walkest in the fyre, it shall not burne the, and the flame shal not kindle vpō the. For I am the Lorde thy God, the holy one of Israel, thy Sauyour. I gaue Egypte for thy delyuerance, the Moryans & the Sabees for the: because thou wast deare in my sight, & because I set by the, and loued the. I pylled all men for the, and delyuered vp al people for thy sake, that thou shuldest not fear, for I was wyth the. I wyll bryng thy sede from the East, and gather the together from the West. I wyl saye to the North, let go. And to the South, kepe not backe: but bryng me my sones frō farre/ and my daughters from the endes of the worlde: Namely/ all those that be called after my name: For them haue I created, fashyoned/ and made for myne honoure.

Bryng forth that people/ whether they haue eyes or be blynde/ deafe or haue eares. All nacyons shall come in one/ and be gathered i one people. But which amonge yonder goddes shal declare soche thynges/ & tell vs what is to come? Let them bringe their wytnesses/ so shall they be true: for then men shall heare it/ & saye/ it is truth. But I bring you wytnesse (sayth the Lord) euen those that are my seruauntes, whom I haue chosen: to the i tent ỹ ye myght be certyfyed and geue me faythfull credēce: yee and to cōsyder/ that I am he/ before whom there was neuer ani God and that there shalbe none after me. I am only the Lord/ and with out me is there no Sauyour. I geue warnyng/ I make whole/ I teach you that there shuld be no straung god amonge you. And thys record must ye beare me your selues (sayth the Lord) that I am god. And euen he am I from the beginnig/ & there is none that can take any thynge out of my hand. And what I do, cā no man chaunge.

Thus sayeth the Lord the holy one of Israel youre redemer: For youre sake I wyll sende to Babylon/ & bryng all the strōgest of them from thence: Namely/ the Chaldees that bost thē of their shyps: Euen I the Lord your holy one which haue made Israel, & ā your king

Moreouer

Moreouer, thus saith the Lord (euen he that maketh a waye in the see, and a fote path in the myghtye waters: whyche bringeth forth the charetes and horses, the hoste and the power, that they may fal a slepe and neuer ryse, and be extincte, lyke as towe is quenched.

Ye remembre not thynges of old, and regarde nothing that is past.a Therfore behold, I shall make a newe thynge/ and shortly shal it appere: yee shal wel knowe it, I tolde it you afore, but I will tell it you agayne.

I wyl make stretes in the desert, and ryuers of water in the wyldernesse. b The wyld beastes shal worshippe me: the dragon, and the Estryche. For I shal geue water in the wyldernesse, and streames in the desert: that I may geue drynche to my people, whome I chose. This people haue I made for my selfe, and they shal showe forth my prayse. For thou (Jacob) wouldest not cal vpō me, but thou haddeste an vnlust toward me, O Israel.

*Thou gauest me not thy younge beastes for burnt offeriges, nether dydest honoure me with thy sacrifyces. Thou boughtest me no deare spice wyth thy moneye/ nether pouredest the fatte of thy sacrifices vpon me. Howebeit I haue not bene chargeable vnto the in offerynges, nether greuous in incense.

*But thou haste laden me wyth thy synnes, & wearied me with thyne vngodlynes.

* Where as I yet am euen he only/ that for myne owne selfes sake do awaye thyne offences, and forgette thy synnes: so that I wyll neuer thynche vpon them. *Put me nowe in remembraunce (for we wyll reason together) and shewe what thou haste for the, to make the quyte.

*Thy fyrst father offended sore, and thy rulers haue synned agaynst me. Therfore I ether suspended, or slue ỹ chefest Princes: I did curse Jacob, & gaue Israel into reproche.

The Notes.

a* Therfore behold, I shalt make a newe thinge. &c. He meaneth that he wyl forsake the Jewes whi he were his owne peo ple, for their offences and cal the Gentyls that were Idolaters, whome he vnderstandeth by the deserte and wyldernes: as before in the, xxxv. a. xli. c.

b* The wilde beastes shal worshippe me the dragon &c. Vnder the name of these beastes signifieth he also heathen, which were wylde, rude and beastly, cōcerning godly knowledge.

These sayth he that he wyl tame by the preachynge of the gospel (which thinge he signifieth by waters and streames) so that they shal not hereafter do hurt in the church, but shal put their shoulders vnder ỹ yocke of fayth, and be ruled withe the lawe of charite.

c* To shewe forth the prayse of the Lord, is, to preache the remyssyō of synnes, and the delyuerāce from death and hel, and the greuens of euerlastinge lyfe by the mercy of God, for Christes sake. Lyke maner of speakynge vseth Dauid in the Psal. xxii. d. where he bearynge the figure of Christe, sayeth: In the myddest of the congregation wyl I prayse ỹ &c. Thus should the Gentyles and heathen praise him, which people he chose for hym selfe, as ye maye se in the text: For the Jewes (whiche are signifyed by Jacob) wolde not do it, but their confydence in kepyng of the lawe. Thys doth the Prophet vpbraide them with, in the person of God saying: * Thou gauest me not thy younge beastes &c. As who should saye: Saye not that thou hast geuen me many sacrifices, both because thou gauest them not only, but vnto thy calues and Bealles and other Idoles: and also because I dyd neuer set greatly by hem, ner greatly requyred thē. They greued me al waies, when the faythe of the deuocīō of the geuers was awaye.

The shepe of thy burntofferinges broughtest thou not vnto me, nether dydest thou glorify me with thi sacrifices, but dydest onely satisfy thine owne superstitions. I compelled the not to worshippe me wyth thine offrynges, but because thou so redely offredest such thynges vnto Idoles after the maner of the heathen, I commaunded that they shuld not be offred vnto other goddes, but vnto me, of whose gift ỹ receauest them & reatera. None of al these thinges profyted me: in as much as thou leftest of the thynges which I chefely requyred righteousnes, fayth, and iudgement. Mat. xxii.

* Thou hast moch more offended me wyth thy sinnes, then that thou canst please me with al these ceremonies: which iustifie not them that do them, ner bringe them into my fauour: in lesse than they fyrste be my beloued through fayth. * No maner of Idoles, ner the sacrifices of oxen sheep, or goates ner the mexptes of thy workes, howe precyous or goodly so euer they be, do put awaye sinn: But I my selfe alone by my only mercy and grace do perdon them, to al those that beleue that I so do: & do not ones remember them, to thintent to punysh thē: Yee, and I freely forgeue them. Rom. iii. d. I am not bounde vnto the, that haste so often fallen from thy fayth, which I onely regard. * Or elles bryng me in remembraunce, reason thy matter w me, and shew me, whether thou haue alwayes more prouoked me vnto anger, or I haue ben ouermuch fauorable vnto ỹ: whether I haue euer ben readier to forgeue, then thou to amend.

Thou canst surely neuer bryng any thinge for the, wher by thou maye st iustyfie thy cause agaynst me.

* Thou hast not chosen me, but I haue chosen ỹ. I made thy father Adam. Gene. i. d which strayght wayes transgressed the commaundement. Gene. iii a, b. And Ysaiah could be not be iustyfied by his workes but by his faith. Rom. iii. a As no nother man can: whose whole lyfe is ful of synne euē from their childehod, ye euen he that lyueth but a daye. Jacob was preferred before Esau, not for his merytes or deseruynges, but by election. Gen. xxv. Ro. ix. b

Thy rulers, or (as some rede) Interpretours, Moyses, and Aaron, were not founde without offence before me, but sinned agaynst me. Numer. xi. e

Therfore not without a cause killed I thy Princes and Priestes of the Sanctuarye, which shulde offer both for them selues and for the people, Ezech. viii.

For no man liuing shalbe iustified in my sight. Psal. cxliii. And the Aungels are not cleane before me. Job. xxv. d. How much lesse then wil I spare thys stiffe necked and sturdy people: But I wyl at time conuenyent turne the sunnes of Jacob after ỹ flesh, which be ont of kynde concerning the spyrite, so that they shal be a curse amongest the Heathen: wher as on the other syde, the true and lefaful sonnes of Jacob shal be the blessing of al nacions, thorow Christ, in whom al the chosen shalbe blessed. Gen. xii. a. and Gala. iii. c. Vouchafe, good reader, to rede the text with also: shalt ỹ perceaue to which parte of the text, euery part of the note belongeth.

¶ The. xliiii. Chapter.

¶ Christ prompteth to deliuer his church, which he hath redemed. Idoalatry & kneling before ymages & are confuted.

SO here now, O Jacob my seruaunt, and Israell whō I haue chosen. For thus sayeth the lord, that made the, fashioned the, and helped the, euen from thy mothers wombe: Be not afrayed, O Jacob my seruaūte, thou righteous, whom I haue chosen:

a* For I shal poure water vpon the drye grounde and ryuers vpon ỹ thurstye. I shall poure my spyrite vpon thy sede, and myne encrease vpō thy stock. They shal growe together/lyke as the grasse, and as the wilowes by the waters syde.

b* One wyl saye: I am ỹ lordes. Another wil I cal vnder the name of Jacob. The thirde shal describe wt his hande vnto the Lorde, and geue hi self vnder the name of Israel.

Moreouer, thus hath the Lord spoken: euen the King of Israel, and hys auenger, the Lord of Hostes: I am the fyrste and the laste, and with out me is there no god. For what is he, that euer was like me, which am frō euerlastig. Let him shewe his name, and do where thorow he may be likened vnto me. Let him tel you forthe playnely thynges, that are past and for to come; yee & that without any feare or stoppe. For haue not I euer told you hytherto, and warned you? Ye can beare me recorde your selues. Is there any god excepte me? or any maker, that I shoulde not know hym?

Wherfore al caruers of Idoles ar but vayne, and their labour lost. They must beare recorde them selues/ỹ (seing they cā nether se nor vnderstād, they shal be confounded. Who shoulde now make a god, or fashion an Idole, that is profitable for nothyng?

Beholde, all the felowshippe of them must be brought to confusyon. Let all the workmasters of them come & stand together from amonge men: they must be abashed and confounded one with a nother. The smyth taketh yron, & tempereth it with hoate coales, and fashioneth it with hammers, and maketh yt with al ỹ strength of his armes: yee, soe tyme he is faynt for very hunger, and so thursty, that he hath no more power.

c* The carpenter (or ymage caruer) taketh meat of the tymbre: and spreadeth forth his lyne: he marketh it wyth som coloure: he playneth it, he ruleth it, and squareth it, and maketh it after the image of a man, and according to the bewty of a man: that it maye stande in the temple.

Moreouer, he goeth out to hew downe Cedre trees: He bringeth home Elmes and Okes, and other tymber of ỹ wod. Or els the fyrre trees which he planted him selfe, and suche as the rayne hath swelled, which wod serueth for men to burne. Of this he taketh and warmeth him selfe with al: he maketh a fyre, of it to bake bred. And after warde maketh a God there of, to honoure it: and an Idole to knele before it. One pece burneth in the fyre, with another he rosteth flesh/that he maye eate roste his bely full: wyth the thyrde he warmeth him selfe, and sayeth: Aha, I am wel warmed, I haue bene at the fyre. And of the residue he maketh hym a God, and an Idole for him selfe. He kneleth before it, he worshyppeth it, he prayeth vnto it, and sayeth: delyuer me, for thou art my god.

Yet men nether consider ner vnderstand, because their eyes are stopped, ỹ they can not see: & their hertes, that they can not perceaue. They ponder not in their mides, for thet haue nether knowledg ner vnderstādig, to thynck thus: I haue brent one pece i the fire: I haue baked bred wyth the coales therof, I haue rosted flesh with al, and eaten it: shal I now of the residue make an abhomynacyon, and fall downe before a roten pece of wod?

The

The keppynge of dust, and folishnes of hert hath turned them alyde: so that no ne of them can haue a fre conscience to thynke: may not I erre?

Consyder thys (O Jacob and Israell) for thou art my seruaunte. I haue made the that thou myghtest serue me. O Israell, forget me not. As for thyne offences, I dryue them awaye lyke the cloudes, and thy Synnes as the myst. Turne the agayne vnto me, and I wyll delyuer the.

Be glad ye heauens, whome the lord hath made, let al that is here beneth vpon the earth, be toyfull. Retoyce yee mountaynes and woddes, with all the trees that are in you: for the Lorde shal redeme Jacob, and shewe hys glorye vpon Israell. For thus sayth the Lorde thy redemer/euen he that fashioned ỹ from thy mothers wombe: I am the, lorde, which do all thinges my selfe alone I only haue spred out the heuens, and I onely haue layd the foundacion of ỹ erth. I destroye the tokens of witches, and make the southsayers go wronge. As for the wyse, I turne them backwarde, and make theyr connyng folyshnes.

But I set vp the purpose of me seruauntes, and fulfyld* the councel of my messaungers. I saye to Jerusalem: turne agayne: And to the cyties of Juda, be ye buylded agayne: and I repayre theyr decayed places. I saye to the ground, be dry. And I dryue vp thy water floudes. I saye to Cirus: thou art myne herdman: so that he shall fulfyl all thynges after my wyll. I saye to Jerusalem be thou buylded, and to the temple: be thou fast grounded.

The Notes.

a* For I shall powre waters vpon the: &c. By the water and ryuers, vnderstand the grace of God: & by the dry grounde and the thurstye, the gentyles & heathen, which had not ben fylled and watered with the worde of God. b* One wyll saye: &c. Is who should saye: here and there, and all the worlde ouer are therof the Lordes people, ye euen amongst the heathen.

c* Let the chrysten here note how lyuely the prophet payntyth out the vanytie of Images. For it is too be feared that oure superstitiō, concerning such thinges, passeth & exceadeth the superstition of the Jewes. Ones euident it is, that the Jewes in oure tyme can in no wyse be persuaded to become Chrystē, so long as we fall downe & knele before ymages. Their answer is that they and we both (if we be of God) shuld in no condicion do any thing that is openly and in so many places forbidden of God. The Turches & Saracens also make vs therfore.

The honoure of God (saye they, and truelye it is) ought we to seke, and to styck by hys worde: & nether to adde therunto, ner take awaye, nether to swarue to the right hande or to the left: but ernestly to stād by ỹ which is commaunded, & for sake that which he is forbydden. God graunt vs Christē a better trade and conuersacyon of lyuing, then that we should be our example be an offence either to Jew or Sarasin, and an occasion to kepe them frō the faith of christ. And geue the simple eyes to se and perceue the falsheed of ỹ cursed which for lucre augment their blindnes, & exhort them to such superstition. So be it.

¶ The. xlv. Chapter.

THus sayeth the Lord vnto Cyrus his anoynted, whōe he leadeth by the right hād: that the people maye fall downe before him: I wyll lowse the gyrdell of kinges: that they shal open the gates before thy face, and not to shut their dores. I wil go before the / and make the croked streyghte I shal breake the brasen dores, and burst the yron barres. I shal geue the ỹ hyd treasure and the thinge which is secretly kepte that thou maiest knowe, that I the god of Israel haue called the by thy name, and that for Jacob my seruauntes sake, and for Israel my chosen. For I called the by the name, and ordened the or euer thou knowest me: Euen I the Lord, before whom there is none other: for without me ther is no god. I haue prepared the or euer thou knowest me that it might be knowen from ỹ rysinge of the sunne to the goyng downe of the same/ ỹ al is nothig without me. For I am the Lord, and there is els none. It is I that created ỹ lyght and darcknes, I make peace and trouble: yee euen I the lord do all these thynges. a* The heaues aboue shal drop downe, and ỹ cloudes shall rayne righteousnes. The earth shal open it selfe, and bryngе forth healthy, & therby shall righteousnes florysh. Euen I the lord shal bryngе it to passe.

Woo be vnto him that chideth with hys maker, the potshard with the Potter: Sayeth the claye to the potter: What makest thou? or thi worke serueth for nothing? Woo be vnto hym ỹ sayth to his father: why begettest ỹ? And to his mother: wht bearest thou?

Thus sayeth the Lorde, euen the holy one and maker of Israel: Aske me of thinges for to cõ,cernyng mi sõnes: and put me in remembraũce,as touchynge the worckes of my hãdes: I haue made the earth,& created man vpon it. Wyth mine handes haue I spred forth heauen/and geuen a cõmaundmẽt for all the Host ther of. I shall wake hym vp w̃ ryghtuousnesse/and ordre al his wayes. He shall buylde my cytye /and lett out my prisoners: and ỹ nether for gyft nor rewardes/sayeth the Lord of Hostes.

C The Lorde hath sayde moreouer: The occupiers of Egypt/the marchauntes of the Moryans and Sabees/shall cõ vnto the with trybute/they shal folow the,& go with cheines vpon their fete. They shall fall downe before the/and make supplicacion vnto the. For God (w̃ out whõ there is none other God) shall be with the. O how profoũde art thou O God/thou God and Sauiour of Israel: Confounded be ye/and put to dishonour: goo hence together with shame/all ye that be worckmasters of errour: (that is worshippers of Idols) But Israell shalbe sauid in the Lorde, with the euerallstyng saluacion: They shall not come to shame ner confusyon/world with out ende.

For thus sayeth the Lorde: euen he ỹ created heauen/the God that made ỹ earth/ỹ fashioned it,& sett it forth: I haue not made it for naught, but I D made it to be enhabited Euen I ỹ Lorde/without whom there is none other. I haue not spokẽ secretly, nether in darcke places of the earth. It is not for naught, that I sayde vnto the sede of Jacow: seke me. I am the Lord, which whẽ I speake, declareth ỹ thinge that is ryghtuous & true. Let them be gathered & come together, lett them drawe nye hyther, that are escaped of the people: Haue they eny vnder standyng/ that set vp the stockes of their Idols/ & praie vnto a God, ỹ can not help thẽ. Lett men drawe nye, let them come hyther, and aske coũcell one at another,& the we forth: What is he, that tolde this before/or who spake of it, euer sence ỹ begynnyng? Haue I not ỹ Lorde done it: wythout whom there is none other God: ỹ true god & Sauiour, and there is els none but I. And therfore turne you vnto me (al ye endes of the earthe) so shall ye be saued, for I am God, and there is els none. I sweare by my selfe: out of my mouth commeth the word of rightuousnes/ and that maye no man turne: but al knees shal bow vnto me, and al tunges shal swere vnto me, sayng: Verely in the Lord is my ryghtuousnes and strength. To him shal men cõe: but al they that thincke scorne of hym, shalbe confounded. And the whole sede of Israel shalbe iustifyed/and praised in the lord.

a* Some reade, ye heauens, send downe youre dew from aboue, and let the cloudes rayne, &c. The prophet declareth that kinge Cyrus may come, and help the people of Israel vnder Cyrus figuring Christe and vnder Israel the Churche. As though he shulde saye: wold God the heuenly powers wolde so geue their grace, as the earthly wolde not refuse to receaue it: so that here after our heauen be not of brasse, for our synnes sake: Deu. xxviii. b but ỹ by Godes grace, the rayne of saluacyon wold fal on vs, righteousnes dropp downe from heauen, to make ours hertes fertile and fruitful: that Christ our sauioure, which is the rightuousnes of the chosen, wold com forth of the earth, and bring forth the blossomes of saluacion. This peticion doth the Lord promes to performe, saying: Euen I ỹ Lorde shall bring it to passe.

MEuertheles a* Bel shal fal and Nabo shalbe broken: I whose images ar a burthe for the beastes and cattell, to ouerlade them, and to make them weery.

They shal synck downe/and fal to gether: for they maye not ease them of their burthen, therfore must they go in to captyuite.

Herken vnto me, O house of Jacob/ and al ye that remayne yet of the household of Israell: whom I haue borne B frõ your mothers wombe, and bought you vp from youre berth, tyll ye weere growen: I which shal beare you vnto your last age I haue made you, I will also norysh you bere you and saue you Whom wil ye make me lyke, in fashiõ or ymage, that maye be like him: Ye fooles (no dout) wyl take out silver and goulde oute of youre purcys, and weye it, and hyre a goldsmith to make a god of it, that mẽ maye knele downe and worshippe it. Yet must he be taken on mens shoulders and borne, & set in his place, that he may stande and not moue. Alas that men should cry vn to him, which geueth no answere: and delyuereth not the man ỹ calleth vpon him/from his trouble.

Consider this wel, and be ashamed. b* Go into youre owne selues (O ye trãsgates). Remembre the thinges whi che are paste, sence the beginning of ỹ world: that I am god, and that there is els no God, ye and that there is nothing lyke vnto me.

C The. xlvii. Chapter.

BUt as for the (O daughter thou virgin Babylon) a* Thou shalte syt in the duste thou shalte syt vpon the grounde, and not in a trone (O thou mayden of Chaldea) Thou shalt no more be cald tẽder and pleasaũt. Thou shalt bring forth the b* querne and grinde meele, put down thi stomacher make bare thi knes and shalt wade thorow the water ryuers. Thy shame shall be discouered, and thi reuenges shalbe sene. For I wyl auẽg C me of the, and no man shall lett me: sayeth oure redemer, which is called the Lord of Hostes, the holy one of Israel. Syt styll, holde thy tunge, and get the in to some darcke corner, O daughter Caldea, for thou shalt nomore be cald lady of kyngdomes. I was so wroth with my people, that I punished myne enheritaunce, and gaue them in to thy power. Neuertheles, thou shewedest them no mercy, but euen the very aged mẽ of them, didest thou oppresse ryght 25 sore wyth thi lock, and thou thoughtest thus, I shalbe lady for euer. And besyd all that, thou hast not regarded these thinges nether cast, what shulde come after: Heare now therfore, thou wil ful, that sittest so careles, and speakest thus in thine herte: I am alone, and w̃ out me is there none: I shall neuer be wyddowe, ner desolate agayne. And yet both these thynges shal come to the vp on one daye in the twynclyng of an eye: Namely wyddowhead, and desolacyon. They shal mightely fal vpõ the/ for the multitude of thy witches/and C for the greate heap of thi cõiurers: For thou hast comforted thy selfe in thi dyscreatfulnes/and hast sayde: No man seyth me. Thyne owne wysdome and connynge hath disceaued the. In that thou hast sayde: I am alone, and with out me there is none. Therfor shal trouble come vpon the, and thou shalt not knowe, from whẽce it shall aryse. Myschefe shal fal vpõ the, which thou shalt not be able to put of.

A sodayne myserye shal come vpon the, D or euer thou be a warre.

Now go to thy coniurers, and to the multitude of thy witches (whome thou hast bene acquanted with all frõ thy youth) if they maye helpe the/or stregthen the.

Thou hast hitherto had many coũcels of

of them/so let the heauen galars and the beholders of starres come on now and delyuer the: ye and let them shewe, when these new thynges shall com vp on the.

Behold, they shalbe lyke strawe, which yf it be kyndled with fyre, no mā maye tydd it for the vehemence of the flame: And yet it geuet no synders to warme a man by, nether cleare fyre to syt by. Euē so shal they be vnto ỹ whom thou hast vsed & occuppyd from thy youth. Euery one shall shewe ỹ hys erroneous waie, yet shall none of them defende the.

The. xlviii. Chapter.

A Heare this, O thou house of Jacob: ye that are caled by the name of Israel/and are come out of one stocke w̄ Juda: which sweare by ỹ name of the Lōrd, and beare witnesse bi the God of Israel/but not w̄ treuth & tyght which are called fre men of the holy cytie/as they that loke for conforth in ỹ God of Israell/whose name is the Lōrde of hostes.

The thinges ỹ I shewed you euer sence the begynnyng: Haue I not brought them to passe/immediatly as thei came out of my mouth/& declarde thē? And they are come? Howbeit I knewe that thou art obstynate/& that thi neck hath* an yron veyne/and ỹ thy browe is of brasse. Neuertheles I haue euer sence ỹ begynning shewed the of thinges for to come/and declared them vnto the/or euer they came to passe: that thou shuldest not sate: mine Idol hath done it/my carued or cast ymage hath shewed it. Heare and consyder all these thinges whether it was ye ỹ prophecied them.

But as for me, I tolde the before atthe B begynnynge, new and secrete thinges/ that thou knewest not of: And some done now not of olde tyme, wher of thou neuer herdest, before they were brought to passe: that thou canst not saye: I knewe of them. Moreouer there be some wher of thou hast nether herde ner knowne, nether haue thei bene opened vnto thine eares afore time For I knewe that thou woldest maliciously offende, therfore haue I called the a transgressoure, e uen from thy Mothers woom be.

Neuertheles for my name s sake/I haue withdrawne my wrath, and for mine honours sake I haue ouersene ỹ, so that I haue not rooted the out. b* Beholde I haue purged the, and not for money. I haue chosen the in ỹ fyre of pouerte. And that only for myne owne sake, for I geue myne hon our to none other, that thou shuldest not dysprayse me. Herken vnto me O Jacob & Israel whom I haue called. I am euē he that is, I am ỹ first and the last. My hande is the foundacyon of the earth, & my ryght hande spanneth ouer the heauens. C

As soone as I called them they were there. Gather you al together, & herken: Which of yonder goddes hath declared this, that the Lōrde wyll do by the kynge of Babylō (whome he loueth & fauoureth) and by ỹ Caldees his arme? I my selfe alone haue tolde you this before. Yee I shall call him and bringe hi forth, & geue hi a prosperous tourneye. Come nye and heare this: haue I spoken eny thynge darckly sence the begynnynge? when a thynge be gynneth, I am there. D

Wherfore the Lōrde God with hys spirete hath sent me, And thus saieth the Lōrde God thine auenger, the holy one of Israell: I am the Lōrd thi god, which teach ỹ profitable thinges, & leade ỹ the waye, that thou shuldest go. Yf ỹ wilt now regarde mi cōmaundement, thy weltheynesse shall be as the water streame: and thy righteousnes as the waues flowynge in the see. Thy sede shallbee lyke as the sandde in the see/ and and the frute of thy body, lyke the gravell stones therof: Thy name shall not be roted out, nor destroyed before me. Ye shall go away from Babylon, and escape the Caldees wyth a mery voyce. This shalbe spoken of, declared abrod, and go forth vnto the end of the world: so that it shalbe sayde: The Lōrd hath defended hys seruaūt Jacob/that they suffred no thyrste, when they traueled in the wyldernes. He claue the rockes alondre/and the water guished out. As for the vngodlye, they haue no peace, sayth the Lōrd.

The Notes.

a* By this he meaneth that the people of Israell were stubburne, frowarde, rebellious, vntractable, vnruly and shamles.

b* Some reade: Beho ld I haue purifyed the: but not as syluer: I haue chosen the out of the fournes of affliction. For my ne owne sake. For myne owne sake haue I done thys: for lyke whome would they pollute me: truelye I will not geue my glory to anye other. Herken. &c. The same expound it thus. I wol not suffre the wholly to perysh: for if I had prouch and purifyed the as golde and syluer is purifyed, from which all maner of drosse is clensed, ther shuld nothynge haue remayned in the: verye fewe, ye none shulde haue bene saued: But I brought the vnder, & proued the in the fornes of affliccyō, that is, I wrapped the in captiuyte and bondage in Egypte, from whyche I afterward delyuered the. And thys haue I done for myne owne sake. That is, onely for myn owne name and glorye, of myne owne gentelnes and louing kyndnes, not for any of thy merites & deserupnges, which were none at all. For how would ỹ gentyles and heathen haue polluted, defyled, & blasphemed my name, yf I had rooted out myne owne people: and so haue made the trueth of the promyses which I had determyned to fulfyll in Chryst, vayne and vntrue: For as well thys prayse of my truthe, as the glory of the blessynge promysed in the sede of Abraham and Dauid, wyl I not geue vnto another people or nacion. The health of the worlde shall come of the Jewes. Joh iiii. and frō none other. The glad tydinges of health shall the whole world receaue of none other then of Chryst, by the preachynge of the Apostles. &c.

The. xlix. Chapter.

C Christ shal gather to gether al nacions be they neuer so farre of.

Ea* Iles, herken vnto me, and take hede ye people frō farre: The Lōrd hath called me fro my birth, & made mencyō of my name fro mi mothers wombe: * he hath made my mouth lyke a sharpe swerde, vnder the shadowe of hys hande hathe he defended me, and hyd me in hys quyuer, as a good arowe, and sayde vnto me, Thou art my seruaunt Israell, I wyll be honoured in the. Then answerde I: I shall lese my laboure, I shall spend my strength in vayne. Neuertheles, I wyll commytte mi cause and mi worke vnto the Lōrde my God. And now sayeth the Lōrde, euen he ỹ fashionde me fro my mothers whombe to be his seruaunte, that I maye bringe Jacob agayn vnto hi: how be it, Israel wil not be gathered vnto hi agayne. In whose B sygth I am greate, which also is my Lōrde, my God and my strength. Let it be but a small thynge, that ỹ art my seruaūt, to sett vp ỹ kynreddes of Jacob, & to restore the destruccion of Israell: yf I make the not also the syght of the Gentles, ỹ thou mayest be mi healthe vnto the ende of the worlde.

Moze ouer thus saieth the Lōrd the aūcēger and holy one of Israel, because of ỹ abhorring and despysinge among the Gentiles, concerninge the seruaunt of al them that beare rule: kinges and princes shal se, and arise and worship/ because of the Lōrde that he is faythfull: and because of the holy one of Israell, whych hath chosen the.

And thus saieth the Lōrd: * In the C tyme apointed wyll I be present with the. * And in the houre of healthy wyl I help the, & delyuer the. I wyl make the a pledge for the people, so that thou shalt helpe vp the earth agayne, and chaleng againe the scatred heritages: That thou maiest say to the presoners: go forth, & to thē that are in darknesse: com in to ỹ light, that they maye fede in the hie wayes, and get their lyuyng in al places. There shal nether hūger nor thurste, heate nor Sūne hurte thē. For he that fauoureth them, shal leade thē, & geue thē dryncke of the springe welles. I wyll make wayes vpon all my mountaynes, & my fote pathes shalbe exalted. And beholde, thei shall com frō farre: lo, some frō the north and west, some from the south. * Reioyse ye heauens, and synge prayses thou earth: Talke of ioye ye hilles, for God wil cōfort his people, & haue merci vpō his, ỹ be in trouble. who wyll then goo with me to lawe:
Let vs stande one agaynst another: yf
there be any that wyll reason with me, let hym come here forth to me. Behold,
the

the lord god standeth by me, what is he that can condemne me: lo, they shall be al lyke as an olde cloth, whiche the Therfore who so feareth the Lorde among you, let him heare the voyce of his seruaunt. Who so walketh in dar-let him hope in the Lorde, and hold hi by his god. But take hede, b* ye haue al kyndled a fyre, and gyrded your sel-that ye haue kyndled. This cometh vn to you fro my hande, namely ỹ ye shall lepe in sorowe.

The notes
a* God was not the cause why the congregacyō of the Jewes (which is vnderstande by mother, & was once hys spouse) was diuorced and forsaken: but their owne offences dyuorced thē, and was ỹ cause why they were solde to the vlurer, and geuen ouer i b* Ye who saye: ye your selues haue kyndled the

Awake/awake, and stande vp, O F

Jerusalem, thou that from ỹ hand of ỹ Lord, hast dronken out the b* cuppe of his wrath: thou that hast supped of, & sucked out the stombringe cuppe to the botome. For amõge all the sonnes whom thou hast begotten, there is not one that maye holde the vp: and not one to leade the by the hande, of all the sones that thou hast norysshed. Both these ythynges are happende vnto the, but who is sorye for it. Yee, destruccion, wastynge, hungre and swerde: but who hath comforted the? Thy sonnes lye comfortles at ỹ heade of euery strete lyke a stag en benyssõ, & are ful of ỹ terrible wrath of the Lorde, & punishmẽt of thy God. And therfore thou miserable & dronke(how be it not w wyn) hear this: Thus sayeth thy Lorde: thy Lorde & God, the defender of his people: Beholde, I wil take ỹ stombring cuppe out of thy hande, euen ỹ cuppe w the dregges of mi wrath: ỹ from hence forth thou shalt neuer drinke it more, & wil put it in their hande ỹ trouble ỹ: whiche haue spoken to thy soule: stoupe downe, that we maye go ouer the: make thi body eauen w the grounde, and as ỹ strete to go vpõ.

¶ A consolation and comforth to the peple of God

¶ The .lii. Chapter.

A VP Syon vp, take thy strength vnto the: put on thyne honest rayment O Jerusalem, thou cytye of the holy one. For from thys tyme forth, there shall no vncircumcysed ner vncleane person come in the. Shake the from the dust, aryse and stande vp, O Jerusalem. Pluck out thy neck frõ the bonde, O thou captyue daughter Syon. For thou sayeth ỹ Lorde: ye are solde for naught, therfore shal ye be redemed also with out eny monye.

For thus hath ỹ Lorde sayde: My people wente down afore tyme in to Egipte, there to be straungers. After ward dyd the king of the Assyrians oppresse them, for naught. And now what profyt is it to me (sayth the Lord) ỹ my people is freely caried awaye, & brought in to heupnes by their rulers, ãd my a* name euer skyll blaspheamed: sayeth the Lorde. But ỹ my people maye knowe my name, I my selfe wyl speache i that daye. Beholde, here am I. O how bewtifull are ỹ feete of the Embassetoure/ ỹ bringeth ỹ message frõ the moũtaiu, & proclameth peace: that bringeth good tydinges, & preacheth helath, & sayeth vnto Sion: Thi God is the king. Thi watchme shal lyft vp their voyce, with loude voyce shall they preach of hym: for thei shal se him present, when ỹ Lord shall come agayne to Sion.

Be glad, O thou desolate Jerusalem, & reioyce together: for ỹ Lord wil comforte his people, he wyll deliuer Jerusalem. The Lord wil make beare b* his holt arme, & shew it forth in ỹ syght of all the Gẽtiles, & all the endes of the earth shall se the saueng health of oure God. Away, awai get you out frõ thẽce and touch no vncleane thynge. Go oute frõ amonge soch. And be cleane, ye ỹ bare ỹ c* vessell of the Lord. But ye shal not go out with sedicion, ner make hast as they ỹ flie awaye: for the Lorde shal go before you, & the God of Israel shal kepe the watch.

Behold, my seruaunt shall deale wysely, therfore shal he be magnyfyed, exalted and greatly honoured. Lyke as ỹ multitude shal wõder vpõ him, becaus d* his face shalbe so deformed & not as a mans face, & his bewti lyke no man: Euen so shall the multytude of the Gẽtyles loke vnto him, & the kinges shal shut their mouthes before hi. For they that haue not bene tolde of him, shal se hi, and they ỹ herde nothig of him shal beholde him.

¶ The prophecieth cupdenly of the passion of oure Sauiour Jesus Chryst.

I B* Vt who geueth credence vnto our preaching? Or to whõ is the arme of ỹ lorde knowen, he shal grow before the Lord lyke as a braunche, and as a rote in a dry ground/ he shal haue nether bewty nor fauour: When we loke vpon him, there shalbe no fayrnesse: we shal haue no lust vnto him. He shalbe the most symple, and despyled of al-which yet hath good experience of sorowes and infirmyties.

We shal reken him so simple and so vyle, that we shal hyde our faces from hym. How be it (of a truth) he only taketh awaye oure infirmite, and beareth our payne: Yet we shal iudg him, as though he were plaged and cast downe of God: where as he (not with standyng) shall be wounded for oure offences, and smitten for our wickednes.

For the payne of our punishment shal be layde vpon him, and with his stripes shal we be healed.

Is for vs, we go al astraie (lyke shepe) euery one a* turneth his own way. But thorow hym, the lord pardoneth al our sinnes. He shal be pained and troubled, and shal not open his mouth. He shal be led as a shepe to be slayne, yet shall he be as styl as a lambe before the sheare, and not open his mouth.

He shal be had awaye/ his cause not herde, and without eny iudgmẽt: Whose generacion yet no man maye nombre/ whẽ he shalbe cut of from the b* grond of the lyuing: Which punishment shal go vpon him/ for the c transgression of my people. His graue shalbe geuen him with the condemned, and his crucifyeng w ỹ theues. Where as he dyd neuer violẽce ner vnright/ nether hath ther ben eny disceatfulnes i his mouth.

Yet hath it pleased the Lorde to smyte him with in firmyte, that when he had made hys soule an offeryng for synne, he might se lõg last ynge sed. And this deuice of the Lord shal prospere in his hande. With trauayle and laboure of his soul, shal he obtain gret ryches My rightuous seruaũt shal w his wysdõ iustify & delyuer ỹ multitude, for he shall bear awaye their synnes. Behold, when ye* fast, youre luste remaineth styl: for ye do no lesse violence to your detters: lo ye fast to stryfe and debate,and to smyte hym wyth youre fist that speaketh vnto you.

Ye fast not(as some tyme)that youre voyce might be heard aboue. Thincke ye this fast pleseth me,that a mā shuld chasten hym selfe for a daye/and to wrythe his head aboute lyke an hoke in an hearry cloth and,to lye vpon ȳ earth Should that be called fastyng,or aday that pleaseth the lorde But this fastynge pleaseth not me, tyl the time be ȳ lowse him out of bondag,that is in thi daughter :that thou breake the ooth of wicked bargynnes,that thou let not ȳ oppressed go fre, and take from them al maner of burthens. It pleaseth not me, tyl thou deale thy bread to thy hongrye,and bryng ȳ poore fatherles home into thy house,when thou seist the naked that thou couer hym, & hyde not thy face from thine owne flesh.

Then shal thy light breake forth as the morynge,and thy health floryshe tyght shortly:thy rightuousnes shall go before the,and the glorye of ȳ lorde shal embrace the.

Then yf thou callest,the lorde shal answere the:if thou cryest,he shal saye: heare I am. Yeyf thou layest awaye thy thy burthens,and holdest thi fingers, and cealest from blasphemous talking, yf thou hast compassion vpon the hongry,and refreshest the troubled soule: Then shal thy light spryng out in the darckne, & thy darckne shalbe as ȳ noone daye. The Lord shal euer be thy gyde,and satisfi the desyre of thyne hert,and fyl thy bones with mayre, Thou shalt be like a fresh watred garde,and lyke ȳ fountayne of water,that neuer leaueth running. Then the places that haue euer bene waste, shal be buylded of the:there shalt thou laye a foundacion for many kynredes. Thou shalte bee called the maker vp of hedges,and the buylder againe of ȳ waye of the Sabboth.

Yeyf thou turne thy fete from the Sabboth,so that thou do not the thing which pleaseth thy selfe in my holy dai: then shalt thou be called vnto ȳ pleasaunte,holy,and,glorious Sabboth of the Lord,where thou shalt be in honoure:so ȳ thou do not after thine own ymagynacion,nether seke thine owne wyll,nor speake thyne owne wordes. Then shalt thou haue thy pleasure in the Lord,which shal cary ȳ hye aboue the earth, and fede the wyth the heritage of Jacob the father:for ȳ Lordes owne mouth hath so promysed.

The notes

* This fast remayneth yet among the cristen, for true chastenyng of the body and abstenyng frō vice wyl we yet nether vnderstande nor heare of:but tyl thincke wt the Jewes both that we do god a greate pleasure when we faste, and also that we then fast, whyn we abstayne from one thing & fyll oure belyes wt another. And verely in this thing doth our superstycion ercede the superstycion of the Jewes. For we neuer reade that they euer toke it for a fast,to abstayn frō flesh, and eate other flesh or whyte meate(as they cal it)

¶ The Lord is myghty to saue, and ready to heare our requestes.

¶ The. lix. Chapter.

BEeholde,the Lordes hand is not so shortened ȳ it can not help, nether is his eare so stopped that it maie not heare. But your mysdedes haue seperated you from youre God, & your sinnes hyde his face from you/ ȳ he heareth you not. For your hādes are defyled with bloud, and your fyngers with vnrightuousnes: Your lippes speake lesinges,and your tong lettoth out wickednes. No man regardeth rightuousnes,and no mā iudgeth truly. Every man hopeth in vayne thynges,and imagineth dysceate,conceaueth werines,and bryngeth forth euel: They* brede cockatrice egges, & weue the spyders webb. * Who so eateth of their egges,dieth. * But if one treade vpon them, there commeth vp a serpent. * Their webbe maketh no cloth and they maye not couer them with their labour. * Their dedes are the dedes of wickednes, and ȳ worke of robbery is in their handes. Their fete runne to euel,and they make hast to shed innocent bloud. Their councels are wicked councels,harme & destruccion are in their wayes. But the waye of peace they knowe not. In their goynges is no equite, their wayes are so croked, that who so euer goeth therin,knoweth nothyng of peace.

And this is the cause ȳ equite is so farre from vs,and that rightuousnes commeth not nye vs. We loke for lyghte,lo it is darckneſse: for the morynge shyne,se,we walck in the darcke. We grope like the blind vpon ȳ wall, we grope euen as one ȳ hath non eyes. We stomble at the none daye,as though it were towarde night: i the falling places,lyke men that are half deed. We roare al like Beares, and mourne styl like doues. We loke for equite, but there is none: for healthe, but it is farre from vs. For our offences are many before the,and our synnes testifie agaynst vs. Yee we must confesse ȳ we offed,and knowledg that we do amis: Namely transgresse and dissemble agaynst the Lorde,and fall awaye from oure God: vsyng presumptuous and traditious ymaginacions,and castyng false matters in our hertes. And therfore is equyte gone asyde, and rightuousnes standeth farre of:truth is falle downe in the strete & ȳ thing ȳ is plain & ope,may not be shewed. Yee ȳ trueth is laide in prison,and he ȳ departeth him selfe from euel,must be spoyled.

When the Lord saw this, it displeased him sore,that ther was no where eny equyte. He sawe also/that there was no man,whiche had pitie therof/or was greued at it. And he hild him by his owne power, and cleaued to his owne rightuosnes. * He put rychtuosnes vpon hi for a brest plate, and set the helmet of healthy vpon his heed. He put on wrathe in steade of clothing, and toke gelousye aboute hym for a Cloake: (lyke as when a man goeth wrothfully to recompence his enemyes, and too be aduenged of his aduersaries.) Namelye, that he myghte recompence and rewarde the Ilandes wherthorowe the name of ỹ lord might be feared, from ỹ rysynge of the sunne: and his mageſty, vnto the goyng downe of the same.

For he shall come as a violent water streame, which the wynd of the lord hath moued. But vnto Syō ther shall come a redemer, & vnto thē in Jacob ỹ turne frō wickednes, sayth the Lord. I wyl make thys couenaunt w̄ the (saith ỹ lorde): My spyrete ỹ is come vpon the, & the wordes which I haue put in thy mouth, shal neuer go out of thi mouth, nor out of ỹ mouth of thy childers childerē, frō this tyme forth for euermore.

The notes

a * To bryde cokatrysse egges/is/to go aboute that which is mischeuous and wycked. And to weue, ỹ spyders webb/is, to go aboute vayne and tryflynge thynges, whyche are of noo valure: although they seame neuer so excellent vnto the doers.

* as he that eateth of a cokatryce egge dyeth so ỹ eyr that delyte in euell worckes, or that consente vnto them shall perish.

* And yf a man at vnware, treade on theyr egges, & so pres ye out the cokatryce & be touched, he shalbe kylled of her: euen so shall the thoughtes of the cruell bryng them to death.

* As nomans cloth clothes of ỹ spyders web, so shal wicked worckes enryche no man, nor prophet him in the daye of iudgemente, when we must go in vnto the feast in the weddynge garment, Math. xxii. b

* By the deades of wickednes vnderstand gylefull and craftie dedes: And by the deads of robberi, violente and tiranno us deades. The texte sayth ỹ theyr dedes are the deades of robbery because they helpe no man with theyr handes. But do rather rede & beggle the poore: so are they wythout charytie, ye so felc they not what charytie requyreth on thē.

The consolacion and comforthe to Jerusalem.

The lx. Chapter

a And therfor get ỹ vp betyme for thi light cometh & ỹglory of ỹ Lord shal rise vp vpon the. For lo, whyle the darckenes & cloud couereth ỹ erth & ỹ the people, ỹ lord shall shewe the lyght, & your glory shal be sene in ỹ. The gentyles shalcome to thy lyght and kynges to the brightnesthat spryngeth forthe vpon the. Lyft vp thyne eyes, and looke rounde aboute the: All these gather them selues, and come to ỹ Sonnes shall come vnto ỹ frō farre, & doughters shall gather them selues to the on euery syde. When thou seist this, ỹ shalt maruell exceadingly, and thyne hert shalbe opened: when the power of ỹ se shallbe conuerted vnto the (ỹ is) when the strength of the Gentiles shal come vnto the. The multitude of b Camels shal couer ỹ, the dromedaries of Madiā & Epha. All they of Saba shal come, bringinge golde & incense, & shewing the prayse of the Lorde. All ỹ catel of Cedar shalbe gathered vnto ỹ the rāmes of Nabatoth shall serue the, to be offred vpon mine auiter which I haue chosen/ & i the house of my glory which I haue garnyshed. a* But what are these that fle here lyke the cloudes, & as the doues flienge to their wyndowes: The Iles also shall gather them vnto me/ and specially the shippes of ỹ see: that they maye bryng the sōnes frō farre/ and their syluer and their golde with them/ vnto the name of the Lorde thi God/ vnto the holy one of Israell/ ỹ hath glorifyed the. Straūgers shall buylde vp thy wales/ and their kinges shal do the seruice. For when I am angrie/ I smyte the: & when it pleaseth me/ I pardon the. Thi gates shal stāde open styl, both daye and night, & neuer be shut, that the hoaste of the Gentiles maye come, and that their kinges maie be brought vnto the. For euery people & kyngdome that serueth not the, shall perish, and be distroyed w̄ the swerde. c The glory of libanus shal come vnto the: b * fyre trees, Bores & Cedre together, to garnish ỹ place of my Sanctuary, for I wyll glorifye the place of my fete. Moreouer those shall come bowing vnto the, ỹ haue vexed the: & all they that despised the, shall fal downe at thy fote. Thou shalt be called the citie of the Lorde, the holy Syō of Israell. Because thou hast ben forsaken & hated/ so that noman went thorow ỹ: I wyl make the glorious for euer, and euer/ a ioyful throw out al posterities. Thou shalt sucke the mylck of ỹ Gentiles/ and kinges breastes shal fede the. And thou shalt knowe that I the Lord am thy Sauyoure and defender, the myghty one of Jacob.

For brasse, wyll I geue the golde, and for yron syluer: for wod brasse, and for stones yron. I wyl make peace thy ruler, and rychtuousnes thine officer. Violence and robberye shall neuer be herde of in thy land, nether harme and destruccyon with in thy borders. Thy walles shalbe called healthe, and thy gates the prayse of god. * The Sunne shal neuer be thy daye light/ & ỹ lighte of ỹ Moone shal neuer shyne vnto ỹ: but ỹ lord hi self shalbe thyne euerlasting lyght/ & thy God shalbe thy glory.

* Thy Sunne shal neuer go downe, thy Moone shall not be taken awaie/ b for the Lord him selfe shalbe thy euerlastig lyght, & thy sorowful dayes shal be rewarded the. Thy people shalbe all godly/ and possesse the lande for euer: ỹ flour of my planting, the worck of mi handes, wherof I wyl reioyce. The yongest and lest shal growin to a thousande/ and the symplest in to a stronge people. I the Lorde shal shortly bryng thy thyng to passe in his tyme.

The Notes.

a * In these wordes is the radynes and promtnes of them that obey the word of god declared. As thoughe he shuld saye: Euē as fast as the cloudes come go, and as swyftely as doues flie to their nest so roū dly wil the faithful leaue al and couple thē selues to the church, at the voyce of Christ & of his teachers.

b * By the fyre trees & such lyke are signified Princes & rulers ỹ gouerne ỹ people, as before in ỹ. xi. c

Is who shuld saye: euē the most excellent me shalbe adioyned vnto ỹ church, & healpe much to the furtheraunce therof.

The prophecyeth that Christ shalbe annoynted, & sent to preache.

The. lxi. Chapter.

a * The spyrete of the lord god is w̄ me, for the Lord hath anoynted me/ & sent me/ to preach good tydings vnto the poore, ỹ I myght bynd vp the woūded hertes, I myght preach delyueraunce to ỹ captyue, and open ỹ prison to them that are bounde: that I myght declare ỹ acceptable yeare of ỹ Lord, and the daye of the vengeaunce of our God: that I myght comforte al them that are in heuynesse/ ỹ I myght geue vnto them that mourn in Sion, bewty in the stede of ashes/ ioyful oyntment for sighinge, the pleasaunte raymente for an heuye mynde: That they myght be called excellent in rightuousnes/ a plantynge of the Lorde for him to reioyce in.

They shal buylde the longe rough wyldernes, and set vp the olde desertes. They shal repayre ỹ waste places, and such as haue bene voyd thorow out many generatiōs. Straungers shal stād and fede your cattel, and ỹ Alleauntes shalbe your plowmen and reapers. But ye shalbe named the prestes of the Lorde, and men shal cal you the seruauntes of oure god.

Ye shal enioye the goodes of the Gentiles and triumph in their substaunce: For your greate reprof and shame, shal they haue ioye that ye maie haue part with them. For they shall haue double possessiō in their land, and euerlasting ioye shalbe with them. For I ỹ Lorde, whych loue right & hate robbery (though it were offred me) shal make their workes ful of kaythfulnes, and make an euerlasting couenaunt with them.

Their sede also & their generacion shalbe knowne among the gentiles, & amonge the people. All they that se thē shal knowe ỹ they are ỹ hye blessed sed of ỹ Lord. And therfor I am ioyful in ỹ Lord, & my soul reioyseth in my god. For he shal put vpon me the a * garmēt of health, and couer me with the mātle of rightuousnes. He shal deck me lyke a brydegrome, & as bryd ỹ hath her apparrel vpō her. For lyke as ỹ groūd bryngeth forth frut, & as the gardē shutteth forth sede: So shal ỹ lord god cause rightuousnes, and the feare of god to flourish forth before al the Heathen.

The notes.

The garment of healthy is faith that worketh charitie: which is called the weddinge garment. Mat. xxii. b. This garment (sayth ỹ Prophet) shal christ put vpon the Church. For all that beleue in God: shalbe saued thorow Christ, and be hys beloued children by election & iustified by his bloud. Eph. i. b.

The prophecy of the comming of Christe.

The. lxii. Chapter.

For Syons sake therfore will I not holde my tong, and for Jerusalēs sake I wyll not ceasse: vntil their rightuousnes breke forth as ỹ shyning light, and their helth as a burnig lāpe. Then shall the Gentyles se thy rightuousnes ād al kynges thy glory. Thou shalte be named with a newe name, which the mouthe of the Lorde shal shew. Thou shalte be a crowne in the hande of the Lorde, and a glorious garlande in in the hande of thy God. From thys tyme forth thou shalt neuer be called the forsakē, & thy land shal nomore be called wyldernes. But ỹ shalt be called a* Hephzibah, and thy land b* Beula: for the Lord loueth the, and thy land shal be inhabyted. And lyke as a young mā taketh a doughter to mariage, so shall GOD marye hym selfe vnto thy sonnes. And as a Bydgrome is gladde of hys Bryde, so shall GOD rejoyce ouer the.

C I wyll set watchmen vpon thy walles (O Jerusalem) which shall nether cesse day nor nyght to preache the lord. And ye also shall not keape hym close, nor leaue to speake of hym vntyll Jerusalem be set vp, and made the prayse of the worlde. The Lorde hath swore by his ryght hand, and hys stronge arme, that from thence forthe he will not geue thy corne to be meate for thyne enemies/ nor thy wyne wherin thou hast laboured) to be dronck for the *straungers. But they that haue gathered in the corne, shall eate it, and geue thanckes to the Lorde: and they that haue borne in the wyne, shall drinke it in the court of my sanctuary.

D Stande back, and departe asunder, ye that stande vnder the gate: make rowme ye people, repayre the stretes, and take away the stones, and set out a token for the people. Beholde, the Lorde proclamed in ỹ endes of the worlde: * tell the Daughter vpon Sion, thy saluation cōmeth, beholde, he bryngeth hys treasure with hym, & his workes go before hi For they whō ỹ lord deliuereth, shalbe called the holy people: and as for the, ỹ shalte be named the greatly occupyed/ and not the forsaken.

Of the redemption promysed to the people.

The lxiii. Chapter.

A WHat is he this, ỹ commeth from Edom, with stained reade clothes of Bosra: (which is so costlye cloth) & cōmeth i so nimbil w al his strength: I am he that teacheth ryghteousnes, and am of power to helpe.

Wherfore then is thy clothinge read/ and thy raiment like hys that treadeth in the wyne presse? I haue trodden the presse my self alone, and of all people/ there was not one with me. Thus haue I trodde downe myne enemyes in my wrath, and set mi fete vpon them in mi indignacyon: And their bloude sprang vpon my cloothes, and so haue I stayned al my rayment. For the daye of vengeaunce that I haue taken in hand/ and the peare of my delyueraunce is come. I loked aboute me, & there was no man to shewe me eny helpe, I fell downe and no man helde me vp. Thē I helde me by myne owne arme/ and my feruētnesse susteyned me. And thus haue I troden downe the people in my wrath/ and bathed them in my displeasure: In so moch ỹ I haue shed theyr bloude vpon the earth.

I wyl declare the goodnesse of the Lorde/ye and the prayse of the lorde for al that he hath geuen vs/ for the greate good that he hath done for Israell: whych he hath gyuen them of his owne fauoure, and accordyng to the multytude of hys louyng kyndesses. For he sayde: These no doute wyl be my people/ and no chrysnyng chyldre/ and so he was their saueoure. In theyr troubles he forsoke them not, but the angel that went forth from his presence deliuered them: Of very loue and kindnesse that he had vnto them, redemed he them. He hath borne them/ and carried them vp euer/lence the worlde begāne. But after they prouoked hym to wrath and vexed hys holy mynde, he was their enemye, and fought agaynst thē him self. Yet remembred he ỹ olde tyme of Moses and hys people: How he brought them from the water of the see, as a the herde doth with hys shepe: how he had geuen his holy spyrte amonge the: how he had led Moses by the ryght hande with hys glorious arme: how he had deuided the water before thē (wherby he gat him self an euerlasting name) how he led them i the depe, as an horse is led in the plaine, that they shulde not stomble. The spyrte of the Lord led the, as a tame beast goeth in the felde.

Thus

Thus (O God) haste thou led thy people, to make thy selfe a glorious D name with al.

* Loke downe then from heauen, and beholde the dwellyng place of thy sanctuarye and thy glory. How is it, ỹ thy gelousy, thy strength, the multitud of thy mercies and thy louing kindnesse, wyl not be entreted of vs. Yet art thou our father: For Abraham knoweth vs not, nether is Israel acquaynted with vs. But thou Lord art our father and redemer, and thy name is euerlasting O Lord wherfore hast thou led vs out of the waye? wherfore hast thou herdened our hertes, that we feare the not? Be at one with vs agayne/ for thy seruauntes sake that are of the generatiō of thin heritage. Thy people hath had but litle of thy Sanctuary in possessyō, for our enemyes haue taken it in: And we are become euen as we were from ỹ begynnynge: but thou art not their lorde, for they haue not called vpon thi name.

C The prophet (vnder the person of the Jewes) bewayleth their exyle & bannishment. Manes right wisnes is lik a cloth fyled wyth the floures of a woman.

C The. lxiiii. Chapter.

O that thou woldest cleue ỹ heauen in sonder, and come downe: that the mountaynes myght melte awaye at thy presence, lyke as at an hote fyre: and that the malycyous myght boyle, as ỹ water doth vpon the fyre: Wherby thy name myght be knowne amōge thyne enemyes, and that the Gentiles might trēble before the. That thou mightest come downe w thy wonderous straūge workes, then shulde ỹ hylles melt at thy presence. For sence the begynnynge of the worlde there was none (except thou O God) that harde or perceaued, * nether hath ant eye sene what thou doest for them, that put their trust in the. Thou helpest hi ỹ doth right wyth cherefulnesse, and them that thynke vpon thy wayes. But lo, thou art angrye, for we offende/ and haue B bene euer in synne) * and therefs not one whole.

We are al as an vnclene thing, & al our righteousnesses are as the clothes stayned with ỹ floures of a womā: we fall euerychone as the leafe, for oure synnes cary vs away lyke ỹ wynde. There is no man that calleth vpon thi name, that standeth vp to take holde by the. Therfore hidest thou thi face from vs, & consumest vs, be cause of our sinnes. But now O Lorde, thou father of ours: * we are the claye, and thou art our potter, and we al are the worcke of thy handes. Be not to sore displeased (O Lorde) & kepe not our offences to long in thi remembraunce, but consydre that we al are thy people. The cytyes of thy Sanctuary lye waste, Syō is a wyldernesse, and Jerusalem a desert. Oure holy house which is oure bewty, where our fathers praised the, is brent vp: yee all oure cōmodities and pleasures are wasted awaye. Wilt thou not be intreated (lorde) for all this? Wylt thou holde thi peace, and scourge vs so sore?

C The felycytye of Jerusalem, and the callynge of the Heather.

C The. lxv. Chapter.

* They shall seke me, that hither to haue not asked for A me: thei shal finde me, that hytherto haue not sought me. Then shal I saye immedtatly to the people that neuer called vpon my name: I am here, I am here: For thus long haue I euer holden out my handes to an vnfaythfull people/ that go not the ryght waye, but after their owne ymaginacyōs: To a people ỹ is euer defying me to my face * they make their oblacyons in gardens, and their smoke vpon Aulters of bricke, they lurke amonge the graues, and lye in the dēnes all nyght.

* They eat swynesflesh, and vncleane broth is i their vessels. If thou cō B miest nye thē, thei saye: touch me not, for I am holyer then thou. All these men when I am angry, shalbe turned to smoke and fyre, that shall burne for euer. Beholde it is wryten before my face, & shal not be forgotte, but recōpensed. * I shal reward it thē into their bosome: I meane youre mysdedes, and the mysdedes of your fathers together (sayth ỹ lord

Lozde) which haue made smokes vpō the mountaynes, and blaspheme me vpon the hylles: therfoze wil I mesure their old dedes into their bolō againe.
Moreouer thus sayeth the Lozde: lyke as when one wold gather holi grapes, men saie vnto him: breake it not of foz it is holy: euē so wyll I do also foz mi seruauntes sakes, that I will not destroye them all. But I wil take a sede out of Jacob, and out of Juda one, to take possession of my hyll. My chosen shall possesse these thinges, and mi seruauntes shal dwell there. Saron shalbe a shepefolde, and ỹ valley of Achoz shal geue the stallynge foz the catell of my people, that seare me. * But as foz you, ye are they, that haue forsaken the Lozde, and forgotten my holy hyl. Ye haue set vp an aulter vnto foztune, and geuen tych drinckoffrings vnto treasure. Therfoze wyll I nombze you with the swerde, that ye shal be destroyed all together. Foz when I called, no man gaue me answere: when I spake, ye herkende not vnto me, but did wickednes before myne eyes, and chose the thynge that pleased me not. Therfoze thus sayeth the Lozde God: Behold, my seruauntes shal eate, but ye shal haue honger. Behold, my seruauntes shal drincke, but ye shal suffre thurste. Behold, my seruauntes shal be mery, but ye shal be confounded. Behold, mi seruauntes shal reioyce foz very quyetenesse of hert: But ye shal crye foz sorow of hert, and complayne foz veration of mynde. Youre name shal not be sworn by amonge mi chosen, foz God the Lozde shal slaye you, & call his seruauntes by an othere name. Who so reioyseth vpon earth, shal reioyse in ỹ true God: And who so sweareth vpon earth, shal sweare in the true God. Foz the olde enmyte shall be forgotten / and taken awaye oute of my syght. Foz lo, I shal make a new heauen, and a new earth. And as foz the olde, they shal neuer be thought vpon, ner kepte in mynde: but men shalbe glad and euermoze reioyse, foz the thinges, that I shal do.

Foz why: Beholde, I shal make a ioyfull Jerusalā, yee I mi self wil * reioyse with Jerusalem, and be glad with my people: And the voyce of weppynge and waylyng shal not be herde in her/ from thēce forth. b * There shall neuer be a childe nez olde man, ỹ haue not their full dayes But whē the chylde cometh to an hūdzeth yeare olde c * it shal dye. b * And yf he that is an hūdzeth ye are of age do wzōge, he shalbe cursed. They shall builde houses, and dwel in them: they shal plante vyneyards, and eate ỹ frute of them. They shal not buylde, & another possesse: they shal not plante, & another eate: But the lyke of my people shalbe lyke a tre, and so shal the worke of their handes.

My chosen shall lyue longe, they shall not labour in vayne, ner begett wyth trouble: foz they are the hie blessed sede of the Lozde, and their frutes with thē. And it shalbe, that oz euer they call/ I shal answere them. Whyle they are yet but thynckyng how to speake, I shal heare them. c * The wolff and the lam be shal fede together, and ỹ lion shal eate hay e lyke the bullock. f * But earth shalbe the serpentes meate. There shal no man hurte ner slaye another, in al my holy hil/ sayeth the Lozde.

The notes.

a * God is counted to reioyce when the people folowe th his minde and wyl, and that he therfoze doeth them good, and geueth them his benefytes. Lyke saying haue ye in Jere. xxxii. g. I wyl haue a lust & pleasure to do them good. &c.

b * There shal neither be child noz olde man. &c. The meaning is: There shal no man be delyted in the vayne hope of this moztal lyfe. They that be but euen younge of age, that haue profeted in faith and holy wozkes, and that loue not thys presente lyfe shall thinke them selues olde ynough: And that foz the cō temptacions & desire of the lyfe to come, whiche they know right wel shalbe much better.

c * Some read He shalbe counted ynough.

d * And yf he that is an hudzeth yeare of age. &c. The prophet meaneth hereby ỹ all though the wycked come to an exceding great age, yet thinke they ỹ they haue not lyued ynough, so shal their dampnacyon be the greater.

e * The wolfe and the lambe shal fede together, &c. The meanyng is, that the moost wicked and cruell men shal at the commig of Christ agree with ỹ good & pesable: And that the Gentiles (which foz their beastly liuinge, are often signified vnder the name of beastes) shalbe at vnyte with the faithful, and ỹ one lyue louingly with the other. Wout stryfe. The very same saying haue ye before in the xi. a. & b f * But earth shalbe the serpentes meate, ỹ is, with earth shal the serpē be content, & nether sting mā, noz hurt him vnder whom.

The.lxvi. Chapter.

God dwelleth not in temples made by mannes handes. He despyseth sacrifices done without mercy & fayth. God comfozteth them that are troubled foz his sake. Among the Cbystien, the Sabboth is continuall.

Of Esay

Thus sayeth the Lozd, Heauen is my sete, and the earth is my fote stole. a * Where shall now the house stande that ye wil buylde vnto me? And wher shalbe ỹ place, ỹ I wyll dwel in? As foz these thinges my hand hath made them al, and they are al created, sayeth the Lozde. Wbich of them shal I then regarde? Euen hym that is of a lowly troubled spzete, and stādeth in awe of my wozdes. Foz who so slaye thanoze foz me/ doth me so greate dishonoure, as he that kylleth a man. He that kylleth a shepe foz me/ choketh a dog. He ỹ bzigeth me meat offriges, of freth swynes blud: Who so maketh me a memozial of in cense prayseth the thinge that is vnright. Yet take they soch wayes i hande, and their soule delite th in these abominacyons.

Therfoze wyll I also haue pleasure b in laughynge thē to scozne, & the thing that they feare, wyll I bzinge vpō thē. Foz whē I called, no mā gaue answer: when I spake they woelde not heare: But did wickednesse before mine eyes, and chose ỹ thinges that displease me. Heare the wozde of God all ye, that feare the thing which he speaketh Youre bzethzē that hate you, and cast you out foz my names sake, saye: Lett the Lozd magnyfye him self, that we maye se youre gladnesse, and yet they shalbe confounded.

Foz as touchyng thecytie and the tempel: I heare the voyce of the Lozd/ that wyl re warde, and recompence his enemyes: lyke as when a wyfe bzingeth forth a man chyld, oz euer she suffre the payne of the bzyth and angupsh of c the trauayle. Who euer herde oz sawe soch thynges: doth the grounde be are in one daye: oz are the people bozne all at once, as Syon beareth her sōnes: Foz thus saieth the Lozd: Am I he that maketh other to beare, and beare not my self: Am not I he that beareth, and maketh baren: sayeth thy God. Reioyse with Jerusalem, and be glad wyth her al ye that loue her. Be ioyful wyth her/ al ye that mourned foz her. Foz ye shal sucke cōfozte out of her bzestes, and be satisfied.

Ye shall taste, and haue delite in the plenteousnesse of her power. Foz thus sayeth the Lozde: beholde, I wyll lett peace in to her, lyke a water stoude, and the myght of the Heythen lyke a flowynge streame. Then shall ye be bozne vpon her sydes, and be toyful vpon her knees. Foz like as a chylde is comD fozted of his mother, so shal I comfozt you, and ye shalbe comfozted in Jerusalem. And when ye se thys: youre herte shall reioyse, and youre bones shall flozysh lyke an herbe.

Thus shall the hande of the Lozde be knowne amonge his seruauntes/ and his indignacyon amonge hys enemyes. Foz beholde, the Lozde shal com with fyze, and hys charet shall be like a whyzl wynde, that he maye recōpence his vengeance in hys wzath and his indignacyon wyth the flame of fyze. Foz the Lozde shall iudge all flesh with the fize and wyth his swerd, and there shal be a greate nombze slaine of the Lozd. Soch as haue made them selues holy and cleane in the gardens/ and those that haue eaten swyne flesh, myce, and other abhomynacyons, shall be taken awaye together, sayeth the Lozde. Foz I wyll come to gather al people and tōges wyth their wozkes and imaginacyons: these shal com, and se mi glozy. Vnto thē shall I geue a token, and sende certaine of them (that be deliuered) amōg the Gentiles: in to Celycia, Affrica and Libya (where men can handle bowes) in to Italy also and Grekelande.

The Iles farre of, that haue not herde speake of me, & haue not sene my glozy, shal preach mi: prayse amonge the Gentiles and shal bzynge al youre E bzethzen foz an offrynge vnto the Lozde, out of all people, vpon bozses, charrettes and hozse litters, vpon Mules and cartes to Jerusalem my holy hyl (sayeth the Lozde) lyke as the chyldzen of Israel bzynge the offrynge in clean vessels, to the house of ỹ Lozde.

And I shall take out certayne of thē foz to be Preastes and Leuytes, sayeth the Lozde.

For lyke as the new heauen and the new earth whiche I wyl make, shall be fast stablysshed by me: (saith the Lord) So shall youre seade and youre name continue b* and there shalbe a new mone for the other, and a new Sabbath for the other, and al *flesh shall comme to worshippe before me (sayth the Lorde) And they shall go forth and loke vpon the cartons of them that haue trãgressed agaynst me for theyr wormes shall not dye, neither shall theyr fyre be quenched, and all flesshe shall abhorre them.

a* Where shall now the house stande, &c. as who shulde saye: wherto make ye me a temple of mannes handy worcke, whiche rule the whole worlde: Hether to haue I suffred the temple to kepe you Iewes in a certen maner of instruction and obedyence: and chose you one place for youre seruice, to thyntente that ye shuld not fall to the Idoles of the Gentyles. But now wyll I haue all Idolles banniched, and for Iewrye wyll I chalenge vnto me the whole world, for one people all the dwellers vpon the earth whyche shalbe my worshippers in spyryte and i truth.

Johan. iiii. I wyll not be superstitious in worshypped wyth sacrefyces and ceremonies in the temple, but with rightuousnes, with fayth, and wyth ỹ spyrete. The same songe that the prophete here syngeth in the latter ende of hys prophecy, sange he before in the begynnyng euen in the fyrst Chapter. Let ỹ chrysten note these .ii. Chapters (I meane the fyrste and the last) well, and then shall they perceaue howe greately God abhorreth such Ipocrytische worckes done wout faith, although they seme and apeare outwardly to bee moost godly.

b* That is, there shalbe a perpetuall feast and a perpetuall rest. They shall not then kepe theyr Saboth after the maner of the Iewes, nor make difference betwene day and daye: but they shall kepe a continuall Sabboth, and neuer do scruple worcke, that is, sines. Then shall they alwayes be in the reste, that is, alwayes shall they prayse God in spyrte and truth, as wel in aduersitie as in prosperyti. They shal nether renne vnto ydols nor any creatures, but shal worshippe the Lord onely.

The ende of the Boke of the Prophet Elay

The boke of

The Prophete Jeremye.

The storie of Jeremye, and in what tyme he prophecyed. He excuseth him selfe & wold refuse the office of a Prophet, because he is younge and vnexpert He is taught of ỹ Lord, & becometh bolde. God openeth vnto him, that, the destruccio of the Iewes, by the babilonians, is at hand. Jeremy is commaunded to speake the word of God vnto ỹ Iewes without feare.

The fyrst Chapter.

THese are the Sermons of Jeremye the sone of Helkiah the preest, one of the that dwelt at Anathoth in theland of Ben Jamin: when the Lorde had fyrst spoke with him/a* in the tyme of Josiah the sonne of Amon king of Juda, i the .xiii. yeare of of his kyngdome: and so durying vnto the time of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, & vntyl the .xi. yeares of zedekiah ỹ sone of Josiah kynge of Juda were ended: when Jerusalem was taken/euen in ỹ fyfth Moneth. The word of the Lord speake thus vnto me: Before I fashioned the in thy mothrs woinbe, I dyd knowe ỹ And or euer thou wast borne, b* I sanctified the, and ordened the, to be a Prophet vnto the people.

Then sayde I: Oh Lorde God, I am vnmete, for I am yet but younge.

And the Lord answered me thus: Saie not so, I am to ponge: For thou shalte goo to al that I shal sende the vnto, & whatsoeuer I commaunde the, ỹ shalt thou speake. Be not afrayed of their faces, for I wylbe with the, to deliuer ỹ, sayeth the lord.

And with that, the lorde stretched out his hand, and touched my mouth, and sayde moreouer vnto me. Beholde I put my wordes in thy mouth, & this daye do I set the ouer the people and kyndomes: that thou mayest rote oute, breake of, destroye and make wast: and that thou mayest buylde vp and plant

After this, the Lorde speake vnto me saying:

sayinge: Jeremy, what seyste thou? And I sayde: I se a walkynge rodde. Then sayde the Lorde: thou hast sene right, for I wyl watch diligently vpõ my word, to performe it.

It happened after warde, that the Lord spake to me agayne, and sayde: what seyst thou? And I sayde: I do se a seething pot, loking from out of the north hether warde.

Then sayde the Lord vnto me: Out of the north shal come a plage vpon al the dwellers of the lande. For lo, I wyl cal al the officers of the kingdoms of the north (sayeth the Lord.) And theye shal come, and euerye one shall set hys seate in the gates of Jerusalem / and in al their wales round about and thorow al the cities of Juda. And thorow them shal I declare my iudgemẽt vpon all the wyckednesse of thase men ỹ haue forsaken me: that haue offred vnto straunge goddes and worshypped the worckes of their owne handes.

And therfore *gyrd vp thy loynes aryse/and tel them al, that I geue the in commaundement. Feare them not, I wyl not haue the to be afraied of thẽ For beholde, thys daye do I make the a stronge fensed towne, an yron pyler/ and a wall of stele agaynste the whole lande, agaynst the kynges and mynghtiemen of Juda, agaynst the preestes & people of the lande. They shal fyght agaynst the, but they shal not be able to ouercom the: for I am with the, to deliuer the, sayth the Lord.

The notes.

a* It is a necessary thynge to the vnderstandinge of the Prophetes, to know the Storyes of the tymes wherin they prophesyed. The storyes of Jeremyes tyme ye haue in the fourth of the Kinges, frõ the .xxi. chapter to the ende of the boke: and in these conde of the Chronycles, from the .xxxiii. chapt to ỹ ende alsd he prophecied a boute .xli. yeares.

b* I sanctified the, &c. That is, I dedicated, chose appoynted, prepared, set the aside, to be a prophete vnto the people. So in Joh. x. & Saye ye then vnto hym, whom the father hath santyfied, &c. that is, hath chosen &c.

c* For a Prophet, or preacher to gyrd vp his loynes, is boldely and constantly to refyse the false opynyones and doctryne of the wycked, & euen to empryne in them the worde of truth (which engendreth hate, whether they wyl or no: and that not ones or twyse, vntyl such tyme as they other amende, or elles we are angry and furyous with it: Ye and then to set more & tyrranny of this world: not to set by ỹ thre teppynges of rulers, which can do nothing but that which god permitteth & suffereth the: therfore ar they not to be feared of an obedient and fayethful seruaunt of the Lorde.

C God reherceth his benefytes done vnto ỹ Iewes. Agaynst Prestes & Prophetes, or preachers that contemne & delyght God: The Iewes are destroyed, because they forsoke God, & because they ranne a whore huntyng after Idoles.

C The .ii. Chapter.

MOreouer, the worde of the Lord cõmaũded me thus: Go thy waye, crye in the eares of Jerusalem, and saie: Thus saieth the Lorde: I remembre the for the kindnesse of thy youth, and be cause of thy stedfast loue: in that thou folowdest me thorow the wyldernesse, in an vntylled lande. Thou Israell wast halowed vnto the Lorde, and so was his fyrst frutes. All they that deuoured Israel offended: mysfortune fell vpon them, sayeth the Lorde. Heare therfore the worde of the Lorde, O thou house of Jacob, and all the generacion of the house of Israel. Thus sayeth the lorde vnto you. What vnfayth fulnesse founde youre fathers in me, that they went so farre awaie fro me, falling to lightnesse, and beynge so vayne: Thei thought not in their hertes: Where haue we left ỹ lord, that brought vs oute of ỹ lande of Egypte, that led vs thorow ỹ wildernesse/ thorowe a deserte and rough land, thorow a drye and a deedly lãde/ yee a lande that no man had gone thorowe, & wher in no man had dwelt. And when I had brought you into a pleasaũt welbuilded lande, that ye myght entoye the frutes and al the cõmodyties of the same: ye went forth and defyled my lande, and brought myn heretage to abhominacyon.

The Prestes thẽ selues sayde not once: Where is the lorde? They that haue ỹ law i their hãds, know me not: The shepherds offẽd agaynst me. The prophets do seruyce vnto Baal, and folowe soch thynges as shal bring them no profyt. Wherefore I am constrayned (sayeth the lorde) to make my complaynte vpõ you, and vpon youre chyldrẽ. Go in to the Iles of Cethim/ and loke wel: sende vnto Cedar/ take diligent hede: and se/ whether soch thinges be done there/ wether the Gentiles them selues deale so falsly and vntruly with their goddes (which yet are no goddes in dede) But my people hath geuen ouer their hye honour, for a thing ỹ may not help the

Be a stonished (O ye heauens) be a frayde, and abashed at suche a thynge, saieth ỹ Lord. For my people hath don two euels. They haue forsaken me the wel of the water of lyfe, and digged the pyttes, yee byle and broken pyttes ỹ holde no water. Is Israel a bonde seruaunt, or one of the houshold? Why is he then so spoyled? Why do they roare and crye then vpon hym, as a lion? They haue made his lande waste, his cyttes are so brent vp, that there is no mã dwelling in thẽ. Ye the childre of Noph & taphnes haue defiled thy neck.

Commeth not this vnto the, because thou hast forsaken the Lorde thy God, euer sence he led the by the waye? And what hast thou now to do in the strete of Egypt? to drincke foule water? Ether, what makest thou in the way to Assiria? To drincke water of the floud Thyne owne wyckednes shal reproue the, and thy turninge awaye shal condemne the: that thou mayest know and vnderstande, howe euel and hurtfull a thinge it is, that thou hast forsaken the Lord thy God, and not feared him, sayeth the lord god of hostes.

I haue euer broken the yock of old, and burst thy bondes: yet sayst thou, I wil no more serue, but (lyke an harlot) thou runnest about vpon al hye hilles, and among al grene trees where as I planted the out of noble grapes a good rotes. How art thou troden then in to a bitter, vnfrutful, and straung grape? Yee and ỹ so sore: ỹ though thou wash the with. b Nitrus and make thy selfe to sauour with that swete smelling herbe of Borith: yet in my sighte thou art stayned with thy wickednesse, sayeth ỹ Lord thy God.

Saye not now: I am not vncleane and I haue not folowed the goddes. Loke vpon thyne owne wayes in wodes, valleyes & dẽes: so shalt ỹ know what ỹ hast done. Thou art like swift Dromedary, ỹ goyth eauyly his wate: & thy wãtones is lyke a wyld Asse, ỹ sleth ỹ wyldernes, & ỹ snoffeth & bloweth at his wil. Who can tame the? All they ỹ seke the shal not fayle, but fynde the in thyne owne vnclennes.

Thou kepest thy foote from nakednes, and thy throte from thyrste, and thynkest thus in thy selfe: tush: I wyll take no sorow, I wyll loue the straũge goddes, and hange vpon them.

Lyke as a theefe that is taken wyth the dede cõmeth to shame, euẽ so is the house of Israell come to confusion: the comen people, theyr kings and rulers, theyr prestes and Prophetes. For they saye to a stocke thou art my Father, and to a stone: thou hast begoten me, ye thei haue turned theyr backe vpon me, and not theyr face, but in the tyme of theyre trouble, when they saye, stande vp, and helpe vs, I shall answere them: Where are now thy Gods, that thou hast made the? byd them stand vp, and helpe ỹ in tyme of nede. For loke how many cyties ỹ hast (O Juda) so many Gods hast thou also.

Wherfore then wyll ye goo to lawe with me, seing ye all are synners against me, sayth the Lord? It is but lost labour, that I smyte your children, for they receaue not my correccion. Youre owne swerde destroyeth your Prophetes, like a deuouring lyon. If ye be the people of the Lorde, then hercken vnto hys worde am I then become a wylderues vnto the people of Israell? or a lãde that hath no lyghte? Wherfor saith my people then: we are fallen of, ãd we wyl com nomore vnto the? Doth a mayde forget her rayment, or a Bryde her tormaunter? And doth my people forget me so longe? Why boastest thou thy wayes so byly? (to obtayn fauoure ther thorowe) when thou, haste yet stayned them with blasphemyes?

Vpon thy wynges is foũd ỹ bloude of poore and innocent people, and ỹ not in corners and holes only, but openly in all these places. Yet darest ỹ say: Iã gyltelesse: Tush, his wrath can not come vpon me. Beholde, I wyl reason wt the because ỹ darest say: I haue not offended. O how euell wyll it be for ỹ, to abyde it: when it shalbe knowen: howe ofte thou hast gone backward? For thou shalt be confounded as well as Egipt, as of ỹ Assirians: ye thou shalte go thy waye from them, and smyte thyne handes together vpon thy head.

Because

Because the lord shal bryng that confidence and hope of thyne to naughte, and thou shalt not prospere with al.

The notes

a* Noph and Taphnes were two of the chefe cyties of Egypt, wherin the Hebrewes put their truste, but in vayne.

b* Nitrus is a kynd of salte good to wash clothes in, and the body also.

God being mercyful calleth vnto repentaũce his people, which he had forsaken for their whoredom with Idoles. He exhorteth Israel vnto repentaũce, prampting them the pardes that shuld haue the true knowledg of god. The returne of Israel vnto god, confessyng their offence.

The. iii. Chapter.

Omenly, when a man putteth awaye his wife, & she goeth from him, and marieth with another, then the question is: shulde he resorte vnto her eny more after that? Is not this feld thẽ defyled and vncleane? But as for the, thou hast playde the harlot with many louers, yet turne agayne to me, saith ỹ lord. Lift vp thine eyes, on euery side, and loke, yf thou be not defyled. Thou hast wayted for thẽ in the stretes, and as a murtherer in ỹ wildernes. Thorow thy whoredom and shamefull blasphemyes, is the land defyled.

This is the cause, that the rayne & euenyng dewe hath ceased. Thou haste gotten the an whores forehead, & cãst not be ashamed. Els wouldest thou sate vnto me: O mi father, thou art he that hast brought me vp, and led me fro my youth: Wylt thou then put me away, & cast me of for euer? Or wilt thou withdrawe thy selfe cleane fro me? Neuertheles, thou speakest suche wordes, but ỹ art euer doinge worse and worse.

* The lord sayd also vnto me: in the tyme of Iosiah the kynge: Hast thou sene what that shrinkynge Israel had done? how she hath runne vp vpon all the hylles, and amonge al thicke trees, and there played the harlot: haste thou sene also (when she had done all thys) how I sayde vnto her: that she should turne agayne vnto me, and yet she is not returned? Juda ỹ vnfaithful sister of hers also saw this: Namely, that after I had weiene the aduoutry of the shrynckynge harlot Israell / I put her awaye, and gaue her a byll of deuorcement,

For all this, her vnfaythful sister Juda was not a shamed, but went backe and played the whore also. Yee and the noyse of her whordom hath defiled the whole lande. For she hath cõmitted her aduoutrye with stones & stockes.

Neuertheles, her vnfaithful sister Juda is not turned vnto me againe wt her whole hert, but faynedly, sayth the Lord. And the Lord sayde vnto me. The backslyder Israel is more righteous, then the vnfaithful Juda: & there fore go preache these wordes towarde the north, and saye: Thou shrynkynge Israel, turne agayne (sayeth the Lord) and I wyl not turn my face from you, for I am mercyful, sayth the Lord, and I wyl not alwaye beare displeasure agaynst the: but on this condicion, that thou know thy greate blasphemy: Namely, that thou hast vnfaythfully forsaken the lord thy god, and hast made thy selfe partaker of straunge goddes vnder all grene trees, but haste had no wyl to heare my voyce, sayeth the lord.

*O ye shrinkyng children, turne agayne, sayeth the lorde: and I wyl be maryed with you. For I wyl take one out of the cytie, and two out of one generacion from amonge you, and bryng you out of Sion: and wyl geue you hedmen after myne owne mynde, which shal fede you with lernynge and wyldome. Moreouer, when ye be increased, & multiplied in the lande, then (saith the lord) there shal no more boost be made of the arcke of the lordes Testament: Noman shal thinke vpõ it, nether shal any man make mencyon of it: for from thence forth it shall nether be vysyted, ner honoured with gyftes.

Then shal Jerusalem be called the Lordes seate, and all Heathen shalbe gathered vnto yt / for the name of the Lordes sake, whyche shall be set vp at Jerusalem.

And from that tyme forth, they shall folowe noe more the ymagynacyon of their owne frowarde herte.

Then those that be of the house of Juda shal go vnto ỹ houle of Israell and they shal come together out of the North, into the same land that I haue geuen your fathers.

I haue shewed also, howe I toke ẏ vp being but a childe, and gaue the a pleasaunt lande for thyne heritage, ye and a goodly Host of the heathen: and how I commaunded the, that thou shuldest *call me father onely, and not to shrincke fro me.

But lyke as a woman fayleth her louer/so are ye vnfaithfull vnto me (O ye house of Israel (saieth the lord. And therfore the voyce of the childzen of Israel was herd on euery side, wepinge & waylig: for they haue defiled their way, and for gotten god their lorde.

G O ye chrinking childzen/turne again (sayinge: lo/we are thyne, for thou art the Lord our god) And so shal I hele your backe turnynges. The hilles fall, and al the hye pyde of the mountaynes, but the health of Israell standeth only vpon god our lorde.

Confusion hath deuoured oure fathers labour from our youth vp: yee their shepe and bullockes, their sones and daughters. So do we also slepe i our confusion, and shame couereth vs: for we and our fathers from our youth vp vnto this daye haue synned against the Lorde oure God, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the lord our god.

The notes

a* That is, thou hast loued, worshiped, and serued many Idoles of the gentiles, in hilles, wodes, valeyes fildes, and in many other places as we often rede in the Bible: and hast forsaken me thy husband, contrary to the maner of honest maried wemē, wher fore thou art worthy to be deuorced. Yet turne and repent & forthincke the earnestly, & I wyl not stick to receaue the agayne.

¶ The true repētaunce or returnyng to God. He exhorteth to the circumcision of the hert. The destruccion of Iewry is prophecyed, for the malyce of their hertes.

¶ The.iiii. Chapter.

A Israell if thou wylt turne the/then turne vnto me, sayth the Lorde. And if thou wylt put away thyne abhominacions out of my sight, thou shalt not be moued: And shalt swere: The Lorde lyueth: in trueth/ in equitie and ryghtuousnes; and all people shalbe fortunable and ioyful in hi. For thus sayth the Lorde, to all Juda and Jerusalem: plowe your lande, and sowe not among the thornes.

Be circumcised in the Lord, and cut away the foreskinne of youre hertes, al ye of Juda, and al the indwellers of Jerusalem: that my indignacyon breake not out lyke fyre, and kindle, so that no man maye quench it, because of the wickednes of youre ymaginacions.

B Preach in Juda and Jerusalem, crie oute and speake: blowe the trompettes in the lande crye that euery man maye heare, and saye: Gather you to gether/ and we wyl go into strong cities. Set vp the token in syon/spede you, and make no tarienge: for I wyll bringe a gre at plage, and a greate destruction from the North. For the spoyler of the Gentyles is broken vp from his place, as a lion out of his denne, that he maye make the lande waste, and destroye the cyties, so that no man maye dwel therin. Wherfore girde your selues about with sackcloth, a* mourne and wepe, for thre fearfull wrath of the Lorde shal not be withdrawen from you.

At the same tyme (sayth the Lorde) the hert of the king and of the Princes shalbe gone, the preistes shalbe astonished, and the Prophetes shalbe sore afraied. Then sayde I: O Lorde God, hast thou thē deceaued this people & Jerusalem, saying: ye shall haue peace, & now the swearde goeth thorowe theyr ryues? Then shall it be sayde to the people and to Jerusalem: b* there cometh a warme wynde from the north thorow the waye of my people, but nether to fanne, ner to cleanse.

C r* After that shall there come vntoo me a stronge wynde, & then wyll I also geue sentence vpon them. For lo, hee cōmeth down lyke as a cloud, & his charettes are lyke a stormy wynde: hys horsmē are swyfter thē ẏ Egle. Woo vnto vs, for we are destroyed. O Jerusalem, wash thyne hert frō wickednes, ẏ thou mayst be helped. Howe longe shall thy noysome thoughtes remayne w̄ the?

D For a voyce from Dan and from ẏ hyll of Ephraym speaketh out, and telleth a destruction. Behold, the Heathē geue Jerusalem warning, and preach vnto her, that her destroyers are comminge from farre countrees.

They

They tell the cities of Juda the same also, they shall geue them warnyng in euery place, lyke as the watchmen in ẏ felde. For they haue prouoked me too wrath, sayth the lorde.

Thy wayes and thy thoughtes, haue brought the vnto thys, thys is thyne owne wickednes and disobedience/ that hath possessed in thyne herte: Ah my bely/ ah my bely, (shalte thou crie) how is my hert so sore: mi hert panteth within me, I cannot be styl, for I haue harde the crieng of the trompettes, and peales of warre.

Chey crye murther vpon murther. the whole lande shall perysh. Immedyatly my tentes were destroyed, and my hanghinges, in the twinckelynge of an eye: Howe longe shall I see the tokens of warre, and heare the noyse of the trompettes.

E Neuertheles, this shall come vpon the because my people is become foolysh, & hath vtterly no vnderstanding. They are the childeren of folyshnes, and wout any discretion. To do euel, they haue wytt ynough: but to do wel, they haue no wysdomme. I haue loked vpon the earth/and se, it is waste and voyd. I loked towarde heauen, and it had no lyght.

I behelde the mountaynes, and they trembled, and all the hylles were in a feare. I loked about me, and ther was no body, and all the byrdes of the ayer were away. I marked wel, and the plowed feld was become waste; ye all their cities were broken downe at the presence of the Lorde, and indignation of his wrath.

F For thus hath the Lorde sayde: The G whole lande shalbe desolate, yet wyll I not then haue done. And therfore let the earthe mourne, and let the heauen be sorye aboue: for the thynge that I haue purposed and taken vppon me to do, shall not repente me, and I wil not go from it. The whole lande shall fle, for the noyse of the horsmen and bowe men: they shal runne into dennes, into woddes, and clymme vp the stony rockes. All the Cities shalbe voyde, and no man dwellyng therin.

What wylt thou now do, thou beinge destroyed? For though thou clothest thy self with scarlet, and deckest the w golde: though thou paynctest thy face with coloures, yet shalt thou trym thy selfe in vayne.

For those that hytherto haue bene thy greate fauourers, shal abhorre the, and go about to slaye the. For (my thincke) I heare a noyse, lyke as it were of a woman trauelyng, or one labouryng of her fyrst childe: Euen the voyce of ẏ daughter Sion, that casteth out her armes and sobneth, saying: Ah wo is me, how sore vered and faynt is my herte, for them that are slayne?

The notes.

a* To mourne in the Scripture signifieth somtyme to make an vnmeasurable and greuous lamētacion, as when a man for vnpatience and greef, emptieth his owne body, renteth his clothes, teareth his heare, &c. So in Math. xxiiii. c. And then shal all the kinredes of the earth mourne.

b* Some reade the dyse wynd cometh out of the hyghe places of the wylderneſſe, by the waye of ẏ daughter of my people &c. They vnderstand by ẏ wind the king of Egypt: And by the waye of his people ẏ waye which held his people, when they came forth of Egipt: which, was through the wyldernes. Exod xiii. d c* After that shal ther come vnto me a strong wind &c. By this wynd is vnderstande the kynge of Babylon and his armye.

¶ In Jewry is there no ryghtwes or faythful men found/either amongest the people, or the rulers, for whose sake the Lord shuld spare the cytie: wherfore Jewry is destroyed of the Assyrians.

¶ The. v. Chapter.

A Loke thorowe Jerusalem, behold and le: Seke thorow her stretes also withi, yf ye can fynde one manne that doth equal & right or laboreth to be faithful: & I shal spare him (sayeth the Lord) For though they can saye: the Lord liueth, yet do they sweare to disceaue: Where as thou (O Lord) a* lokest onely vpon fayth and truth.

Thou hast scourged them, but thei toke no repentaunce: thou hast correct them for amendment, but they refused thy correccion. They made their faces herder thē a stone, & wold not amende.

B Therfore I thought in my self: per aduenture they ar so simple and foolish that they vnderstande nothyng of the Lordes waye/and iudgmentes of our god. Therfore wyl I go vnto their heades and rulers, and talcke with thē: yf they knowe the waye of the Lord, & the iudgementes of our god.

But these (in lyke maner) haue broken thee yocke, and burste the bandes in sonder.

b *Wherfore a lyon out of the wodd shal hurte them, and a wolfe in the eue nynge shal destroye them. The cat of the mountayne shal lye lurkyng bi their cyties, to teare in peces al them, that cō therout. For their offeneces are many/ & their departynge awaye is greate.

C Shulde I then for al this haue mercy vpon the? Thy chyldren haue forsaken me, & swoorne by thē that are no goddes. And albeit they were bounde to me in maryage, yet thei fell to aduouttrie, and haunted harlottes houses.

In the desyre of vnclenly lust they are become lyke the stoned horse, euery mā neyeth at his neyghbours wyfe: Shulde I not correcte this, saieth the Lord. Shulde I not be auēged of euery peo ple, that is lyke vnto this? Clymme vp vpon their walles, beate them downe/ but destroye them not vtterly: c* cut of their braūches, because they are not the Lordes. For vnfaythfully hath the house of Israel and Juda forsaken me, sa yeth the Lorde. They haue denyed the Lorde and sayde: it is not he: Tush, ther shal no mischefortune come vpō vs, we shall se nether swearde ner hōger. As for the warnyng of the Prophetes/ thei take it but for wynde, yee there is none of these/ whych wil tell them/ that so the thynges shal happē vnto them. Where fore thus sayth the Lord god of Hostes: because ye speake soch wordes, beholde:

D The wordes that are in thy mouth wyl I turne to fyre/ and make the people to be wod, that it maye consume them.

Lo, I wil bringe a people vpon you from farre, O house of Israel (sayeth the Lorde) a myghtye people/ an olde people, a people whose speach thou kno west not, nether vnderstādest what thei saye. Their arowes are sodayn death/ yee they them selues be very giaūtes. This people shal eate vp thy frute and thy meate/ yee they shall deuoure thy sōnes and thy daughters, thy shepe and thy bullockes.

They shall eate vp thy grapes and figges. As for thy strong and wel fen ced cyties, wherein thou dydest trust/ they shal destroy them with the swerd.

Neuertheles I wyl not then haue don vp you, sayeth the lorde. But yf they saye: wherfore doth the lorde our God al thys vnto vs?

Then answere them: because, ye like as ye haue forsaken me, and serued fo E raunge goddes in your owne land, euē so shall ye serue other goddes also in a straunge land. Preache this vnto the house of Jacob, and crie it out in Ju da, and saye thus: Heare this (thou fo lysh and vndiscrete people) * ye haue eyes, but ye se not: eares haue ye, but ye heare not.

Feare ye not me, sayeth the Lorde? F Are ye not al shamed, to loke me in the face? which bynd the see with the sand so that it can not passe his boundes: For though it rage, yet can it do noth nge, and though the waues therof do well, yet maye they not go ouer.

But this people hath a false and an obstynate herte, they are departed and gone awaye fro me. They thincke not in their hertes: O let vs feare the lord oure God/ that geueth vs rayne d* ear ly and late, when nede is: which kepeth euer styll the harueste for vs early.

Neuertheles your misdeades haue turned these from you, and your synnes haue robbed you her of. For amōge my people are founde wycked per sonnes, that preuely laye snares & wait for men, to take them and destroye the. And lyke as a net is full of byrdes, so are their houses ful of that which they haue gotten with falshed and dysceat/ Herof commeth their greate substaun G ce and ryches, here of are they fat and welthy, and are runne awaye fro me with shameful blaspheinyes.

They mynystre not the lawe/ they make no ende of the fatherlesses cause they iudge not the poore accordyng to equyte.

Shoulde I not punische these thin ges, sayeth the Lorde? shoulde I not be auēged of al soch peple, as those be? Horyble and greuouse thinges are don in the lande.

The Prophetes teache falselye/ and the preastes folowe them/ and my people hath pleasure therin. What wyl wyl come therof at the laste.

C The. vi. Chapter

I Come out of Jerusalem, ye stronge childeren of Ben Jamin: blow vp the trom pettes ye Tecuites, set vp a token vnto Bethcarem/ for a plage and a great mysery pepeth out from the North.

I wyll lyken the daughter Sion to a fayre and tendre woman and to her shall come the shepherdes with theyre flockes. Their tentes shall they pytche rounde aboute her, and euerye one shall fede * thew that are vnder his hande.

Make battel against her, shal they say Aryse, let vs go vp, whyle it is yet day

B Alas, the daye goth awaye, and thee night shadowes fall downe: Arise, let vs go vp by nyght/ and destroy her strō ge holdes/ for thus hathe the Lorde of hostes commaunded.

Hew down her trees/ and set vp bul warkes agaynste Jerusalem: This is the cittie that must be punished, for in her is all malicyousnes. Lyke as a con dyte aboundeth in water/ euen so thys cittie aboundeth in wickednes. Robery and vnrighteousnes is hard in her, so sow and woundes are euer there in my syght. Amēde the (O Jerusalem) lest I withdrawe my herte from the, and ma ke the desolate: and thy lande also, that no man dwell in it. For thys sayth thee C Lorde of hostes: a* The relydue of I sraell shalbe gathered together, as thee remnaunt of grapes.

And therfore turne thine hande agai ne into the basket, like the grape gathe rer. But vnto whoome shall I speake, whome shall I warne that he maye tak hede? Their eares are so vncircumcised, that they maye not heare.

Beholde they take the word of God but for a scorne, and haue no lust therto:

And therfore b* I am so ful of thine in dignacion (O Lorde) that I maye suf fer no longer. Shede out thy wrath vpon the childrē that are without, and vpon al yong men. Yee the man must be taken prisoner wythe the wyfe, and the aged with the crepel. Their houses wyth their landes and wyues shall be turned to straūgers, whē I stretch out myne hande vpon the inhabitours of this lande, saieth the lorde. For from ye leest vnto the most/ they hange al vpō couetousnes: and from the prophet vn to the preest, they go all about with fal sheed and lyes.

And besyde that, they heale ye hurt D of people inpwith swet wordes, sayeng: peace peace, when there is no peace at all. Therfore they must be ashamed, for they haue committed abhomyna cion. But how shuld they be ashamed/ when they knowe nothyng/ nether of shame ner good nurture? And therfore they shal fall amounge the slayne, and in the houre when I shal visyte them, they shal be brought downe, sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lord: go in to the stretes, consider and make inquysycō for the olde waye: and if it be the good and righte waye, then go therin, that ye maye fynde rest for your soules. But they saye: we wyl not walcke ther in, and I wyl set watchmen ouer you/ E and therfore take hede vnto the voice of the trompet. But they saye: we wyll not take hede. Heare therfore ye Gen tyls/ and ye congregacion shalt know/ what I haue deserued for them. Here thou earthe also: beholde/ I wyl cause a plage com to vpon this people, euen the frut of theyr owne ymaginacions:

For they haue not bene obedient vnto my woordes and to my lawe, but abhorred them. Wherfore bryng ye my incence from Saba, and swet smellyn ge Calamus from farre countrees: Your burnt offrynges displease me, & I relyce not in your sacrifices.

And therfore thus sayeth the Lord: beholde, I wyl make this people fal, & ther shal fal from amōg them ye father with the children, one neyghbour shal perish with another.

Moreouer

FMoreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde: Behold, there shall come a people frō the North, and a greate people shall arise from the endes of ỹ earth, wt bowes & wt dartes shall they be weapened: It is a rough and fearce people, an vnmerciful people: their voice roreth like the see, they ryde vpon horses wel apoynted to the batel agaynst the/ O daughter Sion. Thē shal this citye be herd Oure armes are feble, heupnes and sorowe is come vpon vs, as vpon a woman trauelyng with childe. No man go forth into the feld, no man com vpon the hy strete: for the swerd and feare of the enemye shalbe on euery side.

Wherfore, gyrd a sack cloth about the (O thou daughter of my people) sprynkle thy self with asches/ moreouer I wepe bytterly, as vpon thy only beloued sonne: For the destroyer shal sodēly fall vpon vs. The haue I set for a prouer of my herd people, to seke out & to trye their wayes. For they are vnfaithful and fallen awaye, they hange vpon filthy lucre, they ar cleane byasse and pyron, for they hurt and destroye euery man. The bellous are brent in the fyre, the lead is consumed / the melter melteth in vayne, for the euel is not taken awaye from them. Therfore shall they be called naughty spluer, because the Lord hath cast them out.

The vii. Chapter

AThese are the wordes ỹ god spake vnto Jeremy: Stande vnder the gates of the Lordes house, and crie out these wordes there, with a loude voyce, and saye: Heare the word of the Lorde all ye of Juda / that go in at this dore, to honoure the Lorde.

Thus sayethe the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israell.

Amende youre wayes and youre counsels and I wyll lett you dwell in this place. Trust not i false lienge wordes, saienge: here is the temple of the Lord, here is the temple of the Lorde, here is the temple of the lorde.

B*For if ye wyl amende youre wayes and councels, yf ye wyll iudge right betwyxte a man and hys neghboure: if ye wyl not oppresse the straunger, the fatherles and the wyddowe: yf ye wyll not shede innocēt bloude in this place, if ye wyl not cleue to straunge goddes to youre awne destructiō, then wil I let you dwell in this place, yee i the lande that I gaue afore tyme vnto your fathers for euer. But take heade, ye trust in councels, that begyle you and do you no good. For whē ye haue stollen, murthured, committed aduoutrie, and periury: when ye haue offred vnto Baal, folowynge straunge and vnknowne goddes: Then come ye, and stande before me in this house, (which hath my name geuen vnto it and say: Tush, we ar ablolued quyte, though we haue done al these abhominacyons.

C*What think you this house that beareth mi nam, ys a denne of theuese And these thinges are not done pruely, but before myne eyes, sayeth the Lord. Go to my place in *Siloh/ wherunto I gaue my name afore tyme/ and loke wel what I dyd to the same place for ỹ wyckednes of my people of Israell. And now/ though ye haue done al these dedes (sayeth the Lord) and I my self rose vp euer bi times to warne you, and to comen wyth you/ yet wolde ye not here me: I called/ ye wolde not answere. And therfore euen as I haue done vnto Siloh/ so wyl I do to this house/ ỹ my name is genē vnto/ and that ye put youre trust in)ye vnto the place ỹ I haue geuen to you & your fathers. And I shal thrust you out of my sight, as I haue caste oute all youre brethren the whole sede of a*Ephraim.

D Therfore thou shalte not praye for this people, thou shalt nether geue thākes, not byd prater for them: thou shalt make no intercession to me for them for in no wyse wyll I heare the, Seyst thou not what they do in the cyties of Juda

Juda, & with out Jerusalem? The chyldrē gather stickes, the fathers kyndle the fyre, ỹ mothers knede ỹ dowghe/ to bake cakes for the quene of heauen. They poure out drinkofferinges vnto straunge goddes, to prouoke me vnto wyrath: How be it they hurte not me (saieth the Lorde) but rather confounde, & shame them selues.

And therfore thus saieth ỹ Lorde God: beholde, my wrath and my indignacion shalbe poured out vpō this place, vpon man & catell vpon ỹ trees in ỹ felde & al frute of ỹ lande, & it shal burne so, ỹ no mā may quench it. Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes, the God of Israel: Yee heape vp your burnt offrynges, with youre sacrifyces/ & eate the fleshe. But whē I brought youre fathers out of Egypt/ I spake no worde vnto thē of burntofferinges & sacrifices: but this I commaunded thē, sayinge: herken & obeye my voyce/ and I shalbe youre God and ye shal be mi people: so ỹ ye walcke in al ỹ wayes, which I haue cōmaūded you, that ye may prosper.

But they were not obedient, they inclyned not their eares there vnto/ but went after their owne ymaginacyōs & after the motiōs of their owne wicked herte, & so turned them selues awaye, & conuerted not vnto me. And this haue they done/ frō the tyme that youre fathers came out of Egipt, vnto this daye.

Neuertheles, I sent vnto them mi seruauntes al the prophetes: I rose vp early & sent them worde/ yet wolde they not herken, nor bowe their eares but were obstynate & worse then their fathers. And thou shalt now speake al these wordes vnto them/ but they shal not heare ỹ: thou shalt cry vpō thē/ but they shall not answere ỹ. Therfore shalt thou saye vnto them: this is the people ỹ nether heareth ỹ voyce of ỹ lord their god, ner receueth his correctiō. Faithfulnes & truth is clean rooted out of their mouth.

Wherfore cut of thyne hearre, and cast it awaye, take vp a complaynte in the whole land, for the lord shal cast awaye, & scatter the people that he is displeased with. For ỹ chyldren of Juda haue done euel in my sight, saith ỹ Lord, They haue set vp their abhomynacōs, in ỹ house ỹ hath my nam, & haue defyled it. They haue also builded an aulteter at b*Topheth, wher ỹ is in the valey of ỹ childrē of Hennom: that they myght burne their sonnes and daughters, which I neuer commaunded them, nether came it euer in my thought. And therfore beholde, the dayes shal come (sayeth the Lord) that it shal no more be called Topheth, or the valley of the chyldren of Hennom, but the valleye of the slaynge, for in Topheth, they shal be buryed, because they shal els haue no rowme. Ye the deed bodyes of this people shalbe eaten vp of the foules of the ayre and wilde beastes of the earth, & no man shal fraye them awaye. And as for the voyce of myrth and gladnes of the cyties of Juda, and Jerusalem* the voyce of the brydgrome and of the bryde: I wyll make them ceasse, for the land shalbe desolate.

¶The destruction of ỹ Jewes. The Lord moueth the people to amēdment, reckenyng vp their sinnes He reprehendeth the liuing doctrin of ỹ Prophetes & Pzeistes, and their couetousnes also.

¶The. viii. Chapter.

AAt the same tyme sayeth ỹ Lord the bones of the Kinges of Juda, the bones of his princes, the bones of ỹ prestes and prophetes, yee and the bones of the cytizens of Jerusalem/ shalbe brought out of their graues and layde against the Sunne, the Moone and al the heauenly hoost: whome they loued, whom they serued whō they ranne after / whom they sought & worshipped. They shal nether be gathered together ner buryed / but shall lie vpō ỹ erth, to their shāes despytige.

And all they ỹ remayne of this wycked generatiō/ shal desire rather to die thē to liue: whersoeuer they remayne, & wher as I scater thē/ saith ỹ lord of hostes. This shalt ỹ saie vnto thē also: Thus saieth ỹ lord, do mē fal so: ỹ they arise not vp againe:

And

And turne they so farre awai, that they neuer conuerte: Wherfore then is this people and Jerusalem gone so farre back, that they turne not agayne. They are euer the longer the moare obstinate, and wyll not be conuerted.

For I haue loked, and consydered: but ther is no man that speaketh a good worde: there is noo man that taketh repentaunce for hys sinne, that wyll so much as saye wherfore haue I done this: but euery manne (as sone as hee is turned backe) runneth forth styll, lyke a wylde horse in a battell. The storke knoweth his appointed tyme, the Turteldoue, the swalow and the crane consydre the tyme of their trauaile: but my people wil not knowe ỹ time of the punishemente of the lorde. How darre ye saye then: we are wyse, we haue the lawe of the Lorde amonge vs?

Beholde the diseatfull penne of the scribes, letteth forth lies: therfore shal the wyse be confounded they shalbe afraid and taken: for lo, they haue cast out the worde of the Lord: what wysdomme cã then be amonge them? Wherfor, I wil geue theyr wyues vnto alyauntes/and theyr feldes to destroyers.

For from the lowest vnto the hyest, they folowe all sylthye lucre: and from the prophet vnto the preast, they deale all wyth lyes. Neuertheless, they heale the hurte of my people wyth swete wordes, sayenge: peace/ peace, where there is no peace, at all.

Fye for shame /howe abhomynable thynges do they? and yet they be not ashamed/yee they knowe of no shame.

Wherfore in the tyme of their visitacion, they shall fall amonge the dead knoopes/sayth the Lorde.

a*Moreouer I wyl gather them in (sayth the Lorde) so that there shall not be one grape vpon the vyne/nether one sygge vpon the sygge tree, and the leaues shalbe plucte of.

Then wyl I cause them to departe, and saye: why prolong we the tyme? Lett vs gather our selues together, and go vnto the stronge Cytie / there shall we be in reste: For the Lorde oure God hath put vs to sylence, and b*geuen vs water myxt wyth gale, to drynke: because wt haue synned agaynst hym.

We loked for peace, and we feare not the better, we wayted for the tyme of health, and lo/ here is nothing but trouble.

Then shall the noyse of his horses be hearde from Dan, the whole lande shall be afrayde at the nepenge of hys stronge horses: for they shal come, and deuoure the lande, wyth all that is in it: the Cyties, and those that dwell ther in. Moreouer, c* I will sende Cobatrices and serpentes amonge you (whiche wyl not be charmed) and they shall byte you, sayth the Lorde.

Sorow is come vpon me, and heuynes vereth my herte: for lo the voyce of the crieng of my people is hard from a farre countre: Is not the Lord in syon? Is not the kynge in her? Wherfore thē haue they greued me (shall the Lorde saye) wyth their Images & folysh straūge fashions? The haruest is gone, thre sommer hath an ende, and we are not helped. I am sore vexed, because of thee hurte of my people: I am heuy and abashed, for there is noo more Treakle at Galaad, and there is no physycian, ỹ can heale the hurte of my people.

The Notes.

a* Moreouer I wyl gather thē in. &c. The meanyng is: I will gather the Jewes from all the partes of Jewry vnto Jerusalem. Ther shal no sygge, grape, or other frute remayne in the vyllages or feldes: and so shal they haue no lust to abyde ther, but shalbe fayne to flye to the citi. Thyther caused he thē to flie, and there also famished them and deliuered them in to their enemies handes. Such punishment had their synnes deserued.

b* Hath geuen vs water mixt with gal to drincke, that is, hath wrapped vs in myserye and wretched thraldome.

c* I wyl sende Cockatrices and serpents. &c. That is, I wyl bringe among you a fearce compaṁ of soudiers, with whose deadly arrowes and dartes. &c. Ye shalbe slayne euen as though ye should perish with ỹ strokes or venemous byttinges of Cockatrices and serpentes.

¶ The.ix. Chapter.

O Who wyll geue my heade water ynoughe, and a well of teares for myne eyes: that I maye wepe nyght and day, for the slaughter of my people.

Wolde

Would God that I had a cotage some where farre frō folcke, that I myght leaue my people, & goo from them: for they be al aduouterers and a shrynckynge sorte. They bende their tonges lyke bowes, to shute out lyes: As for ỹ trueth, they maye not hynge awaye wt in the world. For they go frō one wickednes to another, & holde nothing of me, sayeth the Lorde.

Ye one must kepe him self frō another, no man may safely trust hys owne brother: for one brother vndermyneth another, & one neyghboure begyleth another. Ye one dissembleth with another, & they deale with no truth. They haue practised their tonges to lye, & taken greate paynes to do myscheefe. They haue set their stole in the middest of discreate, and for very dyssemblynge fayth ede they wyll not know me, sayeth the Lorde. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes: beholde, I will melte thē, & trie them, for what shulde I els do to my people? Their tonges are lyke charpe arowes, to speake discreate. With theyr mouth they speake peaceably to their neighboure, but preuely they late wayte for hym. Shulde I not punysh them for these thynges, sayeth the Lorde? Or shulde I not be auenged of any sorte people as this? Upon the mountaynes wyll I take vp a lamentacion & sorowful crye, and a mournynge vpon the fayre playnes of the wyldernes: Namely, how thei are so brenne vp, that no man goeth there any moore: Yee a man shal not heare one beast crie there. Brydes and catel are al gone frō thēce. I wyll make Jerusalem also an heape of stones, and a denne of venymous wormes. And I wyl make ỹ cyties of Juda so waste/that noman shal dwell therin. What man is so wyse, as to vnderstande this? Or to whom hath the Lord spoke by mouth, that he may shewe this, and saye: O thou lande, why perysshest thou so? Wherfore art thou so brent vp, and lyke a wyldernesse, that no man goeth thorow? Yee the Lorde hym selfe toolde the same vnto them, that forsoke hys lawe, and kepte not ỹ thinge that he gaue them in cōmaunde ment nether lyued therafter: but folowed the wyckednes of their owne hertes, and serued straūge goddes, as their fathers taught them.

Therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes, the God of Israel: Beholde, I wil fede thys people with wormwod, and geue them gale to drynk. I wyl scatter them also amōge the Heathen, whom nether they nor their fathers haue knowne: and I wyl sende a swearde amonge them, to persecute them, vntyl I brynge them to naught. Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes. Loke that ye call for mournyng wyues, and send for wise wemen: that thei come hyther, and synge a mournynge songe of you: that the teares may fall out of oure eyes, and ỹ oure eye lyddes maye gushe out of water.

For there is a lamentable noise hearde of Syon: O how are we so sore destroyed? O how ar we so pyteously confounded? We must forsake oure owne natural countre, and we are shot out of our owne lodgynges Yet he are the worde of the Lord (O ye wemen) and let your eares regard the wordes of his mouth: that ye may lerne youre daughters to mourne, and that euery one may teach her neyghbour sse, to make lamentacyon: Namely thus: Death is clymmyng vp in at oure wyndowes he is come in to oure houses, to destroye the chylde before the doze, and the ponge man in the strete.

But tell thou playnly, thus sayeth the Lorde: The deed bodies of men shall lye vpon the grounde, as the donge vpon the felde, and as the hey after the mower, and ther shalbe no man to take them vp. Moreouer, thus sayeth the lorde: Let not the wyse man reioyse in hys wysdome/nor the stronge man in hys strength/ nether the rych man in hys ryches: But who so wyl reioyse, let hym reioyse in this/that he vnderstandeth, and knoweth me: for I am the lorde, whych do mercy, equyte and rygtuousnes vpon the earth. Therfore haue I pleasure in soch thinges, saieth the lorde. Beholde, the tyme cōmeth (sayeth the lord) that I wyll vysete a* all them, whose forefskynne is vncircumcysed.

The

The Egipcians, the Iewes / the Edomytes, the Ammonites, the Moabytes and the shaué Madianites, that dwell in the wyldernes. For all the gentyles are vncyrcumcysed in the flesshe / but all the howse of Israell are vncircumcysed in the herte.

The notes

a *All, that is as wel the Iewes as the Gentyles: for the one is as fre as the other. The Iewes are euell as well as the heathen, as touching the herte, al though they be circumcysed as touching the flesshe. Therfore are they here reckened among the vncyrcumcysed.

¶ The constellacions of the starres are not to be feared. Of the wekenes of Idoles, and of the power of God. Of euell curates.

¶ The.x. Chapter.

a HEare the word of the lord, that he speaketh vnto the, O thou house of Israell: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Ye shal not lerne after the maner of the Heathen and ye shal not be afrayd for the tokens of heauen for the Heathen ar afrayed of such: yee all the customes and lawes of the Gentyles are nothing, but vaine: They hewe downe a tree in the wod w the handes of the wycked man / and fasshyō it with the axe: they couer it ouer with golde or syluer, they fasten it w nayles and hāmers, that it moue not. It standeth as styf as a palme tree / yt can nether speake nor go, but muste be borne. Be not ye afrayde of such, for they can do nether good nether euell.

But there is none like vnto the, O Lorde, and greate is the name of thy power. Who wold not feare the? Or what kynge of the Gentyles wold not obeye the?

b For amonge al the wyse men of the Gentyles, and in al their kyngdomes, there is none that maye be lyckened vnto ỹ. They are altogether vnlerned and vnwyse. All theyr connynge is but vanyte: namely, wod, syluer / whych is brought out of Tharsis, and beate to plates and golde from Ophir, a worke that is made wyth the hande of the crafftesman and the caster / clothed wyth yelowe sylcke and scarlette euen so is the worcke of their wyse men altogether. But the Lorde is a tru God, a lyuyng God, and an euer lastyng kyng

If he be wroth, the earth shaketh: all ỹ Gētyles may not abyde hys idignaciō

‡ As for their goddes, it maye well be sayde of them: they are goddes, that made nether heauen nor earth: therfore shal thei perysh from the earth, and frō all thynges vnder heauē But (as for oure God) he made the earth with his power, and with his wysdome hath he finished the whole cōpasse of ỹ worlde, with his discrecion hathe he spred out the heauēs. At his voyce ỹ waters c gather in the ayre, he draweth vp the cloudes from the vttermost partes of ỹ earth: he turneth lyghtenyng to rayne / and bryngeth forth the windes out of their treasures: His wysdome maketh all men fooles. And cōfounded be all casters of ymages, for that they cast, is but a vayne thynge, and hath no lyfe. The vaine craftesmen with their worckes, that thei in their vanite haue made, shall perish one with another in the tyme of vysytacion. Neuertheles, Iacobes porcion is not soch: but it is he, that hath made al thynges, and Israel is the rodd of his inheritaunce: The Lorde of hoostes is his name. Put awaye thyne vnclennesse oute of the land, thou that art in the stronge cities. For thus sayeth the lorde: Beholde / I wil now thrust out the inhabitours of this land a greate way of, and trouble them of soch a fashion, that they shall no more be founde.

Alas / how am I hurte? Alas, how pain d efull are my scourges vnto me? For I consydre this sorow by my selfe, and I must suffre it. My tabernacle is destroyed, and all mi coardes are broken, my childzen are gone from me, and can noo where be founde. Now haue I none to spręde out my tente / or to set vp my hanginges. For the herdmen haue done folishly / that they haue not sought the lord. Therfore haue they dealt vnwyselp with theyr catell / and all are scatred abrode. Beholde / the noyse is harde at hande / and greate sedicyon out of the northe to make the cyties of Juda a wyldernesse / and a dwellinge place for Dragōs.

Now I knowe (O lorde) that it is not in mās power to ordre his owne waies, or to rule hys owne steppes and goynges. Therfore chasten thou vs, O lord, but with fauour and not in thy wrath, bringe vs not vtterli to naught.

Poure out thine indignacio rather vpō the Gentiles, that knowe the not, & vp on the people that cal not on thy name: And that because they haue consumed / deuoured and destroyed Jacob, & haue eated out hys glorye.

The notes

‡ The verse is wyttē in Chald to shew by ỹ Iewes to the Gētiles of Chalde their confusion.

¶ A curse of thē that obey not the word of goddes promes. The people of Juda folowing the steppes of their fathers, worshippeth straūg Goddes. The lord sayeth ỹ he wyll not heare the Iewes, and forbydden also Jeremy to pray for them.

¶ The.xi. Chapter.

THis is another Sermon, which the Lord commaunded Jeremy for to preach / saying: Heare the wordes e of the couenaunt, and speake vnto al Juda, and to all them that dwel at Jerusalem. And saye thou vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lord god of Israel: Cursed be euery on that is not obedyent vnto the wordes of thys couenaunt: which I commaunded vnto your fathers, what tyme as I brought them out of Egipt, from the a*pyron fornace, saying: Be obedient vnto my voyce, and do accordyng to al that I commaunde you: so shal ye be my people, & I wyl be your god / and wyll kepe my promesse, ỹ I haue sworne vnto youre fathers: Namely, ỹ I wolde geue them a lande which floweth with mylck and hony, as ye se, it is come to passe vnto this daye. Then answered I, and sayed. Amen, It is euen so Lorde, as thou sayest.

B Then the Lorde sayde vnto me agayne: preach this in the cities of Juda and rounde about Jerusalem / and saye: Heare the wordes of this couenaunt / ỹ ye maye kepe them. For I haue diligentlye exorted your fathers, euer sence the tyme that I brought thē out of the Lande of Egypte, vnto this day. I gaue them warning by tymes: saying hearken vnto my voyce: Neuertheles, they wuolde not obeye me, nor encline their eares vnto me, but folowed the wycked ymagynacyons of their owne hertes.

And therfore haue I accused them as trangressours of all the wordes of this couenaunt, that I gaue them to kepe, whych thei (not with vnder standinge) haue not kepte.

And the Lorde sayde vnto me: It is fōūde out, that whole Israell and al these citizēs of Jerusalem ar gone backe. They haue turned them selues to the blasphemyes of their fore fathers, whych had no lust to heare my worde. Euen like wyse haue these also folowed straunge goddes, and worshypped thē. The house of Israel and Juda haue brokē mi couenaunt, which I made with their fathers.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: Be c hold, I wil sende a plage amonge you, whych ye shal not be able to escape: and though ye crie vnto me, I wil not heare you. Then shal the townes of Juda & the cytezyns of Jerusalem go, and call vpō their goddes vnto whom they made their oblacions: but they ar not able to helpe them in tyme of their trouble. For as many cyties as thou hast, O Juda, so many Goddes hast thou also: And loke how many stretes there be in the (O Jerusalem) so many shame full aulters haue ye sett vp, to offre vpō thē vnto Baal. But praie not thou for this people, byd nether prayse nor prayer for them, for though they crye vnto me in their trouble, yet wil I not heare them.

b *O thou beloued, why doest thou so shamefull greate blasphemyes in my house: euē as though that holy flesh might absolue the, specially when thou hast made thy boost of thy wyckednes. The Lorde called the a grene olyue tre, a fayre one, a frutefull one, a goodly one: but nowe that theare is a cōtrary reporte of the abrode / he wyll burne the vp / and destroye thy braunches. For the Lorde of hoostes that planted the hath deuysed a plage for the (O thou house of Israel & Juda) for ỹ euell that ye haue done to prouoke him to wrath / in that ye dyd sacrifice vnto Baal. Thys (O lorde) haue I lerned of the / & vnder stāde it, for ỹ hast shewed me their imaginacōs. But I (as a meke lambe) was caried awaye to be slayne: not knowinge, ỹ they had deuised soch a councell agaynst me say

vnto me: goe thy waye, a* and After thys / the lorde spake vnto me a gayne: Take the brech that thou hast prepared and put aboute the / and get the vp, and go vnto Euphrates, and hyde it in a hoole of the rocke.

So went I / and hydde it, as the lorde comaunded me. And it happened long after thys, that the Lorde spake vnto me: Vp, and get the to the Euphrates /

B I commaunded the to hyde there.
Then went I to Euphrates, and dyg-ged vp, and toke the breach from the place where I had hid it: and beholde the brech, was corrupt, so that it was profitable for nothyng.
Then sayd the lord vnto me: thus sayeth the Lord: Euen so wyll I corru of Jerusalē. This people is a wicked people, they wyll not heare my worde, they folow the wicked imaginacyōs of es, the kynges that syt vpon Dauids stole, the Preistes and Prophetes, with al that dwel in Jerusalem. And I wil fathers against the sonnes / sayeth the Lorde.

I wil not pardone them, I wil not spare them / ner haue pitie vpon them:
but destroye them. Be obediēt / geue ea

the Lorde him selfe that speaketh. Honou hys lyght from you, and or euer youre lest when ye loke for the lyght, he turne it in to the shadowe and darcknesse of death. But if ye wil not heare me, that geue you secrete warnynge, I wil mou rne for my whole hert for youre stubbu teares shal gusshe out of myne eyes.

For the lordes flocke shal be caryed a rulers: Humble youre selues / sett you downe lowe, for the crowne of youre glory shal fall from your head. The cy ties towarde the south shalbe shut vp, and no man shal open them.

Al Juda shal be caried awaie captiue,

For like as the man of Inde mate chaunge hys skynne, and the cat of ỹ moũtayne her spottes: so maye ye that be accrcysed in euel, do good. Therfore wil I scater you, lyke as the stoble that is taken awaye with the south wynde.
This shal be your portion, and the porcyon of your measur, wherwith ye shal be rewarded of me, saith the Lorde: because ye haue forgotten me, and put your trust in disceatful thinges. Therfore shal I turne thy clothes ouer thy hed, and discouer thy thyghes, that thy preuyties maye be sene, thy aduoutrye, thy deedly malice, thy beastlynes and thy shameful whordome. For vpon ỹ feeldes and hylles I haue sene thy abhominacions. Wo be vnto the (O Ierusalẽ) whẽ wilt ỹ euer be clẽsedeny mo

¶ Of the derth ỹ shulde come in Iewry. The prayer of the people asking mercy of the Lord. The vnfaithful people ar not heard. Of prayer, fastynge, & of false prophets that seduce the people.

¶ The .xiiii. Chapter.

A THe word of the Lord shewed vnto Ieremy, concernynge the derth of the frutes Iuda shall mourne, men shal not go much more thorow his gates: the land shalbe nomore had in reputacion, and the crie of Ierusalem shal breake out. The lordes shal sende their seruauntes to fetch water/ and when they come to the welles/ they shal finde no water, but shal carry their vessels home emty. They shalbe ashamed and confounded/ and shal couer their heades. For the ground shall be dried vp, because there commeth no raine vpon it. The plowmen also shal be ashamed/ and shal couer their heedes. The hynd shal forsake the yonge fawne, ỹ he bringeth forth in ỹ feld because there shalbe no grasse. The wyld Asses shal stãd in the mosse/ & draw in their wynd lyke the dragons/ their eyes shal fayle for want of grasse.

B Noutles our owne wickednesse reward vs. But Lord do ỹ according to thy name, though our transgressiõs & sinnes be many. For thou art the comfort & help of Israel i ỹ time of trouble a* Why wylte ỹ be a straunger in the Lande, and as one that goeth ouer the felde/ and commeth in onli to remaine for a nyght? Why wylt thou make thy self a cowarde, and as it were a gyaunt that yet maye not helpe? b* For thou art ours (O Lorde) and we beare thy name, therfore forsake vs not.

C Then spake the Lord, concerninge this people that haue pleasure to go so humbly wyth theyr fete, and leaue not of, and therfore displease the Lorde: in so moch, that he wil now bring againe to remẽbraunce al their mildedes, and punysh all their synnes. Ye euen thus sayde the Lorde vnto me: Thou shalt not praye to do this people good. For though thei fast, I wil not heare their praiers. And though they offre burnt offringes and sacrifices, yet wil not I accepte them. For I wyl destroye them with the sweard, honger and pestilence. Then answerde I: O Lorde God/ the prophetes saie vnto them: Tush, ye shal se no sweard, and no honger shal come vpõ you, but the Lord shal geue you continu al rest in this place.

D And the Lorde sayde vnto me: The prophetes preach lies vnto them in my name. I haue not spoken wyth them/ neither gaue I them ani charge, neither dyd I sende them: yet thei preach vnto you false visiõs, charming vanite, disceatfulnesse of their owne hert. Therfore thus saith the Lord: As for those prophetes ỹ preach in my name/ whõ I neuertheles haue not sent) & ỹ say: tush, there shal neither batel ner honger be in this land: With swerd & wt hõger shal those prophetes perish, & the people to whom they haue preached shalbe cast out of Ierusalem, dye of honger, & be slaine with the swerd (and there shalbe no man to burie them) both they & their wyues, their sõnes & their daughters. For thus wil I poure their wikednes vpon thẽ. This shalt thou saie also vnto them: Myne eyes shall wepe without ceassyng daye and night. For my people shalbe destroyed wt greate hatme & shal perish wt a greate plage. For if I go into ỹ feld, lo, it lieth full of slayn men: Yf I come into the citye, lo/ they be al famished of honger.

ye they? prophetes also and preests, shalbe led into an vnknowen lande.
Hast thou then vtterly forsake Iuda? (sayde I) Doest thou so abhorre Syon? Or hast thou so plaged vs, that we can be healed no more? We loked for peace, and there commeth no good: for ỹ tyme of healthe, and lo, here is nothyng but trouble. We knowe leg (O lord) al our mildedes, and the synnes of our fathers, that we haue offended the. Be not displeased, O Lord, for thy names sake, forget not thy louyng kyndnes: Remembre the trone of thyne honoure, breke not the couenant, that thou hast made wyth vs. Are there any amonge the goddes of the Gentyles, that sende rayne or geue the showers of heauen? Doest not thou it O Lorde our God, in whome we trust? Yee Lorde/ thow doest all these thynges, a* Why wylt thou be as a straunger. As who say. Thou behauest thy selfe vnto vs as a straunger, or as awayefereng man: for thou settest not by vs, ner dyspleasest thy strenghtes to helpe vs.

b* Some rcade, but thou, O Lorde, art in the myddest of vs, and thy name is called on, of vs.
¶ The Lord wil not heare Moses or Aaron, if thei praye for the people, but wyl wrappe them in many myseryes. The cause of suche grete myseries.

¶ The .xv. Chapter.

A THen spake the Lorde vnto me, and sayd: Though moses and Samuell stode before me, yet haue I no herte to thys peple. Dryue thẽ awaye, that they maye goo oute of my syghte. And if they saye vnto the: Whether shall we go? Then tell them: The Lorde geueth vnto thys answere: Some vnto death, some to the swerde, some to hunger, some to captiuitye. For I wyl bringe foure plages vppon thẽ sayth the Lorde. The swerde shall straungle them, the dogges shal deuoure them, the foules of the ayre, ãd beastes of the earth shal eate them vp/ And destroy them. I wyll scatter them abone also in all kindomes and landes tobe plaged/ because of Manasseh thee sonne of hesekias kynge of Juda, for the thinges that he dyd in Ierusalem.
B Who shal then haue pity vpon the/ O Ierusalem? Who shalbe sorye for thee? Or who shall make intercession, to obtayne peace for thee? seynge thou goeste fro me, and turnedest backwarde, sayth the Lorde? Therfore I wyll stretche out myne hande against the, to destroy the, and I wyl not be intreated. I wil scatre the abroade with the fanne one euerye syde of the land: I wyl waste my people and destroye them, for they haue had no luste to turne from their owne waye. I wyll make theyr wydowes mo in nombre, then the sandes, of thee se. Upon the mothers of theyr childeren, shall I bringe a destroyer in the noone daye. Sodenly and vnawares/ shall I sende a feare vpon theiz cities. She that hath borne vii. childeren, shall haue none, her herte shall be full of sorowe.

C The sunne shall fayle her in the clere daye, when she shall be confounded and fayntie for very heuenesse. As for those that remayne, I will delyuer thẽ vnto the sweard of theyr enemyes, sayeth the Lord. O mother, alas that euer thou dyddest beare me, an enemye and hated of the whol land: Though I neuer lente ner receaued vpon vsury, yet all men speake euell vpon me. And the Lord answered me: Lede not I the thẽ vnto good? Come not I to thee, when thou art in trouble: and helpe the, whẽ thyne enemye oppresseth the? Doth one yron hurte an other, or one metall ỹ commyth from the North, another? As for youre riches and treasure/ I wyl geue them out into a praye, not for anye money, but because of all your synnes, that ye haue done in all your coastes.
D And I wyll bryngе you with youre enemyes into a land/ that ye know not: for the fyre that is kindle in my indignation/ shall burne you vp.
O Lorde (sayde I then) thou knowest al thynges, therfore remembre me, and viset me/ delyuer me from my persecuters: Receaue not in ỹ cause in thy long wrath, yee thou knowest ỹ for thy sake I suffre rebuke. When I hadde found thy word I eat them vp gredily they haue made my hert Joyfull and glad. For I cal vpon thy name/ O lorde God of hostes. I dwel not among ỹ scorners, neyther is mydelyte therein: but I dwel only in the feare of thy ãde, for ỹ hast fyled me wyth bytternes.

Wrath that

Shal my heupnesse endure for euer? Are my plages then so grete, that they maye neuer be healed? Wylt thou be as a water, ẏ failleth, and can not contynue? Upon these wordes, thus laid the lord vnto me: If thou wilt turne agayne, I shal set the in my seruyce: and if thou wylt take out the thinge ẏ is precious from the vyle, thou shalte be euē as myne owne mouth. They shall conuert vnto the, but turne not thou vnto them: and so shal I make the a strong wal of stele agaynst this people. They shal fyght agaīst the, but they shal not preuaile. For I my selfe wil be w̄ the, to helpe the, and delyuer the, saieth the lord. And I wyl rid the out of the handes of the wycked, and deliuer the out of the hand of Trauntes.

¶ The prophecieth the myserye of the Jewes. He sheweth, that the worshiping of Idoles & the contempt of Gods law, is the cause of their misery. He prophecieth ẏ captiuitie of Babilō, & their deliueraūce frō thēce againe. The calling of ẏ Gētils.

¶ The.xvi. Chapter.

A MOreouer, thus saide the Lord vnto me: Thou shalt take thee no wyfe, ner beget chyldren in thys place. For of the chylderen that are borne in this place, of theyr mothers that haue bore thē, & of their fathers that haue begotten them in thys lande, thus sayth the Lord: They shall dye an horyble death, no man shall mourne for them, ner bury thē, but they shal lye as donge, vpō the earth. They shal perysh thorow the sweard, and hunger and theyr bodyes shalbe meate for thee foules of the aire, & beasts of the earth.

A Agayne thus saith ẏ lord: Go not vnto them, that come together for to mourne and wepe, for I haue taken my peace from thys people (sayth the Lord) ye my fauoure and my mercy. And in thys lande shall they dye, olde and yonge, ād shal not be buryed, no man shall bewepe them, no manne shall clyppe or shaue hym selfe for them.

There shall not one visite an other, to mourne wyth them for their dede, or to cōfort them. One shall not offre another the cuppe of consolation, to forgette theyr heupnesse for father and mother.

Thou shalt not go into their least house, to sytt downe, moche lesse to eate or drynke with them. For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israel: a* Beholde, I shal take awat out of this place, the voyce of myrth and gladnes, the voyce of the bryde grome and of ẏ bryde: yee and that in youre dayes, ẏ ye may se it.

Now when thou shewest thys people all these wordes, and they say vnto the: Wherfore hath the Lord deuysed all thys greate plage for vs? Or what is the offence and synne, that we haue done against the Lorde oure God? Then make thou them this answere: Because youre fathers haue forsaken me (sayth the Lorde) & haue cleued vnto straunge goddes, whom they haue honoured and worshipped: but me haue they forsaken, ād haue not kept my lawe. And ye with your shamefull blasphemyes, haue exceaded the wyckednes of youre fathers. For euery one of you, foloweth the froward and euell ymagination of hys owne herte, and is not obedient vnto me.

Therfore wil I cast you out of this lande, into a land that ye and your fathers knowe not: and there shall ye serue straunge goddes daye and nyght, there wyll I shewe you no fauour. Behold (sayth the Lord) the dayes are cōme, ẏt shall nomore be sayd: The lord liueth, which brought ẏ children of Israel out of ẏ land of Egypt: but, it shall be sayde, the Lorde liueth, that brought the children of Israel from the north, and from all landes where I had scatred them. For I wyl bring them agayne into thi lande, that I gaue their fathers.

B Behold (sayth the Lorde) I wyll sende out many b* fyshers to take them, & after that wyll I sende out many hunters to hunte them out from all mountaynes and hylles ād out of the caues of stones. For myne eyes beholde all theyr wayes, and they cannot be hydd from my face, nether can theyr wycked dedes be kepte close oute of my syghte. But fyrst wyll I sufficiently rewarde theyr shamefull blasphemyes & synnes wherwith they haue defyled my lande:

Namely, with their stinking Idoles and abhominacions, wherwyth they haue fylled myne heritage. O lord, my strength, my power, and refuge in time of trouble. The Gentyles shal com vnto the frō ẏ endes of ẏ world, & say: Verely our fathers haue cleaued vnto lyes, their Idoles are but vayne and vnprofitable. How can a man make those his goddes, which are not able to be gods. And therfore I wyll ones teache them, saieth the Lord, I wyll shewe thē my hande & my power, that they maye know, that my name is the lord.

¶ The. xvii. Chapter.

A YOur sinne (O ye of ẏ tribe of Juda) is wrytten in the table of youre hertes, and grauen so vpon the endes of youre alters w̄ a pen of yron & wan adamāt clawe: ẏ your children also maye thincke vpon your aulters, woddes/thicke trees/hye hilles/ mountaynes & feldes. Wherfore, I wyl make al your substaunce and treasure be spoiled, for the greate sinne ẏ ye haue don vpō your hie places thorow out al the coostes of your lande. Ye shal be cast out also from the herytage, that I gaue you.

And I wyl subdue vnder ẏ heup bondage of your enemies, in a land that ye know not. For ye haue mynystred fyre to my indignacion, which shall burne euermore. Thus saith the lord: Cursed be the man ẏ putteth his trust in man/ and a* that taketh fleshe for hys arme: and he, whose hert departeth frō ẏ lord.

He shalbe lyke the heeth, that groweth in the wildernes.

B As for the good thing that is for to cō, he shal not se it: but dwel i a drie place of the wyldernes, in a salt and vnoccupied land. * Blessed is the man, that putteth his trust in ẏ Lord, and whose hope is the Lord himself. * For he shal be as a tre/ that is plāted by the water syde; whiche spreadeth out the rote vnto moystnesse, whom the heate can not harme, when it commeth, but his leues are grene. And though there grow but lytle frute because of drouth / yet is he not carefull, but he neuer leaueth of to bringe forth frute. Amonge all thinges lyuing, man hath the most disceateful and vnserchable hert.

C Who shal then know it? Euen I ẏ lord searche out the grounde of ẏ hert, & trye the reines, & reward euery man according to his wayes, & according to ẏ frut of his councels.

D The disceatfull maketh a nest, but bryngeth forth no yong: He cōmeth by riches but not rightuously. In ẏ myddest of his lyfe must he leaue thē behind him, & at ẏ last be founde a very foole.

But ẏ (O Lorde) whose trone is moste glorious, excellēt & of most antyquite, which dwellest i ẏ place of our holy rest: Thou art the cōfort of Israel. All they ẏ forsake the shalbe cōfounded: al thei ẏ depart frō the, shalbe wrytten in earth, for they haue forsaken the lord, the very condyte of the waters of lyfe.

Heale me, O lord, & I shalbe whole: saue ẏ me/ & I shall be saued/ for thou art my prayse. Behold, these men saye vnto me. Where is the word of ẏ lord? Let it come. Where as I neuertheles ledyng the flock in thy wayes, haue cōpelled none by violence. For I neuer desired eny mans deeth/ this knowest thou wel. My wordes also were right before the. Be not now terrible vnto me, O lord, for thou art he in whom I hope, when I am in parel. Let my persecuters becōfounded, but not me: let the be afraied, & not me. Thou shalt bring vpō the ẏ tyme of their plage, & shalt destroye them right sore.

Agayne / thus hath the lord sayde vnto me: Go and stande vnder ẏ gate where thorow, ẏ people and the kinges of Juda go out and in/ yee vnder al ẏ gates of Jerusalem, and say vnto the, Heare the word of the lorde, ye kynges of Juda, and all thou people of Juda & al ye citizens of Jerusalē, that go thorow this gate: Thus the Lord cōmaūdeth: Take hede for your lyues, that ye cary no burthen vpon you in the Sabboth, to bringe it thorow the gates of Jerusalem: ye shall beare no burthen also oute of your houses in the Sabboth. b* Ye shall do no labour therin, but halow the Sabboth, as I cōmaūded youre fathers. How be it they obeyed me not, nether hatkened they vnto me: but were obstinate and stubburne/ and nether obeyed me, nor receaued my correccion. Neuertheles/ if ye wil here me (saieth the Lord) and beare no burthen in to the cytye thorowe this gate vpon the Sabboth: If ye wyll halow the Sabboth / so that ye do no worcke therin: then shal there go thorow ỹ gates of this citye, kynges and princes/ that shall syt vpon the stole of Dauid: They shal be caryed vpon charettes, & ryde vpon horses, both they and their princes. Yee whole Juda and all the cytesyns of Jerusalem shall go beare thorow, and this cytie shal euer be the more and more inhabited. There shall come men also from the cyties of Juda from about Jerusalem, and from the land of Ben Jamin, from the playne feldes/ from the mountaynes & from ỹ wyldernes: which shal bringe burntofferinges, sacrifices/ oblacions/ and incense, and offer vp thanckesgeuyng in the house of the lord. But yf ye wil not be obedient vnto me, to halow ỹ Sabboth, so ỹ ye wyll beare your burthens thorow the gates of Jerusalem vpon ỹ Sabboth: Then shal I set fyre vpon ỹ gates of Jerusalem, and it shall burne vp the houses of Jerusalem/ & no man shal be able to quenche it.

b* Ye shal do no labour therin, but halow the Sabboth as I cōmaunded your fathers. &c. The foundacion of the fayth, is, to beleue Goddes promeses, & that he, made ỹ whole world, & doth also gouern it & further ỹ he knoweth and wil iudge all thinges. &c. These thinges did the lawe requyre in keping of ỹ Sabboth, to cōfesse both w word and sygne: and to geue diligent hede to ỹ herīng & interpreting of the lawe to thinck of ỹ glory of god, & to releue ỹ faithful soule with ỹ fodder of the word, to minister occasion also vnto the simple ỹ they likewise might attempt such thinges in their houses amongest their houshold folckes, to be pitiful ouer the werynes of such neighbours as labored soare al ỹ wekelōge, & release them to attend & geue hede to ỹ exercyses of the spirite & to ỹ consolacion & cōforting of their neighbours: not only to abstaine from outwarde worckes, and fulfyl their appetites and lustes, for ỹ dyd ỹ lord forbyd. The Sabboth thuld be applyed to the leaful exercising of God, not to synfulnes & wātones. It is cōmaunded to be sanctyfyed, not to be polluted and defil. d w naughtynes. To god alone must we also kepe it, and cal on his name: other goddes or goddes felowes ought we not to enquere of, ner fal downe vnto them. But when such occasiōs come as turne our rest into occupacīō and labour, thē ought we to remembre ỹ ỹ Sabboth was ordened for man, not man for ỹ Sabboth. Marc ii. d. so that in ỹ meane season/ the feare of god & ỹ charite toward our neighbour (which ar the cheefe pyncypal thinges in ỹ obseruacion of ỹ Sabboth) be not lyghtelye regarded.

¶ God sheweth, by ỹ example of a potter, that it is in his power to destroy the dispysers of his word, & to help thē agayne when they amend. The conspiracie of the Jewes against Jeremy. His prairer against his aduersaryes.

THis is another communicatiō, that God had with Jeremy, saynge: Arise, and go downe to the Potters house/ and there shal I tel the more of my minde. Now whē I cā to the Potters house/ I found him makyng his worke vpon a whele. The vessel that the Potter made of clay, broke among his handes: So he beganne a new, & made another vessell, according to his minde. Then said the Lord thus vnto me: Maye not I do with you, as this Potter doth, O ye house of Israel/ sayeth the Lord? Beholde, ye house of Israel: ye are in my hande/ euen as the clay is the Potters hande.

At whatsoeuer time I take in hande to rote oute & to destroye, or to waste awaye eny people or kingdom: if that people (against whom I haue thus deuysed) conuerte from their wickednes: I immediatlye/ I* repent of the plage, that I deuised to bringe vpon the. Agayne When I take in hande, to buylde, or to plante a people or a kingdome: yf ỹ same people do euell before me/ and heare not my voyce: ymmediatly, I repent of the good, that I deuise to do for them. Speake now therfore vnto whole Juda/ and to them that dwell at Jerusalem: Thus sayth the Lord: Behold, I am deuising a plage for you, and ā taking a thyng in hande against you.

Therfor let euery man turne from hys euel waye, take vpon you the thinge that is good, and do right. But they saye: No more of this, we wyll folowe our owne ymaginacions, and doe euery man according to ỹ wylfulnes of his owne mynde.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: Aske among the heathen, yf any man hath harde such horrible thinges, as the daughter of Sion hath done. Shal not the snowe (that melteth vpon the stonie rocks of Libanus) moyste the feldes? Or may the springes of of watersbe so grauen awaye, that they runne no more, geue moystnes/ nor make frutefull? But my people hath so forgotten me, that thei haue made sacrifice vnto vayne Goddes. And whyle they folowed their owne wayes, they are come oute of the hye strete/ & gone into a fote way not vsed to be troden. Wherthorow they haue brought theyr lande into an euerlastinge wildernes and scorne: So that whosoeuer trauayleth thereby, shalbe abaysshed, and wagge theyr heades, with an East wynde wyll I scatter them, before theyr ennemyes. And when their destruction cometh, I wyll turne my backe vpon them/ but not my face. Then sayd they: come, let vs ymagyne somethyng against this Jeremy. Ye thys dyd euen the prestes/ to whom the lawe was committed: the Senatores, that were the wyseste: & the prophetes, which wanted not the word of god. Come (sayde they) let vs cutt oute his tonge, and let vs not regarde hys wordes. Consyder me/ O Lord, and heare the voyce of myne enemyes. Do they not recompence euell for good, when they dig a pyt for my soule? Remembre, how that I stode before the, to speake for the, & to turn awai thi wrath frō thē

Therfore let their childrē dye of hūger, & let thē be oppressed w the swerd. Let their wiues be robbed of theyr children, & become widdowes: let theyr husbandes be slayne, let theyr yong mē be killed w the swearde in ỹ felde. Let ỹ noyse be herd out of theyr houses, whē the murtherer cōmeth sodenly vpō thē: For they haue dygged a pytte to take me, & laid snares for my fete. yet lorde, ỹ knowest all their coūcell, ỹ they haue deuised, to slaye me: & therfore forgeue thēnot their wickednes, & let not their synne be put out of thy syghte: but let them be iudged before the as the gylti. This shalt thou do vnto them in thee tyme of thy indygnation.

¶ He prophecieth the destruction of Jerusalem, for the contempt and despysynge of the worde of God.

¶ The. xix. Chapter

MOreouer, thus sayd ỹ Lord vnto Jeremy: go thy way, & bye the an erthen pytcher, and brige forth the Senatours, and cheefe prestes into the valleye of the childeren of Hennom, which lyeth before the porte that is made of brych/ and shewe them there the wordes, that I shall tell the/ & say thus vnto thē: Heare the worde of the Lorde, ye kynges of Juda/ & ye cytesyns of Jerusalem: Thus sayth ỹ Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: beholde/ I wyll bringe such a plage vpon thys place, that the eares of all ỹ heare it, shall glowe. And that because thei haue forsakēme, & vnhaloued this place, ād haue offred in it vnto straūge goddes: whome nether they, theyr fathers, ner the kynges of Juda haue known. They haue fylled thys place also with the bloude of innocents, for they haue set vp an alter vnto Baal/ to burne theyr childeren for a burnt offringe vnto Baal, which I nether commaunded, ner charged them/ nether thought once therupon.

Beholde therfore, the tyme commeth (sayth the Lorde) that thys place shall nomore be called a* Topheth, ner the valley of the childzen of Hennam but ỹ valley of slaghter. For in thys place wyll I slaye the Senatours of Juda and Jerusalem, & kyll them downe w the swerde in the syght of theyr ennemyes, and of them that seake theyre lyues: And theyr ded carcases wyll I geue to be meate for the foules of the ayre/ and beastes of the felde. And I wyll make thys citie so desolate, and despysed: that who so goeth therby, shall bee abaysshed ād feast vpon her, because of all her plages.

I wyl fede them also w the flesh of theyr sonnes & their daughters. Ye euery one shall eate vp another in the besegyng & straytnes/ wherw their enemyes (ỹ seke their liues) shal kepe thē

and

And the pytcher shalte thou breake in the sight of the men, that shalbe with the, and saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the lord of hostes: Euen so wyl I destroy this people and cyte: as a Potter breaketh a vessel, that cā not be made whole agayne.

In Topheth shal they be buryed, for they shal haue none other place. Thus wyl I do vnto this place also, saieth the Lord, and to them that dwel therin: ye I wyll do to this citi, as vnto Topheth (For the houses of Jerusalem and the houses of the kynges of Juda are defiled, lyke as Topheth) because of all the houses, in whose Watlers they did sacrifice vnto al the hoost of heauen, and poured out drincke offrynges vnto straunge goddes. And so Jeremye cam from Topheth, wher the lord had sent hym to prophecye, and stode in the courte of the house of the Lord, and spake to all the people: Thus saieth the Lord of hoostes the god of Israel: Behold, I wyl bringe vpon this cytie & vpon euery towne about it/al the plages that I haue deuised against them: for they haue ben obstinate, and wold not obeye my warninges.

¶ Jeremy is smitten and cast into prison, for preachyng of the word of god. He prophecyeth y captiuyte of Babylon. He complaineth that he is a mocking stock, for the word of god. He is compelled by the spyrite to preache the word, wyl he wyl he not.

¶ The. xx. Chapter

A Then a* Phachur the preest the sonne of Emer, chef in the house of the lord, herd Jeremi preache so stedfastly: he smote Jeremy, & put him in the stockes, that are by the hye gate of Ben Jamin, in the house of the Lord. The next daye folowing Phachur brought Jeremye out of the stockes agayne. Then sayde Jeremy vnto hi The Lord shal cal the no more Phachur (that is excellent and increasynge) but Magor (that is fearefull and afraped) euery where. For thus sayeth the Lord: behold, I wyl make the a fraped, the thy self/and al that fauour the which shall perishe with the swerde of their enemyes, euen before thy face.

And I wyl geue whole Juda vnder the power of the kyng of Babylon which shall carye some vnto Babylon prisoners, and slaye some with the swerd. Moreouer/all the substaunce of thys B lande, all theyr precious and gorgious workes, all costlynes/and all the treasure of the kynges of Juda: wyll I geue into the handes of theyr enemyes, whyche shal spoyle them, and cary them vnto Babylon. But as for the (O Phachur) thou shalt be caryed vnto Babilon with all thyne houshold, and to Babylon shalt thou come, where thou shalte dye, and be buryed: thou and all thy louers, to whome thou hast preached lyes. O Lord, thou makest me weake/ but thou refreshest me, and makest me stronge agayne. All the daye longe am I despysed, and lauged to scorne of euery man: because I haue now preached longe against malicious tyranny, and shewed the of destruction. For the which cause they cast the word of the Lord in my teeth, and take me euer to thewyll.

Wherfore/ I thought from hence C forth, not to speake of hym: nor to preach any more in his name. But the worde was a very burnyng fyre in my herte and in my bones, which when I wolde haue stoped/ I might not. For why, I herd so many derisions and blaspheymes, ye euen of myne owne companyons/and of such as were conuersaunte with me: which wente about/to make me afrayde, sayeng: Upon him, lett vs go vp pon hym, to feare hym & make hym hold his tong: that we may ouercome him, and be auenged of him

But the Lorde stoode by me, lyke a mighty gyaunte: therfore my persecuters fell/and coulde do nothynge. They shalbe sore confounded/for they haue done vnwyselp, they shall haue an euerlastyng shame. And nowe, O Lord of Hostes, thou rightuous sercher (which knowest the reynes and the verye hertes:) let me se them punished, for vnto the I commit my cause.

Synge vnto the Lorde/and prayse D hym, for he hathe deliuered the soule of the oppressed/from the hande of the violent. b * Curled be the daye/wherin I was borne: vnhappye be the day wher in my mother broght me forth. Curled be the man, that brought my father tydynges, to make hym glad, sayeng: thou haste gotten a sonne. Let it happē vnto that man, as to the cities whiche the Lorde turned vpsyde doowne (when he had heard longe the wicked rumoure of them) because he slewe me not, as sone as I came out of my mothers womb, and because my mother was not my graue her selfe, that the byrth myght not haue come oute/but remayned styll in her. Wherfore came I forth of my mothers wombe? To haue experience of labour and sorowe? and to leade my lyfe with shame?

The notes.

a * Phachur was the hye bysshop of the temple, the ringleader of false prophetes, the chefe hereticker, that is, the ouerbrower of true godlynes The dignitie of Priesthode, geuen vnto hym he abused. For he taught not and reproued by the woordes but feared the Godly with cruelte, he is not the greater man that stryketh/but he is the stronger that is stryken, he not onely stroke but also pyssoned hi that withstood him not, but patiently loked for the helpe of God. It is no newe thynge (ye may se) for Bysshoppes to persecute the prophetes of the Lorde, for theyr preaching of the truth & constancy.

b * What is signifyed by cursing of the day is shewed in Job. iii. a. Phys sentence and other lyke are not to be taken as examples of impatience in holy men, but as the confession of the frayltie of man cō playnyng thus vnto hym that only can helpe and cō forth them.

¶ The. xxi. Chapter.

A These are the woordes y the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy what time as kynge sedekiah sēt vnto him Pashur the sonne of Melchiah/ and Sophoniah the sonne of Maasiah preest sayinge: Aske councell at the Lord (we pray the) of oure behalfe/for Nabuchodonoser the kynge of Babylon besegeth vs, yf the Lorde (peraduenture) wil deale with vs, according to hys marueles power, and take hym from vs.

Then spake Jeremye. Geue sedekiah this answere. Thus sayth the Lord god of Israel: behold, I wyl turne backe the weapons that ye haue in your handes, wherwith ye fight against the kinge of Babylon, and the Caldees which besege you round about the wales, and I wyll bringe them together into the myddest of this cytie, and I my selfe B yll fyght agaynst you, with an outstretched hand, and with a mighty arme, in great displeasur and terrible wrath: & wyl smite them/that dwel in this cite: bee both men and catteil shall dye of y pestilence.

And after this (saith the Lorde) I shal delyuer sedekiah the king of Juda, C and his seruaunts, his people (and such as are escaped in the cytye, from y pestilence/swearde, and honger) into y power of nabuchodonosor king of Babylon: yee into the handes of their enemyes, in to the handes of those that folow vpon their liues, which shal smite them with the swerd: they shal not pitye them, they shal not spare them, they shal haue no mercy vpon them.

And vnto this people thou shalt saye: Thus saieth the Lord: * behold, I laye before you the waye of lyfe and deeth. Who so abydeth in this cytie/shall perysshe. ether with the swerd/ w honger, or with pestilence. But who so goethe out to holde on the Chaldes part, y besege it, he shal saue his life, and a* shal wynne his soule for a pray. For I haue set my face agaynst this cytie (sayeth y lorde) to plage it/and do it no good.

It muste be geuen in to the hande of the kyng of Babylon, and be brent w fyre.

And the house of the kynge of Ju- D da, saye thus: Heare the word of the lorde (O thou house of Dauid) for thus saith the lord: Minister righteousnes and that sone, delyuer the oppressed frō vyolent power: for euer my terryble wrathe breake oute lyke a fyre, and burne so, y no man maye quench it, because of the wickednes of your imaginacyōs Behold (saieth the lord) I wyl cōe vpo you, y dwel in y valleis, rocks and feldes, & saie: Tush, who wyl make vs afraped? or who wil come into our houses? For I wil vysit you (saith y lord) because of y wickednes of your inuēcōs, & wyl kindle such a fire i your wod, as shal consume al/y is about you.

The notes

a * Shall wynne his soule for a prayse, that is, shall escape daunger: It is alone with that which goeth before he shall take hys lyfe: hys soule that is, hys life, shalbe vnto hym as a pray: because he shulde verely haue loste it, if he had bydden in Jerusalem: and by flying vnto the Chaldees he shuld wynne it, euē as a man wynneth a pray in battell.

He

¶ He exhorteth the kynge of Juda to iudgement, & ryghtousnes. Why Jerusalem is brought into captiuitie. The death of Sellum the sunne of Josua, is prophecyed.

¶ The.xxii. Chapter.

THus sayde the Lorde also: Goo downe into the house of the king of Juda/and speake there these wordes, and saye: Heare the worde of ỹ Lorde, thou kyng of Juda that sytteste in the kyngly seate of Dauid: thou and thy seruauntes and thy people/that go in and out at this gate. Thus the LORDE commaundeth: kepe equitie and ryghtousnes/delyuer the oppressed from the power of the violente: do not greue nor oppresse the straūger, the fatherles nor the wyddowe/and shede no innocent bloude in this place.

And if ye kepe these thinges faythfully, then shall there come in at the dore of thys house kings, to syt vpon Dauids seat: they shalbe caried in Charets and ryde vpon horses, both they and theyr seruauntes/and theyr people. But if ye wyll not be obedient vnto these cōmaundementes, I sweare by myne owne self (sayth the Lord) thys house shal be waste. For thus hath the Lorde spoken vpon the kynges house of Juda: Thou art the head, as Galaad is in Lybanus: What wylt thou saye of it, yf I make the not so wast (and thy cities also) that no man shal dwel therin: I wil prepare a destroyer with hys weapons for the, to hewe downe thy speciall Cedre trees: and to caste them in the fyre.

And all the people that go by this citie shall speake one to an other: wherfore hath the Lord don thus vnto this noble cyty? Then shall yt be answered, because they haue broken the couenaunt of the Lorde theyr God, and haue worshipped and serued straunge Goddes. Mourne not ouer the dead, and be not wo for them, but be sory for hym that departethe awaye: for he commethe not agayne, and seeth his native countre nomore. For thus sayth the Lorde/as touchyng a Selum the sonne of Josyah kynge of Juda, which raygned after hys father/and is caried out of this place: He shal neuer com hither againe for he shall dye in the place, whervnto he is led captiue, and shal se this lande nomore. Wo worth him, that buyldeth hys house wyth vnryghtousnes, and his parlers with the good that he hath gotten by violence: which neuer recompenseth his neyghbours laboure, ner payeth him his hyre. He thynketh in him selfe: I wyl buylde me a wyde house, and gorgeous parlers: He causeth windowes to be hewen therin, and the sylynges and geastes maketh he of Cedre, and paynteth them with zenober. Thinckest thou to raigne, now that ỹ prouokest me to wrath wyth the Cedre trees?

Dyd not thy father eate and drincke and prospere well, as longe as he dealt with equite and ryghtousnesse? Yee when he helped the oppressed and poore to their ryght then prospered he well.

From whence came this, but onlt because he had me before his eyes, sayeth the Lord. Neuertheles, as for thine eyes and thyne hert/they loke vpon couetousnesse, to shede innocent bloude, to do wrongand violence. And therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde agaynst Jehoakym, the sonne of Josiah kyng of Juda: They shal not mourne for him (as they vse to do) alas brother, alas syster: nether shal they say vnto hi: Alas syr, alas for that noble prynce. But as an Asse shal he be buryed, corrupt and be caste without the gates of Jerusalem.

Clymme vp the hil of Libanus (O thou daughter Sion) lyfte vp thy voyce vpon Basan/crye from all partes: for al thy louers are destroyed. I gaue ỹ warnyng, whyle ỹ wast yet in prosperite. But thou saydest: I wyl not here. And this maner hast thou vsed frō thy youthe, that thou wouldest neuer heare my voyce. Al thy herdmen shalbe dryuen wyth the wynde, and thy derlinges shalbe caryed away in to captiue: Thē shalt thou be brought to shame and cōfusyon, because of all thy wyckednes: thou that dwellest vpon Libanus, & make thy nest in the Cedre trees.

Moreouer, I wyll sende the, and thy mother that beare the/ in to a straung land, wher ye were not borne, and there shal ye dye. But as for the land that ye wil desire to return vnto, ye shal neuer come at it agayne. Thys man Conanyah shalbe lyke an ymage robbed and torē in peces, whych pleaseth no man, for al his apparrel. Wherfore both he and his sede shalbe sent a waie, and cast out into a land, that they know not.

O thou earth, earth, earth: heare the word of the Lord: Write this man amonge the outlawes, for no prosperyte shal this man haue al his lyfe long. Nether shall eny of his sede be so happye, as to syt vpon the seate of Dauid, and to beare rule in Juda.

¶ The.xxiii. Chapter.

WO be vnto the shepardes, that destroy, and scattre my flocke, saieth the lorde.

Wherfore, this ỹ cōmaūdement of the Lorde God of Israell/vnto the shepherdes that fede my people: Ye scatre and thrust out my flocke, and loke not vpon them. Therfore now wyl I visit the wickednes of your ymaginacions, saieth the Lord: And wyl gather togeth er the* remnaunt of my flocke, from all landes that I had dryuen them vnto/and wyl bryng them agayne to their pastures, ỹ they maye grow and increase. I wil set shepardes also ouer them, which shall fede them. They shall nomore feare & dred, for there shal non of them be lost saieth the lord. Wholde the tyme commeth, saith the Lord, ỹ I wyl rayse vp the ryghteous braunch of Dauid, which shall rule/and discusse matters w wysdom/& shal set vp equyte and righteousnes againe in the earth.

In his tyme shall Juda be saued & Israel shal dwel with out feare. And this is the name that they shall cal hi: euen the lord our righteous maker. And therfore beholde, the tyme cōmeth saieth the lord/ỹ it shal no more be sayde: the Lord lyueth, which brought the chyldren of Israell out of the lande of Egipt: But the lorde lyueth, which brought forth, and led the sede of the house of Israel/out of ỹ North lande/and from al countreis where I had scattered them, and they shal dwell in their owne land agayne.

My herte breaketh in my body because of the false prophetes, al my bones shake: I am become lyke a dronken man (ỹ by the reason of wyne can take no rest) for very feare of the lorde, and of his holye wordes: because the lande is ful of aduouterers, where thorow it is destroyed and mourneth, and ỹ pleasaunt pastures of the deserte are dryed vp. Yee the waye that men take, is wycked, and their gouernaunce is nothynge lyke the'holy worde of the lord. For the prophetes and theyr preestes themselues are poluted ypocrites, and their wickednes haue I found in my house saieth the lorde. Wherfore/their waye shalbe slipery in the darcknes, wherin they maye stacker and fal. For I wyll bringe a plage vpon them, euen the yeares of their visytasyon, saith ỹ Lord. I haue seene folye amonge the prophetes of Samaria, that thei preached for Baal, and disceaued my people of Israel.

I haue sene also among the Prophetes of Jerusalem, foule aduoutry/ and presumptuous lyes. They take the most shamfull men by the hand, flatteryng them, so ỹ they cā not returne frō their wickednes: All these with their cytezyns are vnto me, as Sodom, and as the inhabitours of Gomorre.

Jerem. xxiii. b

Therefore thus saieth the lorde of Hostes concernyng the prophetes: Behold/ I wyl fede them with worm wod and make thē drynck the water of gal For from the prophetes of Jerusalē is the syckues of ypocrisy com in to al the land.

D Jerem. xxbiii xxviii. b

And therfore the lord of Hostes geueth you this warnyng: Heare not the wordes of the prophetes that preach vnto you/ & deceaue you: for thei speake ỹ meanyng of their owne hert, & not out of the mouth of the lorde. They saye vnto them, that despyce me: The lorde hath spoken it: Tush ye shal prosper right wel. And vnto al them/ ỹ walck after the lust of their owne hert, they saye: Tush there shal no misfortune happen you. For who hath sytten in ỹ counsel of the lord, that he hath herd & vnderstand, what he is about to do? Who hath marked his deuise & herde it? Behold the stormy wether of the Lord (that is, his indignacion) shal go forthand shal fal downe vpon the hed of the vngodly. And the wrath of the lord shall not turne agayne/ vntyll he performe and fulfyl the thought of his hart. And in the latter dayes ye shall know his meanyng.

Jerem. xxii. a Sophon. ii

I haue not sent these Prophets (saieth the Lorde) and yet they ranne. I haue not spoke to the, and yet they preched. But yf they had contynued in my counsel and herd my wordes: they had turned my people from their euell wayes and wycked imaginacions. Am I then God ỹ seethe but the thinge, which is nye at hande, and not that is far of, saieth the Lord. Maye eny man hyde hym selfe, that I shal not se hym? saieth the Lorde.

E Jere. xxiii. b

Do not I fulfyl heauen and earthe? saieth the Lord. I haue herd wel ynough/ what the prophetes saye, that preache lyes in my name, sayinge: I haue dreamed, I haue dreamed. How longe wyl this contynue in the prophetes hertes, to tel lyes, and to preache the craftye sutletye of their owne herte? Whose purpose is (with the dreames that euery one tel) to make my people forget my name, as their fore fathers dyd/ when Baal came vp. The prophet that hath a dreame, let him tel it: and he that vnderstandeth my word, let him shewe it faythfully.

For what hath chaffe and wheate to do to gether, saieth the Lorde? Is not my word lyke a fire, saieth the lord, and lyke an hammer, that breaketh ỹ hard stone? Therfore thus saieth the lorde: beholde/ I wil vpon the prophetes, b* ỹ steal my word priuely from euery mā. Behold, here am I, saithỹ lord) against the prophetes, that take vpon their tūges to speake: The lord hath sayde it. Behold, here am I (saieth the Lord) agaynst those prophetes, that darre prophesy lyes and discreue my people with their vanytes, and myracles, whom I neuer sent, nor cōmaunded them. Thei shal do this people grete harme saieth the lorde.

F

Yf this people, ether eni prophet or preest aske ỹ, and saie: what is the* burthen of the Lorde? Thou shalt saye vnto them: What burthen? Therfore wil I cast you fro me (saieth the lorde) because ye your selues are a burthen. And the prophet, preste or people that vseth thys terme (the burthenne of the Lord) him wyl I visit/ and his house also.

But thus shal ye saye, euerye one to another: What answeare hath the Lorde geuen? or what is the lordes commaundemente?

G

And as for the burthen of the Lorde/ ye shall speake nomore of yt: for euerye mans owne worde is his burthen, because yee haue altred the wordes of the lyuynge God the Lorde of Hostes our God.

Thus shal euery man saye to ỹ prophetes: what answere hath the Lord geuen thee? Or what, saieth the Lorde?

And not once to name the burthen of the Lord. Therfore thus saieth ỹ lord: For so much as ye haue vsed thys terme (the burthen of the Lord) where as I notwithstanding sent vnto you, and forbade you to speake of the Lordes burthen.

Beholde therfore, I wyl repute you as a burthen/ and wyl cast you out of my presence: yee and the cytte also, that I gaue you and your fathers: and wil bring you to an euerlastynge confusyō, and in to such a shame, as shal neuer be forgotten.

C The vysion of the. ii. pannyers of fygges The first vysion signifieth that part of the people shuld be brought agayne frō captiuite. The second, that Sedekiah and the rest of the people shulde be destroyed.

1 THe lord shewed me a vysyon: Behold, there stode two maundes of fygges before the Temple of the lord, after that Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilō had led away captiue Jechoneah ỹ sonne of Jehoaim kynge of Juda, the mightymen also of Juda & the worckmasters, and conning mē of Jerusalem, vnto Babilon. In the one maund were very good fyges, euen lyke as those that be first ripe. In the other maunde were very naughtye fyges, which might not be eaten, they were so euel. Then sayd the lord vnto me: what seyst thou Jeremy? I sayde: fyges, wherof some be very good, and some so euell, that noe man maye eate them.

2 Then came the word of the lorde vnto me, after this maner: Thus saith the lord the god of Israel; like as thou knowest ỹ good fyges, so shal I know the men led awaye, whom I haue sente out of this place in to the lande of the Caldees/ for their profyte: and wyll set many eyes vpō them for the best, for I wyl bring them agayne into his lande, I wyl buyld them vp and not breake them downe: I wyl plāt them/ and not rote them out. And I wyl geue the an hert to know, how that I am the lord. They shalbe my people, and I wyll be their God/ for they shall returne vnto me w̄ their whole hert.

And lyke as thou knowest the naughtye fyges, whych may not be eatē, they are so euel: Euen so wyl I sayeth the Lord (let Sedekiah the kyng of Juda/ (ye and al his princes, and the residue of Jerusalem that remayne ouer i this lande, and them also that dwel in Egypte) to be vsed and played in all kyngdomes and landes. And wyll make them to be a reprofe/ a comen by worde, a laughyng stocke and shame, in al the places, wher I shal scatre thē. I wyl send the sweard, hongre and pestilence among them, vntil I haue cleane consumed them out of the lande, ỹ I gaue vnto them and their fathers.

C Jeremy propheseyeth that they shalbe in captiuite lxx yeares, because they contempted & dyspysed ỹ word of God. He sheweth ỹ after lxx. yeares the Babylonyās shuld be destroyed. The destructiō of al nacions is propheseyed. He moueth the Prestes of ỹ nacions to wayling.

C The. xxv. Chapter.

1 A Sermon that was geuen vnto Jeremy, vpon all the people of Juda: In ỹ fourthe yeare of Joachim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, that was in the fyrste yeare of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilon. Which sermō, Jeremy the propht made vnto all the people of Juda/ and to al the inhabitours of Jerusalē, on this maner.

From the. xiii. yeare of Josiah the sonne of Amon kynge of Juda/ vnto this present daye (that is euē. xxiii. yeares (the word of the lorde hath bene cōmitted vnto me. And so haue I spoke to you, I haue risen vp earlye, I haue geuen you warnynge in season, but ye wold not heare me. Though the lorde hath sent his seruaunt, all the prophetes vnto you in season: Yet wold ye not obeye, ye wold not encline your eares to heare.

2 He sayde: turne agayne euery mā frō his euel waye, & frō your wicked ymaginacions, and so shall ye dwell forever in the lande/ that the Lorde promysed

you and youre forefathers: And go not after straunge goddes, serue them nott, worshipp them not, and anger me not with the worckes of youre handes: the wyll not I punisshe you. Neuertheles/ ye wolde not heare me (sayth the lorde) but haue defied me withe the worckes of youre handes, to your owne greate harme.

Wher fore thus sayth the Lorde of hooستes: because, ye haue not harkned vnto me woorde, lo I wyll sende oute, and call for all the people, that dwell in the northe, sayth the lorde, and wyll prepare Nabuchodonosor ꝑ king of Babilō my seruaunt/ and wyll bryng ꝑ vpon this lande, and vpon all that dwell therin, and vpon all the people that are aboute them/ and wyll vtterly rote ꝑ oute. I wyll make of them a wylderneſſe / a mockage, and a continuall deserte.

C Moreouer/ I wyll take from them the  voyce of gladneſſe and solace/ ꝑ voyce of the bridegrom and the bryde, the voyce of the annoynted, wythe the creatures: and thys whole lande shal become a wylderneſs and they shall serue the saide people, and the king of Babylon/ three score yeares and ten. Whē the .lxx. yeares are expyred, I wyll visite also the wyckednes of the kynge of Babylon & his people sayth the Lord: yee and the lande of the Caldees, & will make it a perpetuall wylderneſſe and wyll fulfyll all my woordes vpon that lāde, which I haue deuised agaynste it: ye all that is written in thys boke, whiche Jeremy hath prophecyed of al all people/ so that they also shalbe subdued vnto dyuers nacions and greate kynges, for I wyll recompence them a Iob. xxxiiii.b cording to theyr dedes and worckes of theyr owne handes.

D For thus hath the lorde God of Israell spoken vnto me: Take thys wyne Esay. li. and Psal. lxxv. b cuppe of indignation fro my hande, ꝑ thou mayst cause al the people, to whō I send the, for to drynck of it / that whē they haue dronken therof, they maye be mad and out of theyr wyttes, when the swerde commeth, that I wyll sende amonge them. Then toke I the cuppe from the lordes hāde, and made al the people drynke therof, vnto whom the lord had sent me.

But fyrst the citie of Jerusalem, & al the Cities of Juda/ theyr kynges & C princes: to make them desolate, waste, despised and cursed accordingas it is come to passe thys day: ye and pharao the kynge of Egypte/ his seruauntes hys princes and his people altogether one with another and all kinges of the lāde of Hus, all kinges of the philistines land, Ascalon, Azah, Accaron, and the remnaūt of Asdod / the Edomites, the Moabites and the ammonites: All the kyngs of Tyrus and Sydon: the kinges of the Illes, that are beyond the se Dedan, Thema, Buz and the chauen Ismaelytes: all the kinges of Arabye, (& generally) al the kynges that dwell in the deserte: al the kynges of Zamry, all the kynges of Elam, all the kinges of the Medes, al kynges towarde the North, whether they be farre or ny/ euery one with his neyghbours: Yea and all the kingdoms that are vpon the whole earth the kinge of Sezach/ sayde he, shall drynck with them also.

And saye thou vnto them: Thys is I the commaundemente of the Lorde of hooستes the God of Israell: Drynke & be dronken/ spewe and fall, that ye neuer ryse: and that thorow the sword, which I wyll send among you. But yf thei wyll not receaue the cuppe of thyhand, Jeremie Ezechiel. Amos. and drynck it, then tell them: Thus doth the Lorde of hostes threaten you: drincke it ye shal and that shortly. For lo, I beginne to plage the citt, that my name is geuen vnto: Thynke ye then, that I wyll leaue you vnpunished: ye shall not go quite. For why, I call for a swearde vpō all the inhabytours of the earth, sayth the lorde of hooستes.

Therfore tell them all these woordes, Jeremie Amos. and saye vnto them: The lord shal cry from aboue, and let hys voyce be herde from hys holy habitacion, with a greate noyse shall he crye from hys courte gall. He shall geue a great voyce (lyke the grape gatherers) and the sound therof shalbe heard vnto the endes of the worlde. For the lorde hath a iugemente to geue vpon al people, and wyll hold his courte of iustice wyth all fleshe and punish the vngodlye, sayth the lorde.

For thus sayeth the lord of hooستes. Beholde, a myserable plage shall goo G from one people to another, and agret stormy water shal aryse from al the ende of the earth. And the same daye shal the lorde hi selfe slay thē, from one ende of the earth to another. There shal no mone be made for eny of thēm ne gathered vp/ none buried: but shall lye as dung vpon the ground. Jerem. xxv. b

The shepardes shal haue no waie to fle, and the rammes of the flock shal not escape. Then shal the shepardes crye horribly, and the rammes of the flock shal mourne: for the Lord shal cōsume their pasture / and their beste feldes shal lye deed because of the horrible wrath of the Lord. They shal forsake their foldes lyke as a lyō: For their landes shalbe wast because of ꝑ wrath of the destroyer, and because of his fearefull indignacion.

The.xxvi. Chapter.

A IN the begynning of ꝑ reygne of Jehoakim ꝑ sonne of Josiah kyng of Juda, came this woorde from the Lorde, saying; Thus sayeth the Lord: Stande in the courte of ꝑ lordes house, & speke vnto al thē which (out of ꝑ cites of Juda) cō to do worship i ꝑ lordes house/ all ꝑ woordes ꝑ I cōmaūd ꝑ to say. Loke ꝑ ꝑ kepe not one word back, if (peraduētur) they wil harke, & turne euery mā from his wycked waie ꝑ I maye also *repent of ꝑ plage which I haue determed to bring vpon thē because of their wycked inuēcions.

And after thys maner shalt thou spea B ke vnto thē; Thus sayethe the Lorde: yf ye wyll not obey me, to walke in my Lawes, which I haue geuen you, and to heare the woordes of my seruauntes/ the Prophetes, whom I sent vnto you rysing vp timely and styll sending: Yet ye wyll not followe them (I saye) then wyll I doo to thys House, as I didde vnto Siloh/ and wyll make thys City to be abhorred of all the People of the earth. And the preests, the prophetes and all the people heard Jeremye preache these woordes in the house of ꝑ Lorde.

Now, when he had spoken out all ꝑ woordes, that the Lorde commaunded hi to preache vnto all the people, then the preestes/ the prophetes and all the people toke holde vpon him, ād sayde: thou shalt dye. How darrest thou be so bold, as to saye in the name of the lorde. It shal happen to thys house as it dyd vn- C to Siloh: and thys cytie shalbe so waste, that no man shall dwell therin.

And when al the people were gathered aboute Jeremye in the house of the lord, the Princes of Juda herd of this rumoure, and they came sone out of the kynges palace into the house of the lorde, and sate them down before the new iiii. Thē spake the preestes Jere. xxxvi. b and the prophetes vnto the rulers/ ād to all the peple, these woordes: This mā D is worthy to dye, for he hath preached Iohn. xiv. a agaynst this citie, as ye your selues haue herde wyth youre eares.

Thē sayd Jeremy vnto the rulers and to all the people: The Lord hathe sent me to preach agaynst thys house & agaynst thys citie, al the woordes that ye haue haue herde. Therfore amende youre wayes and youre aduisementes and be obedient vnto the voyce of the Lorde youre God: so shall the Lorde repent of the plage, that he had deupled against you. Nowe as for me: I am in youre handes, do with me as ye thynke expedient and good. But thys shal ye knowe: yf ye put me to death, ye shal make your selues/ thys citie and all the inhabitours therof, giltye of innocent bloude. For thys is of a truth: that the Lord hath sent me vnto you, to speke Matth. xxiii. c all these woordes in your eares.

Stitt Then

Then sayde the rulers and ỹ people vnto the prestes and prophetes: This man maye not be condemned to death for he hath preached vnto vs in ỹ name of the Lord our god. The Elders also of the land stode vp/and sayd thus vnto al the people: Micheah the Morasthite/which was a prophet vnder Ezekiah kyng of Juda spake to al ỹ people of Juda: Thus saieth the Lord of hostes: Sion shalbe plowed like a feld Jerusalem shalbe an heape of stones and the hil of the Lordes house shalbe turned to an hye wod. Did Ezekiah the king of Juda and the people of Juda put him to death for this? No verely, but rather feared the Lorde, & made their prayer vnto him. For the which cause also the lord repented of ỹ plage that he had deuised agaynst them. Micheh.i.a F Micheh.iii.c Should we thē do such a chemeful dede agaynst our soules? There was a prophet also, that preached sykly in ỹ name of the lorde, called Uzrah the sonne of Semeiah of Cariathiarim: this mā preached also agaynst this cytye and agaynst this lande, accordinge to al as Jeremy saieth. Now when Jehoakim the king wyth al the estates and prynces had herd his wordes, the king wēt about to slay him: When Uriah perceiued ỹ, he was afraid, and fled, & departed in to egipt. Then Jehoakim the king sent seruauntes into the lande of Egipt Namely: Elnathan the sonne of Achabor and certeyne men with him into Egipt which fetched Uzrah out of egipt, and brought hym vnto kinge Jehoakim that slew him wt the sword, and caste hys deed body into the comen peoples graue But Ahikam the son of Saphā helped Jeremy, that he came not into ỹ handes of the people to be slayne. ii.Reg.xxv.a Math.i.c

¶ The.xxviii.Chapter

IN the begynning of ỹ reygne of Jehoakym the sunne of Josiah kyng of Juda came this woorde vnto Jeremy from the Lord wh ich spake thus vnto me: Make the bondes and chaynes, and put them about thy necke, and sende them to the kynge of Edom, the king of Moab, the kinge of Ammon, the kynge of Tyrus, and to the kinge of Sydon: and that by the messengers which shal come to Jerusalem vnto zedekiah the kinge of Juda and byd them saye vnto theyr masters, Thus saith the Lord of hostes: the god of Israel speake thus vnto your masters: I am he that made the earthe the men, and the catell that are vppon the ground, with my great power and outstretched arme and haue geuē it vn to whome it pleaseth me. And therfore folowe not youre prophetes/sothesayers/expounders of dreames, charmers & wytches/which say vnto you, ye shal not serue the kyng of Babylon. For they preach you lyes/to bring you farre from your lande, and that I myght cast you out and destroy you. But the people that put theyr neckes vnder the yocke of the kinge of Babylon, and serue the kynge of Babylon, and serue hi those wyll I let remayne styll in theyr owne lande (sayeth the Lorde) and they shall occuppe it, and dwell therin. Therfore geue no eare vnto those Prophetes (ỹ tell you: Ye shal not serue the kyng of Babylon) for they preache you lyes. neither haue I sent them, saieth the Lord how be it they are bolde/falsely to prophecy in my name: that I myght therner dryue you out/ and that ye myght perish wyth your preachers. Wherfore wyl ye make thys cityе to be destroyed? b* But yf they be true Prophetes in very dede, and yf the word of the Lord be commytted vnto them, thē let thē praye the lorde of hostes that the reuaunt of the ornamentes (which are in the house of the lord, and remayne yet i the house of the kyng of Juda and at Jerusalem) be not caryed to Babylon also. For thus hath the Lord of hostes spoken concernyng the pyllers, ỹ lauer the leate and the residue of the ornamētes that yet remayne in this cityе/which Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon toke not when he caried awaye Jechontah the sonne of Jehoakim kyng of Juda/with all the power of Juda & Jerusalem, from Jerusalem vnto Babylon, captyue. Jeremias xxvii.b

Yea thus hath the Lord of hostes the god of Israel spoken, as touching the residue of the ornamentes of the Lordes house/of the kyng of Judaes house/and of Jerusalem: They shalbe caryed vnto Babylon / and there they shal remayne: vntyl I vysyt them sayeth the Lorde. Then will I bring them hyther agayne. And this was done in the same yeare: euen in the beginning of ỹ reigne of zedekiah kyng of Juda:

¶ The false prophecy of Hananiah the Prophet. Jeremye sheweth that the prophecye of hananiah is false, by the exāple of the other Prophetes he beig inspired the lord repyoueth hananiah, prophecying his deth.

¶ The.xxviii.Chapter

BUt in the fourth yeare of ỹ raygne of zedekiah kynge of Juda, in the fyft month it happened/that Hananiah the Sonne of Assur, the prophet of Gabaon, spake to me in the house of the Lord, in the presence of the prestes and all the people, and sayde. Thus saieth the lorde of hostes ỹ god of Israel: I haue broken the yock of ỹ king of Babylon, and after two yeare wil I bring agayne into this place, al the ornamentes of the Lordes house/ that Nabuchodonosor king of Babilō caryed awaye from this place vnto Babylon. Yea I wil bring agayne Jechoniah the sonne of Jehoakim the kyng of Juda hym selfe, wt all the preseners of Juda (ỹ are caried vnto Babylon/ euen into the place, saieth the lord, for I wil breake the yock of the kynge of Babylon.

Thus the prophet Jeremy gaue an answere vnto the prophet Hananiah/before the prestes, and before al ỹ people that were present in the house of ỹ lord And the prophet Jeremie saide: Amen the lord do ỹ, and graunte the thynge, which thou haste prophecyed: that he maye bringe agayne all the ornamentes of the Lordes house, and restore all the preseners from Babilon tu to the place. Neuertheles, herken thou also what I wil saye, that thou and all the people maye hear: The prophetes ỹ were before vs i tymes past, which prophecyed of warre, or trouble, or pestilēce ether of peace, vpon manye nacyons & grete kigdomes/wered proued by this (yf god had send thē in very dede) whē the thing come to passe, which that prophet tolde before. chayne from the Prophete Jeremyes neck, and brake it and with that sayde Hananiah, that al the peple migh here: Thus hath the lord spoken, euē so wyll I breake the yocke of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon/ frō ỹ neck of al nacions, yea and that within this two yeres. And so the prophet Jeremy went his waye. Now after that that Hananiah the prophete had taken the chayne frō the prophet Jeremyes neck and broken it: The word of the Lorde came vnto the prophet Jeremo sayēg: Go/ and tell Hananiah these wordes: D Thus sayeth the Lord: Thou hast broken the chayne of wod, but in stead of wod thou shalt make chaynes of yron. For thus sayeth the lorde of hoostes ỹ god of Israel: I wyl put a yocke of yrō vpō the neck of al this people that thei maye serue Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon, yea and so shal they do. And I wyl geue him the beastes in the Jerem. xix. c felde. Then sayde the prophet Jeremy vnto the prophet Hananiah: Heare me (I pray thee) Hananiah: The Lorde hath not sēt thee/ but thou brigest this people into a false belefe. And therfore thus sayeth the Lord: behold I wil sēd out of the land, and within a yere thou shalt dye because thou hast falsly spoken agaynste the lorde. So Hananiah the prophet dyed the same yeare in the seuenth Moneth.

¶ The pystle of Jeremy, sent vnto them that were in captyuite in Babylon. He prophecieth their returne from captiuite after .lxx. yeares. He prophecyeth the destruction of the kynge and of the people that remayned in Jerusalem. He threateneth ii Prophetes that seduced the people. The death of Semeias ỹ Nehelamyte is prophecied.

¶ The .xxix. Chapter.

A Thys is the Copi of ỹ letter that Jeremy the prophete sent from Jerusalem vnto the presoners: the Senatours, prestes, prophetes, and all the people, whome Nabuchodonosor had led vnto Babylon, after that tyme that kynge Jechonias, and his Quene/ his chamberlaynes the princes of Juda and Jerusalem the workemasters of Jerusalem were departed thyther.

Which letter Elasah the sonne of Saphan and Gamarias the sonne of Helkias dyd beare, whom zedekiah ỹ kyng of Juda sent vnto Babylon to Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon: these were the wordes of Jeremyes letter.

Thus hath the Lorde of hoostes ỹ god of Israel spoken vnto al the presoners, that were led from Jerusalem vnto Babylon: buylde you houses to dwel therin: plant you gardēs, that ye maye eniope the frutes therof, take you wyues to beare you sonnes and daughters; prouyde wyues for your sonnes, and husbandes for your daughters, that they get sonnes and daughters & that ye maye multyply their. Laboure not to be fewe, but seke after peace and prosperite of the citye wherin ye be presoners, and praye vnto god for it. For in the place therof, shal your place be. For thus sayeth the lorde of hoostes the god of Israel: Let not those prophetes and sothsayers that be among you disceaue you: and beleue not your owne dreames. For why, they preache you lyes in my name/ & I haue not sēt them sayeth the lorde.

But thus sayeth the lorde. When ye haue fulfilled, lxx yeares at Babilō I wyl bring you home/ and of myne owne goodnes I wyl cary you hither agayne vnto this place. For I knowe what I haue deuysed for you sayeth the lorde. My thoughtes are to geue you peace, & not trouble (which I geue you all tedi) and ỹ ye might haue hope agayne. Ye shal crye vnto me, ye shal go and call vpon me, and I shall heare you.

Ye shall seke me and fynde me/ Yea, yf so be ỹ ye seke me with your whole harte, I wyll be founde of you (sayeth the Lord, and wyll deliuer you out of pyrson/ and gather you together agayne out of al places wherin I haue scatred you/ saith ỹ lord & wyll bring you agayn to the same place, frō whence I caused you to be caryed away captyue.

But where as ye saye, that a* God hath raysed you vp prophets at Babilon: Thus hath the lorde spoken (concernynge the kynge that sytteth in the stoole of Dauid, and al the peple that dwel in thys citye, your brethren that are not gone with you in to captiuyte) Thus

Thus (I saye) speaketh the Lorde of hoostes: Behold, I wil send a sweard honger and pestilence vpon them, and wyll make them lyke vnsymely fyges/ that maye not be eaten for bitternes. And I wyl persecut them with ỹ sweard, with honger and death.

I wyl delyuer them vp to be vexed of al kingdomes, to be cursed/ abhorred, laughed to scorne, and put to confusion of al the people, amonge whome I haue scatred them: & that because they haue not bene obedient vnto my commaundementes (sayth the Lord) which I sent vnto them by my seruauntes ỹ prophetes. I rose vp early, and sente vnto them/ but they wolde not heare/ E sayeth the Lorde. Heare therfore the word of the Lord, all ye presoners, whō I sent from Jerusalem vnto Babylon, Thus hathe the lorde of hoostes ỹ god of Israel spoken of Ahab the son of Colatah, and of zedekiah/ ỹ sonne of Maasiah, which prophecieth lyes vnto you in my name: Behold, I wyl delyuer thē in to the hand of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon, that he maie slay thē before your eyes. And al the prisoners of Juda that are in Babylon, shal take vpon them this terme of cursing/ and saye: Now God do vnto the/ as he did vnto zedekiah & Ahab, whom ỹ kinge of Babylon rosted in the fyre, because they sinned shamefully in Israel.

For they haue not only defiled their neighbours wyues, but also preached lieng wordes in my name, which I haue not commaunded them. This I testify, and assure, sayeth the Lord. But as for Semeiah ỹ Nehelamite thou shalt speake vnto him: Thus sayeth ỹ lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: Because F thou hast seled letters vnder thy name, vnto all the people that is at Jerusalem, & to Sophonias the sonne of Maasiah ỹ preest, yee and sent them to all ỹ prestes: wherin thou wryteste thus vnto him: The Lord hath ordened the to be Ecc. xi. a xii. xviii. a preest in steade of Jehoiada the preest, ỹ thou shuldest be the chefe in the house of the lord aboue al prophets, and preachers, and that thou mightest put thē in prison, or in the stockes. How happeneth it then, that thou haste not reproued Jeremy of Anathoth, which neuer leaueth of his prophecyeng. And beside al this/ he hath sent vs word vnto Babylon, and tolde vs playnely, that our captiuite shal long endure; ỹ we shuld buyld vs houses to dwel therin, and to Plante vs Gardens that we mighte enioye the frutes therof. Which letter Sophonias ỹ preest dyd reade, and let Jeremy the prophet heare it.

Then came the word of the lord vn- G to Jeremy, sayeng: Sende worde to all Jere. xxviii. e them that be i captiuite, on this maner Thus hath the lord spoken concernige Semeiah the Nehelamite: Because ỹ Semeiah hath prophecyed vnto you without my commyssiō/ and brought you into a false hope, therfore thus the lord doth certyfye you: Behold, I wyl visit Semiah the Nehelamite, & his sede: so that none of his shall remayne amonge this people, and none of them shal se the good, that I wyl do for thys people sayeth the Lorde. For he hathe preached falsely of the lord.

The notes

a* Such prophetes as preached vnto them ỹ thynges which they were desirous of, dyd they gretly allowe: yee euen after they came to Babylon. In the whych they reioyced, as thoughe they had bene sent of the Lord, & yet were they indeade false Prophetes. But Ezechiel the true prophet of the lord, which preached the contrary did they persecute. By the false prophetes they said: God hath sent vs Prophetes, & their doctrine dyd they heare and folow. But the true Prophet dyd they mocke & laugh to scorne: wolde ther beleue his doctryne, ner gyue eare vnto it.

¶ The returne of the people from Babilō. God by his chastenyng sheweth that they people is sinful To destruction of the enemies of Israel.

¶ The .xxx. Chapter

THese are the wordes/ that the Lorde shewed vnto Jerempe/ sayinge: Thus sai- A eth the Lorde God of Israell: Wryte vp dylygentlye al the wordes/ that I haue spoken vnto the, in a boke.

For lo/ the tyme commeth (sayeth the Lorde) that I wyl bryngе agayne the presoners of my people of Israell and Juda/ sayethe the Lorde: For I wyl restore them vnto ỹ land/ that I gaue to their fathers, and they shal haue yt in possession.

Agayne/ these wordes spake the lord

Lorde, concerning Israell and Iuda: Thus layth the Lorde: We heare a terrible cry, fere adisquietnes. For what els doth this sygnify, that I se? Namely, that all strong men smyte, euery mā his hand vpon hys loynes/as a womā in the payne of her trauaile. Who euer saw a mā trauell wyth chyld? Enquere thereafter, & see. Yee all they? faces are maruelous pale.

Alas for thys daye, which is so dreadefull/that none may be lyke vnto it: & alas for the tyme of Iacobs trouble, from the whych he shall yet be deliuered. For in that daye: sayth the lord, I wyl take his yocke from of thy neck, and breake thy bondes. They shall no more serue straunge Gods vnder him/ but they shall do seruice vnto GOD they? Lord/and to Dauid they? king, whom I wyll rayse vp vnto thē. *And as for thy O my seruaunt Iacob feare not (sayth the Lord) and be not afrayd, O Israell. For, lo, I wyll helpe the also from farre, and thy sede from the lāde of they? captiuitie.

And Iacob shall turne agayne/ he shalbe in rest and haue a prosperous life/and no man shall make him afrayd For I am with the, to helpe the/ sayth the Lorde. And though I shall destroy all the people, amonge whome I haue scatered the/yet wyl I not destroy the/ but correcte the, and that with discretion. For I knowe that thou arte in no wyse without faute. Therfor thus say the lorde: I am sory for thy hurte and woundes. There is no man to meddle with thy cause: or to bynde vp thy wōndes: there maye no man helpe the.

All thy louers haue forgotten the/ ād care nothing for the. For I haue geuen the a cruell stroke, and chastened the roughly: and that for the multitude of thy mysdedes, and synnes I haue had the ouerhande. Why makest thou moone for my harme? my selfe haue pytye of thy sorowe, but for the multitude of thy mysdedes and synnes, I haue done thys vnto the.

And therfore all they that deuoure the, shalbe deuoured, and all thyne enemyes shalbe led into captiuitie. All they that make the waste, shalbe wasted thē selues: ād all they that robbe the, wyll I make also to be robbed. For I wyll geue the thy helth again and make thy woundes whole/ sayth the Lord: because they reuyled the / as one cast awaye and dispised, O Sion.

For thus sayth the Lorde: Behold, I wyll sette vp Iacobs tentes again/ and defende his dwelling place. The citie shalbe buylded in her olde estate, & the house shall haue they? ryght foundacion. And out of them shall go thanckesgeuing, and the voyce of ioye.

I wyll multiplye thē, and they shal not mynyshe. I shall endue them wyth honour, and no man shall subdu them, They? Childeren shalbe as afore tyme, and they? congregation shall continue in my syght. And all those that vexe them, wyll I vysite.

A captayne also shall come of them, and a prynce shal spryng out from the myddest of them: hym wyll I chaleng to my selfe, and he shall come vnto me For what is he, that geuethe ouer hys hert to come vnto me? sayth the Lorde: Ye shalbe my people also, and I wilbe youre God. Beholde, on the other syde shal the wrathe of the Lord breake out as a stormy water/as a myghtie whirlewynde: and shall fall vppon the heades of the vngodly.

The terrible displeasure of the lorde shall not leaue of, vntyl he haue done, & perfourmed the intent of hys herte, which in the  latter dayes ye shall vnderstande. At the same tyme (sayth the lorde) shall I be the god of all thee generacions of Israell, and they shall be my people.

The notes.

 Of the latter dayes and what they signify reade in Esa. ii. a.

The prophecieth that the people of Israell shalbe restored againe vnto they? prosperiti. To be turned from synne is the gyfte of God. The byrth of Christ is prophecied. All the wicked shall dye in they? wickednes. The newe testament and couenaunt is prophecied. The Christen are taught and instructe of the Lorde. Oure Synnes shall so be remitted, that they shal not ones be thought on. God promyseth that he wyll cast of the Iewes. The buylding agayne of Ierusalem.

The. xxxi. Chapter.

THus sayth the lord: The people of Israell whiche escaped in the wylderne sfrom the sword, found grace to come into they? reste. Euen so shall the Lorde now also appeare vnto me from farre/and say I loue thee wyth an euerlastyng loue, therfore do I spreade my mercye before thee. I wyl repayre thee agayn (O thou doughter of Israell) that thou maest be fayr and sure. Thou shalt take thy tabrettes agayne/and go forth with them, that leade the daunce.

Thou shalte plante vynes agayne vpon the Hylles of Samaria: and the grape gatherers shall plante and spyng

And when it is time, the watchmē vpon the mount of Ephraim shal cry, Aryse, let vs go vnto Sion to our lord God: for thus sayth the lorde: Reioyse with gladnes, because of Iacob cry vnto vs the head of the gentyles: speake out, synge, and saye. The lorde shall delyuer hys people/the remnant of Israel and make them whole. Beholde I wil bringe them agayne from oute of the north lande and gather them from the endes of the worlde with the blynd, ād lame that art amonge them/wythe the women that be great wyth chylde, and suche as be also delyuered: and the company of them that come agayne, shalbe greate.

They departed from hence in heuynes, but wyth ioye wyl I bringe them hyther agayne. I wil leade them by the ryuers of water in a streyght way, where they shal not stomble: For I wylbee Israels father, and Ephraim shall be my fyrst borne.

Heare ye word of the lord, O ye gentyles: preache in the Iles that lye far of and saye he that hath scatered Israell, shal gather hym together agayn, ād shal kepe him as a shepherde doth hys flocke: for the Lorde shal redeame Iacob/and rid him from the hand of the violente. And they shal come, and retorne vpon the hyll of Sion, and shall haue plenteousnes of goodes, whyche the lord shall geue them: Namely, wheate, wyne, oyle, younge shepe and calues. And they? conscyence shalbe as a well watered garden, for they shall nomore be hungrye.

Then shall the mayde reioyce in ye daunce, ye both ponge and old folkes. For I wyl turne their sorow into gladnesse, and wil comfort them & make them ioyful, euen from their hartes. I wyll poure plentuousnes vpon the hartes of the prestes, and my people shall be satisfyed wyth good thynges, saye th the lord.

Thus sayeth the lord: *The voice of heuynes, weping and lamentacion came vp into heauen: euen of Rachell mourninge for her childzen, and wold not be comforted because they were awaye.

But now saieth the lorde: leaue of from weping and crying, withold thine eyes from teares, for thy labour shall be rewarded, saith the lorde. And they shall come agayne oute of the lande of their enemyes: Yea euen thy posteritee shall haue consolacyon in thys (sayeth the Lord) that thy childzen shal com agayne into their owne lande.

Moreouer I herde Ephrayme, that was led away captyue/ complayne on this maner: O Lord/thou hast correct me/and thy chastenynge haue I receaued, as an vntamed calfe. Conuert ye me, and I shall be conuerted, for thou art my lord god: Yee as soone as thou turnest me, I shal repourme my self: & when I vnderstande, I shall smyte vpon my thygh. For verely I haue cōmytted shameful thynges. O let my youth beare this reproche and confusiō

Upō this complaint, I thought this by my selfe: is not Ephraime my deare sonne? Is he not the child, with whom I haue had al myrth and pastime? For sence the tyme that I first commened with him, I haue hym euer in remembraunce: therefore my herte driueth me vnto him, gladly and louyngly wyl I haue mercy vpon him, sayth the lorde. Set the watchmē, prouyde teachers for the, set thine hert vpon the right waye that thou shuldest walcke, and turne again, O thou daughter of Israel, turn again to these cityes of thine, Howe long wylt thou go astraye/ O ye chyrnkingedaughter? For the lorde wyl worke a newe thynge vpon earth,  A woman shall cōpasse a man.

For thus sayeth the lord of hoostes the God of Israel: It wyl come thereto that that when I haue brought Juda out of captiuitie/these woordes shalbe hearde in the lande and in hys cities: Thee Lorde/which is the faire brydegrome of ryghtuousnes, make the trutefull/ O thou holy hyll: And there shal dwel Juda/and all her cyties, the shepherdes and husbandmen: For I shall feade the hungrye soule, and refresh al faint hertes. When I herde thys I came a gaine to my self, and mused, lyke as I had bene waked out of a swete slepe.

Behold, (sayth the Lorde) the dayes come, that I wyl sowe the house of Israel & the house of Juda/w̄ mē & w̄ cattell. Ye it shall come therto, that lyke as I haue gone about in tymes past to rote them out, to scater them, to breake them downe, to destroy them and chasten them: Euen so wyll I also go diligētly about, to build them vp agayn and to plante them, sayth the Lorde.

Then shall it no more be sayde: the fathers haue eaten a sower grape, ād ỹ childerens teeth are set on edge: for euery one shall dye for hys owne myssedede, so that who so eateth a sowr grape, hys teeth shalbe set on edge.

Behold, the dayes come (sayth the Lorde) that I wyll make a newe couenaunte with the house of Israell and withe the house of Juda: not after thee couenaunt that I made with theyr fathers, when I toke them by the hande, and led them oute of the land of Egypte: which couenaunt they brake, wherfore I punished them sore, sayth the lorde. But this shalbe the couenaunt that I wyll make with the house of Israel after those dayes, sayth the Lorde: I wyl plante my lawe in the inwarde partes of them, and write it in theyr hertes, ād wyll be theyr God, and they shalbe my people.

And from thence forthe shall no mā teache his neighbour or his brother ād say: knowe the lorde: But they shall al knowe mee, from the lowest vnto thee hyest, sayth the Lorde. For I wyll forgeue theyr misdedes, and wyl neuer remembre theyr synnes any more. Thus sayth the Lorde which gaue the sunne to be a lyght for the daye, and the moone and starres to shyne in the nyghte: which moueth the see, so that the floudes therof wax fearce: his name is the Lord of hostes. Lyke as this ordinaūce shal neuer be taken out of my sighte, sayth the Lorde: So shall the sede of Israell neuer ceesse/but alwaye be a people before me:

Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde; lyke as the heauen aboue cannot be measured, and as the foundacions of the earth beneth maye not be sought out: So shall I also not cast out the whole sede of Israell, for that they haue committed, sayth the lorde. Behold the dayes come sayth the lorde, that the citie of the lord shalbe enlarged from the toure of Hananeell, vnto the gate of thee corner wall. From thence shal the ryght measure be taken before her vnto ỹ hyll toppe of Gazeb, and shall come about Gaath/and the whole valley of ỹ dead carcases, and of the ashes/and al Ceremoth vnto the broke of Cedron: & from thence vnto the corner of the horse gate toward the east, where as the sanctuary of the lorde also shalbe set. And when it is nowe builded, and set vp of this fashyon, it shall neuer be broken, nor cast downe any more.

The notes.

a ✱ To smyte vpon the thygh is token of greefe. He meaneth that when the Lord greeueth hym vnderstandinge, he shall come to repentaunce, and forthynke hys euell conuersacion b ✱ This do they comonly expound of the redemption of Israell, by the simplytude of a woman seaching her husbande. As though the Prophet had sayde: The people of Israell, after they haue of longe tyme forsaken theyr spouse God, shal yet at the last returne and embrace hym with the armes of faithe, charitie, and obedience. &c. Some expounde it of ỹ virgyn Mary: And some of the church the spouse of Christ.

C Jeremye is cast into prison, because he prophesyeth that the cytye should be taken of the kyng of Babylon, by the felde that Jeremy bought at the cōmaūdement of the Lorde, is sygnyfyed, that the People shulde come agayne to theyr owne possession. The people of God are his seruaūts, & he is their Lord. To feare Godis goddes spyte, to thintent that sinnes maye be eschued.

C The.xxxii. Chapter.

THese woordes spake the lord vnto Jeremy, in the tenthe yeare of zedekiah kyng of Juda, which was the.xviii yeare of Nabuchodonosor, what time as the Kinge of Babylons hooste layed sege at Jerusalem. But Jeremye the Prophete laye bounde in the courte in the prison, which was in the kyng of Judaes house: wher zedekiah the kyng of Juda cauſed him to be layed, because he had preched of this maner: Thus saith the lorde: Behold, I wyl delyuer thys citye in to the handes of the kyng of Babilon, which shal take it. As for zedekiah the kyng of Juda, he shall not be able to escape the Caldees, but surely he shall come into the handes of the kyng of Babilō: which shall speake with him mouth to mouth, and one of them shal loke another in the face. And zedekiah shalbe carted vn to Babilon/and there shal he be vntyl the tyme that I viset him, saith the Lorde. But yf thou takest in hande to fight agaynst ỹ Caldes/thou shalt not prosper.

And Jeremy sayde: Thus hath the Lord spoken vnto me: Behold, Hananeel the sonne of Sellum thyn Uncles sonne shal come vnto the/and requyre the to redeme the land/that lyeth in Anathoth vnto thy selfe for by reason of kinred it is thy parte to redeme it, and to bye it out.

And so Hananeel myne vncles sōne came to me in the courte of ỹ prison (according to the word of the Lord (& sayd vnto me: Bye my lande (I prayе the) ỹ lyeth in Anathoth in ỹ countre of Ben Jamin: for by heretage ỹ hast ryghte to lowse it out of thy selfe, wherfore redeme it. Then I perceaued/that thys was the commaundment of the Lord/ and so I lowsed the lande from Hananeel of Anathoth, myne Uncles sonne, and weyed him ther the money: euen seuen syckles, & ten syluer pens.

I cauſed him also to make me a writing, and to seale it, and called recorde therby, and weyed him ther the monet vpon the weightes. So I toke the euidence with the copie (when it was orderly sealed and red ouer) and I gaue the euidence vnto Baruch the sonne of Nerias the sonne of Maasiah in the sight of Hananeel my cosen, and in the presence of the wytnesse that he named in the euydence/ and before al the Jewes that were therby in the court of the prison.

I charged Baruch also before them saying: The Lord of Hostes the god of Israel cōmaundeth the, to take this sealed euydence w̄ the copie, and to laie it in an erthen vessel, that it maye longe contynue.

For the Lord of Hostes the god of Israel hath determed/that houses, feldes and vyneyardes shall be possessed agayne in this land.

Now when I had delyuered ỹ euydence vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah, I besought the lord, saying: O lord God, It is thou ỹ hast made heauen & earth w̄ thy gret power and hie arme, and there is nothing to hard for the. Thou shewest mercy vpon thousādes ỹ recompencest the wickednes of the fathers, in to the bosome of the childzen ỹ come after them.

Thou art the greate and mighty God: whose name is the Lord of Hostes: greate in councell, and infinyte in thought: Thyne eyes loke vpon al the wayes of mens childzen, to reward euery one after his waye/and according to ỹ frutes of his inuencyons: Thou hast done greate tokens and wonders in the land of Egipt (as we se this daye vpon the people of Israel & vpō thole men: to make thy name greate, as it is come to passe this daye: Thou hast brought thy people of Israel out of ỹ lād of Egipt, w̄ tokens, w̄ wonders, with a mighty hand, w̄ a streched out arme & w̄ greate terrybleues: & hast geuen thē this land, lyke as ỹ haddest promysed vnto their fathers: Namely, that ỹ woldest geue them a lande, that floweth w̄ milck and hony.

Now when they came therin, & possessed it, they folowed not thy voice, & walked not in thy lawe: but al ỹ thou cōmaundest them to do, ỹ haue they not done and therfore come al these plages vpon them.

Behold there are bullwarckes made now agaynst the cytte, to take it: and yt shall be wonne of the Caldees that besege yt/ wyth swerde/ wyth honger and deathe/ and loke what thou haste spokenne/ that same shall come vpon them.

For lo, al thynges are present vnto the: Yet saist thou vnto me (O lord God) and commaundest me, ỹ I shal lowle a pece of land vnto my self, and take wytnes therto; and yet in ỹ mene season the cytie is delyuered into the power of the Caldees.

Then came the word of the lord vnto me, saying: Behold, I am the Lord god of all flesche: is there eny thyng to harde for me? Therfore thus sayde ỹ Lord: behold, I shal delyuer thys cytye into ỹ power of ỹ Caldees, & in to ỹpower of Nabuchodonosor ỹ kig of babilon, they shal take it in: For the Caldees shal come, and wynne this cytie/ and set fyre vpon it, and burne it: with the gorgeous houses, in whose paters they haue made sacrifice vnto Baal & poured drinck offringes vnto straung goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath.

Jerem. xxb. b v. xxix. b.

For seynge the chyldren of Israell, and chyldren of Juda haue wroughte wyckednes before me euer from their youth vp/ what haue they els don, but prouoked me with the workes of there owne handes? saieth the Lord?

Or, what hath this cytye bene els, but a prouokig of mi wrath, euer sence the daye that I buylded it, vnto thys houre? Wherein I caste it oute of my syght because of the greate blasphemyes of the chyldren of Israel and Juda which they haue done to prouoke me: yea they, their kynges, their princes/ their Preastes their Prophetes, whole Juda/ & al the cytesyns of Jerusalem. Whē I rose vp early, & taught them and instructe them, theye turned their backes to me, and not their faces.

F Jerem. ii. d

They wold not heare to be reformed and correcte. They haue set their Gods in the house, ỹs halowed vnto my name/ to defyle it. They haue buil ded hy places for Baal in the valey of the children of Hennom, to bowe their sonnes and daughters vnto Moloch; which I neuer commaunded them, ne ther, came yt euer in my thoughte / to make Juda synne wyth such abhomynacion.

Jer. vii, à, & d

And I wyl set vp an euerlastyng couenaunt with them, Namely: that I wyl neuer ceasse to do them good, and that I wyl put my fere in their hertes so that they shall not runne awaye frō me.

For thus sayeth the Lord: lyke as I haue brought al this greate plage vpon thys people: so wyl I also bring vp on them all the good, that I haue promysed them. And men shal haue their possessions in this land, wherof ye say now, that it shal nether be inhabited of people ner of catel but be delyuered in to the hands of the Caldees: Yea land shalbe bought for money, and euydēce made ther vpon and sealed before wyt nes in the court of Ben Jamin & roūd about Jerusalem: in the cyties of Juda in ỹ cyties that are vpon the moun taynes, and in them ỹ lye beneth, yea & in the cityes ỹ are in ỹ desert. And I wyl returne the captiuyte of Juda and Israel: and wyl set them vp agayne/ as they were afore. From all mysdedes (wherin they haue offended agaīst me) I wyl clense them. And al their blasphemies which they haue don agaynst me, whē they regarded me not/ I wyl forgeue them.

And thys shall get me a name, a prayse and honoure/ among al people of the earth, which shal heare al ỹ good that I wyll shewe vnto them: yea they shalbe afrayed and astonied at ỹ good dedes and benefytes, that I wil do for them. Behold/ the tyme commeth/ the lord, that I wil per forme that good thing, which I haue promysed vnto the house of Israel and to the house of Juda. In those dayes and at ỹ same tyme/ I wyl bring forth vnto Dauid, the braunche of ryghtu oulnes, and he shal do equite and righ tuousnesse in the lande. In those dates shal Juda be helped, and Jerusalem shal dwel safe and he that shal call her is euen god our righteous maker.

And the worde of the lord came vn to Jeremy after this maner: Thus say eth the lord: Maye the couenaunt wh ch I haue made with daye and nyght be broken/ that there shuld not be daie and night in due season & Then maye my couenaunt also be broken, which I made wyth Dauid my seruaūt, and so he not to haue a sonne to reigne in his Trone. So shal al the prestes, and Le uytes neuer fayle, but serue me. Moreouer, the word of the Lord came to Jeremy, saying: Consyderest ỹ not what thys peple speaketh: Two kireddes (saye they) had ỹ lord chose, & those same two hath he cast awaye. For so farre is my peple come/ ỹ they haue no hope to come to gether eny more, ād to be one peple againe. Therfore thus saith ỹ lord: If I haue made no couenaūt w̄ daye & nyght, & geuē no statut vnto heue & earth; thē wil I also cast a way ỹ sede of dauid my seruaūt: so ỹ I wil take no price out of his sede, to rule the posterite of Abrahā, Isaac & Jacob

A THese are the wordes which the Lorde spake vnto Jeremi what time as Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babylon, and all hys hoostes (out of al the kingdomes that were vnder hys power) and all his people fought agaynst Jerusalem and al the cities therof. Thus saith the Lord God of Israell: Goo and speake to zedekyah the kynge of Juda, and tell hym: The Lorde sendeth the thys worde: Behold I wyll delyuer this cyte into the hand of the king of Babylon: he shall burne it/ and thou shalt not escape hys hands but shalt be led away prysoner, and deliuered into hys power. Lyke as thy forefathers, the kynges, thy progenytours, were brent, soo shalte thou be brente also, and in the mourninge, they shal say: Oh Lord. For thus haue I determyned, sayth ỹ Lord

B Then spake Jeremy the prophete all these wordes vnto Sedekiah king of Juda in Jerusalem what time as thee kynge of Babylons hoste beseged Jerusalem and the remnaunt of the cytis Namely, Lachis & Azecah, whych yet remayned of the strong defēced cities of Juda. These are wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy the prophet, whē Sedekiah was a greed with al the people at Jerusalem: that there shulde be proclaimed a lybertie so that euery man shulde se this seruaunt and hand mayde go free, an hebrue & hebruesse, and no Jewe to holde his brother as a bōdmā Now as they had cōsented, euē so they were obedient, & let them go free. The. xxxv. Chapter.

A THe wordes which the Lorde spake vnto Jeremi, in ỹ reigne of Jehoakym thee sōne of Josiah king of Juda, are these: Goo vnto the house of the Rechabites. And cal them out/ and bring thē, to ỹ house of ỹ lord into some comodious place: and geue them wyne to drincke, Then tooke I Jaazaniah the sunne of Jeremy the sonne of Habesyniah, and his bretheren & and all his sonns and the whole housholde of the rechabites: & brought thē to the house of the Lorde/ into the closet of the chyldren of hanan the sonne of Jegedalyah the man of god: whych was by the closet of the Princes, that is aboue the closet of Maasiah the sonne of Sylum, which is the cheake of thee treasure. And before the sonnes of thee kinred of the rechabytes, I sett pottes full of wyne, and cuppes and layede vnto them: Drincke wyne. But they sayd: we drinke no wyne/ for Jonadab Jeremiah the sonne of Rechab our father cōmaūded vs, saying: ye and your sōnes shall neuer drincke wyne, buylde no houses sowe no seade, plante no vynes, nea/ ye shall haue no vyneyardes: but for all your tyme ye shal dwell in tentes/ that ye maye lyue longe in the lande wherin ye be straungers.

Thus haue we obeyd the commaūdement of Jonadab the son of Rechab oure father, in al that he hath charged vs, and so we drincke no wyne all oure lyfe longe: we/ nor oure wyues, oure sōnes and oure doughters. Neither build we any house to dwell therin/ we haue also amonge vs neyther vyneyardes/ ner corne land to sowe: but we dwell in tētes we obeye, and do according vnto all that Jonadab oure father commaūded vs.

But now that Nabuchodonosor ỹ kynge of Babylon came vp into thee lande, we sayde, come/ let vs go to Jerusalem, that we may escape the hoost of the Chaldees and the Assirians: and so we dwell now at Jerusalem. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy/ saying: Thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: Go and tell whole Juda and all the inhabitoures of Jerusalem: wyll ye not be reformed to obeye my wordes: sayth the Lorde. The wordes which Jonadab the son of Rechab commaunded his sonnes, that they shulde drincke no wyne, are faste and surely kepte: for vnto thys day they drincke no wyne but obey theyr fathers commaundemente. But as for me, I haue stand vp early, I haue spoken vnto you/ and geuen you earneste warning: and yet haue ye not bene obedient vnto me. Ye I haue sent my seruauntes, all the prophtes vnto you I rose vp early, and sent you worde saying: O turne you euerye man from his wycked waye: amende your lyues, and go not after straunge Goddes to worshyppe them: that ye maye continue in the lande whyche I haue geuen vnto you and youre fathers/ but ye wold ne ther heare me, nor folowe me. The chyldern of Jonadab Rechabs sonne haue stedfastly kept ther fathers D commaundement, that he gaue thē, but thys people is not obedient vnto me And therfore thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell: Behold I wyll bringe vpon Juda and vpon euery one that dwelleth in Jerusalem, all the trouble that I haue deuised agaynste them. For I haue spoken vnto thē but they wolde not folowe: I haue cal leb vnto them neuertheles they wolde geue me no answere, Jeremy also spake vnto the household of the Rechabytes Thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes thee God of Israell: for so moch as ye haue obeyed the commaundemente of Jonadab youre father, and kepte all his preceptes, and done according vnto all that he hath bydden you: Therfore thus Bysoner. 1. ¶ Baruch wryteth (as Jeremy endyteth) ye boke of the curses agaynst Juda & Israel. He is sent with ye boke vnto the people, & readeth it before them al. He is called before ye rulers & readeth it before the also. ¶ The rulers shew vnto ye king ye wordes of ye boke Jehudi taketh the boke, & redeth a lytle of it, & after casteth it in ye fire. There is an other written, at the commaundemēt of ye Lord.

¶ The .xxxvi. Chapter.

IN the fourth yeare of Jeoakim the sonne of Josyah kynge of Juda, came the word of the Lord vnto Jeremy, saying: Take a boke and wryte therin al the wordes, that I haue spoken to the/ to Israel, to Juda and to al ye people, from the tyme that I began for to speake vnto thee (in the raygne of Josiah vnto this day: That when the house of Juda heareth of the plage, which I haue deuysed for them they maye peraduenture turne euerye man frō his wycked waye: that I mate forgeue their offences and synnes.

Then dyd Jeremy cal Baruch the sonne of Neriah, and Baruch wrote in the boke at the mouth of Jeremy/ all ye wordes of the Lorde which he had spoken vnto hym. And Jeremy commaunded Baruch, saying: I am in prison, so that I maye not come to the house of the Lord: therfore go thou thyther, and reade the boke, that thou hast wrytten at my mouth: Namelye, the worde of ye Lord, and rede them in the Lordes house vpon the fastyng daye: that ye people whole Juda, and al they that come out of the cytyes / may heare. Peraduenture they wyll praye mekely before the face of the Lorde, and turne euery one from his wycked waye. For grete is ye wrath & displeasure, ye the Lord hath taken a gaynst this people.

So Baruch ye sonne of Neriah did accordyng vnto al that Jeremy the prophet commaunded hym, readig ye wordes of the Lorde out of the boke in the Lordes house. And this was done in ye fyfthe yeare of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kyng of Juda, in ye .ix. moneth when it was cōmaunded/ ye al the people of Jerusalem shuld fast before the Lord, & they also ye were come frō ye cytyes of Juda vnto Jerusalem.

Then red Baruch the wordes of Jeremy out of the boke wi the house of ye Lord, out of the treasury of Gamariah ye sonne of Saphan in the Scryb which is besid ye hyer lofte of the new doze of the Lordes house: ye al ye people might heare. Now whē Micheah the sōne of Gamariah the sōne of saphā had herde al the wordes of ye lord out of ye boke he went downe to the kinges palace into ye scrybes chābre/ for ther sat chābre/ for ther al the prynces were set: Elisama the Scrybe, Dalatah ye sōne of Semei, Elnathan ye sōne of Achabor, Gamariah ye sōne of Saphan, Zedekiah the sonne of Hananiah/ with al ye prynces. And Micheah tolde thē al the wordes, ye he heard Baruch rede out of the boke before the people.

Then al the prynces sent Jehudi ye sō of Nathaniah, ye sōne of Selamiah the sōne of Chusi, vnto baruch, saying: Take i thine hād the boke, wherout ye hast red before al the people & cōe. So Baruch the sonne of Neriah toke the boke i his hand & cam vnto them. And they said vnto hi: Sit downe, & rede ye boke ye we may here also. So Baruch red, ye they might here. Now whē they had herde al the wordes/ they were abashed one vpō another/ & said vnto Baruch: We wil certifie ye king of al these wordes. And they exampned Baruch/ saying: tel vs/ how dydest ye writ al these wordes out of his mouth? Then Baruch answered them: He spake al these wordes vnto me wt his mouth, & I alone was wt him/ & wrote them in ye boke.

Then sayde ye prynces vnto Baruch: Go thy way, & hide the wt Jeremy, so ye no mā know wher ye be. And they went in to the kyng to the court. But they kepte the boke in the chambre of Elisama the Scrybe, and tolde ye king al the wordes that he myght heare. So the kyng sent Jehudi to fetch him the boke, which he brought out of Elisama the scrybes chābre. And Jehudi red it, that the kyng and al the prynces which were about him ight here. Now the kynge sate in the wynter house, for yt was the .ix. moneth/ and there was a good fyre before hym: and when Jehudi had red thre or four leaues the reof, he cut the boke in peaces wt a pen knyfe, and caste it into the fyre vpon ye harth/ vntyl the boke was all brent in the fyre vpon the harth.

Yet no man was abashed thereof/ ne rente his clothes: nether the kinge hi self, nor his seruaunts, though they had de all these wordes. Neuertheles Elnathan, Dalatah, & Gamariah besought ye kynge that he would not burne the boke: Notwithstanding the kyng wolde not heare them but commaūded Jerahmeell the sonne of Amelech Saraiah the sonne of Ezryell/ and Selamiah the sonne of Abdyell, to lay handes vpon Baruch the scribe/ and vpon Jeremy the prophet: but the Lord kepte them out of syght. After now that the kynge had brente the boke, and the sermons which baruch wrot at the mouth of Jeremy, ye word of the Lord came vnto Jeremy, saying: take an other boke and wryte in it all the forsayde sermons that were written in the fyrste booke, whiche Jehoakim the kinge of Juda hath brente.

And tell Jehoakim the Kynge of Juda: thus sayethe the Lorde: thou haste brente the boke and thoughtest within thy selfe: Why hast thou wrytten therin that ye king of Babylon shal come āde make this lāde wast so that he shal make both people and cattell to be out of it? Therfore thus the Lorde sayeth of Jehoakim the kinge of Juda: There shall none of hys generation sytt vpon the throne of Dauid. Hys deade corpse shalbe cast out, that the heat of the day and the frost of the nyght maye come vpon hym and I wyl visyte the wyckednes of him, of his seade, and of his seruauntes. Moreouer all the euel that I haue promised them (though they herde me not) wyll I bringe vpon them vpō the inhabytours of Jerusalem. āde vpō all Juda. Then toke Jeremy an other boke and gaue it Baruch the Scrybe the sonne of Neriah, which wrote therin out of the mouthe of Jeremy: all ye sermons that were in the fyrst boke which Jehoaki ye king of Juda did burne And ther were added vnto them many mo sermons, then before.

¶ The .xxxvii. Chapter.

ZEdekiahh the sonne of Josiah, whych was made kinge thorow Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon, reigned in the land of Juda, in the steade of Cononiah the sonne of Jehoakim. But nether he nor hys seruaūtes nor the people in the lande would obeye the wordes of the Lorde, which he spak by the prophet Jeremy. Neuertheles Zedekiah the kinge sēte Jehucail the sonne of Selemiah/ and Sophoniah the sonne of Maasiah the preest to ye prophet Jeremy, saying: O pray thou vnto the Lord oure god for vs. Nowe Jeremye walked fre among the people at that time, and was not put in prysō as yet. Pharaos host was come out of Egipt which whē the caldes ye besieged Jerusalē perceiued/ they departed frō thēce. Then came the word of the Lord vnto Jeremye the prophet, saying. Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israell thys answeare shall yee geaue to thee kyng of Juda that sent you vnto mee for councell: Beholde Pharaos hoost whiche is come for the to helpe you, shall returne to Egypte in to hys owne lande: but the Caldees shall come agayne/ and fyght agaynst this cytye wynne it, & set fyre vpon it. For thus sayeth the Lorde* dysceaue not youre owne myndes thynking on this maner: tush/ ye Chaldees go now their wayfrom vs: no, they shal not go their waye. For though ye had slayne the whole host of the Caldees, that besege you, and euery one of the slayn laye in his tent, yet shuld they stande vp, and set fyre vpon thys cytie, now when the host of the Caldes was broken vp frō Jerusalem/ for feare of the Egypcyās army, Jeremy went out of Jerusalem toward the lande of Ben Jamin* to do certeyne busynes there amonge the people. And when he came vnder Ben Jamyns porte/ there was a porter, called Jeriah, the sonne of Selemiah the sonne of Hananiah/ whyche fell vpon hym/ and toke hym saying: thy mynde is to runne to the Caldees.

The sayde Jeremy: It is not so, I go not to the Caldees. Neuertheles Jeriah wolde not beleue hym, but brought Jeremy bownde before the Princes. Wherfore the Prynces were angry w Jeremy/causyng hym to be beaten, and to be layed in prison in the house of Jonathas ỹ scrybe. For he was ỹ ruler of the preson. Thus was Jeremye put in to the dungyon and pryson, and so laye there a long tyme. Then zedekiah the kyng sent for hym, and called hym, and asked hym quyetly in his owne house/ saying: thynkest thou thys busynes (ỹ now is in hand) commeth of the Lorde Jeremy answered: ye that it doth: and ỹ (sayd he) shalt be deliuered in to ỹ kinge of Babylons power.

D Moreouer Jeremy sayd vnto kinge zedekiah; What haue I offended agaynst the, agaynst thy seruauntes or against this people that ye haue caused me to be put in preson? Where ar your prophetes which haue prophecyed vnto you and sayd/ that the kinge of Babylon shuld not come agaynst you and this lande? And therfore heare now, O my Lord the kyng: let my prayer be accepte before the, and send me nomore in to the house of Jonathas the Scribe, that I dye not there. Then zedekiah ỹ kyng commaunded to put Jeremy in the fore entry of the preson/ and dayly to be geuen hym a cake bread, and els no dighte meat, vntyl al the bred in the cyte was *eaten vp. Thus Jeremy remayned in ỹ forentre of the pryson.

The .xxxviii. Chapter.

Saphatiah the sone of Mathan, Godoliah the sone of Phachur/ Jucal the sonne of Selemiah/ and Phashur the sonne of Melchiah perceued the wordes/ that Jeremy had spoken vnto al the people, namelye on this maner: Thus sayeth the Lord: Who so remayneth in thys cytie, shall perysh/ either wyth the sweard, with hōger or wythe pestylence; But who so falleth vnto ỹ Caldees, shal escape/ *winnig his soule for a pray/ and shal liue. Thys man verelye laboureth not for peace of the people/ but myschef. zedekiah the kyng answered and said: lo/ he is in your handes, for the kyng maye deny you nothyng. Then toke they Jeremy, and cast hym into the dongion of Melchiah the sone of Hamelech, that dwelt in the fore entre of the preson. And they let downe Jeremy w coardes into a dongeon, wher there was no water, but myer. So Jeremy stack fast in the myre. Now whē Abedmelech the Mozyan beyng a chāberleine in the kings court, vnderstode that they had cast Jeremy in to the dōgeon: he went out of the kinges house and spake to the kyng, (whych thē sate vnder the poorte of Benjamin) these wordes: My Lorde the kyng wheras these men medle with Jeremy the prophet, they do hym wrōg: Namely i that they haue put hym in prison, there to dy of honger, for there is no more bred in the cytie. Then the king comaunded Abedmylech the mozyā & said. Take frō hence .xxx. men whom thou wilt, & draw vp Jeremy the prophete out of the dongeon, before he dye. So Abedmelech toke the men w hī & went to the house of Amalech, and there vnder an almery he gat old rages and worne clowtes and let them downe by a corde, into the dongeon to Jeremy.

And Abedmelech the Mozyan said vnto the prophet Jeremy: O put these ragges and cloutes vnder thine armeholes/ betwyxt them and the coardes & Jeremy did so. So they drewe vp Jeremy with cordes and toke hym out of the dongeon, & he remayned in the fore entrye of the prison. Then zedekiah the kyng sent ād caused Jeremy ỹ prophet be called vnto him, in to the thirde entre, that was by the house of the lord And the king said vnto Jeremy: I wil aske the somewhat but hyde nothyng fro me: Then Jeremy answered zedekiah: Yf I be plaine vnto thee, thou wylt cause me suffre death: yf I geue ỹ councel, thou wilt not folow me. So ỹ kynge swore an ooth secretly vnto Jeremy, saying: As truly as the Lord lyueth, that made vs these soules/ I wil not slaye the/ ner geue the in to the hands of them that seke after thy lyfe.

E Then saide Jeremy vnto zedekyah: Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the god of Israel, If (cease be) that thou wylt go forth vnto the kynge of Babylons princes, thou shalt saue thy lyfe/ and thys cytie shal not be brēt ye both thou and thy household shall escape w your lyues. But yf thou wylt not goo forth to the kyng of Babilons princes/ then shal thys cytye be delyuered into the handes of the Caldees which shal set fyre vpon it, and thou shalte not be able to escape them. And zedekiah said vnto Jeremy I am afrayd for the Jwes, that are fled vnto the Caldees, leste I come in their hādes & so they to haue me in derysion.

F But Jeremy answered: No they shal not betraye the: O herke vnto the voice of the Lord (I beseche the (which I speake vnto the/ so shalt thou be wel and saue thy life. But yf thou wilt not go forth, the Lorde hath tolde me thys playnely Behold, al the wemen that ar left in the kyng of Judas house, shal go out to the kyng of Babylons princes For they thinck that thou art disceued and that the men whome thou dydeste put thy trust, haue gotten the vnder/ and sett thy fete fast in the myre/ and gone their waye from the

Therfore al thy wynes with their chyldrē shal fle vnto the Caldes, and thou shalt not escape their hādes, but shalte be the kyng of Babylons preisoner, ād thys cytie shal be brent. Then sayd ezekyah vnto Jeremy: loke that no body G know of these wordes, and thou shalte not dye. But yf the princes persecut, ỹ I haue talked w the/ and com vnto ỹ sayeng: O speke, what saide the kynge to the? hyd ye not from vs, and we wil not put the to deth. Tel vs (we praye the) what sayde the kyng to the? Se ỹ geue them this answere: I haue humbly besought the kyng that he wil lett me ly no more in Jehonathans house ỹ I dye not there: Then cam al the princes vnto Jeremy/ and asked hym, And he told them/ after the maner as ỹ kinge bad him. Then they held their pece, for they perceaued nothing. So Jeremye abode styl in the fore entry of the preson vntyll the daye that Jerusalem was wonne:

Nabuchodonosor besegeth Jerusalem zedekiah flyeth, he is taken of the Chaldees. Hys sonnes are slayn. Hys eyes are thrust out, Jeremy is prouyded for Abedmelech is deliuered frō ỹ captyuite, because her onfydense that he hath in god.

The .xxxix. Chapter

Jere. xxii, f. iiii, Seq. xxv

Now when the cytie of Jerusalem was taken, for in ỹ ix. yeare of zedekiah king of Juda in the tenth Moneth, came Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon and al hys hoste, and besieged Jerusalem. And in the xi. yeare of zedekiah in the fourth Moneth the .ix. day of the Moneth, he brāke into the cytie). Then al the princes of the kyng of Babylon, came in/ & set them downe vnder the poorte: Nergel Sarezer, Samegarnabo/ Sarsachim Rabsaris Nergel Sarezer, Rybmag wyth al the other princes of the kyng of Babylon. And when zedekiah the kyng of Juda with his soudiers sawe them, they fled, and departed out of the cytie be nyght thorowe the kiges garden, and thorowe the poorte that is betwene the two wales, and so they went towarde the wyldernes.

But the Caldees Host folowed fast after them, and toke zedekiah in the felde felde of Jericho/and brought him prysoner to Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon vnto Reblath, that lyeth in the lande of Hemath wher he gaue iudgement vpon him. So the king of Babylon cauled the chylderen of Sedekiah ād al the nobles of Juda to be slain before his face at Rablath. And made Zedekiahs eies to be put out and bouñd hym with chaynes/& sent hi to Babylō

C xlvii, Re, xxxq, Jere, xxxii: d

Moreouer, the Chaldees brente vp the kinges palace with the other houses of the people, and brake downe the walles of Jerusalem. As for the remaunt of the people that were in the cite/ and such as were com to help them (whatsoeuer was left of the comen sorte) Nabusaradan the chefe captayne caryed them to Babylon. But Nabusaradan the chefe captayn let the rascal people (and those that had nothyng) dwell styl in the land of Juda, and gaue thē vynyardes and corne feldes at the same tyme. Nabuchodonosor also the kynge of Babilon gaue Nabusaradan the chefe captayne a charge concernyng Jeremye, sayinge: take and cherysh hi & make much of hi: le ÿ do hino harme, but intreate hi after hys owne desyre. So Nabusaradan the chefe captayn, Nabusasban the chefe chamberlayne/ Nergalsarezer the treasurer: and al the kynge of Babylons Lordes, sente for Jeremy/and cauled hym to be ket oute of the fore entreye of the prisonne, and committed hym vnto godoliah the sonne of Ahicam the sonne of of Saphan that shulde carye hym home, and so he dwelt amonge the people.

D Jerem, xl. b

Now whyl Jeremy lay yet bounde in the fore entry of the prison/the worde of the Lorde came vnto him, saying go and tell Abedmelech the Mozian: Thus sayth the Lorde of Hoostes thee god of Israell: beholde, the cruell and sharpe plage that I haue deuised for thys citie wyll I bringe vpon thē, ÿ ÿ shalt se it but I wyll delyuer the (saith the lord) & ÿ shalt not com in the hādes of those men whome thou feareſt. For doutles I wyll saue the, so that ÿ shalt not perysh with the sword: but thy lyfe shalbe saued, and that because thou hast put thy trust in me sayth the lorde.

¶ Jeremy hath lycēse to go whyther he wyll, He dwelleth with the people that remaynyth at Jerusalem whom Godoliah ruleth. Johanan prophesyeth deth vnto Godoliah.

¶ The. xl. Chapter

THys is the maner howe the Lorde intreated Jeremye, when Nabuzaradan ÿ chef Captayne had let him goo fre from Ramah, whyther he had led hym bounde amonge all the prisoners, that were caryed from Jerusalem and Juda vnto Babilon. The chefe Captaine called for Jeremy, and said vnto him: The lord thy god spake mightely before of the misery vpō this place: Now the Lord hath sent ity and performed it as he had promysed: For ye haue synned agaynst the Lord, and haue not bene obedient vnto his voice therfor commeth this plage vpon you Behold, I lowse the bounde from thi handes this daye: if thou wylt now go with me vnto Babilon/vp then: for I wyl se to the, and prouyd for the: But yf thou wylt not go w̄ me to Babylon then remayne here. Behold al the land is at my wyl, loke where thou thinkeſt conuenient and good for the to abyde there dwel if thou canst not be content to dwel alone, then remayne with Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam, the sonne of Saphan: whom the kyng of Babylon hath made gouernoure ouer the cyties of Juda, and dwel with hi amōge the people, or remayne where so euer it pleaseth the. So the chef Captayne gaue him his expences w̄ a reward, ād let him go. Then wente Jeremye vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam to Mazphah, and dwelt there wyth hym amonge the people that were lefte in the lande.

Beholde, I dwell at Mazphah to be an officer in the Caldees behalfe, and to gatelry such as come to vs. Therfor gather you wine, corne and oyle, & kepe them in your ware houses, and dwell in your Cities that ye haue in keppynge.

D Yee all the Jewes also that dwelte in Moab vnder the Ammonites, in Idumea and in all the countrees/ when they herde, that the kynge of Babylon had made Godoliah the sonne of Ahycam the sonne of Saphan, gouernour vpon them that were left in Juda: All the Jewes (I saye) returned out of all places where they were fled vnto: and came into the lande of Juda to Godoliah vnto Mazphah, ād gathered wyne and other frutes, and that very much.

Moreouer Johanan the sonne of Careah and all the captaynes of the hoste, that were scated on euery syde in ÿ lande came to Godolyah in Mazphah, and sayde vnto hi: knowest thou not the that Baall is king of the Ammonites & hath sent Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, to slaye the? But Godoliah the sōne of Ahicam beleued them not. Then sayd Johanan the sonne of Careah vnto Godolyah in Mazphah these wordes secretly: Let me go, I pray the, ād I wyll slaye Ismael, the sunne of Nathaniah, so that no bodye shall knowe it. Wherfor wyll he kyl the, that all ÿ Jewes which resorte vnto the myghte be scatered, and the remnaunt in Juda perysche? Then sayde Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam to Johanan the sonne of Careah: Thou shalt not do it, for they are but lyes/ ÿ men say of Ismael

¶ The. xli. Chapter.

A Jerem, xxxvi

BVt in the seuenth moneth it happened that Ismael the sunne of Nathaniah the son of Elysama (one of the kinges bloude) came wyth them that were greatest about the kynge, ād ten men that were swoorn with him: vnto Godolyah the Sonne of Ahicam to Mazphah, and ate there togethez. And Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah with those ten men that were swoorne to hym starte vp, and smote Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam the sūne of Saphan w̄ the swerde, and slewe hym / whome the kyng of Babylon had made gouernor of the lande. Ismaell also slewe all the Jewes that were wythe Godolyah at Mazphah, and all the Caldees that he founde there wayting vpon him.

The next daye after that he had slayne Godolyah (the matter was yet vnknowen) there came certeine men from Sichem, from Siloh and Samaria, to the numbre of. lxxx. which had shauē theyr beerdes, rente theyre clothes/and were all heuye, bringinge meateofterynges, and incense in theyre hand/to offer it in the house of the Lord. And Ismahell the sonne of Nathaniah wēt B forth of Mazphah weppyng to mete thē Now when he met them, he sayde: goo youre waye to Godolyah the sonne of Ahicam, ād when they came in the middest of the citt, Ismael the sunne of Nathaniah (w̄ thē that were swoorne vnto hym) slewe them, euen at the myddeste of the pyt. Amonge the. lxxx men there were ten, that sayd vnto Ismaell: Oh slay vs not for we haue yet a great treasure in the felde, of wheate, barley/oyle and hony. So he spared them and slu them not wyth theyr brethren. Now the pyt wherin Ismael dyd caste the dede bodyes of the men (whome he slewe C iii, Re, xxv, e because of Godolyah) had Kynge Asa caused to be made, for feare of Baasa the kynge of Israel, & the same pyt did Ismaell fyll with sleyne men. As for ÿ remnaunt of thee People, the Kynges doughters & al ÿ people ÿ were yet lefte at Mazphah vpō whō Nabusarad ā ÿ chefe captain had made godoliah ÿ sō of Ahicā gouernour: Ismael ÿ sōne of Nathaniah caryed thē away prisoners toward ÿ amonites. Now when all the people whom Ismael led de captiue, sawe Johanan ỹ sonne of Careah and all the capteynes of the hoost, they were glad. So al the people that Ismaell had caryed awaye from Mazphah were brought agayne

And when they returned, they came D to Johanan the sonne of Careah. But Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah fledde from Johanan wt eyght of his swone cõpanyõs & went to ỹ Amonytes. Then Johanan the sonne of Careah/ and all ỹ hecaptain es of the hoste that were wt hym, toke the remnaunte of the people, whom Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had led away (when he had slayn Godolyah the sonne of Ahicam) whome they also had resthued from hym: fightinge men Wemen and Chylderen, and geldded men, whome they brought agayne from Gabaon and wente from thence & sate them downe at Geruth Camaam/ which lyeth beside Bethlehem, that they myght gointo Egipte for feare of ỹ Chaldees: of whome they were afrayde because that Ismaell the sonne of Nathaniah had slain Godolyah Ahikams sonne whom the King of Babylon had made gouernoure in the lande.

A SO al the rulers, and Johanan the sonne of Kareah/ Jezaniah the sonne of Osaiah came with al the people from the least vnto the moost and sayde vnto Jeremy the prophet: O heare our petition, that thou mayest pray for vs vnto the Lorde thy God, and for thy remnaunt wherof there be very fewe lefte of manye, as thou seest vs: that the Lorde thy God maye shewe vs a waye to go in and tell vs what we shulde do. Then Jeremye the Prophet sayd vnto the: I haue herd you

Jerem. xxi. & xxv. xxvii. a

Beholde: I wyll praye vnto God youre lorde, as ye haue requyred me: and loke what answere the Lorde geueth you/ I shal certifi you, therof, & kepe nothing backe from you. And they sayde vnto Jeremy: The Lorde of truth and fayth- Jere. xlii. fulnes be oure recorde, that we wyll do all that the Lorde thy god commaunded vs, whether it be good or euel. We wyll herke vnto thy voyce of our lorde god to whom we sende the that we may prospeare, when we haue folowed the voyce of the Lorde oure god.

And after ten dayes came the woorde of the Lord vnto Jeremy. Then called he Johanan the sonne of Kareah, & al the captaynes of the people that were with hym: yea and all the people fro the least to the moost, and sayde vnto them: Thus sayth the lorde god of Israell vnto whome ye sente mee/ to laye forth youre prayers before hym: Ye wyll dwell in this land, I shall buylde you vp, and not throwe you downe: I shall plante you, and not rote you oute for I am pacifyed/ as concernynge the trouble that I haue done to you. Fear not the kynge of Babylon/ of whom ye stande in awe: O be not afrayd of hym sayth the Lorde: for I wyll be with you/ to helpe you, and delyuer you from hys handes I wyll pardon you, I wyll haue mercy vpon you and brig you agayne into your owne lande.

Neuertheles, yf ye purpose not to dwel in this land, nor to folow the voyce of the Lorde your God: but wyll say thus, we wyll not dwell here, but go into Egipte: where we shal nether se warre, heare the noyse of battell, nor suffre honger there wyll we dwell. Wherfore heare now the worde of the lorde, O ye remnaunt of Juda. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the god of Israell: Yf ye be wholy purposed to go into Egypt and to be there as straungers: the swerde that ye fere, shall ouertake you in Egypte: and the honger wherof ye be re afrayed shall hange vpon you into Egypte, and there ye shall dye. For all thei, that of set purpose vndertak to go into Egipte, there to eatle them selues of theyr myserye/ shal perysh with the swerde with honger and pestilence: not one one of them shall remayne, there shall none escape ỹ plage, that I wyl bring vpon them. For thus sayeth the Lord of hoostes the God of Israell: lyke as my wrath and indignacyon is com vp on the inhabytours of Jerusalem / so shal my displeasur go furth vpon you also, yf ye go into Egypt: For there ye shalbe reuyled, abhorred, brought to shame and confusion; and as for thys place ye shal neuer se it more. The lord forbyddeth you (Oye remnaunt of Juda) ỹ ye shal not go into Egypt. And forget not that I haue warned you euer nestly this day, els shal ye begile your selues. For ye sent me vnto the Lorde your God, and sayde: O praye thou ỹ Lorde our god for vs: and loke what answere the Lorde our god geueth ỹ, that bring vs agayne, and we shal do therafter. Nowe haue I shewed/ ād declared vnto you the voyce of the Lord your god, for the which cause he hath sent me to you. If ye wyl not folow it, be sure/ that ye shal perysh with the sweard, with honger and pestylēce euen in the same place, wher your lust was to go and dwell.

¶ Johanan carryeth the remnaunt of ỹ peple into Egypt, contrary to the mind of Jeremy. Jeremy prophesyeth, ỹ destruction of Egypt.

The. xliii. Chapter.

A NOwe, when Jeremy had ended al the wordes of the Lord god vnto the people (for their sakes to whome God had sent him) Azariah the sonne of Osaiah, and Johanā the sonne of Kareah with al the proud personnes, sayd vnto Jeremye: Thou lyest: the Lord our god hath not sent ỹ to speake vnto vs, that we should not go into Egypte, and dwell there: But Baruch the sōne of Neriah prouoketh thee agaīst vs, that he might bryng vs into the captiuitie of the chaldees, that they might slepe vs and carye vs awaye presoners vnto Babylon.

So Johanan the sonne of Kareah/ and all the captaynes of the hoost/ and al the people folowed not the commaūdement of the Lorde: Namely, to dwel in the lande of Juda. But Johanan ỹ sonne of Kareah, & al the captaines of the hooste caryed awaye all the remnaunt in Juda, that were come to gether agayne frō the Heythen (amōg whom they had ben scatred) to dwel in the land of Juda: Men womē/ childrē ỹ kynges daughters, & all those that Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne had left with Godolyah the sonne of Ahikam. They caryed awaye also the prophet Jeremy, Baruch the sonne of Neriah, and so came into Egypt: for they were not obedyēt/ vnto the cōmaūdemēt of god. Thus came they to Thaphnis. And in Thaphnis the worde of the Lorde happened vnto Jeremye, saying: Take great stones in thyne hand/ and hyde them in the bryck wall vnder the doore of Pharaos house in Thaphnis, ỹ al the men of Juda maye se/ and saye vnto them: thus sayeth the Lord of hoostes the god of Israel: Behold, I wyll send and call for Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon my seruaunt, and wyll set hys seate vpon these stones ỹ I haue hyd/ and he shal spreade his tent ouer them. And whē he commeth/ he shal smyte the land of Egypt with slaughter, with presōnes and wyth the sweard. He shal set fyre vpon the temples of the Egyptyans goddes, and burne them vp, and take them selues presoners. Moreouer he shal araye him self wt the lande of Egypt, lyke as a shepard putteth on his cote, and shall depart hys waye from thēce in peace. The pyllers also of the tempe of the Sunne that is in Egipt: shal he breake in peces, and burne the temples of the Egiptians goddes.

¶ The. xliiii. Chapter.

THis is the worde that was shewed to Jeremy concernyng al the Jewes/ which dwelt in Egipte: at Magdal, at Thaphnis, at Māphis, and in the Land of Pathures. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: ye haue sene al the mysery that I haue brought vpon Jerusalem, and vpon al the cityes of Juda, so that thys daye they are desolate: ād no man dwelling therein: and that be cauſe of ỹ gret blaſphemies, which thei committed, to pzouoke me vnto anger: in that they wente backe to do ſacrifice/ and woꝛſhippe vnto ſtraunge goddes: whō neyther they noꝛ ye, noꝛ your fathers haue knowen. How be it, I ſet vnto them my ſeruauntes all the pzophetes: I roſe vp early, I ſent vnto thē, and gaue them warninge: O doo noo ſuch abominable thinges, & thinges ỹ I hate. But they wold not follow ner her kē, to turne frō theyr wickednes, & to do no moꝛe ſacrifice vnto ſtraunge Gods.

Jere.xxv,a xxix.c.

Wherfoꝛe myne indignation and wꝛath was kyndled, and it bzente vp ỹ 23 cities of Juda, the feldes with the ſtre tes of Jeruſalem ſo that they were made waſte and deſolate, as it is come to paſſe this daye. Now therfoꝛe thus ſaythe the loꝛde of hooſtes the God of Iſrael: how happeneth it, that ye doo ſo greate euel vnto your owne ſoules, thus to deſtroye the men and women/ chylderen and Babes of Juda: ſo that none of you is lefte, becauſe ye pzouoke me vnto wꝛathe wyth the woꝛckes of youre owne handes: when ye offre vn to ſtraunge goddes in thee lande of E gipte wher as ye be gone to dwell: that ye might vtterlye periſhe, and that ye myght be reuyled and ſhamefully in treated of al nations. Oꝛ haue ye now foꝛgotten the wyckednes of your foꝛe fathers, the wyckednes of the kynges of Juda and their wiues, the wycked nes that ye youre ſelues and your wy ues haue done in the land of Juda, in the cytie and in the land of Jeruſaleme

C Yet are ye not ſoꝛy this daie, ye feꝛe not nether walke ye in my lawe and in my commaundementes, ỹ I haue geuē vn to you and your foꝛefathers.

Therfoꝛe thus ſayeth ỹ Loꝛd of ho ſtes the god of Iſrael: I am ſtedfaſtly aduiſed and determined/ to punyſhe you, and to rote out al Juda. As foꝛ ỹ Amos,ix.b remnaunt of Juda that purpoſit went in to Egipt, there to eaſe them of their miſery: I will take them & they ſhal al be deſtroied. In ỹ land of Egypt ſhal they periſhe being conſumed with the ſweard and with honger. Foꝛ from the leaſt vnto the moſt they ſhall periſhe with the ſwerd and wyth honger. Yō zeouer they ſhalbe reuyled, abhoꝛred, ſhamed, and confounded. Foꝛ I wyll viſite them that dwel in Egipte, as I haue viſited Jeruſalem: with the ſwer de, wyth honger and wyth peſtilence: So that none of the remnaunt of Ju da, which are gone to dwell in Egypte ſhal be left to come agayn into ỹ lande of Juda although they thinke to come thether agayn, & to dwel ther. Foꝛ none ſhal com agayn, but ſuch as are fled a way. Then al the men which knew th at theyr wyues had offred vnto ſtrā D ge goddes, and a great foꝛte of wyues that ſtode there, yea and al the people that dwelt there in Egipte in the cytie of Patures/ and ſwered Jeremye, and ſayde: as foꝛ the woꝛdes ỹ ỹ haſt ſpoke vnto vs in the name of the Loꝛde/ we wyll in no wyſe heare them: but what ſoeuer goeth out of out owne mouthe, that wyl we do: We wyll do ſacrifice, Jerem.
ād offre oblations vnto the Quene of heauē: like as we and our foꝛefathers, oure kinges & our heades haue done in ỹ cities of Juda, & in ỹ ſtretes & fel des of Jeruſalē. Foꝛ thē had we plēt ouſnes of vitayles/ thē were we in pꝛo ſpicity, & no myſfoꝛtune came vpō vs.

But ſens we left, to offre and todo ſacrifice vnto the Quene of heauē, we C haue had ſcarcenes of all thynges, & peryſh wᵗ the ſwerde and honger. Laſt of all, when wee wemen dyd ſacrifice and offred vnto the quene of heauen/ dyd we make her cakes and pouze vn to her dꝛinckoffringes to do her ſeruice, without our huſbandes wylles.

Then ſayd Jeremy vnto al ỹ peo ple, to the men, to the wemen and to al the folck, which had geuē ỹ anſwer: Did not the Loꝛd remēbze ỹ ſacrifices ỹ ye youre foꝛfathers, your kinges & ru lers (wᵗ al the peple) haue offred in the cyties of Juda, in the ſtretes & land of Jeruſalē: & hath he not cōſydered this in hys mynde: in ſo moch, that the loꝛd might no lengeꝛ ſuffre ỹ wickednes of your ſuēcōs, & ỹ abhominable thinges which he did: & is not your lād deſolat & loyd ye & abhoꝛred, ſo ỹ no mā dwel leth therin enye moꝛe, as it is come to paſſe this day.

Dyd

Dyd not al this happen vnto you/ becauſe ye made ſuch ſacrifyce/ & ſynned agaynſt the Loꝛd: & ye haue not folowed his voyce, to walke in his lawe in his oꝛdinaunces and ſtatutes.

Yea this is the cauſe, that all myſ foꝛtune happē vnto you, as it is com to paſſe this daye. Moꝛeouer, Jeremy ſpake vnto al the people and to al the women: Heaze the woꝛde of the Loꝛde al Juda, ye that be in ỹ land of Egipt Thus ſayeth the Loꝛde of Hoſtes the God of Iſrael: Ye and your wyues haue ſpoken wyth your owne mouth, the thynge that yee haue fulfylled in dede.

Yea thus haue ye ſaid: We wil not fayle, but do the thyng that pleaſethe vs: we wyl do ſacrifice and poure out dꝛinckoffringes to the Quene of hea uen. Purpoſly haue ye ſet vp youre owne good meanynges, and haſtelye haue ye fulfylled your owne intent. And therfoꝛe, heare the woꝛd of ỹ loꝛd al Juda/ ye that dwell in the lande of Egypt.

Behold, I haue ſwoꝛn by my grete name, ſayeth the Loꝛd/ that my name ſhal not be reherſed thoꝛow eny mans mouth of Juda, in all the lande of E gypt: to ſaye: The loꝛd god lyueth, foꝛ I wyl watche, to plage them, and not foꝛ their wealth. And al the men of Ju da that be in the lande of Egypt/ ſhal peryſh with the ſweard and with hon ger, vntyl they be vtterly deſtroyed.

Neuertheles, thoſe that fled away foꝛ the ſweard, ſhal come agayne into the land of Juda, but there ſhal be vy fewe of them. And al the remnaunt of Juda, that are gone into egipt, ther to dwel, ſhal know whoſe woꝛdes ſhal be found true: theirs oꝛ myne.

Take this foꝛ a token that I wyl viſette you in this place, ſayethe the LORD, and that ye maye knowe how that I (without dout) wil perfoꝛ me my purpoſe vpon you to puniſhe you. Behold, ſayeth the loꝛd I wyl de liuer Pharao Hophzea king of egipt ſeke after his lyfe: euen as I gaue ze dēs of Nabuchodonoꝛ kyng of Ba bylon, which ſought after his life.

THeſe folow the woꝛdes of ỹ Loꝛd to the pzophet Jere my, whych he ſpake vnto the Gentyles. Theſe woꝛ des folowing pꝛeached he to the Egipcyans concernyng ỹ hoſt of Pharao Necho kynge of Egipte, when he was in Charcamis beſyde ỹ water of Euphzates: what tyme as Nabuchodonoſoꝛ the kyng of Baby lon ſlew him/ In the fourthe yeare of Jehoakim the ſonne of Joſiah king of Juda. Eſay.xxi.a xxv.a

Ye make ready buckeler and child pe goo furth to fyght: Ye harneſſe your hoꝛſes, and ſet your ſelues vpon them. Ye ſet youre ſpillettes ſtaſſe on, ye bꝛynge foꝛth ſpeares, ye ſcoure your ſwerds, & put ō your bꝛeſtplates.

But alas how happeneth it, that I ſe you ſo afrayed? why ſhrink ye back wherfoꝛe are your woꝛthyes ſlayne?

Ye thei runne so fast awaie/that none of them loketh behynde him. Fearfulnesse is fallen vpō euerychons of thē sayeth the Lorde. The lightest of foote shall not flee away, and the worthyes shall not escape.

B Towarde the north by the water of Euphrates, they shall stomble and fal. But what is he thys, that swelleth vp as it weare a floude roarynge and ragyng lyke the streames of water? It is Egipte that ryseth vp lyke the floud & casteth out the waters with so great noyse.

For they saye: We wyll go vp, and wyll couer the earth: we wyll destroye the cyties/with them that dwel therin Get you to horsebacke/ roll furthe thy Charettes, come forth ye worthyes, ye moritans, ye Lybians wyth youre bucklers/ye Lydeans with your bowes: so shall thys daye be vnto the lorde God of hostes, a day of vengeaunce/that he maye auenge hym of hys Ennemyes. The swearde shall deuoure/it shal be sattisfyed and bathed in theyr bloud a* For the lord god of hostes shall haue a slayne offering toward the north by the water of Euphrates. Go vp, O Galaad, and bringe tryacle vnto thee daughter of Egypte.

But in vayne shalt thou go to chirurgery, for thi wound shal not be stopped. The Hethen shal heare of thy shame, and the lande shalbe ful of thy cōfusion: For one stronge man shal stōble vpon another/ howe then shoulde they not fall bothe together

D These are the wordes that the lord spake to the prophete Jeremy, concernynge the hoaste of nabuchodonosor ꝑ kinge of Babylon which was sent to destroye the land of Egypte: Preache out thorow̄ the lande of Egypte/ and cause it to be proclaymed at Magdol, Memphys and Taphnis/and saye: Stande styll, make thee redye, for the swerd shall consume the round about

How happeneth it that thy myghtie worthyes, are falle? why stode they not fast? euen because the Lorde thrust thē downe. The slaughter was greate, for one fell euer styll vpon an other, One cryed vpon an other: Uprise lys go agayne to our owne people, and to oure owne naturall countre, from the swerde of oure enemyes.

Crye euen there/O Pharao kinge of Egipte/the tyme wyll bringe sedition. As truly as I lyue (sayth the kinge whose name is the Lord of hoostes) it shall come as the mount of Cabor/and as Lybanus, it it stode in the see. O ꝑ daughter of Egypt make redy to flie For Memphis shalbe voyde and desolate so that no man shall dwell therin b* The lande of egypte is lyke a goodly kayze calfe, but one shal come out of the northe to pycke her forwarde. c* Her wagied soudiers that be with her, are lyke fat calues.

They also shall flie away together and not abyde: for the daye of theyr slaughter and the time of theyr visitacion: shal come vpon them.

The crye of their enemies shal make a noyse/as the blast of a trompet. For they shal enter in with their hoaste, and come with axes, as it were hewers downe of wod. And they shal cut downe her wod, sayeth the Lord/without enu discretiō. For they shal be mo in nōbre then the grashoppers, so that no man shalbe able to tel them. The daughter of Egypt shalbe confounded/ whē she shalbe delyuered into the handes of ꝑ peple of the north.

Moreouer thus sayeth the lord of hoostes the God of Israel: Beholde I wyl visit that restlesse people of Alexandria/ Pharao and Egipt, yea bothe their Goddes and their kynges: euen Pharao and al thē that put their trust in hym. Yea I wyl delyuer them into the handes of those, that seke after their lyues Namely, into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon, and into the power of hys seruauntes. And after al these thinges it shalbe inhabited, as a fore tyme, sayeth the Lord.

6 But be thou a frayed (O my seruaunt Jacob) feare not thou, O Israel. For lo, I wyl helpe the fro farre, and thy seade from the lande of thy captiuyte. Jacob also shal come agayne, and be in rest: he shalbe tych, and no man shal do hym harme.

feare thou not (O Jacob my seruaūt) sayeth the Lord, for I am with thee: ād wil destroy al nacions, among whome I haue scatred the.
Neuertheles I wyl not consume thee, but chasten thee and correcte the: yea and that with discretion: nether wyl I spare the as one that were fautles.

The notes

a* The Caldees killed the Egipcyans, at ꝑ floudd of Euphrates, which was toward ꝑ North: where as yet their host was wonderous greate, and ther hoyses charettes many. But the greater their host was, the more cruel was their slaughter: so dyd the Lord punish theyr wickednes, geuing them into the handes of the Caldees: & therfore calleth the Pzopher the daye of their slaughter, the day of ꝑ lords vēgaunce, & them a slayne offring of the Lord.
b* As though he sayde. Hytherto (O Egipt) hast ꝑ bene as a goodly fayre calf, for thyne habundaūce of riches. Therfore as bullokes and ore are strong w̄ hornes & pricked forward w̄ goades (or as som cal them gaddes) so shal the Babylonias sting & prick the, & driue the to flight and ouerthrow the. By him ꝑ shuld come out of the North, is vnderstande the king of Babilon & his hoost.
* Her wayged soudiers &c. The meninge is, that ꝑ hyred host of ꝑ Egipcians gathered of the coastes & borders theron, shulde be feaxfull & weake: & more dayntey and delicious, then stzong & mankul, as mā fattened like stalle ore en: so ꝑ they shuld also flie w̄ the Egipcians, when their misery drew nye, & whēꝑ daye of thyr vysitacio & punishmēt shuld come.
The word of the lord agaynst the philistines.

The.xlbii. Chapter.

THese are the wordes, that the Lorde spake vnto Jerempe the Prophete agaynste the Philistines/ before that Pharaco smote the cytte of Azah. Thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, there shall waters aryse oute of the North: and shal growe to a greate floude, runninge ouer and coueringe the lande, the cityes, and them that dwel therein.

And the men shal crye, and al they that dwel in the lande, shal mourne at the noyse and stamping of their strōg hareed hoyses, at the shakyng of their charettes and at the rombling of the wheles.

The fathers shal not loke to theyr children, so feable and wery shal theyr hāde be: at the same tyme, when he shall come to destroye the whole land of the Philistines. He shal make waste bothe. Tyrus, Sidon and al other that are swoyne vnto them.

For the Lorde wyll destroye all Palestina/ and the other Iles, that be deuyded from the countre. Baldnesse is come vpon Azah, Ascalon wyth her other valleys shal kepee her peace.

How long wylt thou slaye, O thou swearde of the lorde? Turne againe in to thy sheeth, rest, and leaue of. But howe can it ceasse, when the Lord him selfe hath geuen him a charge against Ascalon/and rayled it vp against the cyties of the see coast?

The word of ꝑ Lord agaynst the Moabytes.

The.xlbiii. Chapter.

THus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell agaynste Moab: Wo be to the cytye of Nabo, for it shal be layde waste, brought to confusion and taken. A Esay.xv.d. xvi.a.xxv.b. Ezech.xxv.b. Sophō.ii.b. Josue.xiiii.c

Yea thy stronge cytte of Kariathiarim shalbe brought to shame, and al rayde: Moab shal nomore be had in honoure: Wycked councell shalbe taken vpon Hesebon. Come (shal they saye) let vs rote theym oute, that they maye ben omore among the nomber of the Gentyls, yea that they maye nomore be thought vpon: Thus the swearde shal persecute the: A voyce shal crye from Horonaim with greate wasting ād destrucciō, is Moab made desolate.

And thys crye shalbe hard in al her cyties. At the goynge vp vnto Luyth there shall aryse a lamentacyon: and downe towarde Horonaim, there shal be herde a cruel and a deedly crye: Get you awaye, saue youre lyues and be lyke unto the heeth in the wyldernes. B For because thou haste trusted in thy stronge holdes and treasure/ thou shal be taken a* Chamos wyth hys prestes and prynces shal goo awaye into captyuite.

The destroyer shall come vpon al cyties, none shal escape. The valleyes shalbe destroyed/ and the feldes shalbe layde waste: lyke as the Lorde hath determed.

b* Make a token vnto Moab, that she get her awaye spedely: for her cyties shalbe made so desolat, that no mā shal dwell therin.

c* Cursed be he ỹ doth the worcke of ỹ Lorde negligently, & cursed be he that keepeth backe his swerde from shedding of bloude.

Moab hath euer ben rich and careles from her youth vp, & she hath sytten and taken her ease with her treasure. She was neuer yet put oute of one vessell into an other (that is) she neuer went away into captiuite, therfore her taste remayneth, and her sauour is not yet chaunged.

But lo, the time commeth, sayth the Lorde, that I shal send her trussers to trusse her vp, to prepare and season her vessels: yea her tauckerdes rated, and shake to and fro. And Moab shalbe a shamed of Chamos/lyke as Israel was ashamed of Bethel, wherein she put her trust.

Wherfore doo ye thynke thus: we are mightie and stronge men of warre? Moab shalbe destroyed, and her cities brent vp: her chosen yong men, shalbe slayne, sayth the King, wh ose name is the Lorde of hoostes. The destruction of Moab commeth on a pace, and her fall is at hande.

All her neyghbours shall mourne for her, and all they that knowe her name, shall say: O how happeneth it, that the stronge staf, and the goodly rodde, is thus brcke? And thou doughter Dibon/ come downe from thy glory/and syt in pouertye. For he that destroyeth Moab/shall come vp to the also, & breake downe thy stronge holdes.

And thou that dwellest in Aroer, get the to the strete/and loke about the: aske them that are fledde and escaped, and saye: what thing is happened? O, Moab is confounded and ouercome.

Mourne and crye, tell it out at Arnon, that Moab is destroyed. And misery shal come vpon the playne lande; Namely/vpon Holon/and Jahazah: vpon Mephaath and Dibon, vppon Nabo and the house of Deblathaim, vpon Cariathiarim and Bethgamul, vpon Bethmaon and Carioth, vpon Bozra, and all the cytres in the lande of Moab, whether they lye farre or neare.

The horne of Moab shalbe smytte downe, and her arme broken, sayeth the lorde. Make her droncken, for she magnyfyed her selfe aboue the Lorde, that men maye clappe theyr handes at her bompte, & that she also may be lauged to scorne. O Israell, shalte thou not laugh hym to scorne, wen he is taken amonge theues? Yea because of thy wordes that thou haste spoken against him, thou shalt be driuen awai. Numb. 21.

Yea Moabites shall leaue the cytyes, and dwell in rockes of stone/and become lyke dowues, that make theyr nestes in holes.

As for Moabs pryde, we haue herde of it, she is very hye mynded. I know her stoutnesse, her boastinge, her arogancy, & the pryde of her stomack/ sayeth the Lorde. For her furiousnes maye neyther vpholde her with strenght nor dede. Therfor shal they mourninge be made for Moab/and euery mā shall cry, for Moabs sake: a lamētacion shalbe made to the men, that stāde vpon the wall. So wyll I mourne for the also, O Jazer, and for thee, O thou vynearde of Sabamah. Esaie. 16. Hiere. 48.

Thy wynebraunches shall come ouer the sea, and the braunches of Jazer but vnto thee see the destroyer shal brake vnto the harueste and grape gethetynge: Myrth and cheare shalbe taken awaye from the frymbre feld, and from the whole lande of Moab.

There shalbe no lwete wyne in the presse/the treader shall haue no stomake to crye, ye there shalbe none to crye vnto him: which afore tyme were herde from Helebon to Eleale and Jahaz, whych lyft ed vp theyr voyce from zoar vnto Horonaym, that bullock of .iii. yere old. The waters also of Nemrim shalbe dryed vp.

Moreouer I wyll make Moab cease (sayth the Lorde) from the offerings and censing that she hath made vnto her Goddes in hye places. Wherfore my herte mourneth for Moab, lyke a croude playenge an heuye songe: and for the mens sake of the brycke wall my hert moorneth also, euen as a pype ỹ pyth peth a doleful song: for they shalbe cyrkew/and destroyed.

All heades shalbe shauen, and al beardes clypped of: al handes bound/and all loines girded about with sak cloth. Upon al the house toppes and stretes of Moab, there shalbe mourning: For I wyl breake Moab lyke an vnprofitable vessel, saith the Lorde. O how ferful is she? O how mourneth she? O how doth Moab hāg down her head/ and is ashamed? Thus shal Moab be a laghyng stock, and had in derysyon of al them, that be rounde about her.

For thus sayeth the Lorde. Behold/ the enemy shal come flenge as an aegle, and spreade his winges vpon Moab. Ezech. 17. Deut. 28. Hiere. 49. Amos. 1.

They shal clyme ouer the wales/and wynne the strōg holdes. Then ỹ mighty mens hertes in Moab shalbe likeỹ hert of a woman trauelyng wt childe.

And Moab shalbe made so desolat that she shalbe nomore a peple, because she hathe set vp her selfe agaynste the lord. Feare/pyt, and snare shal com vp on ỹ (O Moab) sayeth the lord. Who so escapeth the fere, shal fal in the pyt/ and who so getteth out of the pyt, shal be taken in the snare. Esaie. 24.

For I wyl bring a yeare of visita cyon vpō Moab, sayeth the lord. They that are able to flc/ shal stand vnder ỹ shadow of Helebon. For there shal go a fyre out of Helebon, and a flame frō Sion, and shal burne vp that proude peple of Moab, both before & behynd.

Wo be vnto the (O Moab) for ỹ people of Chamos shalt perish: Ye thy sōnes & daughters shalbe led awaye captyue. Yet at ỹ last wyl I bring Moab out of captiuite agayne/ sayeth ỹ lord. thus farre of the plage of Moab.

¶ The word of ỹ Lord against ỹ ammonites, against Idumea, Damascus, Cedar & Elam.

¶ The .xlix. Chapter.

AS concernyng the Ammonites, thus the Lord sayeth: Hath Israell no chyldren, or is he without an heyre? Why hath youre kyng the taken God in? wherfore doth his people dwel in hys cyties? Beholde ther fore/the tyme commeth (sayeth ỹ lord) that I wyl brynge a noyse of warre in to Rabah of the Ammonytes. Rabel shalbe desolat, and her cytis brent vp: and the Israelites shalbe lordes ouer those that had them in possession afore, saieth the lord. Helebon shal mourne/ for it shalbe roted out of the grounde, sayeth the Lord. The cyties of Rabah shal crye out, and gyrde them selues wyth sack cloth: they shal mourne, & runne about the wales: for their kyng shal be led awaye prisoner: yee his prestes and princes with him. Jere. 48. Amos. 1.

Wherfore trustest thou in the waters stremes that flew to and fro, O thou fearce daughter: and thinkest thou art so safe (by reasō of thy treasure) that no man shal come to the?

Beholde, I wyl bringe a feare vpon the, saieth the Lord god of hoostes, from al those that be aboute ỹ: so that ye shalbe scatered euery man from another, and no man shall gather them together againe ỹ be fled. But after ỹ/ I wil bring the Ammonites also oute of captiuite agayne.

Upon the Edomites hath the lorde of hoostes spoken on thys maner: Is there no more wysdome in Theman? Is there no more good councel amōg his peple? Is their wisdom thē turned cleane to naught? Get you hence, turne your backes, crepe downe in toỹ depe, O ye cytyzines of Dedan.

For I wyll bringe destruccyon vppon Esau, yee and thee daye of hys vysytacyon. If the grape gatherers come vpon thee, shoulde they nott leaue some grapes? yf the nyght robbers came vpon thee/ shoulde they not take so much as they thought were ynough?

But I wyl make Esau bare, and discouer couer his secretes, so that he shall not be able to hyde them. Hys sede shall be wasted away ye hys bretheren and his neyghbours, and he him selfe shal not be lefte behynde.

Jere.xxvb, Ezec.xv.b i.Pet.iiii.c

Thou shalt leaue thy fatherles chil dren behynd thee/ and I wyl kepe thē and thy wyddowes shal take theyr com forth in me. For thus hath the Lorde spoken: Behold, they that men thought were vnmeete to drincke of the cuppe, haue dron ken with the fyrst: and thin kest thou then to be free?

No, no: thou shalt nether be quite nor free, but thou must drinck also: For why/ I haue sworne by my selfe (sayth the lorde) that Bozrah shall become a wyldernesse, an open shame, a laughi ge stocke and curssynge: and her cities shalbe a continuall deserte.

D For I am perfectlye informed of the Lorde, that he hath sent a message al redy vnto the heathen. Gather you together/ and go forthe against them: make you redy to the battayle, for lo:

Ibyd.ia Esay.xlvii.b. Jere.xl viiii.d

I wyll make the but smal among the heathen, and lytle regarded amo ung men.

Thy hye stommake and the pryde of thy hert haue deceaued the, because thou wylt dwellin the houles of stony rockes, and haue the hye mountans in possessiō. Neuertheles though thy nest were as hye as the Aegles/ yet wyll I cast the downe, sayth the lorde. Moze ouer Idumea shalbe a wildernes: who so goeth by yt, shalbe abashed. & wōder at all her myser able plages. Lyke as Sodome, Gomoz, and the cities that laye there about, were turned vpsyde downe (sayth the Lord) so shall no bo dy dwell in Idumea/ and no man shal haue his habitacion there. Beholde/ lyke as the lyon commeth vp from the pleasaunt medowes of Jozdane vnto the grene pastures of Etham, so wyl I dryue hym, and make hym runne aga ynst her. But who is the yong man that I wyl ozdeyne therto? Who is ly ke vnto me? What is he that wyl stry ue wyth me? What shepherd maye stā de in my handes?

Therfore heare the councell of the Lorde/ that he hath taken vpon Idu mea: and hys purpose that he hath de uysed vpon the Citezins of Theman: The least of the flocke shal teare them in peces, and loke what fayre thing they haue, they shall make it waste, and them selues also. At the noyse of theyr fall the earthe shall quake, the crye of theyr voyce shalbe herde vnto the red see. Beholde, the enemye shall come ād fle vp hyther like as it were an Aegle: and spreade his wynges vpon Bozrah. Then shall the hertes of the worthyes in Edom, be as the harte of a woman trauelynge of chylde. Upon Damascus, Hemad and arphad shall come cō fusyon, for they shall heare euell tydin ges: they shalibe tossed to and fro lyke the see that cannot stande styll. Da mascus shal be sore afrayde, and shal fle, trembleyng shal come vpon her. So row and payne shall ouertake her as a woman traueling of chylde. But how shuld so worthyppfull and glorious a cytye bee forsaken? heare therfore: her

ponge men shall fall in the stretes, ād al her men of war shal be taken away in that tyme, saieth the Lord of hostes. I wyl kyndle a fyre in the lande of da mascus, which shal consume the palace of Bedhadad.

As for Cedar and the kyngdomme of hazor, whome Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon smote downe/ the Lorde hath spoken thus vpon them: Aryse, and get you vp vnto Cedar, ād destroye the people towarde the easte. Theyr tentes and theyre flockes shall they take away/ yee they? hangynges and theyr vessell. Theyr camels also shal they carry away with them. They shal come about them on euery syde w a fearfull crye.

Fle, get you fone away, crepe into caues, that ye may dwell there: Ye in habitours of hazor, sayth the Lord: for Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babylon hathe holden a Councell concerning you, & concluded his deuyse against you. Arise, and get you vp against ponder rich and careleese people (saith the Lord) which haue nether gates ner dooze barres, and that dwel not toge ther. Theyr camels shalbe stolen/ād the droues of theyr catel driuē away.

Moreouer

Moreouer, these that be shauen wyll I scatter to warde al the wyndes/ and bringe them to destruction: yee ād that thorow their own kampe..ers, sayeth the Lord. Hazor also shalbe a dwelling for dragons, and an euerlasting wylder nesse: so that no body shal dwel there/ and no man shal haue ther hys habita cion.

These are the wordes/ that the Lord spake to the prophete Jeremy concer nynge Elam, in the begynninge of the reygne of Zedekiah kynge of Juda.

6 Thus saieth the lorde of hoostes: Be holde, I wyllbreake the bow of Elā and take away their strength: and vp on Elam I wyl bringe the foure win des from the foure quarters of heuen and wyl scatre them agaynst the same foure wyndes: And ther shalbe no peo ple, but some of Elam shal fle vnto thē For I wil cause Elam to be afraied of their ennmies, and of thē that seke their lyues: and wil bringe vpon thē the in dignacion of my wrath, saieth the lord/ And I wil persecut them with the swerd so long til I haue brought them to na ught. I wyl setmy stole in Elam/ I wyl destroye both the king and the prin ces from thence, saieth the lord. But in processe of tyme, I wil bring Elam out out of captyuytie agayne, saith the Lord.

Israel is a scatered flocke, the Lyons haue dysperſed them: First the kyng of the Assyrias deuoured them / last of al this Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilon hath bro ken al their bones.

iiii, Re xviii Esay, x, a iiii, Re, xx b

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hoſtes the God of Israel: Beholde / I wyl viset the king of Babilon and his kyngdome / as I haue vyſeted ỹ king of the Assyrians: and wyl bring Israel againe to his pleasaunt pasture, that he maye fede vpon Charmel and Basan / and be satisfyed vpon the mount of Ephraim and Galad. In those dayes and at the same tyme (sayeth ỹ lord) yf the offence of Israel be sought for / there shal none be found: Yf men enquire for the synne of Iuda / ther shal be none: for I wyl be mercyfull vnto them / whome I suffer to remayne ouer.

Go downe (O thou auenger) into the enmyes land / and vyſet them that dwel therin: downe with them / & smite them vpon the backes sayeth the lord: do accordyng to al that I haue commaunded thee. There is gone aboute the lande a crye of a slaughter and greate murther, namelye on thys maner: Howe happeneth it / that the hammerre of the whole worlde is thus broken and broſed in sonder: How chanceth it / that Babylon is become a wildernes among the Heathen on thys maner: I my selfe haue layed wayte for thee, and thou arte taken: vnawarres art thou trapped ād snared: For why / thou hast prouoked ỹ lord vnto anger: The lord hath opened hys house of ordinaunce, and brought forth the weapons of hys wrath. For the thynge that is done in the lande of the Chaldees, it is the Lord of hoſtes worcke.

These thinges shall come vpon her at the last / thet shal breake into her pryup chambre, they shall leaue her as bare as stones, that be layde together in heapes. They shall so destroye her / ỹ nothyng shalbe lefte. They shall slaye al theyr mighti souldiers, and put thē to death. Woo be vnto them, for the dai and time of theyr visitacion is at hande. We thincke I heare already a crye of them that be fled and escaped oute of ỹ lande of babylon, which shewe in Syon the vengeaunce of the Lorde oure God, the vengeaūce of hys temple: yea a voyce of them, that crye agaynste babylon call vp all the archers agaynste Babylon, pytche youre tentes rounde about her that none escape. Recompense her as she hath deſerued: and according as she hath don / so deale with her agayne: for she hath set vp her selfe agaynst the lorde, agaynst the holye one of Israell. Therfore shal her yong mē fall down in the stretes and all her mē of warre shalbe rooted out in that dai sayth the Lorde. Beholde I speake vnto thee (O thou proude) sayth the lord God of hooſtes, for thy daye shall come euen the time of thy visitacion: And ỹ proude shall stomble and fall, and noo man shall helpe hym vp. I wyll burne vp his cities with fyre, and it shal consume all that is round aboute him.

Thus sayth the lorde of hooſtes: The children of Israel and Iuda suffrebt olence together. All they that haue them in captyuitye, keape them faſte, and wyll not let them goo: but theyr aduenger and redemer is mighty, whose name is the lord of hooſtes: he shall maintayne theyr cause / he shall make the lande shake, and iudge them that dwell therein, one with another.

The sweard shal come vpon the Chaldees

dees / sayeth the lorde / vpon them that dwel in Babilon / vpon their princes / and vpon their wise men: The sweard vpō their sothsayers, as for those (thei shal become fooles.) The sweard vpō their worthyes, so that they shal stand in feare: The sweard vpon their horſemen ād charettes / and vpon al ỹ common people that dwel vnder them: so that they shall become b like wemen: The swerde vp on their treasure, so ỹ it shalbe stollen awaye: The sweard vp on their waters, so that they shalbe dried vp: For the land worshippeth images, and delyteth in straunge wonderful thinges. Therfor shal wild beſtes, Apes, and Estriches dwel therin: for there shal neuer mā dwel there, nether shal eny man haue his habitaciō there for euermore. Lyke as God destroyed Sodome and Gomorre / with the cityes that lie there about, sayeth ỹ lorde: So shall no man dwel there also, neyther shal eny man haue there his habitacion. Behold, ther shal come a peple from the North, with a greate bounde of men and many Kinges shall stande vp from the endes of the earth: They beare bowes & buckelers, cruel ar they & vnmercyfull.

Jere, l, b

Their voyce roareth lyke the ragig see / they ride vpon horſes, and com weponed to fight agaynst thee: O Babylon. As soone as the kyng of Babilon hereth tel of them, his hādes shal waxe feble: Sorow and heupues shal come vpon him, as a womā trauelling wyth child. Behold, Like as the lion cōmeth vp from the pleasaūt medowes of Jordane vnto the grene pastures of Ethan / so wyl I driue them forth / & make them run againſt her. But whom shal I chose out, ād order to such a thinge For who is like me, or who wil stryue with me: or what shepard maye stande āgainst me: Therfore here the cōcell that the lord hath geuen vpon Babylon, ānd the deuice that he hath taken vpon the land of the Caldees. The leest amonge the peple shal tere them in peces / and loke what pleasaunt thing they haue they shal laye it waste.

We wolde haue made Babilon whole (saye they) but she is not recouered. Therfore wyl we let her alone, and go euery man into his owne contre. For her iudgement ys come into heauen / and is gone vp to the cloudes.

Judicum.vii.c. iii.Reg.xix.c. Make sharpe the arowes, and fyll the quyuers, for the lord shal rayse vp the spyrite of ỹ king of ỹ Medes, which hath alredy a desyre to destroy Babylō.

This shalbe the vengeaunce of the Lorde, and the vengeaunce of his temple.

Set vp tokens vpon the walles of Babylon, make your watch strong, set your watch men in araye, yea, hold pyke vpe watches: and yet for all that shall the lord go furth wt ỹ deuile, which he hath take vpō thē ỹ dwel in Babilō:

O thou that dwellest by the greate waters: O thou that hast so greate treasure and riches, thyne ende is come: & the rekening of thy winninges. The Amos, vi.c. Lord of hoostes hath swoorne by hī self Jerem.xxii.a that he wyl ouer whelm thee with men Jeremy.x.b. lyke grashoppers in numbre, which wt a rorage shall crie: Alarum Alarum against thee. Yea euen the Lord of hostes, that with his power made ỹ earthe wyth his wysdom prepared the rounde worlde, and with his discrecyon spred Psa.cxxxv.b out the heauens. As soone as he letteth his voyce be herd the waters in ỹ ayer ware fierce: He draweth vp the clouddes from the endes of thearth. He turneth the lyghtenynges to rayne, he bringeth the windes out of their secret Esay.xlviii.c places. By ỹ reason of wysdom, al men Baruch vi.a are become fooles. Confounded be all the caruers of ymages, for the thing ỹ they make is but discreate, and hath no breath. Vayne is it and worthy to be laughed at and in the tyme of vysitacyon it shal perish.

Neuertheles, the portion of Jacob is none suche, but he that made al thinges, whose name is ỹ Lord of hoostes, he is the rodde of his enheritaunce.

C Thou breakest my weapons of warre and yet thorow thee I haue scatered ỹ nacyons and kyngdomes: Thorowe thee haue I scatred horse ād horsemē, yea, the charrettes, and such as sate vpon thē, thorowe thee I haue scatred mē and women, olde and yong, bacheler & mayden. Thorow the I haue scatered the shepard and hys flock, the husbād man and hys cattayl, the pyrnces & the rulers.

Therfore wyll I rewarde the cytye of Babylon and al her citesyns the Caldees, wt al ỹ euel which they haue don vnto Sion: yea that yee youre selues shal se it, saieth the Lord. Beholde, I come vpon the (thou mount* nop some hyll) sayeth the Lord thou that destroyest al landes. I wyl stretch out my hande ouer thee, and cast thee downe from ỹ stony rockes ād wyl make thee a brent hyl, so that nether cornerstones, nor pynnacles, nor foundacion stones shall be taken enymore out of thee, but waste & desolate shalte thou lye for euer more, saieth the Lorde.

Set vp a token in the land, blowe the trompettes amonge the Heithen, prouoke the nacyons agaynst her, call the kyngdomes of Ararat, Meny, ād Askanes agaynst her, numbre out Caphtar agaynst her, bringe as greate a sorte of horses agaynst her, as yf they were grashoppers. Prepare agaynste theim the people of the Medes wyth their kinges pryncs & al their chefe rulers, yea and the whole lande that is vnder them. The lande also shal shake and be afrayed, whē the deuise of the lorde shall come forth agaynste Babylon, to make the lande of Babylon so waste, that no man shall dwell any more therin. The Worthyes of Babylon shal leaue ỹ battel, and kepe theym selues in stronge holdes, their strength hath fayled them, they shalbe lyke women. Their dwellynge places shalbe brent vp, their barres shall be broken. One pursuaunt shall mete another, yea one poste shal come by another, to bryng the tydinges that his citte is taken in on euery side, the foordes occupyed, the fennes brēt vp, and the souldiers sore afrayed.

For thus saieth the lord of hoostes the god of Israel: the daughter of Babylon hath ben e in her tyme like as a threshing flooze, but shortely shall her harueste com. Nabuchodonosor ỹ king of Babylon hath deuoured and destroyed me, he hath made me an empty vessel. He swalowed me vp lyke a dragō, and filled hys bely with my delycates, he hath cast me out, he hath taken my sustinaunce awaye, and the thing that was was left me hath he caryed vnto Babylon, saieth the daughter that dwelleth in Sion: yea and my bloude also vnto the Caldes, saieth Jerusalem. Therfore thus sayeth the Lord: Beholde, I C wyll defend, thy cause, and aueng the: I wyl dryng vp her see, & drye vp her water sprynges.

Babilon shall become an heape of Jerem stones a dwelyng place for dragons, a fearfulnes and wondryng, because no man dwelleth there. They shal roare together lyke lyons, and as thy ponge lyons when they be angrie, so shal ther bende them selues. In their heart I shal set dryncke before them, and they shalbe dronken for ioye: Then shal they slepe an euerlasting slepe, and neuer wake, saieth the Lord: I shal carye thē downe to be slayne like shepe, lyke wethers and gootes. O, how was Sesach wonne: O, how was the glory of the whole land taken: how happeneth it, that Babilon is so wondred at amonge the Heathen: The see is risē ouer Babilō, and hath couered her with his greate waues. Her cyttes are layde wast, the land lieth vnbuilded & void: it is alone where no man dwelleth, ād wher no man traueleth thorow. Moreouer, I wyl visit Bel at Babylon: and Jerem.li.a the thing that he hath swalowed vp, ỹ same shal I plucke out of his mouth. The Gentyls also shal runne no more vnto him, yea and the walles of Babilon shal fal.

O my people, come out of Babilō, that euery man maye saue his lyfe, frō the fearefull wrath of the Lorde. Be not faynte herted, and feare not at euery rumore that shalbe herd in the lād: for euery yere bringeth new tydinges yea straunge wickednes and lordshyp. And so, the tyme commeth that I wyl visit the ymages of Babylon, and the whole land shalbe confounded, ye and her slayne shal lye in ỹ middest of her. Heauen and earth wt al that is therin, shal reioyce ouer Babilon, when the destroyers shal come vpon her from the North, saieth the Lord.

F Jerem.l.c Lyke as Babylon hath beaten downe and slaine many of Israel, so shal there fal many, and be slayne in al her kyngdome. Ye that haue escaped the swearde, haste you, stande not styll, remembre the lord afarre of: and thincke vpon Jerusalem, for we wer ashamed to heare the blasphemies: Oure faces were coucred with shame, because the straunge aleauntes came into the Sanctuary of the Lord. Wherfore beholde (saieth the lorde) the tyme commeth, that I wyl visit the ymages of Babylon, and thorowe the whole lāde they shal mourne and fal. Though Ba- Jerem.xlix.b bylon clyme vp into heauen, and kepte her power an hye: yet shal I sende her destroyers, saieth the Lorde.

A pyteous crye shalbe heard from Babilon, and a grete misery from the lande of the Caldees: when the Lorde destroyeth them, and when he dryueth out the hye stomacke and proude bostyng, wherwith they haue bene as furtious as the waues of greate water flowdes, and made great crakes with their wordes. For the destroyers shal come vpon her (euen vpon Babilon) whiche shal take her worthyes, and breke ther *bowes: for god is disposed to aueng him selfe vpon them, and sufficiently to recompence them. Ye (saieth ỹ lord) I wyl make their Pryncs, their wyse men, their chef rulers and al their worthyes, dronken: so that they shall slepe an euerlasting slepe, and neuer wake: Thus saieth the king, whose name is G the lord of hostes.

Moreouer, thus saieth the lord of hostes: The thycke wal of Babilon shalbe broken, & her proud gates shal be brent vp. And the thing that the gentiles and the people haue wrought with greate trauayle and labour, shal come to naught and be consumed in ỹ fyre.

Thys is the charge that Jeremye gaue vnto Sariah the sonne of Nerias, the sonne of Maasiah, when he went toward Babilō with Zedekiah ỹ king of Juda, in the .iiii. yere of his raigne. Now this Sariah was a peaceable Prince. Jeremy wrote in a boke al the myserye that shuld come vpon Babylon, yea and all these sermones that be wryten agaynste Babylon, and gaue Sariah thys charge: When thou when thou commest vnto Babilon, se that thou reade these wordes, and saie: O lord, thou art determed to rote out this place, so that nether people ner cattel shal dwel there eny more, but to lie waste for euer: and when thou hast red out the boke, bynde a ston to it, & cast it in the myddeste of Euphrates, and saye: Euen thus shal Babilon syncke, and be thurste downe with the burthē of trouble, that I wyl bringe vpō her: so that she shall neuer come vp agayne. Thus farre are the preachinges of Jeremy.

The. lii. Chapter.

Zedekiah was. xxi. yere old, when he was made kynge, and he raigned. xi. yeare in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Hamutal, Jeremies daughter of Lobnah. He lyued wickedly before the Lord euen as Iehoiakim dyd. Wherfore the lord was angrye at Jerusalem and Juda, so lōge tyl he had cast them out of his presēce. And zedekiah fel from the king of Babylon. But in the. ix. yere of his raigne In the tenth Moneth, the tenth day of the Moneth it happened, that Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon with al his hoost came before Jerusalem/ and besieged it/ and made them bulwarkes round about it. And this besegig of the cyte endured vnto the. xi. yeare of kyng zedekias.

B Jere. xxxix. b. xxxii. a

And in the fourth Moneth, the. ix daye of the Moneth, there was so grete honger in the cytye: that there wer/ nomore vytayles for the people of the lande. So al the soudyers brake away and fled out of the cytie by nyght thorow the waye of the porte betwene the two walles by the kynges garden.

Nowe the caldes had compassed the cytye rounde aboute/ yet wente these menne their waye toward the wildernesse.

And so the Caldes folowed vpon them, and toke zedekiah the king in ỹ felde of Jerycho/ when his hoost was runne from hym. So they caryed the kynge awaye prysonet to Reblah, vnto the kyng of Babilon in the lande of Hemath/ wher he gaue iudgement vpon him. Jeremias

The kinge of Babylon also caused zedekiahs sonnes to be slayne before his face, ye and put al the princes of Juda to death at Reblath. Moreouer he put out the eyes of zedekiah, caused him to be bound with chaines, to be caryed vnto Babilon & lay him in prison, tyl he dyed. C

Now the tenth daye of the fifth moneth in the. ix. yeare of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon, Nabusaradan the cheke captaine and the kyng of Babylons seruaūts came vnto Jerusalē, and brent vp the house of the Lord. He brent vp also the kynges palace, all ỹ houses and al the gorgeous buildinges in Jerusalem. And the whole hoost of the Caldes that were with the cheke Captayne/ brake downe al the walles of Jerusalem round about.

As for the poore people and suche folke as yet was left in the cytie, which also were fallē to the kyng of Babilō, ye and what people as yet remayned Nabusaradā the Cheke captayne caryed them away prisoners. But the poore people of the countrey, dyd Nabusaradā the cheke Captayne leaue in ỹ lāde, to occupy the vyntardes and feldes. The Caldes also brake the brasen pylers that were in ỹ house of ỹ Lord, ye the seate and the brasen lauer that was in the house of the Lorde: And caryed all the metall of them vnto Babylon. D

They toke awaye also the Cauldrōs, shouels, flesh hokes, spōnes, spōnes & al the brasen vessell ỹ was occupyed in the seruyce: With the basens, colepannes, sprynckers, pottes, candelstyckes, spones and cuppes: wherof of some were of golde, and some of syluer. E

The cheke Captayne toke also the two pyllers, the lauer ỹ. xii. brasē bullockes that stode vnder the seate/ whych king Salomon made in the house of the Lord: & all the vessell conteyned so much metal/ ỹ it might not be weyed. For euery pyller was xviii. cubites hye and the rope ỹ went about it, was. xii. cubites/ and foure fyngers thicke and rounde. Now vpon the rope were brasen knoppes, and euery knop was fiue cubites hye: and vppon the knoppes were hoopes, and pomgranates roūd about of cleane brasse. 3. Reg. vii. b

After thys maner were both the pilers fashioned with the pomgranates, wherof there were an hundred & .xcvi. which hanged vpon the hoopes round aboute. The cheke Captayne also toke Sartiah the hye preste, and Sophonah that was cheafe norte hym, and the thre kepers of ỹ treasury. He toke out of the cytie a chamberlayn which was a capteyne of the souldiers/ and seuen men that were the kinges seruauntes, which were foūd in the cytie: and Sephera captayne that vsed to mustre ỹ men of warre: with. lx men of the countre ỹ were taken in the citie. These Nabuzaradan the cheke Captayne toke/ & caryed thē to the kinge of Babilon vnto Reblath, and the kynge of Babylō caused them to be put to deathe at Reblath in the lande of Hemath. And thus Juda was ledde awaye captiue, out of his owne land. This is the summe of the people, whome Nabuchodonosor ledde away captiue. F

In the seuenth yere of hys reygne, he caryed awaye of the Iewes / three thousande, and three and twentye. In ỹ. xviii. yere/ Nabuchodonosor caryed away from Jerusalem eyght hundred and xxxii. personnes. In the. xxiii yere of Nabuchodonosor, Nabuzaradan the cheke Captayne/ toke awaye seuen hundred and. xlv. Iewes prysoners. The whole summe of al the prysoners, is foure thousande and syx hundred. G

In the. xxxvii. yeare after that Iehoiakin the kynge of Juda was caried away in ỹ. xxv. day of the. xii. Moneth, Euilmerodach kinge of Babylon (the same yeare that he reygned) gaue Iehoiakin the kyng of Juda hys pardon, and let hym oute of prison, and spake louyngly to hym. And set his trone aboue the trones of the other kynges that were with hym in Babylon. He chaunged also the clothes of his prison, yea, & he did eate with hym al hys lyke longe. And he had a continuall lyuynge geuen hym of the kynge of Babylon, euery day a certeyne thinge allowed him all the dayes of his lyfe, vntyll he dyed.

In the wrath of his indignacyon he hath brokẽ al the * horne of Israel he hath wdrawen his ryghte hand frõ the enemy: yea a flame of fyre is kynded in Jacob, and hath cõsumed vp all round about.

Daleth.

B He hath bent his bowe lyke an enemy, he hath fastened his ryght hãde as an aduersary: and euery thyng that was pleasaunt to se, he hath emptẽ it downe. He hath poured out his wrath lyke a fyre, into the tabernacle of the daughter of Sion.

He.

The lord is become lyke as it were an enemy, he hath cast downe Israel & al his places: yea, al his strong holdes hath he destroyed, and fylled the daughter of Juda with muche sorow & heupnes.

Her tabernacle (which was lyke a gardene of pleasure) hath he destroyed her hie solẽpne festes hath he put downe. The lord hath brought it so to pas ꝑ the hie solempne festes & sabbothes i Sion, are cleane forgotten. In his heye displeasure hath he made the kynge and prestes to be despysed.

The prayer of Jeremy a GIue to remembraunce (O Lorde) what we haue suffred, consyder and se oure confusion. Oure enheritaūce is turned to the straungers, and our houses to the aleauntes. We are becom careful and fatherlesse, and our mothers are as the wydowes. We are faine to drink our owne water, for money & our owne wod must we bye w̄ money. Our neckes are vnder persecution, we are wery, and haue no rest.

A fore time we yelded our selues to Oure skinne is as it had bene bȳt in an ouen / for very sore honger. The wyues are rauyshed in Sion, and the maydes in the cyties of Juda. The prynces are hanged vp with the hand of the enempes, they haue not spared ỹ olde sage men / they haue taken yonge mens lyues from them / and the boyes ar hanged vp vpon trees. The elders

The ende of the Lamentacion of Jeremy.

The boke of the Prophete Ezechiel.

The time wherin Ezechiel prophecied, & in what place. His office & office. The vision of ỹ foure beastes. The visiō of ỹ wheles. The visiō of ỹ throne, & of ỹ Image aboue ỹ throne.

The first Chapter.

IT chaunced in ỹ .xxx. yeare the fyfthe daye of the .iiii. Moneth, ỹ I was among the prisoners by the riuer of Cobar: a* where the heuens opened, and I sawe a vysion of God. Now the fyfth daye of ỹ moneth made out the fifth yeare of kyng Joachins captyuite. At the same tyme came the word of the Lord vnto Ezechiel ỹ sonne of Buzi the Preste, in the lande of the Caldees by the water of Cobar, where the hande of the Lord came vpō hym.

And I loked, and behold a stormy wynd cam out of ỹ North with a great cloud ful of fyre, which with his glister lyghtened al rounnde aboute.

And

And in the middes of the fire it was al cleare, & as it were the lykenes of foure beastes, whiche were fashioned lyke a man: saūing, that euery one had foure faces and foure wynges.

Their legges were streyghte / but their fete were lyke bullockes fete, and they glystred, as ithad bene fayre scoured metal. Under their wynges vpō al the foure corners they had mens handes. Their faces and their wynges were towarde the foure corners: yet were the wynges so, that one neuer touched another. When they went, they turned them not aboute: but echeone went streyght forwarde.

C Upon the right syde of these foure, their faces were like the face of a man, ād the face of a lyon: But vpon the left syde / they had the face of an Oxe / and the face of an Aegle. Their faces also and their wynges were spred out aboue; so that two winges of one touched euer two wynges of another / & with the other they couered their body euerypone when it went it went streyghte forwarde. Where as the spirite led them / thither they went / ād turned not aboute in their goynge.

D The fassiōn and countenaunce of the beastes was lyke hoate coales of fire / euen as though burning cressettes had bene amonge the beastes: and the fyre gaue a glystre, and oute of the fyre there went lightenynge. When the beastes went forward and backward, one would haue thought it had lyghtned. Now when I had well consydered the beastes, I sawe a worke of wheles vpon the earth with foure faces also lyke the beastes.

The fassyon and worck of ỹ wheles was lyke the sea. The four wheles were ioyned and made (to loke vpō) as it had ben one whele in an other. Whē one went forward, they went al foure, and turned them not about in their going. They were large, greate and horyble to loke vpon. Their bodies were E full of eyes round about them al four.

When the beastes went, the wheles went also wyth them: And whē the beastes lyft thē selues vp from the earth, the wheles were lyft vpalso, whether soeuer the spirite went / thyther went they also, and the wheles were lyft vp / & followed thē: for the spirite of lyfe was in the wheles. When the beastes went forth / stode styl, or lyft thē selues vpfrō the earth: thē the wheles also went, stode styll: and were lyft vp / for the breth of lyfe was in the wheles.

F Aboue ouer the heades of the beastes there was a firmament, which was fashionned as it had ben of the moost pure Christal, and that was spredde oute aboue vpon their heades: vnder the same firmament were their wynges layde abroade, one towarde an other, and two wynges couered the body of euery beast. And whē they wēt forth, I herd the noyse of their wynges, lyke the noyse of great waters, as it had bene the voyce of the great God, and a rushing together as it were of an host of men.
G And when they stode styl, they let downe their winges. Now when they stode styll, and had letten downe their wynges, it thondered in the firmament that was aboue their heades. About ỹ firmament that was ouer their heades / there was the fashion of a seate, as it had bene made of Saphyr. Upon ỹ seate ther sate one lyke a man. I behelde him, and he was lyke a cleare lyghte, as it had bene all of fyre wythin from his loynes vpwarde.

And beneth when I loked vpon hym vnder the loynes, me thought he was lyke a shining fyre, that geueth light on euery syde. Yea the shyne and glystre that lightened round aboute / was lyke a raynebowe, which in a rayny day appeareth in the cloudes. Euē so was the symilitude, wherin the glory of the Lorde appeared. When I sawe it, I fell vppon my face, and herkened vnto the voyce of hym that spake.

With that the spyrete toke me vp. And I harde the noyse of a greate rushyng and remouinge of the moost blessed glory of the lorde out of hys place.

I herd also the noyse of the wynges of the beastes, y rushed one against another,

D nynge, nor speakest vnto hym, that he maye turne from his euell way/ and so to lyue: Then shall the same vngodly man dye in his owne vnrighteousnes but hys bloude wyll I require of thyne hande. Neuertheles if thou geue warninge vnto the wycked/ and he yet forsake not his vngodlynes: thē shall he dye in hys owne wyckednes, but y hast discharged thy soule.

Now if a righteous man go from hys righteousnes, and do the thinge y is euel: I wyll laye a stombling blocke before hym, and he shall dye, because thou hast not geuen hym warning: yea dye shall he in hys owne synne, so that the vertu, which he did before shal not be thought vpō: but his bloud wil I require of thyne hande.

Neuertheles, yf thou exhortest the righteous, that he synne not, ād so the righteous do not synne: then shall he lyue/ because he hath receaued thy warnynge, and thou haste discharged thy soule. And there came the hande of the C Lord vpon me/ and he sayde vnto me: Stande vp, and go into the felde/ that I maye talcke there with thee.

So when I had rysen vp, and gon forthe into the felde: Behold/ the glory of the lorde stode there, lyke as I sawe it afore by the water of Cobar.

Then fell I downe vpon my face, and the spyrete came into me, which set me vpon my fete, and sayde thus vnto me: Go thy way, and spaere thy selfe in thine house. Behold, (O thou sonne of man) there shall chaynes be brought for thee, to bynde thee with all, so that thou shalt not escape out of them. And I wyll make thy tonge cleue so to the rofe of thy mouth/ y thou shalt be dōme, and not be as a chyder wyth them: for it is an obstinate housholde.

But when I speake vnto the, then open thy mouth, and saye: Thus saith the Lord God: who so heareth, let him heare: who so wyll not, let hym leaue: for it is an obstinate housholde.

¶ The beleage of the cytie of Ierusalem is signifyed: The longe continuaūce of the captiuitie of Israell. Inhunger is prophecyed to come in the captiuitie.

¶ The.iiii. Chapter.

THou sonne of man, a take a tile stone, and laye it before that, & describe vpon it the citie of Ierusalē: how it is beleged, how bulwerkes ād great dikes are graue on euery syde of it: describe also tentes/ and an host of mē rounde about it.

Moreouer/ take an yron panne, ād set it betwyxt thee and the cytie/ in stede of an yron wall. Then set thy face towarde it, belege it, and laye ordinaūce agaynste it, to wynne it. This shall be a token vnto the house of Israell.

But thou shalt slepe vpō the left syde/ and lay the synne of the house of Israell vpon thee. Certayne dayes apointed thou shalt slepe vpon that syde/ & bere theyr sinnes. Neuertheles, I will appoynt thee a time (to put of theyr sinnes (and the numbre of the dayes: Three hundred ād. xc. dayes must thou beare the wickednes of the house of Israell.

When thou hast fulfylled these dayes lye downe agayne, and slepe vpon thy right syde. xl. dayes, and beare the synnes of the house of Juda.

A day for a yeare, a day (I saye) for a yeare, wyll I euer laye vpon thee.

Therfore set now thy face against that beseged Jerusalem and discouer thyne arme, that thou mayest prophecye a gaynst it.

Beholde, I wyll laye chaynes vpō thee, that thou chalt not turne thee frō me, one syde to an other, tyll thou hast ended the dayes of thy syege.

¶ Wherfore/take vnto thee wheate, barley, beanes, growell sede, Millium and fytches: and put these together in a vessel, and make thee loaues of bred therof/accordīg to the numbre of the dayes that thou must lye vpon thy syde: that thou mayest haue bread to eate, for thre hundred and. xc. dayes.

And the meate that thou eatest, shal haue a certen weyght appoynted, namelye twentye sycles euerye daye. Thys appoynted Meate, shalte thou eate daylye, from the beginning to the ende.

Thou shalt drincke also a certayne measure of water: Namelye/the sixte parte of an Hin shalt thou drinke dayly from the beginninge vnto the ende. Barley cakes shalt thou eat/ yet shalt thou fyrst stryke them ouer with mans douge/that they maye see it. And with that sayde the Lorde: Euen thus shall the chylderen of Israell eate theyr defiled bread in the middes of the gentiles, among whome I will scatter thē.

Then sayde I: Oh Lord God: Behold/my soule was yet neuer defiled: for, frō my youth vp vnto thys houre I did neuer eate of a deade carcase/or of that which was slayne of wylde beastes/nether came there euer any vncleane fleash in my mouth

Wher vnto he answered me, ād sayde: Se well than, I wyl graunt thee to take cowes donge, for the donge of a mā and to stryke the bread ouer wyth all, before them.

And he sayde vnto me: Beholde ꝑ sonne of man, I wyll mynysche all the prouision of bread in Jerusalem, so ꝑ they shall weye theyr breade, and eate it with scarcenesse. But as for water/ they shal haue a very lytle measur ther of to drynche. And when they haue no more breade nor water, one shalbe destroyed with an other, and sampshe away for theyr wickednes.

a ✻ Thys is a prophecy done by an outwarde signe as in Jeremy. xiii. a. When the people are vnwoythy of the worde of God, then are the Prophetes cōmaunded to vse such visible signes as here to paynte out Jerusalem and the besegeng therof in a tyle stone.

¶ The rydle of the heares, by which is sygnified the destruction of the people. The causes of the anger of God towarde the people. The Lorde discloseth the rydele of the hearres

¶ The. v. Chapter.

THou sonne of mā, take ꝑ thē a sherpe knyfe, namely a rasoure. Take that, and shaue the heare of thy hede and beerde: then take ꝑ scoales and the weyght / and diuyde the heare asunder. and burne the. iii. parte therof in the fyre in the myddest of the cyte/ād cut the other thyrd parte in peces with a knyfe. As for the thyrde parte that remayneth cast it in the wynde/and then shewe the bare knife.

Yet afterwarde take a lytle of the same, and binde it in thy cote lappe. Then take a curtesye of it, and cast it in the middest of the fyre, and burne it in the fyre. Out of the same fyre shal there go a flame vppon the whole house of Israel. Moreouer thus sayd the Lorde God: This same is Jerusalem. I set her in the myddest of the hethen and nacion: that arroūd about her/but she hathe despised my iudgementes more then the gentyles them selues: and broken my commaundementes more then the nacions/that lye rounde about her: For they haue cast out myne ordynaunces/ and not walked in my lawes: Therfore, thus sayth the Lord God: for so much as ye with youre wickednes farre exceade ꝑ heathen that dwell rounde about you (For ye haue not walked in my lawes nether haue ye kepte my ordinaunces) Therfore thus sayth the lorde God:

I wyll also come vpon thee, for in the myddt of thee wil I syt in iudgmēt, in in the syght of the heathen, & wyl hādle thee of suche a fashion, as I neuer did before/ and as I neuer wyll do from ꝑ tyme forth, and that because of al thine abhominacyons.

For euen the fathers shall be fayne to eate their owne sonnes, and the sōnes their owne fathers. Suche a court wyl I kepe in thee/ and the whole remnant wil I scatter into al the wyndes.

Wherfore as truly as I lyue (sayeth the lord God) seyng thou hast defyled my Sanctuary/ wyth al maner of abhominations and wt al thy shamful offences: For thys cause will I also destroie thee. Myne eye shal not ouerle ꝑ, neyther wil I spare thee.

One third parte within the c. shall dye of the pestilence and of honger: Another thirde parte shalbe slaine downe round about the/wt the sweard: The other third part ꝑ remayneth/ wil I scatre abrod toward al the wides/& draw out the swerd after them. Thus I wil perfourme my indignacion and set my wrath against them, & ease my self. So that when I haue fulfylled myne anger against them, they shal knowe ꝑ I am the lord, which with a feruēt gelousy haue spoken it. Moreouer I wil make thee wast and abhorred, before al the Heathen that dwel about thee and in the sight of al them, that go by ther. So that when I punish thee in my wrath/ in mine anger, and wt the plage of my whote displeasure, thou shalt be a very abhominacion, shame, a gasing and wondring stock/ among the Heathen ꝑ lye about thee. Euen I the Lord haue spoken it, and it shal come to pas/ whē I shote among them the perlous dartes of honger, which shalbe but death: Yea therfore shal I shote them, because I wyl destroy you. I wyl encrese hōger & myntsh al the prouision of bred among you.

Plages and misery wil I send you yea and wyld beastes also to destroye you. Pestilence and bloudshedig shal cōe vpon you, & the swaerd wil I bringe ouer you. Euen I the Lord haue saide it.

¶ She sheweth ꝑ the peple shalbe plaged for ꝑ synne of Idolatri. He prophecieth ꝑ repētance of the remnaūte of the people, & their deliueraunce.

The destruction of the sweard is prophesied.

¶ The. vi. Chapter.

AND the word of the Lorde came vnto me, sayig: thou sonne of man, turne thy face to the mountaines of Israel/that thou mayest prophecie vnto them, and saye: Heare the word of the lord god/ Ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus hath the lord god spoken to the mountaynes, hilles, valleys and dales. Ezec. xxxvi. e

Behold/ I wyl bring a sweord ouer you/and destroye your hye places: I wyl cast downe your altars, and breke doune your temples. Your slayne men wyl I laye before youre goddes, and ꝑ deed carcases of the children of Israel wyl I caste before their ymages/ youre boones wyll I destroye rounde aboute youre aulters/ and dwellynge places.

The cyties shalbe desolate, the hil chapels layde waste, youre altars destroyed, and broke, your gods cast downe, and taken awaye, youre Temples laid euen wyth the ground, your owne workes cleane roted out.

Youre slayne men shal lye among you, that ye maye lerne to know, how ꝑ I am the Lord. Those that among you haue escaped the swerd, wyl I lea me among the Gentils, for I wyl scatter you among the nacōs. And they ꝑ escape from you, shal thincke vpon me among the Heathen where they shalbe in captiuitie. Baru. iii. k

As for that whorysshe and vnkaythful herte of theirs, wherewyth they tūne awaye from me, I wyll breake it: yea and put oute those eyes of theyrs/ that commytte fornycation wyth their Idoles.

Then shall they be ashamed, and displeased with their selues, for ꝑ wyckednes and abhominacōs, which they haue done: and shall lerne to knowe/ how that it is not in vayne/ that I the lord spake/ to bringe such misery vpō them.

The Lorde sayde moreouer vnto me: Smyte thyne handes together/ād stampe wyth thy fete/ and saye:

Yy. ii

wo worth al the abhominacions and wicked nesses of the House of Israell, for because of them/they shall perysshe with the swearde, with hunger, and with pestilence. Who so is farre of/shall dye of the pestilence: he that is nie at hand shall perysh with the swearde: and the other that are beseged, shal dye of hunger.

Thus will I satisfy my wrathfull displeasure vpon them: And so shal ye learne to knowe, that I am the Lorde, when your slayn men lye among your goddes, and about your aultars: vpon all hye hylles and toppes of mountaynes, among all grene trees/among al thyck okes: euen in the places / where they did sacrifyce to all theyr Idoles I wil stretch mine hand out vpō thē, and wyl make the land waste so that it shal lye desolate and voyde, from the wyldernesse of Deblathah forth, throughout theyr habitacions: to learne them for to knowe, that I am the Lorde.

¶ The ende of all the lande of Israell shall sodenly come. The cause of the destruction therof: The prophete is commaunded to shewe the ruines of the cities that are at hande.

¶ The. vii. Chapter.

THe worde of the Lord came vnto me on this maner: Thou I cal/O thou son of man. Thus sayeth the lorde god vnto the lande of Israel: The ende commeth/ye verely the ende commeth vppon all the foure corners of the earth.

But now shal the ende come vpon thee: For I will sende my wrath vpon thee, and wil punysh thee: according vnto thy wayes and reward thee after al thy abhominacions.

Myne eye shall not oversee thee, neither wyl I spare the: but reward thee, according to thy wais, & declare thy abhominacions. Then shall ye know, that I am the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: Behold, one mysery and plage commeth vpon an other: the ende is here. The ende (I say) that wayteth for thee, is come already/the houre is come against thee/that dwelleth in the lande

The tyme is at hande, the daye of sedicion is hard by, and no glad tidinges vpon the mountaynes. Therfore, I will shortly poure out my sore displeasure ouer thee, and fulfyl my wrath vpon thee. I will iudge thee after thy wayes, and recompense thee all thy abhominacions.

Myne eye shall not oversee thee, neyther will I spare thee: but reward thee after thy wayes, and shewe thy abhominacions, to learne you for to know, how that I am the lorde that smyteth. Beholde, the daye is here, the daye is come, the houre is runne out, a* ỹ rod flourysheth, wylfulnes waxeth greene, malycious violence is growen vp and the vngodlye waxen to a staf. Yet shal there no complaint be made for them, nor for the trouble that shall comme of these thinges.

The tyme commeth/the day draweth nye: Who so byeth, let him not reioyse he that selleth/let him not be sori for why. Trouble shall comme in the middest of al reste: so that the seller shal not come agayne to the byer / for neyther of them both shal lyue. For the vision shall come so greatly ouer all, that it shall not be hyndered: No man al so with his wickednes shall be able to saue his owne lyfe. The trompettes shall ye blowe/and make you all ready/but no man shall go to the battel, for I am wroth with all the whole multitude.

The swearde shalbe without, pestilence and hunger within, so that who so is in thee felde/shalbe slayne with the swearde: and he that is in the cyte, shall perysh with hunger and pestilence.

And such as escape & fle from among them, shalbe vpon the hylles, lyke as the doues in the feld: euery one shal be afrayed, because of his own wyckednes.

All handes shallbe let downe, and all knees shal be weake as the water: They shal gyrde them selues with sackcloth feare shal fall vpon them.

Their faces shalbee confounded, *and their heades balde, their syluer shall lye in the streates, and their gold shall be dispised: *ye theyr syluer and gold make not deliuere the, in the daye of the fearful wrath of the Lorde.

They shall not satisfye their hongry soules/neither fyl their entrayles therwith. For it is become their owne decate through their wickednes: because they made therof not only costly Jewels for their pompe and pryde, but also abominable imags & Idoles.

For thys cause wyll I make them to be abhorred. Moreouer, I wyll geue it into the handes of ỹ straūgers to be spoyled: and to the wycked, for to be robbed, and they shal destroye it. My face wyl I turne from them/ my treasure shalbe defiled. for the theues shal go into it, and suspende it. I wyl make cleane riddaunce, for the lande is whole defyled wt vnrighteous iudgment of innocent bloude, and the cyte is ful of abhominacions. Wherfore, I wyl bryg the most cruel tyrauntes frō among ỹ Heathē, to take their houses in possessiō. I wyl make the pompe of the proude to ceas, and they shal take in their Sanctuary. When this trouble commeth, thei shal seke peace, but they shall haue none. One myschefe and sorow shal followe another, and one rumoure shal come after another; Then shal they seke vysyons in vayne at their Prophetes. The lawe shalbe gone from the prestes, and wysdome from the elders. The kynge shal mourne, the Prynces shalbe clothed with heuynes/and the handes of the people in the lande shal tremble for feare. I wyl do vnto them after their owne wayes, and according vnto their owne iudgmentes wyll I iudge them: to lerne them for to knowe/that I am the Lorde.

¶ In apperaunce of ỹ lyuelyhed of god Ezechiel is brought vnto Jerusalē in the spyrite. The Lorde sheweth ỹ Prophete ỹ Idolatryes of the house of Israel, and chefly of the Prestes.

¶ The. viii. Chapter.

IT happened, that in ỹ sixt yeare the fyfth daye of the sixte moneth I set in my house, and the Lordes of the councel of Juda wt me, and the hande of the Lord god fel euē there vpon me. And as I loked vp, I saw as it were a lyckenes of fyre frō his loynes downe warde/and from his loynes vpwarde it shyned meruelous clere. This similitude stretched out an hande, and toke me by the hearye lockes of my head, and the spyrite lift me vp betwixte heauen and earth: and God brought me in a vysion to Jerusalem, into the entry of the a* inner porte that lyeth toward the North: there stod an ymage, with whom he that hath al thynges in his power, was very wroth.

And beholde, the glorye of ỹ God of Israel was in the same place: euē as I had sene it afore in the felde.

And he saide vnto me: Thou sonne of man/O lift vp thine eyes, and loke towarde the north, and beholde: beside the port northward, there was an aulter made vnto ỹ ymage of prouocacō on ỹ very entrig i. And he said further more vnto me: Thou sonne of man/seist thou what thes do? Seist thou the greate abhominacyons ỹ the house of Israel commit in thys place: which ought not to be done in my sanctuary?

But turne the about, and thou shalt se yet greater abhominacions. And with that brought he me to the courte gate: and when I loked/behold, there was a dore. And he sayde vnto me: Go thy waye in, and loke what wycked abhominacyons they do there. So I went in/and sawe: and beholde, there were al maner ymages of wormes & beasts al Idoles and abhomynacyons of the house of Israel paynted euery one rounde about the wall.

There stodde also before the ymages. lxx. Lordes of the councell of the house of Israell: and in the myddest of them stode Jaazanyah the sonne of Saphan:

And euerye one of them had a censoure in hys hande/and out of the incense, there wente a smoke, as yt had bene a cloude.

Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sōne of man, hast thou sene what the Sena tours of the house of Israel on secretly euery one in his chābre? For they saie: Tush the lozd seyeth vs not, the lozde regardeth not the wozlde. And he sayd vnto me: Turne ẏ yet agayne, & thou shalt se the greate abhominaciōs that they do. And wyth that he brought me to the doze of the pozte of the Lozdes house, towarde the nozth. And behold there sate women mournynge foz[b*] Thamus. Then saide he vnto me: hast thou sene thys, thou sonne of mā? Turne the about, and thou shalt se yet greater abhominacyons. And so he brought me into the inwarde court of the lozdes house, betwyxte the foze entrye and the aultar, there were fyue ād twenty men, that turned their backes vpon the temple o ſ the lozd, & their faces toward the east, & these wozshipped the sonne.

And he sayd vnto me: hast ẏ sene this thou sonne of man? Thynketh the house of Israel/that it is but a tryfle, to do these abhominacyons? So ould they fyl the laude ful of wyckednes, ād vndertake to pzouoke me vnto āger? Yea and purposly to cast vp their noses vpon me?

Therfoze wyl I also do somthynge in my wzothful displeasure, so ẏ myne eye shal not ouer se them, nether wyl I spare them. Yea and though they crie in myne eares wt a loud voyce, yet wyl I not heare them.

The notes.

a* The hyll Sion was walled rounde about and that wall wheych compassed it was called the outward de wall: About the temple was there another wall, that was called the in warde wall: wheych although it were out warde from the tẽple, yet was it in warde from the wal wheych compassed the hyl The space betwene the in warde wall and the temple, was called the inner courte. Ther in were many poztes, and in the nozth pozte ther of was Ezechiel ser: foz that place was holy, and ther in dyd they vse to wozshyp God: but with the fylthynes of this hateful ymage of Baal (whiche the Pzophet here calleth the ymage of pzouocaciō be cause it pzouoked the Lozde to vengeaunce) hadde they defyled it: as superstycion doth comōly defile euē the most holiest thinges, and soch as appeare most godlyest

¶ The.xi. Chapter.

HE cryed also wyth a loude voyce in myne eares/saying Come here ye rulers of the cytie, euery man wyth hys wepened hand to ẏ slaughter. Then came there sixe men out of ẏ strete of the vpper pozte towarde the nozth/and euerye man a wepen in hys hande to the slaughter. Ther was one amongest them, that had on hym a lynen rayment & a wzyters pynckhozne by hys syde.

These went in/and stode beſyd the brasen tuler: foz the glozy of the Lozd was gone awaye from the Cherub/ & was come downe to the thzeshold of ẏ house, and he called the man that had the lynen rayment vpon hym/and the wzyters pynck hozne by hys syde/and ẏ Lozde sayde vnto hym: Go thy waye thozow the cytye of Jerusalem/and set this marke. Thau vpon the foreheades of thē that mourn and are sozy foz all the abhomynacyons, that bee done therin.

And to the other, he saide that I might heare: Go ye after hym thozow the citie: slae, ouerse none, spare none: kyll & destroie both olde men and ponge, maydens/chyldren and wyues.

But as foz those, ẏ haue this marke Thau vpon them: se that ye touche thē not/and begynne at my Sanctuary.

Then they beganne at the elders, whiche were in the temple, foz he had sayde vnto them: When ye haue defyled the temple, and filled the court wyth the slayne, then goo youre wāye foꝛth.

So they wente out, & slewe doune thozow the cyte. Now when they had done the slaughter, and I yet escaped I fel doune vpon my face, and cryed/ saiyng O Lozd/wylt thou thē destroy all the reſtud of Israel, in thy soze dysplearure, that thou hast poured vpon Jerusalem.

The

Then saide he vnto me: The wickednes of the house of Israell and Iuda, is very great: so that the land is full of blou de, and the cit ie full of vnfaythfulnesse: Foz they say. Tush, the Lozd regardeth not the earth, he seyth vs not. Therfoze wyll I vppon them, myne eye shall not ouerse them neyther wyll I spare them, but wyll recompense theyr wyckednesse vpon theyr heades. And beholde the mā that had the lynen rayment vpon hym and the wziters pynckhozne by hys syde: tolde all the matter how it happened ād sayde. Lozde/as thou hast commaunded me/so I haue done.

¶ Of the man that toke whote burning coles oute of the mydle of the wheles & of the cherubyns, in token of the burnyng of Jerusalem. A rehersall of the vision of the wheles, of the beastes, and of the cherubyns.

The.x Chapter.

AND as I loked beholde/in the fyrmamente that was aboue the cherubyns there appeared the symilytude of a stole of Saphyr vpon them Then sayde he that sate therein/ to hym that had the lynen rayment vpon hym: crepe in betwene the wheles that are vnder the cherubyns, and take thyne hand full of hoate coles out from betwene the Cherubyns and caste them ouer the cyte And he crepte in that I myght se.

Now the Cherubins stode vpon the ryght syde of the house: when the manne went in and the cloude fylled the vnnermer courte. But the glozye of the Lozde remoued from the cherubyns, and came vpon the threshold of the house, so that the temple was full of cloudes / and the courte was full of the shyne of the Lozdes glozy. Yea and the sounde of the cherubyns wynges was heard into the foze courte, lyke as it had beene the voyce of the almyghtye God/when he speaketh. Now/when he had bydden the man that was clothed in lynen to go and take the hoate coales frō the myddest of the wheles, wheych were vnder the cherubyns. he went and stode beſyde the wheles. Thē the one Cherub reached foꝛth hys hande from vnder the Cherubins vnto the fyr that was betwene the cherubyns, and toke therof, and gaue it vntoo hym that had on the lynen rayment in hys hande: wheych toke it and went out. And vnder the wynges of the Cherubyns, there appeared the lykues of a mans hand: I saw we also four wheles beſyd the Cherubis so that by euery cherub ther stode a whele. And the wheles were (to loke vppon) after the fashyō of the pzecyous stone of Tharsys. yet vnto the syght, were theye fashyoned and lyke as yf one whele had bene in an other.

When they went foꝛthe/they wente all foure together/ not turnynge aboute in theyr goynge: but where the fyrst wente, thether went they after also/ so that they turned not about in theyr goynge. Theyr whole bodyes, theyr backs/theyr handes and wynges, yea and the wheles also were all full of eyes rounde aboute them all foure. And I heard hym call ẏ wheeles Galgall (that is) a rounde boule. Euery one of them had foure faces: so that the one face was the face of a Cherub the seconde of a man, the thyrde of a lyon, the fourth of an Aegle, and they were lyfted vp aboue. Thys is the beaste that I saw at the water of Cobar. Now when the cherubins went, the wheles wēt with them, and when the Cherubyns shoke theyr wynges to lyfte them selues vp warde/ the wheles remayned not behind but were wyth them also. Shortly whē they stode, these stod also. And when they were lyft vp, the wheles wer lyft vp also wyth them/foz the spzete of lyfe was in the wheles.

Then the glozye of the Lozde was lyfte vp from the thzeshoulde of the temple/and remayned vpon the Cherubyns And the Cherubyns flackred with theyr wynges and lyft theym selues vp from the earthe, so that I sawe when they wēt and the wheles wyth them. And they stode at the East syde of the poozte that ys in the house of the Lozde. So the glozy of the Lozd was vpon them.

Thys is the Beast that I sawe vnder the god of Israel/by the water of cobar. And I perceaued, that it was ẏ cherubyns. Euery one had foure faces, and euery one four wynges/and vnder theyr wynges/as it were mens handes.

Now

Now the figure of theyr faces was, euē as I had sene them, by the water of Cobar, and so was the countenaunce of thē: Euery one in hys goinge went streyght forwarde.

¶ Who they were that seduced the people of Israel. Agaynst these he prophecieth, shewinge thē how they shalbe disparpled abroade. The renewinge of the hert cōmeth of God, otherwise can we not walke in his commaundementes. He threateneth them that leane vnto theyr owne counsels.

The.xi. Chapter.

A MOreouer, the spyrete of the Lord lyft me vp and brought me vnto the Easte port of the Lordes house. And beholde there were.xxv. men vnder the dore, amonge whome I sawe Jaazaniah the sonne of Azur, and Pheltiah the sonne of Banaiah, ꝑ rulers of the people. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: Thou sonne of man: these men ymagyne mischefe, and a wycked counsell take they in thys cytie, sayinge: tush, ther is no destruction at hande, lette vs buylde houses: this Jerusalem is the cauldron and we be the flesh. Therfore shalt thou prophecy vnto them, ye prophecy shaltte thou vnto them, O sonne of man. And with that fell the spyrete of the Lorde vpon me, and sayd vnto me: Speake, thus sayeth the Lorde: On thys maner haue
B ye spoken (O ye house of Israel) and I know the ymaginations of youre hertes. Many one haue ye mutthered in thys cytie, and filled the stretes full of the slayne. Therfore, thus saith the Lorde God: The slayne men that ye haue layde on the ground in thys cytie, are the flesshe, & thys cytie is the cauldron: But I wyll bryng you out of it: ye haue drawen out Ezec. xxiiii. a Mat. xxvi. e. the swearde, euen so wyll I also bringe a sweard ouer you, sayth the Lord god. I wyll dryue you oute of thys cytie and delyuer you into youre enemies handes, and wyl condempne you. Ye shalbe slayne in all the coastes of Israell: I wylbe auenged of you: to lerne you for to knowe, that I am the Lord. Thys cytie shal not be your cauldron, neyther shall ye be the flesh therin: but in the coastes of Israell wyll I punysshe you, that ye maye Leui. xviii. a Deuter. xii. d knowe that I am the Lord: in whose cōmaundementes ye haue not walcked, nor kept hys lawes: but haue done after the customes of the Hethen, that lie rounde about you.

Now when I preached, Pheltiah ꝑ C sonne of Banaiah dyed. Then fell I downe vppon my face, and cryed wyth a lowde voyce: O Lord God, wylte thou then vtterlye destroye all the remnaunte in Israel? and so the worde of the Lord came to me in this maner: thou sonne of man: thy brethren, thy kynsfolcke, and the whole house of Juda, which dwel at Jerusalem, saye: they be gone farre frō the Lorde, but the lande is geuen vs in possessyon. Therfore tell them, thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll sende you far of among the Gentyles, and scattre you among the nacions, and I wyll hallow you but a lytle, in the landes where you shall come. Tell them also thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll gather you agayne oute of the nacions, and bringe you from the countrees wheare you be scattred and wyll gyue you the lande of Israel agayne: thyther shall ye com. And as for al impediments and all youre abominations: I wyll take them awaye.

And I wyll geue you one herte, and D Jere. xxxii. Ezec. xxxvi. I wyll plante a new spyrete within youre bowels. That stonye herte wyll I take out of youre body, and geue you a * fleshly herte: that ye maye walcke in my commaundemets, and kepe myne ordynaunces, and do them: that ye maye be my people, and I your God. But loke whose hertes are dysposed to folowe theyr abhominacyons and wicked lyuynges: those mens dedes wyll I bringe vpon theyre owne heades, sayth the Lord God. After thys dyd the cherubins lyft vp theyr wiges, and the wheles wente with them, ād the glorye of the Lorde was vpon them. So the glory of the Lorde went vp frō the middest of the city, and stode vpon ꝑ mount of the citye toward the Est. But the wynde toke me vp and in a vysyon, (which came by the spyrete of God) it brought me agayne into caldea amonge the prisoners. Then the vision that I hadde sene vanished away from me. So I spake vnto the prysoners all the wordes of the Lorde whych he had shewed me.

¶ The.xii. Chapter.

A THe word of the lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, thou dwellest in ꝑ middest of a frowarde houshold which haue eyes to se, and yet se not: eares haue they to heare, ād yet heare they not, for they are an obstinate houshold. Therfore (O thou sonne of man) make thy geare redy to flye, ā d go forth by faire daye light, that they maye se.
Yea, euen in their sight shalt thou go from thy place to another place: ꝑ per aduenture they wyl consydre, that they be an vnobedient houshold. Thy
B gear that thou hast made redy to flight with al, shalte thou beare out by fayre daye light, that they maye see: and thou thy selfe shalt go forth also at euē in theyr sight, as a mā doth whē he flitteth. Digge thorow the wal, that they maie se, and beare thorowe it the same thing, ꝑ thou takest vp in their sight. As for thy self thou shalt go forth in ꝑ darcke. Hide thy face that thou se not ꝑ earth, for I haue made the a shewtokē vnto the house of Israel.

Now as the Lord commaunded me so I dyd: there gere that I had made redy, brought I out by daye. At euen I brake downe an hole thorow the wal wt my hand & when it was darcke, I toke the gere vpon my shoulders, and bare them out in their sight.

And in the morning, came ꝑ word of the lord vnto me, sayinge: Thou
C sonne of man, if Israel ꝑ frowarde houshold aske the, and saye: what doest ꝑ there? Then tel them: Thus sayeth the Lord god: This punishment toucheth the chefe rulers at Jerusalem, and all the house of Israell, that dwel amōge them: Tel them I am your shewtoken lyke as I haue done, so shal it happen vnto you: Flyt shal ye also, and go into captiuite. The chefest that is amōg you shall lade his shoulders i ꝑ darke and get him away. He shal breake downe the wal, to carye stuf there thorow: He shall couer his face, that he see not the grounde, with his eyes. My lyne wyl I spread out vpon him, and catch him in my net, and carye him to Babilon, in the lande of the Caldees: which he shal not se, and yet shal he die there. As for al hys helpers, and al his Hostes, that be about him, I wyl scatre thē toward al the wyndes, and drawe out a sword after them. So whē I haue scatred them among the Heathē, and strowed theym in the landes, they shal know, that I am the Lord. But I wyl leaue a lytle numbre of thē frō the sweard, hunger and pestilence: to D tel al their abhominacions amonge ꝑ heathen, where they come, ꝑ they maye know, how ꝑ I am the lord.

Moreouer, the word of the Lord came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man: wyth a fearful trembling shalt ꝑ eat thy bred, with carefulnes ād sorow shalt thou drynke thy water. And vnto the people of the landa, speake thou on this maner: Thus sayeth the Lord god, to them that dwel in Jerusalem, and to the land of Israel: Ye, shal eate your bred wt sorow, and drynke youre water with heupnesse. Ye the land with the fulnes therof shalbe laid wast for the wyckednes of them that dwell therin. And the cyties that now be wel occupyed, shalbe voyde, and the lande desolate that ye maye know, how ꝑ I am the Lord.

Yet came the word of the Lord vn- E to me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man what maner of by worde is that, which ye vse in the land of Israel, saying: Tush, seyng that the dayes are so slack in commynge, al the vysions ar of none effecte: Tel them therfore thus sayeth the lord god: I wyl make ꝑ by-word to ceasse, so that it shal nomore be cōmonly vsed in Israel.

But say this vnto them: The dayes are at hand, that euery thig which hath ben prophecied, shalbe fulfylled. There shal no vysiō be in vaine, nether any prophecy fayle among the childre of Israel: For it is I ꝑ lord, that spake it ād whatsoeuer I ꝑ lord speake it sybl be performed, and not be slack in commynge.

Yea

Yea euen in youre dayes (O ye froward houshold) wil I deuise somthig, and bringe it to passe, sayeth the lorde God. And the worde of the Lorde cam vnto me, saying: Beholde, thou sonne of man: The house of Israell saye in this maner: Tush as for the vision that he hath sene, it wylbe many a day or it come to passe: Is it farre of yet, ye thynge that he prodicateth. Therfore saye vnto them: Thus sayth the lorde God: All my wordes shall no more be slacke: Loke what I speake, that same shall come to passe, sayth the Lord.

¶ The worde of the lord against false prophetes, which teache the people the counsels of their own hertes.

¶ The.xiiii. Chapter.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me saying: Thou sonne of man, Speke prophecye agaynste those prophetes, that preache in Israell: and saye thou vnto them that prophecy out of their owne herte: Heare the worde of the lorde, thus sayeth the Lord God: Wo be vnto those folysshe prophetes, that folowe their owne spyret, and speke wher they se nothing. a* O Israel, thy prophets are lyke the foxes vpon the drye walde: For they stande not in the gappes nether make they an hedge for the house of Israell/ that men myght abyde the parel in the day of the Lorde. Vayne thinges they see/ and tell lyes/ to mayntayne their preachinges with all. The lorde (saye they) hath spoken it/ whan in very deede the Lord hath not sent them. Vayne vysions haue ye sene, and spoken false prophecies/ when ye saye: the Lorde hath spoken it where as I neuer sayde it.

B Therfore/ thus sayth the Lord god: Because youre wordes be vayne/ and ye seke out lyes: Behold, I wyll vpon you, sayeth the Lorde. Myne handes shall come vpon the prophetes that loke out vayne thynges, & preache lyes: they shall not be in the councell of my people/ nor written in the boke of ye house of Israell/ nether shall they come in the lande of Israell: ye maye knowe/ how ye I am the Lorde God. And ye for this cause: they haue deceaued my people/ and tolde them of peace/ where no peace was. One leteth vp a wall, and they dawb it with lowse clay. Therfore tell them which dawbe it with vntempered morter, that it shall fall. For there shall come a great shower of rayne, great stones shall fall vppon it, and a fore storme of wynde shal breake it, so shall the wall come downe. Shall it not then be sayde vnto you: Where is now the morter, that ye dawbed it with all? Therfore thus saith the Lord god: I wyll breake out in my wrothful displeasure with a stormye wynde, so that in myne anger there shall come a myghtye shower of rayne, and hayle stones in my wrath, to destroye with all.

As for the walle that ye haue dawbed withe vntempered morter, I wyll breke it downe, make it euen with the grounde: so that the foundacion there of shall remoue, and it shall fal, yea & ye your selues shall perysh in the middest therof: & so ierne you for to knowe, that I am the Lord. Thus wyll I perfourme my wrath vpon this wall, and vppon them that haue dawbed it with vntempered morter, and then wyll I saye vnto you: The wall is gone, and the dawbers are awaye. These are the prophetes of Israell/ which prophecye vnto the cytie of Jerusalem, and loke out visions of peace for them, whereas no peace is, sayth the Lord God. Wher fore (O thou sonne of man) set thy face against the daughters of thy people, which prophecy out of their owne hertes: and speake thou prophecy against them, and saye: Thus sayth the Lorde God: Wo be vnto you, ye sowe pylows vnder all arme holes, and bolsters vnder the heades both of yonge and olde, to catch soules withall. For when ye haue gotten the soules of my people in your captiuitie/ ye prompte the lyte, and dishonour me to my people, for an hād full of barley, and for a pece of breade: when ye kyl the soules of them, that dye not, and promes lyfe to them/ that lyue not. Thus ye dyssemble with my people, that beleueth your lyes.

Wherfor thus saith the Lord god: Behold, I wyll also vpon the pylowes wherwithe ye catche the soules in flieng: then will I take from youre armes/ and let the soules go/ that ye catch in flieng. Your bolsters also wil I teare in peces/ and delyuer my people out of your handes: so that they shal come no more in your handes to be spoiled/ and ye shal know that I am the Lord.

Seing that with your lyes ye discomfort the hert of the righteous, whom I haue not discomforted. Agayne: For so much as ye corage the hand of the wycked/ so that he maye not turne fro his wicked waye/ and lyue: therfore shall ye loye out nomore vanyte, nor prophecy your owne gestinges: for I wil deliuer my people out of your hand, that ye maie know, how that I am the Lord.

The Notes

O Israel, thy prophetes. &c.

a* These teachers of mens tradicions doth ye prophet compare vnto foxes which feyne a seruyce of God, & encrese ceremonies: & teache a waye to please God, by such workes as they enryche the selues with. & by ye hedge here maye ye vnderstand prayer don in fayth.

¶ The Lord denieth his word to the people for their sinnes sake. The dispysers of ye word of the lorde sometyme deceue by false prophets. A comfort of the that fled vnto Babilon.

¶ The.xiiii. Chapter.

THer resorted vnto me certayne of the elders of Israel/ and sate downe by me. Then came the word of ye lord vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, these men beare their Idoles in their hertes, and go purposly vpon the stombling blocke of their owne wickednes: shou dare they then aske counsel at me? Therfore speake vnto them/ and say, thus saith the lord God: Euery man of the house of Israel that beareth his Idoles in hys hert, purposig to stomble in his owne wickednes, and commeth to a Prophet/ to enquete any thinge at me by him: vnto that man wil I the Lord my selfe geue answere, according to the multitude of his Idols: that the house of Israll maye be snared in their owne hertes/ because they be cleane gone fro me/ for their Idols sakes.

Wherfore, tel the house of Israel: thus saieth ye lord god: Be conuerted/ forsake your Idoles, and turne youre faces from al your abhominacions.

For euery man, (whether he be of the house of Israel or a straunger, that sogoerneth in Israel) which departeth fro me, and carieth Idols in his hert, purposing to go stil stombling in hys owne wycked nesse, and commeth to a Prophet, for to aske councel at me thorow him: vnto that man wil I ye lorde geue answere, by myne owne selfe. I wyl set my face against that man, and wyl make him to be an example for other, yea and a comen by worde: & wil rote him out of my people, that he may know how that I am the lord.

And if that prophet be dysceaued/ when he telleth hym a word: then I the lord my selfe haue disceaued that Prophet, and wyl stretch forth mine hand vpō him, to rote him out of my people of Israel: and they both shalbe punished for their wickednes. Accordinge to the synne of him that asketh, shall the Prophete be: ye house of Israel be led no more fro me thorowe errour, and be no more defiled in their wickednes: but that they maie be my people, and I their God, sayeth the lord god. And the word of the lord came vnto me saying: Thou sonne of man, when the lāde sinneth against me, and goeth forth in wickednes: I wil stretch out mine hād vpon it/ and destroye al the prouision of their bred and sende death vpō thē/ to destroye man and beast in the land. And though Noe, Daniell and Job these three men were among them, yet shal theye in their righteousnes delyuer but their owne soules, sayeth ye lord God.

Yf I bringe noysome beastes into the lande, to waste it vp, and it be so desolate/ that no man maie go therin for beastes: Yf these three men also were in the lande/ as truelye as I lyue (sayeth the Lord god) they shal saue neither sonnes nor daughtes, but be only deliuered them selues: and as for the lande, it shalbe wast.

Or, yf I bring a sweard into the lande, and charge it to go thorow the land: so ye, I slaye downe mā & beast i it,and yf these three men were therin: As truly as I lyue(sayeth the lord God) they shal delyuer nether sonnes nor doughters,but onli beiaued them selues. If I send a pestylence into the lande/ and poure out my sore indignacio vpon it in bloud/ so that I rote out of yt booth man and beast,and yf Noe,Daniel and Job were therin:as truly as I leue(saieth the lorde god)they shall delyuer nether sonnes nor daugethrs, but saue their owne soules in their ryghtousns. Moreouer,thus sayeth the Lord God: Though I send my soure troublous plages vpō Jerusalē: the sweard honger,perolus beastes,ād pestilence/to destroie mā,beast out of it: yet shall there be a remnaunt saued therin,which shal bring forth their sōnes and daughters.

Behold, they shal come forth vnto you/and ye shal se their wase,and what they take in hand, and ye shalbe comforted, as touchyng al the plages that I haue brought vpon Jerusalem. They shal comfort you when ye se ther wase and worckees:and ye shal knowe that it is not wout a cause,that I haue done so against Jerusalem, as I syd/ saieth the lord God.

¶ As the vnprofitable wod of ỹ vyne tre is cast in to ỹ fyre,so sayeth he ỹ Jerusalem shalbe brent.

¶ The.xv.Chapter.

And the word of the lord cam vnto me,saying: Thou sonne of man: What cōmeth of ỹ vyne amōg al other trees? of the vyne stocke amonge all other tymber of the groaue? Do mē take wod of it,to make any worcke wā? Or mate there anaple be made of it, to hang any thing vpon? Behold,it is cast in the fyre to be brent,the fire cōsumeth both the endes of it,ỹ middeste is brēt to asshes. Is it mete thē for any worcke? No.

Seing then,that it was mete for no work/being whole:moch les may ther any thing be made of it,when the fyre hath consumed and brent yt.

And therfore thus saieth ỹ lord god: Lyk as I cast the vyne into ỹ fyre for to be brēt,as other trees of ỹ wod: Euen so wyl I do with them that dwell in Jerusalem,and set my face agaynst thē: they shal go out from the fyre, ād yet ỹ fyre shal consume them.

Then shal ye know/ that I am the Lord/when I set my face agaynst thē, and make the land waste:because they haue so sore offended,saieth the Lorde God.

¶ The prophet entēdyng to speake of ỹ abhominacyons of Jerusalem:doth first shew ỹ benefites of God toward it. Jerusalē is reproued of vnkindnes, for her fornicacyō w Idoles. He tutly eyeth ỹ wyckednes of other people in cōp arysons of the synnes of Jerusalē. The cause of ỹ abhominacyōs inwardly is ỹ Sodomites fylth. Her type is prophesyed to the repentaunce.

¶ The.xvi.Chapter.

Again,the word of ỹ lorde spake vnto me,saig: Thou sonne of man, shew thy cyte of Jerusalē their abhominacyons,and saie: thus saieth the Lord god vnto Jerusalem: Thy progeny and kynred came out of the land of the Canaan/ thy father was an Amorite,thy mother a Cethyte.

In ỹ daye of thy birth whē thou was borne,the string of thy nauell was not cut of:thou waste not bathed in water to make the cleane. Thou wast nether rubbed with salt,nor wed died in cloutes: No man regarded ỹ so much,as to do any of these thinges for the,or to shew ỹ such fauour,but thou wast vtterly cast out vpon the feld,yea delysed waste thou in the daye of thy byrth.

Thē cam I by ỹ/and sawe ỹ trodē doune i thine owne bloudy sayd vnto ỹ: thou shalt be pourged frō thine owne bloud, from thyne owne bloud(I saye) shalt thou be clensed.

So I planted ỹ/as the blossom of the felde: thou art growen vp, and waxen greate: thou hast gotten a meruelous pleasaūt beauty, thy brestes are come vp/ thy heare ys Goodlye growen/ where as thou wast naked and bare afore.

Now when I went by thee,and loked vpon thee: Behold,thy tyme was come,yea euen the tyme to wow the. Then

Then spred I my clothes ouer thee to couer thy dishonestye: yea, I made an othe vnto thee,and maryed my self with thee (sayeth the lorde God) and so thou becamest myne owne. Then washed I thee with water,and pourged thy bloude frō thee. I annoynted thee wyth oyle, I gaue thee the chaunge of rayments, I made thy shues of Tarus lether: I girthed thee aboute with white sylcke, I clothed thee wyth kerchues, I decked thee wyth costly apparell, I put rynges vpon thy fyngers,a chayne about thy necke,spaunges vpon thy forehead,eare ringes vpon thyne eares: and set a beutyfull crowne vpon thyne heade. Thus wast thou decte wyth syluer and golde,and thy raymēt was of fyne whyte sylke,of nedle worck and of dyuerse colloures.

Thou dyddest eate nothing but symnels,honye and oyle: maruelous goodlye wast thou and beutyfull, yea euen a bery Quene wast thou. In so much that thy bewty was spoken of amonge the Heythen,for thou wast excellent in my bewye,whych I put vpon thee sayeth the Lorde God: But thou hast put confidence in thyne owne bewye,and played the harlot when thou haddest gotten thee a name. Thou hast commytted whordom wyth al that wente by thee, and hast fulfylled theyr desyres: yea thou hast taken thy garmentes of dyuers coulloures and decke thyne aultars therwyth,wheare vpon thou myght fulfyl thyne whordom of suche a fashyon, as neuer was doone ner shalbe. The goodly ornamentes and Jewels whych I gaue thee of myne owne gold and syluer,hast thou taken,and made the mens ymages therof, and committed whordome with all.

Thy garmentes of diuers coloures hast thou taken,and dect them therwith myne oyle and icense hast thou set before them. My meate whych I gaue them as symnels oyle and honye: to feade the, for a swete sauour. And this came also to passe,sayth the Lord God: Thou hast taken thyne owne sonnes ād daughters whome thou haddest begotten vnto me, all these hast thou offred vp vnto them, whordom of thyne(thynckest thou?)that thou slayest my chyldren,and geuest the ouer to be brēt vnto thē? And yet in al thy abhominacions and whordomme, thou hast not remēbred the days of thy youth how naked and bare thou waste at that tyme,and troaden downe in thyne owne bloude. After all these thy wickednesses (wo wo vnto thee sayth the Lorde,thou hast buylded thy stewes and brodel houses in euery place ye at the head of euery street hast thou buylded thee an aulter.

Thou haste made thy bewtye to be abhorred/thou haste layed out thy legges to euery one that cameby,and multiplyed thyne whordome. Thou hast committed fornicacyon w the Egiptians thy neyghboures,which had moche flesh and thus hast thou vsed thyne whordome,to anger me.

Behold, I wyll stretche oute myne hande ouer thee,and wyll mynisshe thy stoare of fode,and delyuer thee ouer into the wylles of the phyllystines thyne enemyes whiche are ashamed of thy abhominable waye. Thou haste played the whor also with the Assiryas,whych might not satisfye the. Yea thou hast played the harlot,and not had ynough. Thus hast thou styll committed thy fornicacyon from the Lande of Canaan vnto the Chaldees,and yet thy lust not sanctifyed How shuld I cyrcumcise thyne hert sayeth the Lord God, seyng thou doeste all these thinges,ỹ precious whore-buldyng the stewes at the heade of euery street,ād thy brodell houses in al places? Thou haste not bene as an other whooze, that maketh boast of her wirtyng but as a wife that breaketh wedlocke,and taketh other in steade of her husband. Gyftes are geuen to all other whores,but thou geueste rewardes vnto all thy louers,and offrest them gyftes,to come vnto thee out of all places, and to committe fornicacyon with thee. It is come to passe with thee in thy whordomes contrarye to the vse of other women, yea ther hath no lust the fornicacyon bene cōmytted after thee seyng that thou profredst gyftes vnto other, and no rewarde is geuen thee, thys is a contrary thynge.

Therfore heare the worde of the lorde,O thou harlot: thus sayeth the lorde God. Forso muche as thou haste spente thy moupe, ād dyscouered thy shame, thorow thy whordome wyth all thy louers, and wyth all the Idoles of thy abominacyons in the bloud of thy childeren whō thou hast geuen them: Beholde therfore I wyl gather together all thy louers, vnto whome ỹ hast made thy self cōmoupe and all them whome thou fauourest and euery one that thou hatest, and wyll discouer thy shame before them, that they al maye se thy fylthynes.

C Moreouer I wyl iudge thee as a breker of wedlocke and a murtherer, and recompense the thyne owne bloud in wrath and gelousy. I wyll geue thee ouer into theyre power that shall breake downe thy stewes, and destroye thy brodell houses: they shal stripp the out of thy clothes all thy fayre and bewtifull Jewels shall they take from thee, and so let the sit naked and bare: yea they shall brynge thee comnen people vpon thee whyche shall stone thee ād stape the downe with theyr swerdes, they shall burn vp theyr houses and punysh the in the syght of many women. Thus wyll I make thy whordome to ceasse, so that thou shalt geue out no mo rewardes.

Should I make my wrath to be stil take my gelouly from thee, be content ād F no more to be displeased: seyng thou remembrest not the dayes of thy youth but thou hast prouoked me to wrath in all these thynges: behold therfor, I wyll brige thyne owne wayes vpon thyne heade sayeth the Lorde God. How be it I neuer dyd vnto thee accordyng to thy wyckednes and all thy abhompnacyons. Beholde, all they that vse cōmon prouerbes shal vse thys prouerbe also agaynst thee: Suche a mother suche a daughter.

Thou arte euen thy mothers owne doughter that hath cast of her husband & her childeren. Yea thou art the syster of thy systers, wbych forsoke theyr husbandes and theyr childeren. Youre mother is a Cethyte, and youre father an Ammorit. Thyne eldest syster is Samaria, she and her doughters that dwell vpon thy left hande.

But thy youngest syster that dwelleth on thy right hande, is Sodoma ād her doughters. Yet haste thou not walked after theyr wayes, nor don after their abhominacions: but in all thy wayes ỹ hast bene more corrupt then they. As truly as I lyue, sayth the Lorde God: Sodoma thy syster wyth her doughteres, hath not done so cruel, as thou and thy doughters. Beholde, the synnes of thy sister Sodoma were these: Pryde, fulnes of meate, abundaūce of idlenes: these thynges had she and her doughters. Besydes that, they reached not theyr hande to the poore and nedye, but were proude and dyd abhominable thynges before me, therfore I toke them awaye, whē I had seue it. Nether hath Samarya done halfe of thy synnes, yea thou hast exceaded the in wyckednes: In so much that in comparison of all the abominacyons wbych thou hast don, thou hast made thy systers good women.

As for theyr captiuitye, Namely the captiuitie of Sodoma and her doughters, the captiuyte of Samaria and her doughters, I wyll brynge them agayne so wyll I also brynge agayne thy captyuitie among them, that thou mayest take thyne owne confusyon vppon thee, and be ashamed of all that thou hast done, ād to comforte them. Thus thy systers namely Sodoma and her doughters, Samaria and her doughters wyth thy selfe and thy daughters, shalbe brought agayne to youre old estate, when thou waste in thy pryde, & before thy wickednes cam to lyght thou wouldest not here spoke of thy syster Sodoma vntyl the tyme that the Sirians with al theyr townes, & the philystines, wyth all that lye rounde about theym brought thee to shame and confusyon that thou mightest bere thine owne fylthynes and abhominacions sayeth the Lorde.

For thus sayth the lord God: I shoul deale wythe thee as thowe haste done, thou haste dispysed the othe and broken the couenaunt. Neuertheles I wyl remembre the couenant that I haue made vnto thee in thy youth, in so much that it shalbe an euerlasting couenaunt so that thou also remembre thy wayes & be ashamed of the: then shalt thou receaue of me thy elder & younger systers whō I wyll make thy doughters and that besyde the couenaunt. And so I wyll re-

Jere.31. Ezech.36. mit my couenaunte wyth thee, that thou mayest knowe that I am the lorde: that ỹ mayest thyncke vpon it, be ashamed, ād accuse thyne owne confusyon no more: when I haue forgeuen thee, alỹ thou hast done, sayth the Lorde God.

The learned expound this whole sentence of the tribulation that Israel suffred in egipte & after amongest the Chaldes. After the deth of Joseph, when Pharao knew them not. Exody. i, were they most abiect and vyle, and no man had compassyon on them. Then was the daye of their birth. And in lyke case after the destruction of Jerusalem and in their imprisonment at Babylon. At both these tymes were they motherles and helpelesse, concerning the rowne strength: but were yet cared for of god and receaued by hys mercy. The prophet bpzoweth his fashion of speaking of the maner of mothers, after the byrth of their childzen: which fyrst dresse ther naueles and wash thē with salt, & thē swedle thē, &c. Such helpe had Israel none in their aduersyties in Egipt and Babilon but lye ouerwhelmed in their fylthynes and myseryes, and were regarded as bastardes and vnmotherly intreated of al men. There was no man but onli god that toke thought for thē or holpe them: & that dyd he only of his mere mezcy, without any of theyr deserupnges.

c* By this bewty are sygnified the gyftes and graces that the Lord had geuen to his people, whiche neuertheles was an Idolatez and worshiped other goddes, or worshypped god after another maner ād waye then he had commaunded them: which thing is signified by theyr fornicatyon, as in Esa. viii. b & after in the. xvii. a

The xvii. Chapter.

THe worde of the lorde came vnto me, sayenge. Thou sōne of man put forth a darke speaking and a parable, vnto the house of Israell, and saye. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: There came a great a* Aegle wyth greate wiges, ye wyth myghtie long wynges, and full of fetherz of dyuerse coloures, vpon the mount of Libanus, and toke a braūch from a Cedre tree, and brake of the toppe of hys twygge, and caryed it into the lande of Canaan, and set it in a Cyte of marchauntes.

He toke also the braunch of the lande, and planted it in a frutful ground, he brought it vnto grete waters / and set it as a wyllye tree therby. Then did it growe, and was a greate vyne stocke, but lowe by the grounde: thus there came of it a vyne, and it brought forth blossomes, and spred out braunches. But there was another Aegle, a greate one, which had greate wynges and many fethers: and beholde, the roates of thys vyne had an hunger after him, & spred out his braunches toward hym, to water his frutes: Neuertheles it was planted vpon a good ground beside greate waters: so that (by reason) it shoulde haue brought out braunches and frut, and haue bene a goodly vyne. Speake thou therfore, thus saith ỹ lord god: Shal this vyne prosper: shal not his rotes be plucked out his frut be broken of, his grene braūches wythere and fade awaye: yea wout ether stronge arme or many peple, shal it be pluked vp by the rotes. Beholde, it was planted: shal it prospere therfore? Shal it not be dryed vp and withered, yea euē in the shuting of his blossomes, as soone as the east winde bloweth?

Moreouer, the word of the lord cam vnto me sayng: Speake to that froward household: know ye not, what these thynges do sygnify? Tell thē: Behold, the kyng of Babilon came to Jerusalem, and toke the kynge and hys Prynces, and ledd them to Babilon.

He toke of the kynges sede / & made a couenaūt with hym, and toke an oth of hym: The Prynces of the lande toke he wyth him also, that the land myght be holden in subiectyon / and not to rebelle, but kepe the couenaunt, and fulfyll it. But he fell from him, and sent his Embassadoures into Egipte that he might haue horses and muche people. Shulde that prospere? Should he be kept safe, that doth such thynges? Or should he escape, that breaketh his couenaunt? As truly as I lyue sayeth the Lord god: he shal dye at Babylon, in the place where the king dwelleth, ỹ made hym kynge: whose othe he hathe despysed, and whose couenaūt he hath broken. Nether shal Pharao wyth hys greate hoost and multitud of peple mayntayne him in the warre: When they cast vp dyches, and set vp bulwarkes to destroy muche people, for lenuge he hath dispysed the othe and broken ỹ couenaunt (where as he yet gaue hys hande ther vpon) and done al those thinges, he shal not escape.

F Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: As truly as I lyue, I wyl bring myne othe that he hath despysed, & my couenaunte that he hath broken, vpon hys owne hand. I wyll cast my net aboute hym, and catche hym in my yarne. To Babylon wyl I carry hym, there wyl I punish hym, because of the greate offence that he made me. As for those that fle from him out of ỹ host, they shalbe slayne with the swearde. The residue shalbe scattered toward all the windes: And ye shall knowe/that I the Lorde haue spoken it.

Thus sayeth the lord God: I will G also take* a braunche from an hie Cedre tree, and wyl set it and take the vppermost twygge, that yet is but tender and plant it vpon an hye hyll: Namely vpon the hye hil of Syon wyl I plãt it: that it maye bryuge forth twygges and geue frute, and be a greate Cedre tree: So that all maner of foules maye a byde in yt/and make theyr nestes vnder the shadowe of hys braunches.

And all the trees of the felde shall know that I the Lorde haue brought downe the hye tree, and set the low tree vp: that I haue dried vp the grene tree, and made the drye tree to florysche. Euen I the lord that spake it/haue also brought it to pas.

¶ She weth that euery man shal beare his owne sonne. To hym that amendeth, is saluacyon promysed. Death is prophecyed to the rightwesse which turneth backe from the right waye

The .xviii. Chapter.

THe worde of the lord came vnto me, on this maner: A what meane yee by this cõmon prouerbe, that yee vse in the lande of Israell saying: The fathers haue eatẽ soure grapes, and the chyldrens tethe are set on edge. As truly as I lyue sayeth the lorde God, ye shall vse this by worde nomore in Israel.

Beholde, all soules are myne. Like B as the father is myne, so is the sonne myne also. The soule that synneth, shal dye. If a man be godly, and do the thynge that is equal and right, he eateth not vpõ the hilles, he lyfteth not hys eyes vp to the Idols of Israel: he defyleth not his neyghbours wife he medleth with no menstruous womã he greueth no body: he geueth his detter his pledge agayne: he taketh none other mans good by violence: he parteth his meate with the hongrie: he clotheth the naked: he lendeth nothig vpon vsury: he taketh nothing ouer: he withdraweth his hande from doinge wrõg he handleth faithfully betwixt man & man: he walketh in my commaundementes and kepeth my lawes, and performeth them faithfully: This is a D righteous man, he shal surely lyue saieth the lorde god.

If he now get a sonne, that is a murtherer, a shedar of blonde: yf he do one of these thinges (though he do not al) he eateth vp the hilles: he defileth his neighbours wife, he greueth the poore and nedy: he robbeth and spoyleth: he geueth not the detter his pledge agayne, he lyfteth vp his eyes vnto Idols, and medleth with abhominable thynges: he lendeth vpon vsurye/and taketh more ouer: Shal thys man lyue? He shal not lyue.

Seynge he hath done al these abhominacions, he shal dye & his blonde shal be vpon him. E Jezechiel. 33.

Nowe yf thys manne get a sonne alsõ/that seyeth all hys fathers sinnes, whyche he hath done: and feareth, neyther doth suche lyke: Namelye, he eteth not vpõ ỹ mountaynes: he lyfteth not hys eyes vp to the Idoles of Israell: he defyleth not hys neighbours wife: he vexeth no man: he kepeth no mans pledge: he nether spoyleth, nor robbeth eny man, he dealeth hys meate wyth the hungrye: he clotheth the naked: he oppresseth not the poore: he receaueth no vsury, nor any thynge ouer: he kepeth my lawes/ and walketh in my cõmaundementes: Thys man shal not dye in hys fathers synne/but shall lyue wythout fayle. As for hys father: because he oppressed and spoyled hys brother, and dyd wyckedly amonge hys people, lo, he is dede in hys awne synne. And yet saye ye, Wherfore then shoulde not this sonne beare hys fathers synne? Therfor, because the sonne hath done equitie and tyght, & hath kept al my cõmaundementes, and done them, therfore shall he lyue in dede. The same soule that synneth, shall dye. The sonne shal not beare the fathers offence nether shal the father beare the sonnes offence. The righteousnes of ỹ ryghtuous shal be vpon hym, and the wyckednes of the wycked shalbe vpon hym selfe also. But yf the vngodly wyl turne awaye from al hys synnes that he hath done, and kepe all my commaundementes, and do the thynge that is equall and tyght, doutles he shal lyue, and not dye. As for all hys synnes that he dyd before, they* shal not be thought vpon: but in hys tyghtousnes that he hath done, he shal lyue.

For, haue I eny pleasure in the death of a synner, sayth the Lord God: but rather that he conuerte, and lyue? Agayne. Yf the ryghtuous turne away frõ hys tyghtousnes, and do iniquitee, accordyng to all the abhominacyons that the wycked man dothe, shall he lyue? All the tyghtousnes that he hath done, shal not be thought vpon, but in the faulte that he hath offended with al, and in the synne that he hath done, he shall dye.

And yet say ye. Tush the waye of the F Lorde is not in dyfferẽt. Heare therfore ye house of Israel/ Is not my way tyght? Or, are not youre wayes rather wycked? When a ryghtuous man turneth a waye from hys ryghtousnesse, and medleth wyth vngodlynes: He muste dye therin. Yea, for the vnryghtousnesse that he hath done, must he dye. Agayne when the wycked man turneth away frõ his wickednesse that he hath done, & doth the thynge whiche is equall and tyghte, he shal saue hys soule alyue. For in so muche as he remembreth hym selfe and turneth hym from all the vngodlynesse that he hathe vsed, he shall lyue, and not dye.

And yet sayethe the house of Israell: G Tush, the way of the Lord is not equal Are my wayes vnright, o ye house of Israel? Are not youre wayes rather vnequall? As for me, I wyll iudge euery mã according to hys wayes, O ye house of of Israell sayethe the Lorde God. Wherfore be conuerted, and turne you cleane from all youre wyckednesse, so shall there be no synne do to you harme. Cast away from you, all youre vngodlynesse / that ye haue done, make you new hertes, and a newe spyrite. Wherfore wyll ye dye, O ye house of Israell? seynge I haue noo pleasure in the death of hym that dyeth, sayth the Lord Gode? Turne you then and ye shall lyue.

The notes

a* Shall not be thought vpon. The sophysters haue a prayer solucion for thys texte and suche lyke, which testifye that God forgeueth that he will not after calagayn hys forgeuenes and punishe. True it is (say they) God forgeueth the synne, but not the punyshement dewe vnto the synne. Seuen yeares punishementz (as they prate) made we abyde in purgatorye for euery synne, when it is forgeuen. If this be not to mocke wyth God and hys holy worde, I wote not what is mockage. If God can and do (as they affyrme) geue me punyshement due vnto my synne, so that he nether geue me to muche nether to lytle payne therfore. and yet not one thinke on my synne, surelye he hath a wonderfull remẽbraunce. And that he wyll not thynke on it the ordre doth here openly affyrme. By this sophistry might the kynge geue a man hys pardon for theft and after hange hym vp. For he myght saye. Syr I forgaue youre theft but not youre hangynge whyche is due vnto your theft. Such pardon wolde they be lothe to haue that fyrst pmagyned it. If the kynge whiche is but a man, be moare faythfull then to dele so with hys preioners whome he forgeueth: How shold god then whych is our heauenly father, and whych is euen goodnes it selfe, haue suche a subtel fayned and vnperfect forgeuenes, that should after punysh. But thereof wyll I nowe speake no moare, least ye should happely smell, that this solucion were pmagyned to pycke mens purses, thynke ma[n]ye pence, Dirige grotes, Trentales, Yeare myndes, monethy myndes &c. because that although God can and maye forgeue synne, yet must suche thynges obtayn the forgeuenes of the punyshment due thervnto: Or that the prestes benefyces were not sufficient for them to lyue on, without suche pyllage. Or yet that the poore people could by any other meane be myched from that thynge wherwyth they, ther wyfes, theyr household and chyldren should lyue.

The xix. Chapter.

The captiuyte of Jehoahas & of Jehoiacin, is sig nifyed by the lyons whelpes, and by the lyon. He setteth out the prosperitie of the citye of Jerusalē that is paste and the myserye therof that is prese

BUt mourne thou for the prin ces of Jsrael, and saye:
A Wherfore laye thy mother that lyoneesse among the ly ons and norysshed her yong ones amonge the lyons whelpes? One of her whelpes she brought vp, and it be came a lyon: it lerned to spoyle, and to de youre folke. The heathen herde of hym/ and toke hym in theyr nettes, and brought hym in chaynes vnto the lande of Egypte.

Now when the damme sawe, that all her hope and comfourth was awaye, she toke an other of her whelpes, and made a lyon of hym: which wente amonge the lyons/ and became a fyerce lyon: learned to spoyle and to deuour folke: he destroyed theyr palaces, and made their cities waste. In so much that the whole lande, and euery thyng therin wer vtterly desolate, thorow the verye voyce of hys roaB ryng.

Thē came the heathen together on euery syde out of al countres agaynst hym/ layed theyr nettes for hym, and toke hym in their pytte. So they bounde hi with chaynes & brought hi to the kyng of babylon: which put hi in prison, y hys voyce shoulde no more be heard vpon the mountaynes of Jsrael. As for thy Mother she is lyke a vyne in thy blonde, plāted by the waters syde: her frutes and braunches are growen oute of many waters: her stalckes were so strong, that mē myght haue made staues therof for offcers: she grue so hye in her stalckes.

So when men sawe that she exceaded the heyght and multytude of her braunches, she was voted out in displeasure & cast downe to the ground. The East wynde dryed vp her frute, her stronge
C stalckes were broken of/ wythered and brent in the fyre. But now shes planted in the wyldernesse/ in a drye and thurstye grounde.

And ther is a fyer gone out of her stalkes which hath brent vp her braunches and her frute: so that she hathe no moo stronge stalckes, to be staues for offcers. Thys is a pyteous and myserable thinge.

¶ The Lord denieth that he will answere the whe they pray, for y offense of vnkindnes which he here obiecteth. He promiseth y his people shal returne from captyuite. By the wood that should be brent is signified the burning of Jerusalem.

¶ The. xx. Chapter.

IN the .vbii. yeare the .x. daye of the .v. moneth, yt happened/ that certaine of
A the elders of Jsrael came vnto me, for to aske counsel at the Lorde, and late them downe by me. Then came the word of the Lorde vnto me on thys maner: Thou sonne of man: speake vnto the elders of Jsrael, and saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lord god: Are ye come hyther to aske any thinge at me? As truly as I lyue (sayeth the lorde) I will geue you no answer.

Wylt thou not reproue them (thou sonne of mā) wylt thou not reproue them? Shewe them the abhominacyons of their forefathers, and tel thē: Thus sayeth the lord god: In the daye when I chose Jsrael, and lyfte vp myne hād vpon the sede of the house of Jacob / and shewed my selfe vnto them in the lande of Egypte: Yea when I lyfte vp myne hande ouer them, and sayde: I am the Lorde youre God, euen in the daye that I lyfte vp myne hande ouer them/ to breake them oute of the land of Egipt, into a lande that
B I had prouided for them/ which floweth with mylcke and honye/ and is a pleasaunte lande amonge all other.

Then sayde I vnto them: Cast awaye euerye Manne the abhominacyones that he hath before hym, and defyle not youre selues wyth the Idoles of Egypte, for I am the lorde youre god.

But they rebelled agaynste me/ and would not folow me: to cast awaie euery euery man the abhominacyons of hys eyes, and to forsake the Jdoles of Egypte. Then I made me to poure my indignacyon ouer them, and to satisfye my wrath vpon them: yee euen in the myddest of the lande of Egypte. But I wolde not do it/ for my names sake: that it shuld not be vnhalowed before y Hethē amōge whom they dwelt, and amonge whom I shewed my self vnto them that I would bringe them out of the lande of Egypte. Now when I had caryed them out of the lande of Egypte, and brought them in to the wyldernesse: I gaue them my commaundementes, and shewed them my lawes: whych who so kepeth shall lyue in them. I gaue them also my holy dayes (to be a token betwixte me and thē, and ther by to know that I am the Lord, whych halloweth them. And yet the house of Jsracll rebelled agaynst me in the wyldernes. They would not walcke in my commaundements, they haue caste awaye my lawes (whych who so kepeth shoulde lyue in them) and my Sabboth dayes haue they greatlye

C vnhalowed.

Then I made me to poure out my Indignacyon vpon them and to consume them in the wyldernesse. Yet I wolde not do it for my names sake: leaste it shoulde be dishonoured before the heathen from the whych I had caryed them away/ but I swore vnto them in the wildernes, that I wolde not bryng them in to the lande, whych I gaue them: A land that floweth with mylcke and honye, ād is a pleasure of all landes: and that because they refused my lawes, and walked not in my commaundementes, but had vnhalowed my Sabboths, for their hert was gone after theyr Jdoles. Neuerthe
D les myne eye spared them, so that I wolde not vtterlye slaye them and consume them in the wyldernes. Moreouer I sayde vnto theyr sonnes in the wyldernesse walcke not in the statutes of youre forefathers, kepe not theyr ordynaunces ād defyle not your selfes with theyr ydoles. Ke in my statutes, kepe my lawes and do them, halowe my sabbothes: for they are a token betwyxte me and you, y ye maye knowe how that I am the Lord.

Notwythstandynge theyr sonnes rebelled agaynste me also: they walcked not in my statutes they kept not my lawes to fulfyl them (whych he that doth shal lyue in them) neither halowed they my Sabboth dayes. Then I made me agayne to poure out my indygnacion ouer thē and to satisfie my wrathe vppon them in the wyldernesse. Neuertheless I withdrewe my hande for my names sake, lest it shuld be vnhalowed amonge the Heathē before whom I had brought them forth. I lyft vp myne hande ouer them also in the wyldernesse that I wolde scatre thē amonge the Heathen, and strowe them among the nacyons: because they had not kepte my lawes, but cast aside my commaūdemētes, vnhalowed mi Sabbothes and lyft vp theyr eyes to theyr fathers Jdoles. Wherfore I gaue them also commaundemētes not good, and lawes thorow the whych they shulde not lyue, and I vnhalowed them in theyr awne gyftes (when I appointed for my selfe all theyr fyrstborne) to make thē desolate that they myght know, how that I am the Lorde

Therfore (O thou sonne of man) tel E the house of Jsrael, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beside all thys, youre forefathers haue yet blasphemed me more, and greatly offended agaynst me. For after I had brought them into the lande, that I promysed to geue thē, when they sawe euerye hye hyll and all the thycke trees: they made there theyr Offrynges, and prouoked me wythe theyre oblacyons, makyng swete sauoures there and poured out theyr drinckoffringes. Then I asked them: what haue ye to do wyth all that ye go thyther? And therfore is it called the hye place vnto thys daye.

Wherfore, speake vnto the house of Jsrael: Thus sayeth the Lorde God. Yee are euē as vnclene as youre forefathers and cōmitte whordome also wyth theyr abhominacyons. In all youre ydoles, where vnto ye bringe youre oblacyons, and to whose honour ye burne your chyldren: ye defile your selues euen vnto this daye, how darre ye then come/ and aske any question at me? O ye housholde of Jsrael:

As

As truly as I lyue (saieth the Lord God) ye get no answere of me: and as for the thynge that ye go about, it shal not come to passe, where as ye saye: we wyl be as the Heathē, and do as other people in the lande, wod and stone wil we worshippe.

As truly as I lyue saieth the Lord God, I my selfe wyll rule you wyth a myghtye hand, wt a stretched out arme and with indignaciō poured out ouer you: and wyl bringe you out of the nacyons and landes, wherin ye are scatered: ād gather you together wt a migh tye hande/ with a stretched out arme & with indignacyō poured out vpō you: and wyl bryngе you into the wylder nes of the people, & there I wyl reason with you face to face. Like as I pu nyshed your forefathers i ỹ wildernes so wyll I punishe you also/ saieth the Lorde god. I wyl bringe you vnder my iurysdict yon, and vnder the bonde of the couen aunt. The forsakers also and the transgressours wyll I take from among you, and bring them out of the lande of your habitacion: as for the lande of Israel, they shal not come in it/ that they maye knowe, how that I am the Lord.

Go to now the (saith the Lord god) ye house of Israel, cast awaye, and de stroye euerye manne his Idoles: then shal ye here me, and nomore blaspheme my hole name with your offrynges and Idoles. But vpon my holy hill, euen vpon the hye hyl of Israel shall all the house of Israell and al that is in the lande, worshyppe me: and in the same place wyl I fauour thē and there wyl I requyre your heauy of fryinges/ and the fyrst fynages of your oblacyons, wyth al youre holye thynges.

I wyl accepte your swet sauoure when I bring you from the nacyons/ and gather you to gether out of the lā des, wherin ye be scatered: that I mate be halowed in you before the Heathen and that ye maye know, that I am the Lorde, whiche hath brought you into the lande of Israell: yea into the same land, ỹ I swore to geue vnto your fore fathers. There shal ye call to remembraunce your owne wayes and al your ymaginacions, wherein ye haue bene defyled: and ye shalbe displeased wyth your owne selues, for al your wicked nes, that ye haue done. And ye shall know that I am the Lord: when I en trete you after my name, not after your wicked wayes, nor accordinge to youre corrupt workes: O ye house of Israell saieth the lord.

Moreouer, the word of the lord cām vnto me, saynge, thou sonne of man/ set thy face toward the south, and speke to the south wynd and saye to the wod toward the south: Heare the word of ỹ Lord, thus saith the lord god: Behold I wyl kindle a fyre in thee that shal cō sume thee *greene trees withe ỹ Drye No mā shalbe able to quēch his flame but al that loketh *from the southe to the north, shalbe dzent therein: and all flesh shal se that I the Lord haue kyn led it, so that no man maye quenche it. Then sayde I: O Lord/ they wyl saie of me. Tush, they are but fables/ that he telleth.

The.xxi. Chapter.

The word of the Lord cām vnto me/ saynge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face towarde Jerusalem, spеke agaynst the Sanctuary, & prophecy ag aynst the land of Israel: saye to the lande of Israel: Thus saieth the Lord God: Beholde/ I wyl vp on thee/ and wyl drawe my sword out of the sheth, and rote out of the both ỹ ryghtuous and the wycked/ therefore shal my swearde go out of his sheathe agaynst al flesche from the north to the south that al flesh maye know, howe ỹ I the Lorde haue drawen my swearde out of the sheath, and it shal not be put in agayne.

Moreouer

Mourne therfore (O thou sonne of man) that thy loynes crack with al, ye mourne bytterly for them: And yf they saye, wher fore mournest thou, Then tell them, for the tydynges that cōmeth, at the whych all hertes shall melt, all handes shallbe letten downe/ all stomackes shal fayne, and all knees shall waxe feble. Beholde, it cōmeth and shalbe fulfylled, saieth the Lorde God.

Agayne the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saynge: Thou sonne of man, prophecye, and speake: Thus saieth the Lorde God: speake, the swearde is sharpened and well scoured. Sharpened is it for the slaughter, and scoured that it maye be bryght. a* O, the destroyege staf of my sonne, shall bringe downe all wodde. He hath put hys swearde to the dyghtynge, that good holde maye be taken of it. Thys swearde is sharpened and dyght, that it maye be geuē in to the hande of the man slayer. Cry (O thou sonne of man) and howle, for thys swearde shall smyte my people, and all the rulers in Israel/ whych wyth my people shall be slayne downe to the grounde tho gether thys swearde. Smyte thou vpon thy thyghe, for wherfore shuld not the plage and staf of iudgmēt come? Saieth the Lorde God. Prophecye thou sonne of man, and smyte thi ne handes together: make the swearde two edged, yea make it three edged, that manslayers swearde, that swearde of the grate slaughter, whych shal smyte them, euen in theyr preuye chambres: to make them abasshed and fayne at the hertes, and in all gates to make sō of them fall. O how bryght and sherpe is it, how wel dyght and mete for the slaughter: Sette thee to some place alone, eyther vpon ỹ the ryght hande, or on the lefte, whether soeuer thy face turneth. I wyl smyte my hādes together also ād satisfy my wroth full indignacyon. Euen I the Lorde ha ue sayd it.

The worde of the Lord came yet vn to me agayne sayenge: Thou sonne of manne, make thee twoo streates, that the swearde of the KYNGE of Babylone maye come. Bothe these streates shall goo oute of one Lande. Hee shall sette hym vp a Place, at the heade of the streate shall hee chose hym oute a corner.

Make the a streate, that the swerde may come toward Rabah of the Ammonytes and to the strong Cytie of Jerusalem. for the kynge of Babylon shall stande in the turnynge of the way, at the heade of these two stretes: to aske councell at the sothsayers, castinge the lottes wythe hys arowes, to aske counsell at the Idoles/ and to loke in the lyuer. But the so the saiynge shall poynte to the ryghte syde vpon Jerusalem, that he maye set mē of warre, to smyte it with a greate noyse to crye oute Alarum/ to set batell Ram mes agaynste the geates, to graue vp dytches, and to make thee bulwerckes.

Neuertheles/ as for the sothsaying/ they shall holde it but for vanytye/ euen as though a tell were told them: yea and they them selues remembre theyr wicked nes, so that by ryght they muste be taken and wonne. Therfore saieth the Lorde God. For so muche as ye youre selues shewe youre offence, and haue opened youre wickednes, so that in all your wor kes men maye se youre synnes: yea in so muche (I saye) that ye youre selues haue made mencion therof ye shalbe taken by violence.

O thou shamefull wycked gyde of Israell whose daye is come: euen the ty me that wickednesse shall haue an ende: Thus saieth the Lorde God: take away the myzze/ and put of the crowne, and so is it awaye: the humble is exalted, and ỹ proude brought lowe. Vnpyth, punyth ye punyth them wyl I, and destroy thē and that shall not be fulfylled vntyll hee come, to whome the iudgemente belon gethe, and to whoome I haue geuen it. And thou (O sonne of manne) prophecy, and speake.

Thus saieth the Lorde GOD to the Chylderen of Ammon and to theyr blas phemye, speake thou: The swearde, the swerd, is drawē forth already to ỹ slaugh ter and scoured that it glystreth (because thou haste looked thee oute vanytyes, and Prophecyed lyes) that it may come vppon thy Necke/ lyke as vppon the o ther Ungoddlye, whyche bee Slayne

The.xxii. Chapter.

A MOreouer, the worde of the Lord came vnto me/ and sayd: Thou Sonne of man/ wylte thou not reproue thys bloudthyrsty cyte? Shew them their abhominacyons, and tell the: Thus sayth the Lorde God, O thou cyte/ that shedest bloude in the myddeste of thee, that thy tyme maye come also: and makest thee Idoles to defyle thee wythe all. Thou haste made thy selfe gylty, in the bloude that thou hast shed: and defyled thee in the Idoles whiche thou haste made. Thou hast caused thy dayes to drawe nye, & made the tyme of thy yeares to come. Therfore wyl I make thee to be B confounded among the heathen, and too be despysed in al the lādes whether they be nye or farre from the, they shall laugh thee to scorne, thou that haste gotten thee so foule a name/ and art full of myschef. Behold/ the rulers of Israel haue brought euery man hys power, to shed bloude in thee. In the haue they dispysed father and Mother/ in thee haue they oppressed the straunger/ in thee haue they vexed the wi- Deu. xvi dowe and the fatherles. Thou hast despi sed my sanctuary and vnhallowed my Sa boths. Murtherers are ther in thee/ that shede bloude/ and eate vpon the hylles, and in thee they vse vnhappynesse.

In thee haue they dyscouered their fathe res shame, in the haue they vexed wome C in their syckenesse. Euery man hath dealte shamfully wyth hys neyghbours wyfe, and abhominably defyled hys da ughter in lawe. In thee hath euery man forced hys awne syster, euen hys fathers daughter: yea gyftes haue bene receaued in thee, to shede bloud. Thou hast taken vsury and encrease, thou hast oppressed thy neighbours by extorcion, and forgot ten me, sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde/ I haue smytten* my handes vpon thy couetousnesse, that thou hast vsed, and vpon the bloude whych hath bene shed i thee. Is thy herte able to endure it, or may thy handes defende them selues in the tyme that I shall bryng vpon thee? Euen I the Lorde that speake it, wyll bryng it also to passe. I wyll scatre thee among the Heathē, and strow the about in the Landes and wyll cause thy fylthynesse to ceasse out of thee: yea, and I wyll haue the in possessyon in the syght of the Heathen, that thou mayest knowe, that I am the Lorde.

And the worde of the Lorde came vn D to me, sayenge. Thou sonne of man, the house of Israel is turned to drosse. All they that should be brasse, tynne, yron, & leade, are in the fyre becom drosse. Ther fore thus sayeth the Lorde God: For so moche as ye all are turned in to drosse, beholde: I wyll bryng you together vn to Jerusalem, lyke as syluer, brasse, yrō, tynne and leade are put together in the fournace, and the fyre blowe there vnder to melt them: Euen so wil I gather you put you in together, and melt you in my wrath and indygnacyon. I wyll bryng you together, and kyndle the fyre of my cruell displeasure vnder you, that ye ma ye be melted therin.

Lyke as the syluer is melted in the fyre so shal ye also be melted therin: that yee maye knowe, how that I the Lorde: ha ue poured my wrath vpon you.

And the worde of the Lorde came vn to me sayenge: Thou sonne of man, tell her her: Thou art an vncleane lād, which is not rayned vpon in the daye of the cruel wrath: the Prophetes that are in it, are sworne together to deuoure soules, lyke as a roaryng Lyon, that lyeth by hys praye. They receaue rychesse and good, and make manye widdowes in thee. Thy prestes breake my law, & defile my Sanctuary. They put no difference betwene ỳ holy & vnholy, neyther discerne betwen the clean & vncleane: they turne their eyes fro my sabbothes, & I am vnhalowed amōg them. Thy rulers in thee are like rauy shyng wolues, to shede bloude, and to destroy soules, for ther owne couetous lucre.

As for thy Prophtes, they dawbe with vntempred clyme/ they se vanityes, & prophecy lyes vnto them/ saynge: the Lorde god sayeth so/ where as ỳ Lord hath not spoken. The people in ỳ land vseth wicked extorcyon and robbery. They vexe the poore and nedy and op presse the straunger agaynst ryght. And I sought in the lande for a man/ that wolde make vp the hedge/ and set hym selfe in the gappe before me in the landes behalfe, that I shoulde not vt terly destroy it: but I could find none. Therfore wyl I poure oute my cruell displeasure vpon them, and burne thē in ỳ fyre of my wrath: their owne ways wil I recompense vpon their hedes saieth the lord god.

¶ The.xxiii. Chapter.

A THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me/ saynge: Thou sōne of mā, there were two wemē, that had one mother (These (whē they were yōge begynne to playe the harlottes in Egipt. There were their breastes broused and the pappes of their maydenheade destroyed. The eldest of them was cal leda* Oholah and her yongeste syster b* Oholibah. These two were mine, & bare sonnes and daughters. Their na mes were, Samaria, and that was Oholah: and Jerusalē, & that was Oholibah. As for Oholah she begane to go a whoring, when I had take her to me. She was set on fyre vpon her louers the Assirians, whiche had to do B wt her, euen the prynces & lordes, that were decke in costly arayre: faire yong men, lusty ryders of horses.

Thus thorow her whordome, she cleued vnto al the yonge men of Assyria: Yea she was madde vpon them, and defyled her selfe with al their Idoles. Neyther ceassed she from the fornycacyon, that she vsed with the Egipcyans: for in her youth they lay wyth her they broused the breastes of her maydēhead/ and poured their whordom vpō her. Wherfore, I delyuered her into ỳ handes of her louers/ euen the Assiryans, whom she so loued. These discouered her shame, toke her sōnes & daughters, and slew her with the sweard: In euel name gat she of al people, ād they punyshed her.

Her syster Oholibah sawe this, & dest royed her selfe wt inordynate loue, more then she/ and exceaded her syster i whordome: she loued the Assirians (whiche also laye with her) namely, the prynces & greate lordes, that were clothed wt all maner of gorgeous apparrel, all lusty horsmen and fayre yong personnes. Then I sawe, that they both were defi C led alyke.

But she increased styl in whordōe For when she sawe men painted vpon the wall, the ymages of the Chaldees set forth with fresh coloures, wyth fai re gyrdles aboute them, and goodlye bonettes vpon their heades, lokynge al lyke Princes (after the maner of the Babylonyans and Caldees in their owne lande, where they be borne) im- mediatly, as soone as she sawe them, she brent in loue vpō thē/ and sent mes saungers for them into the lande of ỳ Caldees.

Nowe whē ỳ Babylonyans came to her, they laye wyth her/ and defyled her with their whordome, and so was she polluted wyth them.

And

And when her lust was abated frō thē, her whordome and shame was discouered and sene: then my herte forsoke her like as my herte was gone from her syster also. Neuertheles she vsed her whordome euer the lenger the more/ & remembred ȳ dayes of her youth/ wher in she had played the harlot in the lād of Egipt: she brent in lust vpon them, whose flesh was like the flesh of Asses, and theirs lead lyke the syde of horses.

Thus thou haste renued the fylthy nesse of thy youth/ when thy louers bresed thy pappes, and marred thy breastes in Egypt.

Therfore (O Oholibah (thus saieth the Lorde god) I will rayse vp my louers (with whom thou hast satisfiedthi lust) agaynste the, and gather them together rounde about the: namely, the Babilonians, and al the caldees: Pecod/ Schoa and Coa, with al the Assyrians: al yonge and fayre louers: princes and lordes, knyghtes and gentylmen, which be al good horsemē: These shal come vpon the with horses, chartettes, and a greate multitude of peple which shalbe harnessed aboute the on euery side/ with brest plates, sheldes & helmettes. I will punishe thee before them, yea they them selues shal punish thee, according to their owne iudgmēt I wyl put my gelosy vpō thee/ so that they shal deale cruelly with thee. They shal cut of thy nose and thyne eares, & the remnaūt shal fal thorow the swerd They shal cary awaye thy sonnes and daughters, & the residue shalbe brent in the fyre. They shal stryp the oute of thy clothes/ & cary thy costly Jewels awaye with them.

Thus wyl I make an ende of thy filthynes and whordome/ which ȳ hast brought out of the lande of Egypt: so that thou shalte turne thyne eyes no more after them/ and caste thy mynde nomore vpon Egipt.

For thus sayth the Lord: behold/ I wyl delyuer thee into the hādes of thē whō thou hatest: yea euen in the handes of them/ with whome thou hast fulfylled thy lust, which shal deale cruelly with the. Al thy labour shal they take with them that leaue the naked and bare, & thus the shame of thy filthy whordom shal come to lyght. All these thynges shall happen vnto thee, because of thy whordome, wich thou hast vsed amōg the Gentyls, with whose Idoles thou hast defyled thy selfe. Thou haste walked in the waye of thy syster/ ther fore wyll I geue thee her cuppe in thy hande.

Thus sayeth the lorde God: Thou shalt dryncke of thy systers cuppe, how depe and far soeuer it be to the bottom Thou shalt be laughed to scorne & had as gretely i derisiō, as is possible: thou shalt be ful of dronkēes & sorow, for ȳ cuppe of thy sister Samaria is a cup of destruccion and wastynge: the same shalt thou drincke, and suppe it out euen to ȳ dragges, yea ȳ shalt eate vp ȳ broke peces of it, & so teare thyne owne brests: For euen I haue spoken it, sayeth the lorde god.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde god: For so much as thou hast forgotten me/ and cast me a syd, so beare now thyne owne filthynes and whordome. The Lorde sayde moreouer vnto me: Thou sonne of man wylt thou not reproue Oholah and Oholibah? Shew them their abominacyons: namely, ȳ they haue broken their wedlock, & stayned their handes with blood: yea euen wt their Idoles haue they committed aduoutry, and offred them their owne children (to be deuoured) whome they had borne vnto me.

Yea and this haue they done vnto me also they haue defyled my Sanctuary in that same daye, and haue vnhalowed my sabboth. For when they had slayne their children for their Idoles, they came the same daye into my Sanctuary to defyle it.

Lo, thys haue they done in my house Besyde al this/ thou sent thy messaungers for men oute of farre countrees/ and when they came hast bathed, trimmed and set forthe thy selfe of the best fashion: Thou settest vpon a goodly bed, and a table spred before the: where vpon thou hast set myne incense and myne oyle.

Then was there greate cheare w̄ yandes vpon theyr handes, & set glorious crownes vpon theyr heades: then thoughte I no doubte, these men wyll vse theyr harlotry also wyth yonder olde whore. And they, wente into her: as vnto a common harlot: Euen so wente they also to Oholah and Oholibah those fylthye women.

Iudge and punish.

O ye all that loue vertue and righteousnes/ iudg them, punysh them, as aduouterers and Murtherers ought to be iudged and punished. For they are breakers of wedlocke/ & the bloude is in their handes. Wherfore thus sayeth the Lord God: bringe a great multitude of people vpon them, and make them be scattered and spoyled: These shall stone them, and goare them wyth theyr swordes. They shall slaye theyre sonnes and doughters, and burne vp theyr houses wyth fyre.

Thus wyll I destroye all suche fylthynes oute of the lande: that all women may lerne, not todo after your vnclenes. And so they shall laye youre fylthynesse vpon your owne selues, and ye shalbe punished for the synnes, that ye haue committed with youre Idoles: and ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

The. xxiiii. Chapter.

IN the. ix. yeare, in the. x. moneth, the. x. daye of the Moneth, came the woorde of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge:

O thou sonne of man, wryte vp the name of thys day, yea euen ȳ hour of thys presente daye: when the kynge of Babylon set him self agaynst Jerusalem Shewe that obstinate household a parable, and speake vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Set thee a potte, set it on and poure water into it: put all the peces togethe in it, al the good peces: the loyne and the shoulder, and fyll it wyth the best bones. Take one of the beste sheape, and an heap of bones withall let it boyle well and let the bones sethe well therin.

Wyth that sayde the Lorde God on thys maner: Wo be vnto the bloudy cyty of the potte, wherupon the rustynes hangeth, and ys not yet scoured away. Take oute the peaces that are in it, one after an other: there neade not lottes to be caste therfore, for the bloude is yet in it. Upon a playne drye stone hath she poured it, & not vpon the ground, that it myght be couered wyth dust. And therfore haue I letten her poure her bloude, vpon a playne dryye stonye rocke, because it shoulde not be hyd, āt that I myght bryng my wrath full indygnacyon and vengeaunce vpon her.

Wherfor/ thus sayth the Lord god: O, wo be vnto that bloudthyrstye cyty/ for whom I wyll prepare a heape of wod beare thou the bones to gether/ kyndle ȳ the fyre, sethe the flesshe, let al be well sodden, that the bones maye be sucte oute. Moreouer/ set the pot emptye vppon the coales, that it may be warme, and the metell hote: that the fylth and rustynes may be consumed. But it wyll not go of, there is so muche of it/ ȳ rustynes must be brēt oute. Thy fylthynes is abhominable, for I would haue clensed thee/ but thou wolde st not be clensed. Thou canst not be purged from thyne vnclennesse, tyll I haue poured my wratfull indignacion vpon ȳ Euen I the Lorde haue so deuised: Yea, it is come therto alreadye, that I wyll do it. I wyll not go backe, I wyll not spare, I wyll not bee intreated, but accordynge to thy wayes and Imaginacyons, thou shalt be punished, sayth the Lorde God.

And the woorde of the Lorde cam vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, beholde I wyll take awaye* the pleasure of thyne eyes with a plage: yet shalt thou neyther mourne, nor weape/ nor water thi chekes therfore: thou mayest mourne by thy selfe alone/ but vse no deadly lamentacyon. Holde on thy bonet/ and put on thi shues vpon thi fete couer not thy face/ and eate no mourners bred. So I spake vnto the people by tymes in the morninge, and at euē mit wyfe dyed, then vpon the next morow, I dyd as I was commaunded.

And the people sayde vnto me: wylt thou not tell vs/ what that signifieth, which thou doeste? I answered them, the woorde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge. Tell the house of Israel, thus sayeth the Lorde god: beholde I wyll suspende my sanctuary, euen the glory of your power, the pleasure of your eyes, and the thinge that ye loue: your sonnes and daughters whom ye haue left/ shal fal thorow the swerde.

Like as I haue done/ so shal ye do also. Ye shal not hid your faces, ye shal eate no mourners bred: your bonnettes shal ye haue vpon your heades, and shues vpon your fete. Ye shall nether mourne ner wepe, but in your sinnes ye shalbe sorowful, and one repent with another. Thus Ezechiel is your shewtoken. For loke as he hath done, so, when this commeth ye shal do also: that ye may lerne to know that I am the Lord God.

But beholde, O thou sonne of manne In the daye when I take from them their power, their ioye and honoure) ẏ lust of their eyes, the burthen of their bodyes: namely/ their sonnes and daughters: Then shal there one escape ād come vnto thee, for to shew thee. In that daye shal thy mouth be opened/ to them why che is escapped that thou mayest speake, and be no more dome me: Yea and thou shalt be their shew token, that they maye know, how that I am the Lord.

¶ The word of ẏ Lord vpon the sonnes of Ammō which reioyced at the fal of Jerusalē. Against Moab: Sier. Against Idumea. Against ẏ Philistines

¶ The .xxv. Chapter.

The worde of the lord came vnto me, saiyng: Thou sōne of man/ set thy face agaynst the Amonites, prophecye vpon them, and say vnto the amonites: heare the word of the Lord god. Thus saieth the Lord god: For so much as thou speakest ouer my Sanctuary. Aha/ I trow it be nowe suspended: and ouer the lande of Israel, I trow it be now desolate: yea ād ouer the house of Juda/ I trow they be now led awaye preseners: Behold, I wyl delyuer the to the people of the east, that they maye haue in possession these shal set their castels and houses i the. They shal eate thy frute, and drincke vp thy milcke. As for *Rabath, I wil make of it a stal for camels, and of Ammon a shepfolde: and ye shal know, that I am the lord.

For thus saieth the Lord god: In so muche as thou hast clapped wyth thine handes, and stamped with ẏ fete, yee reioyced in thyne herte ouer ẏ land of Israel with despyte: beholde, I wil stretch out myne hande ouer thee also, & delyuer thee, to be spoyled of ẏ Heathē, and rote thee out from among the people, and cause thee to be destroyed oute of al landes: yea I wyl make thee to be layde waste, that thou mayest know, ẏ I am the Lord.

Thus saieth the lord god: For so much as Moab and Seir do saye: As for the house of Juda, it is but like as al other Gentiles be; Therfore behold I wyl make the cityes of Moab weaponlesse, and taken awaie their strēgth their cyties and theke coastes of their land, which are the pleasures of the cōtre: As namely. Bethiesimoth, Baalmeon and Cariathaim: these wyll I open vnto them of the easte, ẏ they mate fall vpon the Ammonites: & wyll geue it them in possession: so that the Ammonites shal nomore be hadin remembraunce among the Heathen. Suē thus wyl I punish Moab also, ẏ they maye knowe, how ẏ I am ẏ lord.

Moreouer, thus saieth the Lorde god: Because that Edom hath auēged and eased hym selfe vpon the house of Juda, therfore thus saieth the Lorde: I wyl reach out mine hand vpon Edō and take awaye man and beast out of it. From Theman vnto Dedan wyl I make it desolat, they shalbe slayn wyth swerd. Thorow my peple of Israel will I auenge me again vpon Edom: they shal hāole hym, accordeig to my wrath & indignacion, so that they shal know my vengeaunce, saieth the lord god.

Thus saieth the Lord god: For as much as the Philistines haue done this namely taken vengaunce with despitful stomackes, and of an olde euel wil sett them selues to destroie: Therfore thus saieth the Lorde god: Beholde, I wyl stretche out myne hand ouer the Philistines, and destroye the destroier, and cause al the remnaunt of the sea coaste to perysh. A greate vengeauce wyll I take vpon them, and punish them cruelly that they maye knowe, how that I am the lord, which haue auenged me of them.

¶ The prophecyeth that tyrus shalbe ouerthrowen because it reioyced at ẏ destruction of Jerusalem. The wondring and astonishment of the marchauntes, for the desolation of Tyrus.

The .xxvi. Chapter.

It happened/ ẏ in the .xi. yeare the fyrst daye of the Moneth, the word of the Lord came vnto me, saiynge: thou sonne of man, because that Tyre hath spoken vpon Jerusalem: Aha/ nowe I trow the portes of the people be broke/ and the turned vnto me, for I haue destroyed my help ful. Yea therfore saieth the Lorde God: Beholde O Tyre I wyll vpon thee, I wyl bryng e agreate multytude of people against thee, lyke as when the sea aryseth with his waues: These shal breake the walles of Tyre / and caste downe her towres: I wil scrape the grounde from her and make her a bare stone: yea as the dyenge place where the fyshers hang vp their nettes by the seaside. Euen I haue spoken it, saieth the lord God. The gentels shal spoyle her: her daughters vpon the felde shall perish wyth the swearde, that they maye know howe ẏ I am the lord.

For thus saieth the Lord god: Behold, I wyl bringe hither Nabuchodonosor (which is the Kyng of Babylō/ & a kyng of Kynges) from the north vpon Tyre, with horses, charetes, horsmē and wyth a grete multitude of people. The daughters that are in the lande/ shal be slaye with the swearde: but against thee, he shal make bulwarkes and graue vp dyches about thee, and lyfte vp hys shylde against thee.

Hys slynges and batelrammes shal he prepare for thy walles, ād wyth his weapens breake downe thy towres. The dust of his horses shal couer thee they shalbe so many: thy walles shall shake at the noyse of the horsemen chariettes and wheles: when he commeth to thy portes, as men do in to an open cytie. With the hoffes of hys horsse fete, shal he treede doune al thy stretes. He shall slaye thy people with the swearde/ and breake downe the pyllers of thy strength. They shal walt awaie thy ryches, and spoyle thy marchaundyse. Thy walles shal they breake downe, and destroye thy houses of pleasure. Thy stones, thy tymbre and foū dacyons shal they cast in to the water.

Thus wyl I bryng the melody of thy songes/ and ẏ voyce of thy mynstrelcy to an end: / so that they shall nomore be herd. I wil make a bare stone of the/ yea a dryng place for nettes/ & shalt neuer be buylded agayne. For euen I the Lord haue spoken it/ saieth the Lord God: thus hath the lord god spoken concerning Tyre. The Iles shall be moued at the noyse of thy fal/ and at the crye of the slayne/ that shal be murthered in thee: Al kinges of the sea shal come downe from their seates regal: they shal laye awaye their robes and put of their costly clothing. Yea with tremblig shal they be clothed, they shal syt vpon the grounde: they shalbe afraied at thy soden fal, and be abaysshed at the.

They shal mourne for thee, and say vnto thee: O thou noble cite, that hast bene so greately occupied of olde, thou that hast bene the strongest vpon ẏ sea wt thine inhabitours, of whome al mē stode in feare: How art thou now so vtterly destroyed? Now at the tyme of thy fal the inhabitours of the Iles/ ye and the Iles them selues, shal stand in feare at thine ende. For thus saieth ẏ Lord god: when I make thee a desolat cite (as other cities be that noma dwel in) & when I bringe the depe vpon ẏ that greate waters mate couer thee, the wil I cast the doune vnto them, that de sende into the pitte vnto a people that hath bene longe dead, and set thee in a lande that is beneth, lyke the olde wilderneses wt the which go doune to their graues, so that no man shal dwel more i the. And I wil make the to be no more in honoure in the land of the liuynge I wyll make an ende of thee/ and thou shalt be gone. Though thou be sought for, yet shalt thou not be found forever more, saieth the Lord god.

¶ The Prophet is moued to bewaile the desolacyō of Tyrus. He seeteth out the praise of Tirus for ẏ hauntyng of marchauntes therto.

The .xxvii. Chapter.

THe worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayyng O thou sonn of man, make a lamentable cō playnte vpon Tire, and saye vpon Tyre, whych is a porte of the see, that occuppeth wyth moch people, and many Iles: thus speaketh the Lorde God: O Tyre, thou hast sayd: what? I am a noble cytye, thy borders are in the myddest of the see, and thy buylders haue made the maruelous goodly. All thy tables haue they made of Cypre trees of the mount Sanyr. From Lybanus haue they taken Cedre trees, to make the maste: and the Okes of Basan to make the rowers.

Thy boordes haue they made of puery, and of costly wod out of the Ile of Cethym. Thy sayle was of whyte small nedle wozcke out of the lande of Egypt, to hange vpon thy mast: and thy hangynges of yolow sylke e purple, out of the Iles of Elysah. They of Sydon and Arnad were thy matiners, and the wisest in Tyre were thy shyppmasters. The eldest and wysest at Gebal were they, that mended and stopped thi shyppes. All shyppes of the see wyth their shipmen occuppyed their marchaūdyes in the. The Perses, Lydians and Lybies were in thyne hoost, and helped the to fyght: these hanged vp theyr shyldes and helmettes wyth the, these set forth thy bewty. They of Arnad were wyth thyne hoost rounde about thy walles, and were thy watchmen vpon thy towres, these hāged vp theyr shyldes round about thy walles, and made thee maruelous goodly. Tharsys occuppyed wyth the i all maner of wares, in syluer, yron, tynne and lead, and made thy market greate: Iauan, Tubal and Meschech were thy marchaūtes, whych brought the men, and ozuain cutes of metal for thy occuppenge. They of the house of Thogarma brought vnto the at the tyme of thy matte, horse horsmen & mules. They of Dedan were thy marchauntes: and many other Iles that occuppyed wyth the, brought the wethers, elephant bones and Paiocockes for a present. The Syryans occuppyed with the, because of thy dyuerse wozckes, and encreased thy marchaundyes, wyth Smaragdes, wyth scarlet, wyth nedle wozke with white lynen cloth, with sylcke āde with Chrystal.

Juda and the lande of Israel occupied with the, and brought vnto thy makettes, wheate, balme, hony oyle & triacle. Damascus vsed also marcaūdises with the, in the best wine and whyte wol because thy occuppenge was so greate and thy wares so many. Dan, Iauan, and Meusall haue brought vnto thy marketes, yron redy made wt *Casia and Calamus accozding to thyoccuppenge. Dedan occupied with the, in coyze tapestry wozcke and quishyns: Arabiah & all the princes of Cedar haue occupied wyth the, in shepe, wetters and goates.

The marchauntes of Seba and Regma haue occupied also with the, in all costly spices, in al precyous stones & golde wyych they brought vnto thy mare kettes.

Haran, Chene and Eden, the marchaūtes of Saba, Assiria and Chelmad were all doers wyth thee. In costly raymēt of yelow sylcke and nedle wozcke (very precyous, and therfoze packe and bounde together wyth roopes) Yee and in cedre wood, at the time of thy marckettes. The shyppes of tharsis were the chefe of thy occupieng.

Thus thou art ful and in great wozshyppe/euen in the myddest of the sea. Thy mariners were euer bringing vn to thee out of mani waters. But the east wynde shal ouerbeare the into the middest of the se so that thy wares/thy marchauudyes, thy rytchers thy mariners thy shypmasters, thy helpers, thy occuppyers (that brought the thynges necessarye) the men of warre that are in thee, ye and all thy commons shall perysshe in te myddeste of the sea, in the daye of thy fall. Thy suburbes shall shake at the loude crye of thy shypmen. All whyrry men, and all mariners vpō the see, shall leape out of their boates, & set themselues vpon the lande. They shall lyfe vp theyr voyce because of the, and make a lamentable crye. They shall cast dust vpon theyr heades, and lye downe in the asshes. They shall shaue thē selues, and put sacke cloth vpon them for thy sake.

They shal mourne for thee wyth hertfull sorowe and heuy lamentacions yea they? chylderen also shall weape for thee. Alas what cyty hath so ben destroyed in the sea as Tyre is? When thy wares and marchaundyes came frō the seas thou gauest all people ynough. The kynges of the earth hast thou made ryche/ throw the multitude of thy wares and occupying: But thou art now cast down into the depe of the sea, all thy resorte of people is perysshed wyth thee.

All they that dwell in the Iles are abashed at thee, all theyr kinges are afrayd yea theyr faces haue chaunged colour.

The marchauntes of the nacyons wondre at thee: In that thou arte so cleane broughte to naughte / and commest noo more vp.

¶ The worde of God agaynste the kynge of Tyrus for hys pryde. Daniel. The prophete is moued to bewayle the kynge of Tyrus. The worde of the Lorde agaynst Sydon: The lord prouyseth that he wyll gather together the chyldren of Israell.

¶ The .xxviii. Chapter.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayynge Thou sonne of man, tell the Prynce of Tyre: Thus sayth the Lord god: because thou hast a proude herte and haste sayde I am a God, I haue my seat in the myddest of the Sea lyke a God, where as thou art but a mā and not God and yet standeste in thyne owne conceyt, that thou art God: Behold de thou thynckest thy self wyser then daniell, that there is no secretes hyd from thee.

Wyth thy wysdome and thy vnderstandyng, thou hast gotten thee great welthines, and gathered treasure of syluer and golde. Wyth thy greate wysdomme and occuppenge, hast thou encreased thy power/ and because of thy gret ryches, thy hert is proude.

Therfoze thus sayethe the Lorde god For so much as thou haste lyft vp thyne herte, as though thou were God: Behold I wyll bryng enemyes vppon thee euē the tyrauntes of the heathen: these shall drawe out theyr swerdes vpon thy bewty/ and wysdome and shal defyle thy glozy They shall cast thee downe to the pytte so that thou shalt dye in the myddeste of the sea as they that be slayne. Let se, if yō wylt say then (before them that sley thee, I am God: where as thou art but a man and not God) in the handes of them that slaye the, Dye shalte thou, euen.* as the vncyrcumcysed in the handes of the enemyes: for I my selfe haue spoken it, sayeth the Lorde God.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayynge: Thou sonne of man/ make a lamentable complaynt ouer the kynge of Tyre/ and tell him: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Thou art a seale of a lyckenesse, ful of wysdome and excellent beuty. Thou haste bene in the pleasaunt gardē of God/ thou art decte wyth all maner of precyous stones: wyth Ruby, Topas, Chrystal, Jacynete Onyx, Jaspys, Saphyr, Smaragde, Carbuncle, and golde. Thy bewty and the holes that be in thee were set forth in the daye of thy creacyon. Thou art a fayre Cherub, stretched wyde out for to couer.

I haue sett thee vpon the holy mount of God: there hast thou bene and walked monge the fayre glysterynge stones. From the time of thy creacyon thou hast bene ryght excellent, tyl wyckednesse was found in thee. Because of thi greate marchaundyse, thy hert is full of wycke duesse, and thou hast offended. Therfoze wyl I cast the from the mount of God/ O thou couerynge Cherub) and destroy thee among the glysterynge stones.

Thy hert was proude in thi fayre beuty and throw thy beuty thou hast destroyed thy wysdome. I wyll cast the downe to the grounde and treat in the syght of kynges. Thou hast defiled thy Sanctuary, with the great wickednesse of thy vnryghtuous occuppenge. I wyl bryng a fyre from the myddest of thee, to consume the, and wyll make the to asshes/ in the syght of al them that loke vpon the. All they that haue bene acquaynted wt the among the Heathen shalbe abashed at thee: seyng thou art so clene brought to naught, and commest no more vp.

And the word of the Lord cam vnto me sayeng: Thou sonne of man, set thy face agaynst Sydon. Prophecye vpō it and speake: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde o Sydon, I wyll vpon ȳ, & get me honoure in the: that it may be knowē howe that I am the LORDE.

when I punysh her, and get me honoure in her. For I wyl send pestilence and bloud chedoyng into her stretes so that those whych be slayne wyth the swerde/shall lye rounde aboute in the myddest of her: and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde. She shall no more be a pricking thorne, and an hurteng breer vnto the house of Israell, nor vnto them that lye rounde about her and hate her: and they shal knowe, that I am the Lord. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: whan I gather the houl holde of Israell together agayne frō the nacions amōge whom they be scatered: then shal I be sanctifyed in them in the syght of the Gentyles/and they shall dwel in ỹ land, that I gyue to my seruaūt Jacob. They shal dwell safely therin, buylde houses/and plant vynepardes: yea safely shal they dwel therin, whē I haue punyshed all those that despyle them rounde aboute: and then shall they knowe, that I am the Lord e their God.

The.xxix.Chapter.

The prophecyeth agaynst Pharao. He prophecyeth the desolacyō of Egypte, and ỹ sparpigne abrode of the Egyptiās. The Lorde promiseth ỹ he wyll restoare Egypt agayne after, xl. yeares, Egipt is the reward of kyng Nabuchodonosor for the labour wherch he toke agaynst Tyrus.

IN the.x. yeare vpon the.xii. daye of the.x. moneth/ the worde of the lord cam vnto me/sayenge: O thou sonne of man, set now thy face againste pharao. the kyng of egipt Prophecye agaynst him and agaynst the whole lande of Egypte: Speake, and tell hym, thus sayeth the Lorde god: beholde, O Pharao thou kynge of Egypt, I wyl vpon thee, thou great a*dragon, that lyest in ỹ waters: thou that sayest: the water is myne. I haue made it my selfe. I wyll put an hoke in thy chawes, and hange all the fysh i thy waters vpon the skales: after that I wyl draw thee out of thy waters, ye and al the fysh of thy waters ỹ hange vpō thy skales. I wyl cast thee out vpon the dyre lande wyth the fysh of thy waters, so that ỹ shalt lye vpō the felde Thou shalte not be gathered nor take vp: but shalt be meate for the beastes of the felde, and for the foules of the ayre: that al they which dwel i Egipte maye knowe/that I am the Lorde: Because thou hast bene a staf of rede to the house of Israel. When they toke hold of ỹ with their hand thou brakest and pyrchest them on euery syde, and B yf they leande vpon thee, thou brakest and hurtest the reines of their backes. Therfore/thus sayeth the Lord god: beholde/I wyl bryngе a swearde vpō thee, and rote out of thee both man and beast. Yee the lande of Egypte shalbe desolate & waste: and then shal knowe, that I am the Lord: Because he sayde: ỹ water is myne, I my selfe haue made it. Beholde therfore, I wyll vpon thee, and vpō thy waters: I wil make the land of Egipt waste and desolate: from the towre of Sienes vnto ỹ borders of the Morians land: so that xl yeares there shal no fote of mā wacke ther, nether fote of catel go ther nether shall it be inha byted. C I wyll make the land of Egypt to be desolate, amonge other wast countrees, and her cytyes to lye voyde. xl. yeares, amonge other voyde cytyes: And I wyll scatre the Egyptians amongē the Heathen and nacions.

Agayne/thus sayeth the Lord god: When the xl. yeares are expyred I wyll gather the Egipcyans togethen agayne/out of the nacyons/ amonge whom they were scatred, and wyl bryngе the prisoners of Egypt agayne into the londe of Pathures their awne natyue cōtre, that they maye be there D a lowly smallkyngdome: yea they shal be the smallest amonge other kyngdomes, lest they exalte them selues aboue the Heathem: for I wyll so monish them that they shall no more rule the Heathen. They shall no more be an hope vnto the house of Israel, neyther prouoke thē any more to wyckednesse, to cause them turne backe, and to folowe them: and they shall knowe that I am the lorde God.

In the.xxvii.yeare, the fyrst daye of the fyrst moneth, came the worde of the lorde vnto me, saiynge. Thou son of man, Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon hath made hys hoost/ wyth great trauayle & laboure to com before Tyre, that euery head maye be balde, and euery shoulder bare. Yet hath Tyre Geuen neither hym nor hys hooste any Reward, for the greate Trauaile that he hath taken there. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyll Geue the lande of Egypte vnto Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, that he may take a waye all her substaunce/robbe her robberyes, and spoyle her spoyles, to pape hys hoost theyr wages wythall. I wyll geue hym the lande of Egypt for hys labour, that he toke for me before Tyre. At the same tyme wyll I cause the b* horne of the house of Israell to growe forth, and open thy mouth agayne among them that they may knowe, how that I am the Lorde.

a*The propertie of dragons is to haunte where aboundaunce of waters ar. Therfore is ỹ kyng of egipt here called a dragon, because of the aboundaunce of water that are in Egypte, where he raygned. So is Jerusalem called a stues, because of her hauntynge of Idolatry: as before in the xvi. c. d.

The destructiō of egypte and of hys cytyes is bewayled.

The.xxx.Chapter.

THe worde of the Lorde came moreouer vnto me, saiynge: Thou sonne of man prophecy & speake: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Mourne wo worth thys daye, for the daye is here/ the daye of the Lorde is come: the darcke daye of the heathen, the houre is at hand, the sweard commeth vpon Egipte. Whē the wounded men fall downe in Egypte, when her People are taken awaye and when her foundacions are destroyed, the Morians lande shall be afrayde, yea the Morians lande/Libia and Lidya / all theyr common people, and Chub and all that be confederate vnto them, shall fall wyth them thorow the swearde.

Thus sayth the Lorde: The mainteyners of the Lande of Egypte shall fall, the Pryde of her Power shall comme downe; euen vnto the Towere of Syenes shall they be slayne downe wyth the swearde sayeth the Lorde God among other Desolate Countrees they shalbe made desolate and amonge other waste cytyes they shalbe wasted. And they shal knowe, that I am the Lorde, When I kyndle a fyre in Egypte/and when all her helpers are destroyed. At that tyme, shall theyr messaungers go forth fro me in shyppes, to make the careleste Morians a frayed, and sorowe shall come vp on them in the day of Egypte, for doubtles it shall come.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wil make an ende of the people of Egypte thorow the hande of Nabuchodonosor Kynge of Babylon. He and hys people wyth hym, yea and the cruell tyraunes of the Heathen shalbe brought to destroye the lande. They shall drawe out theyr swordes vpon Egypte and fyll the lande ful of slayne men. I wyll dryve vp theyr floudes of water/and sell the lande into the handes of wycked people. The lande and al that is therin, wyll I destroy thorow the enemyes. Euen I the Lorde haue sayde it.

And thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll destroye the Idols and bryngе the ymages of a* Noph to an ende. There shal nomore be a prince of Egypte, and a fearfulnes wyl I sende into the Egyptyans Lande. As for Pathures I wyll make it desolate, and kyndle a fyre in C b* Zoan. Alexandria wyl I punish & powre my wroth fulle Indygnacyon vpon c* Syn whych is the strength of Egypte. All the substaunce of Alexandrya wyl I destroye and kyndle a fyre in Egypte.

Syn shalbe in greate heuynesse/Alexandrya shalbe rooted out, & Noph shall haue daylye sorowe. The best men of Helyopolys and Bubasto shalbe slayne wyth the sweard/and caryed awaye captyue. At Taphnis the day shalbe darcke when I breake there the Scepter of the land of Egipte, and when the pompe of her power shall haue an ende. A cloud shal couer her, and her daughters shalbe led awaye into captyuytee. Thus wyll I punysh Egypte, that they maye knowe how that I am the Lorde.

It happened in the xi. yeare, vpon the seuenth daye of the first Moneth/ that the Lordes worde came vnto me, sayeng: Beholde thou sonne of man/ I wyl breake the arme of Pharao kig of Egipt: and lo it shal not be bounde vpto be healed, nether shal any plaistre be layd vpō it, for to ease it, or to make it so strong as to holde a swerde. Therfore, thus sayeth the Lord god: Behold I wyl vpon Pharao ỹ king of Egipt and bruse his strōg arme (yet is it but a broken one) and wyl smyte the swerd
G out of hys hande.

As for the Egyptyans I wyl scatre them among the Heathen/ & strow them in the landes aboute. Agayne, I wyl strength the arme of the kynge of Babilō, & geue hym my sweard in hys hād: but I wyl breake Pharaos arme so ỹ he shal holde it before hi piteously like a wounded man.

Yea I wyl stablish the king of Babylons arme, and ỹ armes of Pharao shal fal downe: that it may be knowne that I am the Lorde, whych gaue the kynge of Babylon my sweard in hys hande, that he maye drawe it out vpō the land of Egipt: and when I scatre ỹ Egyptians amonge the Gentyls, and strowe them in the landes about, they maye know, that I am the lord.

¶ A comparison of ỹ prosperitie of Pharao with the prosperite of the Assiriās. He prophecieth alike destruction vpon them bothe.

The .xxxi. Chapter.

MOreouer, it happened in the xi yeare the fyrst date of the third Moneth that the worde of the Lord came vnto me (sayinge: Thou sonne of man speake vnto Pharao the king of Egipt, and to al his people: Whom art thou lyke in thy greatnes? Behold Assur was lyke a Cedre tre vpon the mount of Lybanus with fayre braunches: & thycke, that he gaue shadowes and shot out very hygh. Hys toppe reached vnto the cloudes. The waters made hym greate, and the depe set hym vpon hye. Round about the rotes of hym rāne there floudes of water, he sent out hys lytle ryuers vnto al the trees of the felde.

ezechy xxix. xxxi. xxxii.

Therfore was he hier then al the trees of the felde, and thorow the multitude of waters that he sent from hym, he obtained manye longe braunches. Al foules of the ayre made their nestes in hys braūches, vnder his bowes gedred B al these beastes of the felde and vnder his shadow dwelt al people. Fayre ād beutiful was he in his greatnes and in the length of his braūches, for his rote stode beside greate waters. No Cedre tre might hide him. In the pleasaunte garden of god, there was no fayre tree lyke hys braunches/ the playne trees were not like the bowes of him. Al the trees in the garden of god might not be compared vnto him in his beuty, so fayre and goodly had I made hym vi the multitude of his braunches: Inso much that al the trees in the pleasaunt garden of God/ had enuie at him.

Therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde god: for so much as he hath lift vp him self so hye, and stretched his toppe into the cloudes/ and seing his hert is proude C his highnes: I wyl deliuer him into the handes of the *myghtiest amonge the Heathen, which shal rote him oute Accordyng to hys wyckednes wyll I cast him away, the enemies shal destroye hym, and the myghtye men of the Heathen shall so scater him, that hys braunches shall lye vpon al mountaynes and in al valleyes: his bowes shal be broken downe to the grounde thorow out the lande. Then al the people of the lande shal go from his shadowe and forsake him. When he is fallen, al the foules of the ayre shal syt vpon hi, and al wilde bestes of the feld shal go about amonge his braunches: so ỹ frō henseforth, no tree in the water shal at D tayne to his hyghnesse, nor reache hys toppe vnto the cloudes, nether shall any tre of the water stande so hye, as he hath done. For vnto death shal they al be deliuered vnder the earthe, and goo downe to the graue, lyke other men.

Moreouer thus saith the lord god In the daye when he goeth downe to the graue I wyl cause a lamentacion to be made. I wyl couer the depe vpon him. I wyl staunche his floudes, and the greate waters shalbe restrayned.

I shall cause lybanus to be sorowfull for hys sake, and all the trees of the feld shal be smytten. I wyll make the heathen shake at the sounde of hys fall when I caste hym downe to hel, wyth them that descende into the pytte. All the trees of Eden. vi all the chosen and best trees of Lybanus pe and all they that are planted vpon the waters shall mourne wyth hym, also in ỹ lower habytations: for they shall go downe to Hell wythe hym, vnto them ỹ at beeslayn wi ỹ swerd, whych dwelt afor vnder ỹ shadow of hys arme mong the hethen. To whom shalt thou be lykned that art so glorious and great amon the trees of Eden? Yet arte thou caste downe vnder the Earthe (amounge thee Trees of Eden) where thou must lye among the vncyrcumcised: wyth them that be slayne wi the sweard. Euen thus is it wyth Pharao.

¶ The prophet is commaūded to bewayle Pharao the kynge of egypte. He prophesyeth that destructiō shall come vnto egipte thorow the kyng of Babylo.

The .xxxii. Chapter.

IN the .xii. yeare/ the fyrst day of the .xii. Moneth the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man take vpp a lamentacyon vpon Pharao the kynge of Egypt, and saye vnto hym. Thou art reputed as a lyon of the Heathen, and as a whalfysh in the sea. Thou castest thy waters about thee/ thou troublest the waters wi thy fete and stampest in theyr floudes. Thus sayeth the Lorde God I wyll spreade my net ouer thee namely, a greate multitude of people, these shall dryue the into my yarne for I wyll caste thee vppon the lande and let the lye vpon the feld, that all the foules of the ayre may sitt vpon thee: I wyll geue all the beastes of the fealde ynough of the. Thy flesh wyll I cast vpon the hylles and fyll the valleyes wyth thy hyghnesse. I wyll water the land wyth the aboundaunce of B thy bloude, euen to the mountaynes and the valleyes shalbe full of thee. When thou arte put oute, I wyll couer the heauen, and make hys starres dymme. I wil spreade a cloude ouer the Sunne, and ỹ Moone shall not geue her lyghte. Al the lightes of heaue wil I put out ouerthe, and bring darckenes vpon thy lande/ sayeth the Lord God. I wyl trouble the hertes of many people, whē I bringe thy destruccion amonge the Heathen/ & countrees, whō thou knowest not.

Yea I wyl make many people wyth their kinges so afrayed thorowe thee ỹ C theis hearte shal stand vp, whē I shake my swearde at their faces. Sodenly shal they be astonied, euery man i him selfe at the daye of thy fall.

For thus sayeth the lorde god: the kynge of Babylons swearde shal com vpon thee/ wi the swardes of the worthies wyl I smite downe the people. Al they that be mightie among ỹ Gentyls, shal waste the proud pompe of Egipt, and brenge downe al her people. Al the cattel also of Egipte will I destroy/ that they shal commonore vpon ỹ waters: so that nether mans fote nor beastes clawe, shall sterre theym anye more.

Then wyl I make their waters clere, and cause their floudes to runne lyke oyle/ sayeth the Lorde god: When I make the lande of Egipt desolate/ & when the countre, with al that is therin shalbe layde waste: and when I smite al them which dwell in it/ that they mate know that I am the lord. This is the mourninge, that the daughters of the Heathē shal make: Yea a sorow and lamentaciō shal they take vp/ vpD on Egypt and al her people, sayeth ỹ lord god.

In the .xii. yeare, the xv. daye of ỹ Moneth/ cam ỹ word of the lord vnto me/ sayinge: Thou sonne of man. Take vp a lamentacion vpon the people of Egipt, and cast them downe, yee and the mightye people of the Heathē also, euen wyth them that dwel beneth and with them that go downe in to the graue. Downe (how fayre so euer thou be) and late thee with the vncircumcised Amonge those that be slayne with the sweard, shall they lye.

The swearde ys geuen all ready, he shall be drawen forthe and all hys people.

The

The mighthe worthyes and hys helpers that be gone downe and lye with the vncyrcumcysed and wyth them that be slayn wyth the swerde shall speake to hy mouth of the hell.

Assur is there also wyth hys company, and theyr graues rounde about e, which were slayne and fell all wyth the swerde/whose graues lye beside hym in ꝑ low pytte. Hys commons are buryed rounde about e hys grauecal together wounded and slayne wythe the swerde, whych men aforetyme brought feare into the land of the lyuing.

There is Elam also wyth al hys people, and theyr graues rounde about: which all beynge wounded and slayne wythe the swearde are goone downe vncyrcumcysed vnder the earth, whych neuertheles sometyme brought feare into the lande of the lyuing: for, the which they beare their shame, wyth the other that begone downe to the graue.

Theyr buryall is geuen them and al theyr people amonge them that be slayne Theyr graues ar rouñ about al the which be vncyrcumcised, and wyth them that be slayne with the swerde: for seynge that in tymes paste they made the lande of the lyuyng afrayed, they must nowe beare their owne shame wyth them that goo downe to the pytte/ and lye among them that be slayne.

There is Mesech also and Tubal, & theyr people, and theyr graues rounde about. These al ar amõg al vncyrcũcysed, & them that be slayn with the swerd, because afore tyme they made the lande of the lyuynge afrayed.

D Should not they then ly also amonge the worthyes, and vncyrcumcysed Grautes: whych wyth theyr weapons are gone downe to hell: whose swerdes are layd vnder theyr heades, whose wyckednesse is vpon theyr bones: because that as worthyes they haue brought feare into the lande of the lyuynge: yea among the vncyrcumcysed shalt thou be destroyed, and sleape wythe them, that perysshed thorowe the swearde

There is the lande of Edom, wyth her kynges and Pryuces also, whyche wyth theyre strenght are layde by them that were slayne wyth the swerde, ye amonge the vncyrcumcysed and them whyche are gone downe into the pytte. Moreouer there be al the prynces of the northe, wyth all ꝑ Sidonyans whyche are gone downe to the slayne.

Wyth theyr feare and strenght they are come to confusyon: and lye there vncyrcũcised, amonge those that be slayne wyth ꝑ swearde: and beare theyr owne shame wt them that be gone down to the pyt. Now when Pharao seyth hys, he shalbe comforted ouer all hys people, that is slayne wyth the swearde. Both Pharao and all hys hooste, sayth the Lorde God. For I haue geuen my feare in the Lande of the lyuyng: But Pharao and all hys people shall lye amonge the vncyrcumcysed, and among them that be slayn wyth the swerde, sayth the Lord God.

The setteth out the office of a curat that preacheth the Gospell, he strengtheneth them that dyspayre, and boldneth them wyth the promes of mercy. Also ꝑ former ryghtuousnes helpeth not the ryghtuous, ye he geue hym selfe agayne to synne: so the synnes done before are not imputed to the wycked that amendeth. The worde of the Lord agaynst the remnaunte of the people. Agaynste the mockers of the wordes of the prophete.

The.xxxiii. Chapter.

Gayne, the worde of the lord cam vnto me, saiyng: Thou sonne of man, Speke to the chylderen of thy people, and tell them: When I sende a swearde vpon a land yf the people of the lande take a man of theyre countree and set hym to be theyr watchman, that same man/ when he seeth the swerde come vpõ the lande shall blowe the trompet, & warne the people.

If a man nowe heare the noyse of the trompet and wyll not be warned, and the swearde come and take hym awaye: hys bloude shall be vpon hys owne head: for he herde the sounde of the trompet, & wold not take heade, therfore hys bloude be vpon hym. But yf he wyll receaue warnyng he shall saue hys lyfe. Agayn, yf the watchman se the swearde come and blow it not wyth the trompet so that the peple is not warned: yf the swearde come then, and take any man from amonge them/ ꝑ same shalbe taken awaye in hys owne sinne, but hys bloude wyll I requyre of the watchmans hande.

And

And nowe (O thou sonne of man) I haue made thee a watchmã vnto the house of Israell, that where as thou hearest any thyng out of my mouthe, thou mayst warne them on my behalfe. If I saye vnto the wycked, thou wycked, thou shalte surely dye: and thou geuest hym not warnyng/ that he may beware of hys vngodly waye: then shall the wycked dye in his owne synne/ but hys bloude wyl I requyre of thy hand. Neuertheles yf thou warne the wycked of hys waye, to turne from it, where as he yet wyll not be turned from it, then shall he dye because of hys synne, but thou hast delyuered thy soule.

Therfore (O thou sonne of man) speke vnto the house of Israel. Ye say thus: Our offences & synnes lay vpõ vs/ & we be corrupt in them: how shold we then be restored vnto lyfe? Tell them: As truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lord God, I haue no pleasure in the death of a wycked/ but much rather that the wycked turne from hys waye ād lyue. Turne you/ turne you from youre vngodly wayes. O ye of the house of Israell. Oh, wherfore wyll ye dye?

Thou sonne of man, tell the chylderen of thy people: The ryghtousnes of the righteous shall not saue hym, whan soeuer he turneth his waye vnfaithfully. Agaī the wykednes of the wyked shal not hurt hym, whan soeuer he conuerteth from his vngodlynes.

And the righteousnes of the ryghteous shall not saue hys lyfe, whan soeuer he synneth.

If I saye vnto the ryghteous, that he shall surely lyue, and so he trust to hys owne ryghteousnesse, and do synne, then shall hys righteousnesse be no more thought vpon/ but in the wykednes that he hath done he shall dye. Agayne yf I saye vnto the wycked, thou shalte surelye dye, and so he turne from hys synnes/ ād do the thynge that is lawful and ryghte/ in so much that the same wycked man geueth the pledge agayn restoreth that he had taken away by robbery, walketh in the commaundementes of lyfe, and dothe no wrounge/ he shall surelye lyue and not dye. Yea the Sinnes that he hathe donne,  shall neuer bee thought vpon, for in so muche as he doth now the thyng that is lawful and ryght, he shall lyue. And yet the chylderen of the people saye: Tush, the waye of the Lord is not ryght, where as theyr owne way is rather vnryght.

When the ryghteous turneth from hys ryghteousnes, and dothe the thynge that is wycked, he shall dye therfore. But yf the wycked turne from his wyckednes, doynge the thynge that is lawefull and ryghte, he shall lyue therfore. Yet ye saye: the waye of the Lorde is not equall. O ye house of Israell/ I wyll iudge euery one of you after hys wayes.

In the.xii. yeare the.v. daye of the.x. moneth of our captyuitye, it happened that one which was fled out of Jerusalem, came vnto me, and sayde: the cytye is destroyed.

Now the hande of the Lorde had bene vpon me the euenyng afore thys mā (whych was escaped) came vnto me, and had opened mi mouth, vntyl the morning that he cam to me: ye he opned my mouth, so that I was nomore domme. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto mee and sayde:

Thou Sonne of manne, these that dwell in the wasted Lande of Israel, say: Abraham was but one manne, and he had the lande in possessyon: now we are we many, and the lande is geuen vs to possesse also. And therfore tell them. Thus sayth the Lord: In the bloude haue ye eaten, youre eyes haue ye lyfte vp to Idoles, & haue shed bloude: shal ye then haue thelãde in possessyon.

Ye leane vpon the sweardes, ye worke abhomynacyons, euerye one defyleth hys neyghbours wyfe: and shall ye then possesse the lande?

Saye thou these woordes vnto them. Thus sayeth the Lorde god:  As truly as I lyue, al ye that dwell in thys wildernes, shalbe slayne wythe the swearde: what soeuer is vpon the feld wyl I geue vnto the beastes to be deuoured, those that be in stronge holdes and dennes/ shall dye of the pestylence. For I wyll make the lande so desolate and waste, ād the Pompe of her strenght shall comme to an ende.

The

The mountaynes in Israel shal be so waste that noman shall trauayle therby.

G Ezec.xxv.c. Then shall they lerne to know, that I am the Lozd, when I make the lād waste and desolate, because of all their abhominacyons, that they haue wzaught. And thou sonne of mā, the childzē of the peope that talketh of thee, by ȳ waies & ȳ dozes of their houses, sayig one to another: Come, let vs heare, what wozde is gone fozth from ȳ lozd: These come vnto thee, after the maner of a greate people: yea my people syt downe befoze thee, & heare the wozdes, but they do not therafter: foz in their mouthes they shewe theym selues/ as though they were feruent / but their hert goeth after their owne couetouse lucre. And as a balet that hath a swete tune, and is pleasaunt to syng, so shalt thou be vnto the: thy wozdes shal they heare, but they wyl not do therafter.

Whan thys cometh to passe (foz lo, it commeth in dede) thē shal they knowe, that there hath bene apzophet amōge them.

A Ezech. viii. a. Ieze. xliii. b. Zzch. xiii. a

AND the wozde of the Lozde cam vnto me, sayig: Thou sonne of manne, pzophcy against the shepardes of Israel, pzophecye and speake vnto them: Thus saieth the lozd god: Wo be vnto the shepardes of Israell, that fede them selues. Should not the shepardes fede the flockes?

Luc. xiii. b, Ye haue eaten vp my fatt/ ye haue clothed you wt the wol: the best fedde haue ye slayne, but the flocke haue yee not nozished. The weake haue ye not holden vp, the sicke haue ye not healed: Tee broken haue yee not bounde to gether/ the oute castes haue yee not bzoughte agayne: the losse haue ye not sought, but churyshly ād cruelly haue ye ruled them. Thus are they scatered here and there with out a shepard: ye al the beastes of the felde deuoure thē and they go astraye.

My shepe go wandzing vpon al b mouneaynes and vpon euery hye hyl. Ye they be scatered abzode in al feldes, and there is no mā, that careth foz thē, oz seketh after them. Therfoze O ye shepardes, heare the wozde of the lozd. Thus sayeth the Lozd god: As truly as I liue, foz so much as my shepe are robbed, and deuoured of all the wylde beastes of the feld, hauing no shepard: and seing that my shepardes take no regarde of my shepe, but fede theim selues only, and not my shepe: Therfoze heare the wozd of the lozd O ye shepardes: Thus saith the lozd god: Behold, I my selfe will vpon the shepardes, ād requyze my shepe from their handes, & make them ceasse from defedinge of my shepe: yea the shepardes shal fede them selues no moze: Foz I wyll delyuer my shepe out of their mouthes, so that they shal not deuoure them after thys. Foz thus sayeth the Lozde god: Behold, I wyl loke to my shepe my selfe, and seke them. G

Like as the shepard amonge the flock seketh after the shepe that are scatered abzade, euen so wyll I seke after my shepe, and gather them together oute of al places, here they haue bene scatered in the cloudy and darke daye.

I wyl bzyng them out from al people, and gather them together out of all landes.

I wyl bzynge them into their owne laude and fede theym vpon the mountaynes of Israel, by the ryuers, and in al the places of the countre. I wil fede them in right good pastures and vpō the hye mountaynes of Israell shall there foldes be. There shal they lye in good folde, and in a fat pasture shall they fede: euen vpon the monntaynes of Israel.

I wyll fede my shepe my self, and bzynge them to their rest, sayeth ȳ lozd god. Suche as be lost, wyl I seke: such as go astraye, wyll I bzynge agayne suche suche as be wounded, wyll I bynde vp/ such as be weake, wyll I make stronge: soch as be fat and wel lykyng, those wil I preserue, and fede thē wyth the thinge that is laufull. And as foz you(O my shepe, sayeth the Lozde God/ I wyll put a dyfference amonge the shepe, amonge the wethers and the goates. Was it not ynough foz you, to eate vp the good pasture, but ye must treade downe the rely du of your pasture wyth your fete also? Was it not ynough foz you to dzynke cleare water but ye must trou ble the resydue also wyth youre fete? Thus my shepe must be fayne to eate the thinge, that ye haue troden downe wyth youre fete, and to dzincke it that ye with youre fete haue defyled. Therfoze thus sayeth C the Lozde God vnto them: Beholde, I wyll seuer the fatt shepe from the leane: foz so moch as ye haue shot the weake shepe vpon the sydes and shoulders and tunne vpon them wyth youre hoznes, so longe tyll ye haue vtterly scatted thē abzode. I wyll helpe my shepe, so that they shal nomoze be spoyled: yea I wyll dysserne one shepe from another. I wyll rayse vp vnto them one only shepherde: euen my seruaunt a ✱ Dauid, he shal fede them, and he shal be theyr shepherde. I the Lozde wyl be theyr God/ and my seruaunte Dauyd shallbe there pzynce: Euen I the Lozde haue spoken it.

Moze ouer, I wyl make a couenaunt of peace wythe theym, and dzyue all euel beastes out of the lande: so that they may dwel safely in the wyldernesse, and slepe in the woddes. Good foztune and prosperyte wyl I geue them, and vnto all that be rounde aboute my hyl. A prosperous showe rand rayne wyll I sende them in due season, that the trees in the wodde maye bzyng fozth theyr frutes, and the grounde her increase. they shall be safe in theyr land and shal knowe, D that I am the Lozd, whych haue broken theyr yocke, and delyuered them oute of the handes of those, that helde them in subiectyon.

They shal no moze be spoyled of the Heathen, noz deuoured wyth the beastes of the lande: but safely shall they dwell, and no man shall fraye them. I wyll set vp an excellent plante foz thē so that they shall suffre no moze hunger in the lande, nether beare repzofe of the heathen any moze. Thus shall they vnderstande/ that I the lozd theyr God am wyth them and that they(euen the house of Israel) are my people sayth the lozd God. Ye men are my flocke, ye are the shepe of my pasture/ and I am your god sayth the Lozde God.

Therfoze, thus saieth the Lozde god: As truly as I lyue, I wyl handle thee accozdynge to thy wzath and gelously, lyke as thou hast dealt cruelly wt them, that I maye be knowen among them/how I haue punished thee. Yea and that thou also mayest be sure, ỹ I the Lozd haue hearde al thy despitefull wozdes, which thou hast spoken against the mountaynes of Israel, saiyng: lo, they ar made waste, & geuen vs to deuoure. Thus wt youre mouthes ye haue made youre boost agaynste me, yea and multyplied youre pzoud wozdes against me, which I haue heardе altogether. Wherevnto, thus saieth the lozd god, when the whole wozlde is in wealthe, then wil I make thee waste. And lyke as thou (O mount Seyr) wast glad, because the heritage of the house of Israel was destroyed: euen so wyl I do vnto thee also/that thou and whole Edō shalbe destroyed, and know that I am the lozd.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

a THou sonne of man, pzophecye vpon the Mountaynes of Israel/& speauke: Heare the wozde of the Lozd/ O ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus saieth the Lozd God: Because youre enemye hathe sayde vpon you: Aha, ỹ hie euerlastige places are now become ours: Pzophecy therfoze, and speake: Thus saieth the Lozde God: Seynge yee be wasted and troaden downe on euery side, and become a possessyon vnto the residue of the Gentiles, whyche haue bzoughte you in to mens mouthes and vnto an euil name amonge the people. Therfoze heare the wozde of the Lozde god, O ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus saieth the Lozde God vnto the mountaynes ād hylles, vallepes and dales, to the void wyldernes and desolate cytyes, which are spoyled and had in deryssion on euery side, amonge the residue of the Heathen. Yea, euen thus saieth the Lozde God: In ỹ fyze of my gelously haue I taken a deupse/against ỹ residue of ỹ Gentyles/and agaynst al Edom: whiche haue taken in my lande vnto them selfes foz a possession: wiche also reioyced from their whole herte with a dyspytefull stomacke, to waste it, and to spoyle it.

Pzophecy therfoz vpon the lande of Israel, speake vnto the mountaines and hylles, to vallepes and dales, thus saieth the lozd god: Behold (this haue I deupsed in my gelowsye and terrible wzath): Foz so muche as ye suffred repzof of the Heathen/therfoz thus saieth the Lozde God: I haue swozne, ỹ the Gentyles which lye about you/shal beare youre confusyon them selfes. And as foz you (O mountaynes of Israel) ye shal shut out youre braunches and bzyng foyth your frute to my people of Israel/foz it is harde by, that ye wyl come. Beholde, I come vnto you and vnto you wyll I turne me, that ye maie be tylled and sowen.

I wyl send you muche people/which shalbe al of the house of Israel: the cytyes shalbe inhabited/and the decayed places shalbe repayred agayne. I wyl pzoupde you wyth muche people and catell, which shall increase and bzynge frute. I wil restoore you also to your old estate & shewe you moze kyndnesse then euer ye had before: wherby ye shal knowe, that I am the Lozd.

Yea/ people wyll I sende vnto you/ (O my folk of Israel) which shal haue thee in possessyon, & thou shalt be their inheritaunce so that thou shalt nomoze be without them. Agayne, thus saieth the lozde God: Foz so muche as they saye vnto you: thou art an eater vp of men, and a waster of thy people: therfoz thou shalt eate no men, neither destroie thy people any moze, saieth the Lozde God. And I wyl not suffre thee, foz to beare thine owne confusion amonge ỹ Gentiles from henceforth. Thou shalte not beare the repzofe of the nacions, noz caste out thyne owne people any moze, saieth the Lozde God.

Moreouer the wozde of the Lozde came vnto me, saiyng: O thou sonne of man when then house of Israel dwelt vpon theyr awne ground they defiled them selues wyth their awne wayes and ymagynacyons: so ỹ in my syght theyr wayes was lyke the vnclennesse of a menstruous woman. Wherfoze I poured my wrothful displeasure vpon thē, because of the bloude that they had shed in the lande/and because of theyr Idols, wher wyth they had defyled thē selues. I scatered them also among the Heathen, so that they were strowed about in the landes. Accozdyng to theyr wayes and after theyr awne inuencyons, so dyd I punyshe them.

Now when they were gone vnto the Heathen, and came in amonge them, their a*dyshonoured my holy name: so that it was sayde of them: Are these the people of God, and must go out of theyr awne lande? Then spared I my holy name, wheych the house of Israel had dyshonoured amonge the Gentyles, to whom they came. Therfoze tell the house of Israel: Thus saieth the Lozde God: I do not thys foz your sakes (O house of Israel) but foz my holy names sake, whyche ye dyshonoured among the Heathen, when ye came to them. Therfoze, I wyll hallow my grete name agayne/whych amōge the Gentyles is euell spoken of: foz ye youre selues haue dyshonoured it among thē. And the Gentyles shal know that I am the Lozde, whan I am honoured in you before theyr eyes/ saieth the Lozde God.

As foz you, I wyll take you from among the Heathen, and gather you together out of all countres, and bzyng you agayne in to your awne land. Then wil I poure cleare water vpon you, and ye shalbe clene: Yea from all youre vnclennesse and frō all your Idols shal I clense you. A new herte also wyl I geue you, and a new spzete wyll I put in to you. As foz that stonye hart/ I wyll take it out of your body, and geue you a fleshly herte. I wyl geue my spzete amōg you and cause you to walcke in my commaūdementes, to keepe my lawes, and to fulfyll them.

And so ye shal dwell in the lande/ that I gaue to your fozefathers, and ye shal be my people, and I wyl be your god. I wyl helpe you out of al vnclennesse. I wyl cal foz the cozne and wyl encrese it, and I wyl let you haue no hunger. I wyl multyply the frutes of the trees and the increase of the felde foz you, so that ye shall beare no moze repzofe of honger among the heathē. Then shal ye remembze your owne wicked waies and your vnmagnacions, which were not good so that ye shal take displeasure at youre owne selues, by reasō of your synnes and abhompnacyons.

But I wyl not do this foz your sakes (saieth the Lozd god) be ye sure of it. Therfoze, O ye house of Israel, be ashamed of youre synnes. Moreouer, thus saieth the Lozde God: what tyme as I shal clense you from al youre offences, then wyl I make the cytyes to be occupyed againe and wyl repayze ỹ places that be decayed. The desolate lande shal be buylded agayn, which a foze tyme layd waste in the syght of al them that went by. Then shal it be sayde: this waste lande is become lyke a garden of pleasur, and the vopde, desolate and bzoken downe cytyes, are now stronge, and fensed againe. Then the residue of the Heathen ỹ lie round about you/ shal know that I am ỹ lozd which repayze that was bzoken doune & plante agayne, that was made wast Euē I the Lozd haue spoken it/ and wyl do it in dede.

Thus saieth the Lozd God: I wyl yet once be found agayne of the house of Israel, and do this foz them: I shall encrease them as a flocke of men.

Lyke as the holye flocke and the flocke of Jerusalem are in the hye solempne feastes: so shal also the wylde wasted cytyes be filled with flockes of men: and they shal know that I am ỹ Lozd.

¶ Ye pzophecyeth the bzinging againe of the peple being in captiuitee. He sheweth the vnyon of ỹ ten tribes with the two. Christ is the kyng of ỹ Christen people alone, and the only euerlasting shepard therof.

¶ The. xxxvii. Chapter.

The prophecye

THe hande of the Lorde came vpon me, and caryed me out in the spyrite of the Lorde/ād let me doune in a playne feld that laye full of boones/ and he ledde me rounde aboute by them: and beholde, the bones that laye vpō the feld were verye manye, and maruelous drye also. Then sayd he vnto me: Thou sonne of man: thynckest thou these bones maye lyue agayne? He answered: O Lord god thou knowest. And he sayde vnto me: prophecy thou vpon these bones, ād speake vnto the: Ye drye bones, heare the word of the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lord God vnto these bones: Beholde I wyll putt breath into you, that ye may lyue: I wyl geue you synowes, and make flesh grow vppon you / and couer yow ouer wythe skynne: and so geue you breathe/ that ye maye lyue, and knowe, that I am the Lorde.

Genesi. ii. d.

So I prophecyed, as he had cōmaunded me. And as I was prophecying ther came a noyse ād a great moeyon, so that the bones ranne euery one to an other. Now whē I had loked, behold, they had synowes/ and flesh grewe vpon them: ād aboue they were couered wyth skynne, but there was no breath in them. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man/ prophecy thou towarde the wynde: prophecy, and speake to the wynde. Thus sayth the Lord God: Come O thou ayer from the foure wyndes, and blowe vpon these slayne, that they may be restored to lyfe. So I prophecyed, as he had commaunded me: then came the breathe into them/ and they receaued lyfe, and stoode vp vpon theyr fete a maruelous great sort.

1. Reg. xv. a.

Moreouer he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, these bones are the whole house of Israell. Beholde they saye: Our bones are dryed vp, our hope is gone, we are cleane cut of. Therfor prophecy thou and speake vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde, I wyll open your graues (O my people) and take you out of youre sepulchres, and bryng you into the lande of Israell agayne. So shall ye knowe that I am the Lorde, when I opē youre graues and bryngе you out of thē. My spyrite also wyll I put in you and ye shall lyue: I wyll set you agayne in youre owne lande, and ye shall knowe, ꝙ I am the lorde wyrch haue sayde it, and fulfylled it in dede.

The worde of the Lord came vnto me/ saynge: Thou sonne of man take a sticke and wryte vpon it Vnto Juda, and to the chylderen of Israell hys cōpanyons. Then take another sticke, & wryte vpon it Vnto Joseph the stocke of Ephraym, and to all the houshold of Israell hys compantons. And than, take both these together in thyne hād, so shall there be one sticke therof. Now yf the chylderen of thy people saye vnto thee: wylt thou shewe vs, what thou meanest by these? Then geue them this answer: thus sayeth the lorde God: Beholde, I will take the stocke of Joseph which is in the hande of Ephraim and of the trybes of Israel his felowes, ād will put them to the stocke of Juda, ād make thē one stocke, & they shallbe one in my hand. And the two sticks wher vpon thou wryteste, shalte thou haue in thyne hande that they maye se, and saye vnto them.

Ose. i.

Thus sayth the lorde God, beholde, I wyll take awaye the Children of Israel frō among the Heathē/ vnto whō they be gone, & wil gather thē together on euery syde/ & bring thē againe into their owne lande: yea, I will make one people of thē in the land/ vpon ꝯ mountaines of Israel, ād they shal haue but one kig. They shal no moꝛe be two peoples from hense forth, nether be dyuyded into two kyngdoms: they shal also defile thē selues nomoꝛe wt their abhominations, Idoles ād al their wycked doinges. I wyl help thē out of all their dwelling places, wherī they haue sinned: & wil so clense thē, that they shal be my people, and I their God.

Dauid my seruaūt shalbe their kig & they al shal haue one shepard only. They shal walcke in my lawes, & my commaundementes shall they bothe keape and fulfyll. They shall dwel in the lād, ꝯ I gaue vnto Jacob my seruaūt, where as your fathers also haue dwelt. Yea euē i the same lād shal they, their children/ & their childers childrē dwel for euer more: and my seruaunt Dauid shalbe their euerlasting pryce.

The prophecyeth that Gog and Magog shall come with an appoynted hoste into the lande of promes They entent. He rehearseth that the comming of gog was before prophecyed of the prophetes. The destruction of hym.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

ANd the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, turne thy face towarde Gog in the Lande of Magog whyche is the chefe prynce at Mesech and Tubal: prophecy agaynste hym, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lord god: O Gog thou chefe Prynce Mesech and Tuball: Beholde I wyll vpon thee and wyl turne thee aboute/ and put a hyt in thy chawes: I wyll bryngе thee forth & al thyne hoost both horse and horsmen, whyche be all weaponed of the best fashyon: A great people, that handle altogether speares shyldes and swerdes: the Perses, Moryans and wythe them the Lybians, whyche all beare shyldes and helmettes Gomer and all his hostes: the houle of Thogorma out of the north quarters and al hys hoostes/ yea and muche people wyth thee.

Therfor prepare thee, sett thy selfe in araye with all thy people, that ar cōe vnto thee by heapes, and be thou their defence. After many dayes thou shalte be visited, and in the latter yeres thou shalte come into the lande that hath ben destroyed with the swearde, and nowe is replenished agayne wyth dyuerse people vpon the Mountaynes of Israell, which haue longe lyen waste. Yea, they be brought out of the nations, ād dwel all safe. Thou shalt com vp lyke a storme wyndes, to couer the lande, and as it were a darcke cloude: thou withe all thyne hostes, and a great multitude of people with thee.

Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde God: At the same tyme shal manye thynges come into thy mynde, so that thou shalt ymagyne myscheife, & saye: I wyl vp to yonder playne lande, seig they syt at ease, and dwel so safely (for they dwel all without any walles, they haue neither barres nor dores) to spoile them to robbe them, to laye hande vpō their so wel inhabited wyldernesses: agaynst that people, that is gathered together from amonge the Heathen, whiche haue gotten cattaill and good, and dwel in the myddest of the lande. Thē shal Saba, and Dedan/ and the merchauntes of Tharsis with al their worthyes saye vnto thee: Art thou come to robbe? Hast thou gathered thy people together, because thou wilt spoile? to take syluer and gold: to cary awaye cattell and good: and to haue a greate preye?

Therfore/ O thou sonne of man, ꝯ shalt prophecy and saye vnto Gog: Thus sayeth the lorde god: In that daye thou shalt know, that my people of Israel dwelleth safe: and shalt com from thy place out of the north partes thou and muche people with thee/ whiche ryde vpon horses, whereof there is a grete multitude ād an innumerable sorte: yea thou shalt come vpon my people of Israel, as a cloude to couer the lande. This shal come to passe in ꝯ * latter dayes. I wyll bryngе thee vp into my lande, that the Heathen maye knowe me, when I get me honour vpon thee O Gog, before their eyes.

Thus saieth the lord God: Thou art he, of whome I haue spoken afore tyme, by my seruauntes the prophetes of Israel, whyche prophecyed in those dayes and yeares, that I shoulde bryng thee vpon them.

At the same tyme, when Gog commeth vp into the lande of Israel (sayeth the Lorde God) shal my indygnacyon go forth in my wyath. For in my gelowsye and hote displeasure I haue deuysed, that there shal be a greate trouble in the lande of Israel at that tyme The very fyshes in the sea, the foules of the ayre, the beastes of the feld/ and al the men that are vpō the earth, shal tremble for feare of me.

The hylles also shalbe turned vp syde downe, the stayres of stone shall fall, and al walles shall syncke to the grounde. I wyll call for a swearde vpon them in all my mountaynes, sayeth the Lorde God: so that euery mans swerde shall be vpon another. With pestilence and bloud wyl I prouyde hym: slowme rayne and hayle stones, fyre and brymstone, wyll I cause to rayne vpon hym and all hys heape, ye and vpon al that great people that is wyth hym. Thus wyll I be magnyfyed, honored and knowen among the heathē: that they maye be sure, howe that I am the Lorde.

He shewyth the destruction of Gog and Magog. The graue of gog and of hys host. He prophecyeth that gog and hys company shalbe deuoured of byrdes and beastes. Wherfore the house of Israell is wasted. They bryngynge agayne from captyuitee is promysed.

The.xxxix. Chapter.

¶ Therfor O thou sonne of mā prophecy agaynst Gog, and speake: Thus sayth the lord God: Behold O Gog: thou chefe prince at Mesech and Tuball, I wyll vpon thee, & turne thee aboute, and carye thee forth, & leade thee from the northy partes, and bryng thee vp to the mountaynes of Israell. As for thy bowe I wyll smyte it out of thy left hād and cast thyne arowes out of thy ryghte hand. Thou wythall thyne heape, and al the people that is wyth thee, must fal vpon the mountaynes of Israel. Then wil I geue thee vnto the foules and wylde beastes of the felde, to be deuoured: there must thou lye vpon the felde: for euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, sayeth the Lord God.

Into Magog and amonge those that syt so carelesse in the Iles: wyll I sende a fyre, and they shall know, that I am the lorde. I wyll make also the name of my holynes to be knowen among my people of Israell: and I wyl not let my holy name be euell spoken of any more: but the very heathen also shall knowe, that I am the Lorde, the holy one of Israel. Behold it commeth and shalbe fulfylled in dede sayeth the Lorde God. Thys is the daye wherof I haue spoken.

They that dwell in the cytyes of Israell shal go forthe and set fyre vpon the weapons, and burne them: shyldes/bowes and arowes/hylles and clubbes: seuen yeares shall they be burnynge therof, so that they shall fis bryngе no stickes frō the feld, nether haue nede to hew downe, eny out of the wodde: For they shal haue weapons enow to burne. They shall robbe those that robbed them, and spoile those that spoyled them sayeth the Lord God.

At the same tyme wyll I geue vnto Gog a place to be buryed in, in Israell: euen the valley where thorow men go from the east to ȳ sea ward. Those that trauayle therby/shall abhorre it. There shall Gog and al hys people be buryed: ād it shalbe called the valley of the people of Gog. Seuen monethes long shal the house of Israell be burynge of them that they maye clense the lande. Yea all the people of the lande shall bury them. O, it shall be a glorious daye, when I gett me that honoure, sayeth the Lorde God. They shall ordene men also to be dede buryers, euer goynge thorowe the land/and appoynt them certayn places to bury those in, whych remayne vpon ȳ felde, that the lande maye be clensed. From ende to ende shal they seke, and ȳ vii monethes longe. Now those that go thorow the land where they se a mās bone they shall set vp a token by it/ tyll the dede buryers haue buryed it also, in the valley of the people of Gog. And the name of the cytye shalbe called, Hamonah: Thus shal they make ȳ lande clene

And thou sonne of man: thus sayeth ȳ lord God: Speake vnto al the foules and euery byrd, yea and to all the wylde beastes of the felde: heape you, together and come, gather you rounde aboute vpon my slaughter that I haue slayne for you: euen a greate slaughter vpon the mountaynes of Israell: eate flesh, and dryncke bloude. Ye shall eate the flesh of the worthyes, and dryncke the bloude of the prynces of the lande: of the wethers, of the lambes, of the goates, and of the oxen that be all slayne at Basan. Eate the fat your belyfull, and dryncke bloud, tyll ye be dronckē of the slaughter, whiche I haue slayn vnto you.

Fyll

Fyll you at my table, wyth hozses and strong hozsemen: with captaynes and all men of warre, sayeth the lozde god.

I wyl bynge my glozy also amōg the Gentiles, that al the Heathen maye se my iudgement, that I haue kepte, & my hande whyche I haue layde vpon them: ȳ the house of Israel may know, how that I am the Lozde theyr God/ from that daye forth. And the Heathen shal knowe, that wher as the house of Israel were led into captiuitee: it was for their wickednes sake/ because they offended me.

For the which cause I hyd my face from them, and delyuered them into ȳ handes of their enemyes ȳ they might al be slayne with the swearde. Accordig to their vncleneſſe and vnfaithfyl dealynges, so haue I entreated them/and hyd my face from them. Therfore thus sayeth the Lozde God: Now wyl I bynge agayne the captyues of Jacob and haue mercye vpon the whole house of Israel, and be gelous for my holy names sake. All theyr consulyon and offence that they haue done against me/shal be taken awaye: and so safely shall they dwel in their lande, that no man shal make them afrayed. And when I haue brought them againe frō among the people, when I haue gathered them together out of their enemies landes, and am prayſed in them before many Heathen: then shal they knowe, that I am the Lozde their god, whiche suffred them to be led into captiuytee among ȳ heathē, but now haue brought them agayne into their owne lād, & not left one of them ponder.

After that, wyl I hyd my face no more from them/but wyl poure out my spyte vpon the house of Israel, saieth the Lozde God.

¶ The restooring of the cytye & of the temple that was to come, is shewed vnto the Prophete

¶ The xl. Chapter.

In the. xxv. yeare of oure captyuitee, in the beginig of the yeare, the.x. daye of the moneth: that is ȳ xiiii. yeare, after that ȳ cite was smitten downe: the same daye came the hand of the Lozd vpon me, & caried me forth: euē in ȳ lād of Israell brought he me in the Vysyones of God and set me downe vpon a maruelous hye mountayne, wherupon there was a buyldyng (as it had bene of a Cytie) toward the nozth.

Thether he caryed me, and beheld there was a manne/whose symilytude was lyke brasse whyche had a threde of flaxe in hys hande, and a meterodde also. He stode in the doze, ād sayd vnto me: marke wel wyth thyne eyes, herke to wyth thine eares, ād fasten it in thine herte, what soeuer I shall shewe thee: for to thintēt that they might be shewed thee, therefore arte thou brought hether. And what soeuer thou seest/thou shalt certify the house of Israell therof.

Beholde there was a wall on the outsyde round about the house: the meterodde that he hadd in hys hande was sixe cubites longe and a spanne. So he measured the breadthe of the buyldyng, which was a meterodde/and the heyght also a meterod. Then came he vnto the east doze, and went vp the stayres and measured the postes of the doze wherof euery one was a meterod thick. Euery chamber was a meterod longe and brode: betwene the chambers were fyue cubites. The post of the doze within the porche, was one meterodde. He measured also the porche of the vtter doze, which contayned a meterod. Then measured he the entry of the doze that contayned eyght cubytes, and his pyllers two cubytes: & this entry stode inwarde.

The chambers of the doze east ward were thre on euery side: all like brode ād lōge. The pyllers also ȳ stode of both the sides/were of one measure. After this he measured ȳ widnes of ȳ doze which was.x. cubites & ȳ heyth of ȳ doze xiii cubites. The edge before ȳ chambers was one cubite brode vpō both ȳ sides and the chābers six cubytes wid of eyther syde. He measured the doze frō the rigge of one chābre to another, whose wydnes was xxv. cubytes, & one doze stod agaīg another. He made pillers also lx cubytes hye, roūd about ȳ courte doze. Before ȳ inward part vnto ȳ forer entry of ȳ innermar doze, were L. cubites. The chambers & their pillers wer round round about vnto ỹ doze, had syde wyndowes: So had ỹ foze entres also, whose wyndowes wente rounde aboute wythe in. And vpon the pyllers there stode date trees.

Then brought he me in to the foze courte, where as were chambres and paued wozckes, made in the foze Courte round about. xxx. chambres vpon one paued wozcke. Now the paued wozcke was a longe beside the dozes/ and that was the lower paued wozcke. After this he measured the breadth from the lower doze, vnto the ynnermer courte of the out syde, whych had an. C. cubytes vpon the east and the nozth parte. And the doze in the vttermost courte towarde the nozth measured he after the lenght and bredth: hys thze chambres also on ether syde/ wt hys pyllers and foze entryes: whych had euen the measure of the fyrst doze. Hys heygth was fifti cubytes, the bredth xxv cubytes: hys wyndowes and pozches wt hys date tres, had euen lyke measure as the doze towarde the east: there were. viii steppes to go vp vpon, and theyr pozche be foze them. Now the doze of the ynnermer court stode strevght ouer agaynst ỹ doze, that was towarde the nozth east. From one doze to another, he measured, C. cubytes.

After that he brought me to the south syde, where there stoode a doze towarde the south: whose pyllers and pozches he measured/ these had the fyrst measure: and wyth theire pozches they had wyndowes round aboute, lyke the fyrst wyndowes. The heygth was. l. cubytes, the bredth. xxv. wyth steppes to go vp vpõ: hys pozche stode before hym, wyth hys pyllers and date tres on eyther syde. And the doze of the innermer courte stode towarde the southe/ and he measured from one dooze to another an Hundred Cubytes. So he brought me in to the ynnermer courte thozowe the Dooze of the south syde: whych he measured, & it had the measure a foze sayde. In lyke maner hys Chambres pyllers, and foze entryes, had euen the foze sayde measure also.

And he had wyth hys pozches rounde aboute, wyndowes of. L. cubytes heyght & xxv. cubytes brode. The pozches round about were. xxv. cubytes long, & .v. cubytes brode. And hys pozche reached vnto the vttermost courte: vpon hys pyllers ther were date trees, and. viii. steppes to go vp vpon.

He brought me also into the inmost court vpon the east syde and measured the doze acozdyng to the measure afoze sayde. His chambers/ pyllers, and pozches had euen the same measure as the fyrst had: ād wyth hys pozches he had windowes rounde aboute. The heygth was. l. cubites, the bredth xxv. cubites: hys pozches reached vnto the vttermost courte: hys pyllers also had date trees on eyther syde/ and viii steppes to goo vp vpon. And he brought me to the nozthe dooze, and measured it whych also had the foze sayd measure. Hys chambers/ pyllers and pozches had wyndowes rounde aboute: whose heygth was L. cubites/ and the bredth xxv. hys pillers stode towarde the vttermost court and. vpon them both were date trees ād viii steppes to go vp vpon. Ther stode a chambze also, whose intraunce was at the doze pyllers/ and ther the burnt offrynges were washed.

In the doze pozche, there stode on either syde two tables foz the slaughtynges: To kepe the burntofferinges/ synneofferinges and trespaceoffringes therupon. And on the out syde as men go fozthe to the nozth doze, there stode two tables. Foure tables stod on ether syde of the doze. viii. tables wher vpon they slaughted. Foure tables were of hewen stone foz the burntoffringes a cubyte and a halfe longe and brode/ and one cubite hie wherupon were laid the vessels and ornamentes, whych were vsed to be the burnte and slayne offringes, when they were slaughted. And within, there were hokes foure fingers brode/ fastened rounde about/ to hange flesh vpon, and vpon the tables was layed the offringe flesh. On the outside of the innermer doze/ were the singers chambers in the inward court besyde the nozth doze ouer against the South. There stode one also, besyde ỹ east doze nozthwarde.

And he saide vnto me: This chãbre on the nozth syde belõgeth to ỹ preistes that kepe the habytatyon: And thys toward toward the nozth, is the Preistes that wayte vpon the aultar whiche be the sonnes of Sadoch, that do serupce before the Lozd in steade of the childzen of Leui. So he mesured the foze court which had in length an. C cubytes, ād as much in bredth by the foure cozners Now the aulter stode before the house And he brought me to the foze entre of ỹ house & mesured ỹ walls by the entre doze which were fyue cubites long on ether syde. The thickes also of the doze on either syde, was thze cubytes. The length of the pozche was. xx. cubytes, the bredth. xi. cubites, and vpon steppes wente men vp to yt: By the walles also wer Pillers/ on either syde one.

¶ The dispozycion and deuyse of buyldig again the temple, & of the other thinges ther to belõging

¶ The. xli. Chapter.

After thys he brought me to the temple, and mesured the postes: which were of bothe the sides. vi cubites thicke, accozding to ỹ wydnesse of the tabernacle. The bredth of the doze was. x cubytes and the walles of the doze on eyther syde fiue cubytes. He measured the length therof, which conteyned. xl cubytes/ and the bredth. xx. Then went he in, and measured the doze postes, whiche were two cubytes thicke: but the doze it self was syxe cubytes and the bredthe of ỹ doze was. vii. cubytes. He measured the lengthe and bredth therof, whych were euery one. xx. cubytes, before the tẽple

And he sayde vnto me: this is the holyest of al. He measured also the wal of the house, which was syxe cubytes. The chambres that stode round about the house, wer euery one foure cubytes wyde, and one stode hanged vpõ another wherof there were. xxxiii. And there stode postes beneth by the walles rouid about the house, to beare them thẽ vp: but in the wall of the house they were not fastened. The syde chambres were the hier, the wyder / and hadd steppes thozow theym round about the house Thus was ỹ wyder aboue, that from the lowest, men myght go to the hyeste and myddle chambres.

I sawe also that the house was very hie rounde aboute. The foundacyon of the syxe chambres was a metteroddc (that is syxe cubytes) brode. The thyckuesse of ỹ syde wall wythout, contened fiue cubites, and so dyd the out wall of the chambres in the house.

Betwene the chambers, was the wideues xx. cubytes rounde about the house. The chambze dozes stode ouer agaynst the outwall the one doze was towarde the nozth, the other towarde the South: and the thyckuesse of the outwall was. v. cubytes rounde about. Now the buyldynge that was separated towarde the west/ was. lxx. cubytes wyde: the wall of the buyldyng was. v. cubytes thycke round about, and the length foure score cubytes and ten. So he measured the house whych was an. C. cubytes long & the separated buyldyng wt the wal were an. c. cubytes long also. The wydnes before the house & of it that was separated towarde the East was an. C. cubytes.

And he measured the length of the buyldynge before and behynde wyth ỹ chambers vpon both the sydes: & it conteyned ā. C. cubytes. The ynnermer temple, the pozche of the foze court, the syde postes, these thze had syde wyndowes, & pyllers rounde aboute ouer agaynst the postes, from the grounde vp to the windowes. The wyndowes thẽ selues were syled ouer wyth bozdes: and thus was it about the doze, vnto the ynmost house and wyth out also. Ye the whole wall on euery syde both wythin and wythout was syled ouer wyth greate bozdes.

There were Cherubyns and date trees made also, so that one date tre stode euer betwyxte two Cherubyns. One Cherub had two faces/ the face of a man loking aside towarde the date tre, and a lyons face on the other syde. Thus was it made rounde aboute in al the house. Ye the Cherubyns and date trees were made from the ground vp about the doze, and so stode they also vpon the wall of the temple.

The bypostes of the temple were foure squared, and the fashyon of the Sanctuary was euē as it appared vnto me

me a foze in the vpspon. The table was of wodde, thze cubytes hye and two cubytes longe: hys cozneꝛs/the lengthe and the walles were of wodde.
And he sayd vnto me: Thys is the table that shall stande befoze the Lozde. The temple and the holyest of al had either of them two dozes and euery doze had two lytle wyckettes whyche were folden in one vpon another, on euery syde two.
And vpon the dozes of the temple there were mad Cherubyns & date trees, lykeas vpon the walles: a greate thycke balke of wodde was befoze on the out syde of the pozch. Upon both the sydes of the walles of the pozche, theare were made deape wyndowes and date trees, hauyng beames and balkes/lyke as the house had.

¶ Of the chambres of the temple foz the Preestes & the holy thynges.

The.xlti.Chapter.

A Then caryed he me out in to the foze court towarde the nozth, and bzought me into the chambze that stode ouer agaynst þ backe buyldyng nozth warde, which had the length of an C. cubytes, whose doze turned towarde the nozth. The wideneſſe cõteyned. L. cubytes ouer agaynſt the. xx. cubytes of the ynnermer courte, & agaynſte the paued wozk that was in the foze court. Beside al these thze, there stode pyllers, one ouer agaynst another. And befoze thys chambze there was a place of x. cubytes wyde, and wyth in was awaye of one cubyte wyde, and theyr dozes towarde the nozth. Thus the hyest chambzes were alwaye narower then the lowest and myddelmost of the buyldyng: foz they bare chambze vpon chambze, and stode thze togethet one vpon another not hauyng pyllers lyke the foze court: therfoz were they smaller then those beneth and in the myddest, to reeken from the ground vpwarde.

B The wall wyth out that stode by þ chambzes towarde the vttermoſt court vpon the foze syde of the chambzes, was L. cubytes long: foz the length of þ vttermoſt chambzes in the foze court was L. cubytes also: but the length therof befoze the temple was an C. cubytes,

These chambzes had vnder them an intraunce of the eaſte syde, whreby a man myght go into thẽ out of the foze court, thozow the thycke wall of the foze court towarde the east vyght ouer agaynst the separated buyldynge. Befoze the same buylding vpon this syde ther were chambers also whych had awaye vnto them, lyke as the chambers on the nozth side of the same length and wydeneſſe.

Theyr intraunce/fashyon and dozes were also of the same maner. Yea euen C lyke as the other chamberdozes were, so were those also of the south syde. And befoze the way toward the syngers steppes on the east syde there stode a doze to go in at. Their sayde he vnto me: the chambers towarde the Nozthe and the southe whych stande befoze the backe buyldyng those be holye habitations, wherein the pzyestes that do seruice befoze the Lozde must eate the moost holy offrynges: and there must they laye the moost holy offrynges: meatoffrynges, synneoffrynges & trespaſſe offrynges/foz it is an holy place. When the pzestes come therin, they shall not go oute into the foze courte: but (seyng they be holye) they shall leaue the clothes of theyr mynistration, and put ō other garmẽts, when they haue any thig to do wyth the people. D

Now when he had measured all the ynnemer house, he bzought me fozth thozowe the east pozte, and measured the same rounde aboute. He measured the east syde wyth the meterodde, whych rounde about conteyned v. C. meteroddes. And þ nozth syde measured he whych cõtayned rounde aboute euen so muche. The other two sydes also towarde, the southe and þ west (whych he also mesured) conteyned eyther of them. v. C meteroddes. So he mesured all the foure sydes where there went a wal round about. v. C meterods long, & as bzoade also/whych separated the holye from the vnholy.

He seyth the glozye of God goynge into the temple, from whence it had befoze departed. He menyoneth the Idolatreye of the chylderen of Israell, foz which they were consumed and bzoughte to nought. He is commaunded to tell them agayne to repentaunce.

The

The.xliii.Chapter.

A So he bzought me to the doze, that turneth towarde the east. Beholde then came the glozy of the God of Israell from oute of the east, whose voyce was lyke a great noyse of waters/ and the earth was lyghtened wythe hys glozye. Hys sight to loke vpon/was lyke the fyzst that I sawe, when I wente in, what tyme as the tytye should haue ben destroyed: and lyke the vysion that I saw by the water of Cobar. Then fel I vpon my face, but the glozye of the Lozde came into the house thozow the east dooze. So a wynd toke me vp, and bzought me into the ynnermer court, and behold the house was full of the glozye of the Lozde.

I herde one speakinge vnto me out of B the house, and there stode one by me, that sayde vnto me: O thou sonne of man/ thys rowme is my sete, & the place of my fotesteppes, whet as I wyl dwel amõg þ chylderen of Israel foz euermoze, so that the house of Israell shall noo moze defyle my holye name, neyther they noz theyr kynges thozowe theyze whozdome, thozow theyr hye places & thozow þ dead bodys of theyr kynges: whych haue buylded theyr thresholdes in maner herdvpon my thresholdes/and theyze postes almooste at my postes/so that there is but a bare wall betwyxte me and them. Thus haue they defyled my holy name wyth their abhominacions, that they haue committed wherfoze I haue destroyed them in my wrath. But now they shal put away their whozdome and the dead bodyes of theyr kynges oute of my syghte, that I maye dwell among them foz euermoze. Therfoze O thou sonne of man) shewe thou the houshoulde of Israell a temple, that they maye be ashamed of theyr wyckednes, and measure the selues an example thereat.

And when they bee ashamed of all C theyr wozckes then shew them the fozme & fashyon of the temple: the cõmyng in, þ goyng oute, al the maner and descryptiõ thereof. yea al the vses and ozdynaunces of it, that they maye keepe and fulfyll all the facyons and customes therof.

Thys is the descryption of the house, Aboue vppon the Mounte roundea, boute all the cozners/ it shalbe the holyest of all. Beholde, that is the descryptyon and fashyon of the house. Thys is the measure of the aultar (after the true cubyte/whych is a spanne longer then another cubyte) hys bottome in the myddest was a cubyte longe and wyde, and the ledge that wente rounde about it, was a spanne bzoade. This is the height of the aultar: from the grounde to the lower steppes to þ lenght is two cubites and the bzedth one cubite, and from þ lower steppes of the hyghest are foure cubites, and the bzedth but one cubite.

The aultar was foure cubytes hye and from the Aultar vpwarde stoode foure hoznes/ād it was xii. cubites lõg and. xii. cubites bzode vppon the foure cozners. The couerinye of the aultars was xiiii. cubites long and bzoade vpon the foure cozners, and the ledge þ wente rounde about/had halfe a cubyte: and the bottom therof round about one cubyte/hys steppes stode towarde the easte. And he sayde vnto me. D

Thou son of man, thus sayth the lozde GOD: These ar the ozdinaunces and lawes of the Aultar, in the day when it is made to offre burntoffrynges/ and to syzyncle bloude therupon. To the pzestes, to the Leuites that be of the sede of Sadoch/and treade befoze me to do me seruice, sayth the lozde God: Unto thele geue thou a yong bullock/foz a synne offrynge: and take the bloude of hym and syzyncle hys four hoznes wythal and the four cozners of the aulter couerynge: with the ledge that goeth round aboute, here wyth shalt thou cleanse it, and reconcyle it. Thou shalt take the bullocke also of the Synneoffrynge/and burne hym in a sczoneful place without the sanctuary.

The nexte daye, take a goot bucke wythout blemmyshe foz a sinneoffring to reconcyle the Aulter withe all, lyke as it was reconcyled wyth the bullock Now when thou hast made it cleane, then offre a yong bullock without blemysh and a ramme out of the flocke without blemish also. Offer them befoze the lozde, and let the pzest cast salt therupon and geue them so vnto the lozde foz a burnt offring. E

Seuen

Seuen dayes shalt thou bringe, euery daye a goot buck. A yonge bullocke & a ramme of the flocke (bothe without blemysh) shal they offer. Seuen dates shal they reconcile & cleanse the alter, & offer vpon it. When these dayes are expyred/then vpon ỹ. viii. daye and so forth, the prestes shal offer their burnt offrynges and healthe offrynges vpon the aulter: So will I be mercyfull vnto you/sayeth the Lorde god.

¶ He sheweth what doze of the temple is shut. Ezech. 8. & commaunded to vpbraide the people with their offence. The vncircumcysed in hert & in the flesh. Who are to be admitted to the seruice of Prestes, and who to be refused. He sheweth what prests he wold haue admitted into the holy place, and also their offices.

The xliiii. Chapter.

A Fter this, he brought me a gayne to the outward doze of the Sanctuarye on the East syde, and that was shut. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: This doze shalbe styl shut, & not opened for eny mã to go thorowe it but only for the lorde God of Israel: yea he shal go thorow it, els shall it be shut still. The prince hi selfe shal cõe thorow it/that he maye eate breade before the Lord. At the porche shal he come in, & there shal he go out agayne. Then brought he me to the doze, vpõ ỹ north syde of ỹ house. And as I loked about me, beholde, the glorye of the lord fylled ỹ house: and I fel down vpon my face. So the Lord spake vnto me: O ỹ sonne of mã, a* faste this to thyne hert beholde, and take dyligent heade to all that I wyl saye vnto thee/ concerning al the ordinaunces of the lorde and al his lawes: ponder wel with thine hert the cõmyng in of ỹ house & the goinge forth of ỹ sanctuary: & tel ỹ obstinat house of Israel: Thus sayeth ỹ lorde god: O house of Israell/ye haue now done ynough, with al youre abhominacyons, seynge that ye haue brought in to my Sanctuary straungers, hauynge vncyrcumcysed Hearres and flesche, where thorowe my Sanctuarye is defyled, when ye offre me brd, fat/& blode.

Thus with al youre abhominacions ye haue broken my couenaunt/ & not kept the holy ordinaunces of my sanctuary: but set kepers of my Sanctuary, euen after your owne minde. Therfor thus saieth the lord god: Of al the straungers that dwel among the chyldren of Israel/no straũger (whose hert and flesh is not circumcised) shal come within my Sanctuary: No nor the Leuites that be gone back fro me, & haue disceaued the people of Israel with al errours/going after their ydoles: their fore shall they beare their owne wyckednes. Yhilde they be set and ordened to my syght vnder the dores of the house of my sanctuary: And to do seruice in ỹ house, to slaye burntofferings and sacrifices for the people: to stande before them, and to serue them: seynge the seruyce ỹ they do them, is before myne Idols, and cause the house of Israel to stomble thorow the wickednes: For ỹ which cause I haue pluckte out myne hand ouer them (saieth the Lord) for ỹ now they muste beare their owne iniquitye, and not to come nye me, to serue me with their prestlhod, in my Sanctuary, and moost holyest of al: ỹ they make bere their owne shame and abhominacyons, whiche they haue donne. Shoulde I vse them to be porters of the house, and to all the seruyce that is done therin: but the prestes the Leuites the sonnes of Sadoch, that kepte thee holy ordynaunces of my Sanctuarye when the chylderen of Israeli were gone fro me shall come to me to do me seruyce, to stande before me, and to offre me the fat ãd the bloud/saieth the lord God.

They shal haue fayre linen bonettes vpon their heade and lynen breches vpon their loynes/which in their labor they shal not put about them: And when they go forthe to the People into the outwarde courte: they shall put of the clothes / wherein they haue ministred and laye them in the habytacion of the Sanctuarye and put on other apparell, leaste they vnhalowe the people with their clothes.

They shall not shaue their heades, nor nourysshe the bushe of their hearte but rounde their heades onely. All the prestes that go into the vtmost courte shall dryncke no wyne. They shal mary no wyddow, nether one that is put from her husbande: but a mayde of the sede of the house of Israell, or a wyddowe, that hath had a prest before.

They shall shewe my people the dyfference betwene the holy and vnholy, betwyxte the cleane and vncleane. If anye dyscorde aryse, they shal discerne it/and geue sentence after my iudgementes. My solepne feastes, my lawes and ordynaunces shal they keape/and halowe my Sabbothes. They shal come at no dead person to defyle them selues, excepte it be father or mother, sonne or daughter, brother or syster that hathe had yet no Husband) in suche they maye be defyled.

When ye deuyde the lande by the lot, ye shal put aside one parte for the Lord to be holy from otheyr landes: namely xxv. M. meteroddes longe, & x. M. brode. This shalbe holy, as wide as it is rounde about. Of thys parte there shall belonge vnto ỹ Sanctuary v. C. meteroddes in all the foure corners and. l. cubytes wyde rounde about to ỹ suburbes. And frõ this measure/namely of xxv. M meteroddes longe, and x. M brode, thou shalt measure, wherin the Sanctuary and the holyest of all maye stande. A Exo. xxviii. b

The residue of that holy grounde shall be the prestes, whych do seruyce in the Sanctuary of the Lorde, and goo in before the Lorde to serue hym/that they maye haue rowme to dwell in.

As for the Sanctuary, it shall stande for it self: and to the Leuytes that serue in the house, there shalbe geuen xx. habytacyons, of the xxv. M. length and x. Upon both the sydes of the Sanctuaryes part/and by the cytye there shalbe geuen vnto the prynce what soeuer lyeth ouer against the cytye, as farre as reacheth westward & eastwarde whych shalbe as long as one parte, from the west vnto the east. B C

This shalbe his awne lande in Israel/that my prynces be no more charge able vnto my people. And such as remayneth yet ouer in the lande shalbe geuen to ỹ house of Israel accordynge to their trybes. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: O ye prynces, ye haue now oppressed and destroyed ynough: now leaue of, handle now accordyng to the thynge, that is equall ãd lawful: and thrust out my people no more sayeth the Lorde God. Ye shal haue a true weyght, a true a* Ephah and a true b* Bath. The Ephah and the Bath shalbe alyke. One Bath shall cõteyne the tenth parte of an Homer and so shall one Ephah do. Their measure shall be after the Homer. One Sycle maketh. xx. Gras. c* So. xx. Sycles, ãd. xxv and. xv. Sycles make a pounde. D

This is the heaueoffrige/that ye shal geue to be heaued,namely,ỹ .xvi parte of an Ephah,out of an Homer of water and the .xvi. parte of an Ephah, out of an Homer of barley . The oyle shalbe measured with the Bath:euen the tent parte of one Bath out of a *Coz.

Ten Bathes make one Homer:for one Homer fylleth ten Bathes, And one lambe from two hondreth shep out of the pasture of Israel,for a meatoffering,burnt offering and healthoffering to reconcyle them/sayeth the lorde god.

All the people of the lande shall geue this heaue offeryng with a fre wyl.

Agayne,it shalbe the princes part to offer burntoffrynges,meat offeringes and drinckeofferinges vnto the Lorde in the holydayes,new Mones/Sabothes,and in al the fastesof the house of Israel. The synoffering,meateoffrynge burntoffering and healthoffering shall he geue/ to reconcyle the house of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord God: The fyrst day of the first moneth thou shalt take a yong bullock without blemish, and clense the sanctuary. So the preste shall take of the bloude of the synofferyng,and sprincle it vpon the postes of the houle,and vpō the foure corners of the aultar,with the dorepostes of the vnnermer courte. And thus shalt thou do also the seuenth date of the moneth (for suche as haue sinned of ignorance or beynge dysceaued) to reconcyle the house w al. Upon the .xiiii. daye of the moneth ye shal kepe Easter. Seuen dayes shal the feast contynue,wherein there shal no sower nor leuened bread be eaten.

Upon the same date shall the prince geue for him self and for al his people of the lande,a bullock for a synofferyng And in the feaste of the seuen dayes he shal offre euery date a bullocke & a ram, that are without blemish,for a burntofferyng vnto the lorde: and an he goote dayly for a synofferyng. ¶ The sacrifice of the Sabboth and of the newe moone. Thorow whych dores they must go in,or out of the temple, &c.

¶ The.xlvi.Chapter.

THus sayeth the lorde God: A the dooze of the vnnermer courte toward the east,shal be shut the vi worck dayes but in the sabboth & in the day of the newe Woone, it shalbe opened. The shal the prynce cōe vnder the dore porche,and stande stil wout by the doze cheke. So ỹ prestes shall offre vp hys burnte and healthe offerynges. And he shal worshippe at the doze poste,and go hys ware forthe agayne, but the doze shall no moze bee shut tyll the euening.

On the same maner shal the people of the lād also do theyr worshyp before the Lorde, without thys doze vpon the Sabbothes and new mones. This is now the burntofferynge,that ỹ prince shall bryng vnto the Lord vpon ỹ sab both:syxe lambes without blemysh, & a ram without blemish,and an Ephah for a meateoffering,with ỹ ram. As for the lābes,he maie geue as many meteotferinges to them,as he wil,& an hen of oyle to an Ephah. In the daye of the newe monethe,it shalbe a yong bullocke without blemyshe, syxe lambes & a ram also without blemysh. With ỹ bullocke he shal geue an Ephah,and with the ram an Epah also for a meteofferig:but to the lābes,what he maie come by. And euer an hen of oile to an Ephah. When the prince commeth he shal go vnder the doze porche, and euen there departe forth agayne. But whē the people of the lād come before the Lord in the hye solempne fest,as many as come in by the north doze to do worship, shal go out agayne at the south doze. And they ỹ com in at ỹ south doze, shall goo forth agayne at the North doze.

There

There shal none go oute at the doze where he cam in,but shal go forth ryght ouer on the other syde, and the prynce shal go in and out amonge them.

Upon the solempne and hye feaste dayes, thys shalbe the meatoffryng: An Ephah to a bullock & an Ephah to a ram/and to the lambes:as many as he wil,but euer an hin of oile to an Ephah. Now when the prynce bryngeth a burnt offerynge or an healthe offerynge wyth a fre wyll vnto the Lorde, the east doze shalbe opened vnto hym,that he may do wyth hys burnt and healthofferynges/ as he doth vpō the Sabboth,and when he goeth forth,ỹ doze shal be shutt after hym agayne. He shal daylye brynge vnto the Lord a lambe of a yere old wout blemysh for a burnt offryng: thys shall he do euery morynge. And for a meateofferynge he shal geue the syxte parte of an Epha/and the thirde parte of an Hin of oyle(to myngle wyth the cakes) euery mornyng. Yet hys shal be a daylye meatofferynge vnto the Lorde for an euerlastynge ordynaunce:and thus shall the lambe,the meatofferynge & oyle be geuē euery morynge,for a daylye burntoffe tynge.

Moreouer,thus saithe the Lord god: If the prynce geue a gyfte vnto eny of hys sōes,then shal it be hys sōnes herytage perpetuall/that he maye possesse it. But If he wil geue one of hys seruaun tes some of hys heretage,it shal be hys to the fre yeare, & thē to returne agayne vnto the prynce: for his heretage shalbe hys sonnes only. The prynce also shall take none of the peoples enheryptaunce/ ner put them from theyr possessyon:but to hys owne sonnes shal he geue his possessyon,that my people be not scatred abrode,but that euer man maie haue his owne.

And he brought me thorow the entraunce at the side of the doze to the habytacion of the Sanctuari,that belongeth to the prestes & stode towarde the north, and beholde,there was a place vpon the West syde,then sayde he vnto me:This is ỹ place,where the prestes shal dyght ỹ trespase and synoffrynges,and bake the meatofferings:that thei nede not beare them in to the out warde courte,and so to vnhalow the people.

So he brought me into the vttermost courte,rounde aboute all the foure corners. Behold in euery corner of the fore courte/theare was yet a lytle courte. Ye in al the fourecorners of the court, there was made a lytle courte of xl. cubites longe/and .xxx. cubites broade:

These foure lytle Courtes were of one lyke measure,and there went a rygge wall round about them al foure vnder the whyche there were harthes made rounde aboute. Then sayde he vnto me: Thys is the kytchyn/where ỹ mynisters of the house shall dyght the slayne offrynges of the people.

¶ The vysions of the water that come oute of the temple: The coastes of the lande of promes,and ỹ dyuision therof by tribes.

The.xlvii. Chapter.

AFter thys he brought me agayne before the doze of the house: & behold/ther gushed oute waters from vnder the posts of the house eastward (for the house stode towarde the easte) ỹ ranne downe vpon the right syde of the house,which lyeth to the aultar South warde. Then carryed he me oute of ỹ north doze,and brought me forth theare rounde about by the vttermost doze that turneth eastward. Behold, there came forth the water [illegible] syde.

Nowe whan [illegible] and the mete rod in hys hand [illegible] the east doze, he measured a [illegible] cubytes and then he brought me thorow ỹ water euē to the ā cles: so he measured yet a thousand,and brought me thorow the water vnto the knees:yeat measured he a thousande,and brought me thorow the water vnto the lopnes. After thys he measured a thousand agayne / then was it suche a ryuer,that I might not wade thorow it: The water was so depe,that it was nede full to haue swymmed,for it myght not be waded ouer. And he sayde vnto me: hast thou sene thys/O thou sonne of mā ād wyth that,he brought me to the ryuer banck agayne.

Now when I came there/there stode many trees vpon ether syde of the ryuer bancke. Then sayde he vnto me: Thys water that floweth out toward the east and runneth downe into the playne felde commeth into the Sea: and from the Sea it runneth oute, and maketh the waters whole. Yea al that lyue and moue, whervnto thys ryuer commeth/ shall recouer. And where thys water cōmeth/ theare shalbe muche fysh. For all that cōmeth to thys water, shalbe lusty and whole. By thys ryuer shall the fyshers stande from Engaddi, vnto En Eglaim, and there spreade out theyr nettes: for theare shall be greate heapes of fysh, lyke as in the mayne sea. As for hys clape and pyttes/ they shall not be whole, for whyle it shalbe occupyed for salt.

By thys ryuer vpon both the sydes of the shore/ there shall growe all maner of frutefull trees, whose leaues shal not fall of, nether shall theyr frute perysshe: but euer be rype at theyr monethes, for theyr water runneth out of theyr sanctuarye. Hys frute is good to eate and his leafe profitable for medicine. Thus sayth the Lorde God: Let thys be the border, wherin ye shall diuyde the land vnto the xii. tribes of Israell/ wyth the lyne. Part it indifferently vnto one as vnto another of the which lād I swore vnto youre fathers, that it shoulde fall to youre enheritaunce.

Thys is the border of the land vpō the north syde/ from the mayn sea, as me go to Zadada: namely Hemath, Berotha Sabarim: from the borders of Damascus and Hemath vnto Hazar Tichon, and there lieth vpon the coastes of Hauran. Thus the borders from the sea forthe, shalbe Hazar/ euen the border of Damascus the north, and the borders of Hemath, that is the north parte.

The east syde shall ye measure from Hauran and Damascus, from Galaad and the Lande of Israell by Jordane and so forth: frō the sea coste/ that lyeth east warde: and thys is the east part.

The southsyde is, from Thamar forth to ỹ waters of strife vnto Cades, the ryuer, to the mayne sea: and that is the south parte.

The west parte: namely the greatte sea from the borders therof tyll a man come vnto Hemath: Thys is the Weste parte.

Thys lande shall ye haue amonge you, accordinge to the tribes of Israell: and deuide it to be an heritage for you, and for the straūgers that dwell amōg you/ and begette children. For ye shal take them amonge the children of Israell/ lyke as though they were of your owne housholde and countrey: and they shal haue heritage wyth you amōg the children of Israell.

Loke in what tribe the straunger dwelleth, in the same tribe shall ye geue hi hys heritage, sayeth the Lord God.

¶ The lottes of the xii. tribes. The partes of the possession of the prestes and of the temple, of the Leuites, of the cittie, of the prynce, are rehersed. The lottes of the other tribes. The gates of the cytie.

✲ The.xlviii. Chapter

These are the Names of the Tribes that lye vppon the northesyde, by the waye of Hetlon, tyll thou comme vnto hemath and Hazar Enam, the borders of Damascus tower the north beside Hemath: Dan shall haue hys portion frō the east quarters vnto the west. prestes, that are of the children of Sadoch, ād haue kept my holy ordinaūce which went not astraye in the erroure of the children of Israel, lyke as ỹ Leuites are gone astraye: and this separated pece that they haue of the land shal be the moste holy, harde vpon the borders of the leuites. And nexte vnto ỹ prestes, shal the Leuites haue. xxv M long & x M brode. This shalbe on euery syde. xxv M longe, and x M brode. Of this portion they shal sel nothyng nor make any permutatiō therof, lest the chefe of the land fal vnto other, for it is halowed vnto the Lord.

The other. v M after the bredeth ỹ lyeth by ỹ xxv M. shalbe cōmō: it shal belong to the cytee ād to the suburbes for habitatyons/ and the cytte shal stād in the middeste therof. Let this be the measure toward the north parte. v C & xiiii M toward the south parte v C ād xiiii M toward the east parte v C & xiiii M toward the west part v C and. xiiii. thousand.

The suburbes hard vpon the citte shal haue toward the north L. and ỹ C toward the south. L. and. ii. C. toward ỹ east L and ii C, toward the west also L and two C. They that laboure for the welth of the cytye, shal maintayne thys also, out of what tribe so euer they be in Israel.

All ỹ is spoken of the xxv M longe and xxv M brode on the foure partes, ỹ shall ye put alyde for the separated portyon of the cytye. The relydue vpon both ỹ sydes of the Sanctuary, ād for the possessyon of the cytye. The relydue vpon both the sydes of the Sāctuarye and possession of the cytye shal belong to the prince, before the place of the xxv M vnto the east ende/ and before the place of the .xxv. Moreouer from ỹ Leuytes and the cyttes possession that lye in the middes of the princes parte: loke what remayneth betwyxt the borders of Juda and the border of Ben Jamyn, it shalbe the Princes.

Now of the other tribes

¶ The Boke of

The Prophete Daniel.

The prophete sheweth the captiuitie of Jehoakym kyng of Juda. Of the sonnes that were in captiuitee the kyng commaundeth to chose wt yche of thē shuld be taught the learnyng and language of the Caldees They are allowed the kynges feding. Daniel abstei neth from the meate of the kyng of Babylon, The sciences & instruction of these Chyldren.

The fyrst Chapter.

A.cliii. Re. 24. a. ii. Ba. xxv. vi

IN the thyrde yeare of the raygne of Jehoakim kyng of Juda/came Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylō vnto Jerusalem, and besieged it: & ỹ lord delyuered Jeoakim ỹ king of Juda into hys hande wythe certayne ornamentes of the house of god whiche he caryed awaye vnto the lande of Sēnar, to the house of hys god, and there brought them into hys goddes treasurey. And the kyng spake vnto Aphanas ỹ chefe chamberlayne, that he should bring hym certayne of the chyldren of Israel that were come of the kynges sede, and of princes, yong syrygnalles wythout any blemysh, but fayre and welfauored instruct in all wysdome, connynge and vnderstanding, which were able to stād in the kynges palace, to rede & to learne for to speake Caldeish.

B Unto these the kynge appoynted a certayne porcyon of hys owne meate, & of the wyne whych he drancke hym selfe so to norysshe them thre yeare, that afterwarde they might stande before the king. Amonge these nowe were certaine of the childeren of Juda: namely Daniel, Ananias, Misael ād Azarias. Unto these ỹ chefe chamberlayn gaue other names, and called Daniel, Balthasar: Ananias Sidrach: Misael, Misach, and Azarias Abdenago. But daniel was at apointe wyth hym selfe, that he wolde not be defyled, thorow the kynges meate/nor the wyne which he dronke. And thys he desyred of the chefe chamberlayn/least he shoulde defyle hym selfe. So God gaue Daniell fauoure and grace before the cheefe Chamberlayne that he saide vnto him. I am afrayed of my Lord the kyng, which haue appoynted you your meate and drinke: lest he spie your faces to be worse lykig thē ỹ other Syrygnalles of youre age, and so yee shal make me lose my headde vnto the kynge.

Then Daniel answered Melassar, whom the cheefe champerlayne had set ouer Daniel, Ananias, Misael and Azarias, and sayde: O proue but ten dates with thy seruauntes, and let vs haue potage to eate/ & water to drinck then loke vpon oure faces, and theirs/ that eate of the kynges meate. And as thou seist, so deale with thy seruaūtes. So he consented to them in this matter and proued them .x. dayes. And after ỹ ten dates, their faces were better lykig and fatter, then al the yong syrygnalles which eate of the kinges meate.

Thus Melassar toke awaye theire meate and wyne, and gaue thē potage therfor. God gaue now these foure syrigalles conning and lernig in al scripture and wysdome: But vnto Daniel specially, he gaue vnderstanding of all vysions and dreames. Now when the time was expired, that the king had apornted to bring in these yong syrygnalles vnto him: the cheefe chāberlaine brought them before Nabuchodonosor, and the kyng communed with thē. But amōg al thē were found none suche as Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias. Therfore stod they before the king which, in all wysdome and matters of vnderstanding, that he enquired of thē founde them ten tymes better, then al the sothsayers and charmers, that were in all his realme. And Daniel abode stil, vnto the fyrst yeare of king Cyrus

¶ The dreame of Nabuchodonosor. He calleth vnto hym sothsayers, and requyreth of them both the dreame and the interpretatiō therof. They answere that they can not shew it. The kyng commaundeth al the wyse mē of Babylon to be slayne. Daniel requyreth tyme to solute the question. The lord openeth ỹ mysterye vnto Daniel. Daniel is brought vnto ỹ king, & sheweth him his dreame & the interpretacion therof. Of the euerlastinge kyngdom of Christ. The stone, Christ. Daniel is exalted & promoted of the kyng.

¶ The .ii. Chapter.

Jer. xlix. Daniel. xxiii

IN the second yere of ỹ raigne of Nabuchodonosor, hadde Nabuchodonosor a dreame, where thorow his spyryte was vexed, & his slepe brake frō hi

Then

Then the kynge commaunded to call together al the sothsayers, charmers, wytches & Caldees, for to shewe ỹ kyng hys dreame. So they came/ and stode before the kyng. And the kyng sayd vnto them. I haue dreamed a dreame, and my spryte was so troubled ther wyth, that I haue clene forgotten, what I dreamed. Upon thys the Caldees answered the kynge in the Syryans speach: :* O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Shew thy seruaūtes the dreame, and we shall shewe thee/ what it meaneth. The kynge gaue the Caldees theyr answere/ and sayd: It is gone fro me Yf ye wyl not make me vnderstande the dreame wyth the interpretacyon therof, ye shal die, & youre houses shalbe pylled But yf ye tell the dreame and the meaning therof, ye shall haue of me giftes, rewardes and greate honoure only shew me the dreame and the syrygnyfycacyon of it. They answered agayne, and sayde: the kynge must shewe hys seruauntes the dreame, and so shall we declare what it meaneth. Then the kynge answerd sayinge: I perceaue of a trueth that ye do but prolonge the tyme: for so muche as ye se the thyng is gone fro me. Therfore ye wyl not tel me the dreame al ye shal haue al one iudgement. But ye fayne and dyssemble wyth vayne wordes whyche ye speake before me, to put of the tyme. Therfore tell me the dreame/ & so shal I know yf ye can shewe me what it meaneth. Upō thys the caldees gaue answere before the kyng/ and sayd, there is no man vpon earth that can tel the thig, whych the kyng speaketh of, yea, ther is neyther kyng/ Pryncc nor Lorde, that euer asked suche thinges at a sothsayer charmer or Caldeer: for it is a very harde matter, that the kyng requyreth Neither is there any, that can certifye the kynge therof, except the Goddes, whose dwelling is not among the creatures.

For the whych cause the kyng was wroth wyth greate indygnacyon, and commaunded to destroye all the wyse men at Babylon: and the proclamacyō went forth, that the wyse men shoulde be slayne. They sought also to slaye Daniel with hys companyons

Then daniel enquired Aryoch ỹ kinges Stewarde, of the iudgement & sentence that was gone forth alredy to kyll suche as were wyse at Babylon. He answered and sayde vnto Aryoch beynge then the kynges debytee: Why hath the kyng proclamed so cruell a sentence? So Aryoch tolde Daniel the matter. Upon thys, wente Daniel vp, and desyred the kynge, that he myght haue leysoure, to shew the kynge the interpretacyon: and then came he home agayne and shewed the thynge vnto Ananyas, Mysael and Asaryas hys companyōs: ỹ they should beseche the God of heauen for grace in thys secret, that Daniell & hys felowes wyth other suche as wer wyse in Babylō perysshed not. Then was the mystery shewed vnto Daniel in a vysyon by nyght. And Daniel praysed the god of heauen. Daniel also cryed loude, & sayed O that ỹ name of God might be praised for euer & euer/ for wysdome & strength are hys owne: he chaungeth the tymes and ages: he putteth downe kynges, he setteth vp kynges: he geueth wysdome vnto the wyse, and vnderstandynge to those that vnderstande, he openeth the depe secretes/ he knoweth the thynge ỹ lyeth in darcknesse, for ỹ lyght dwelleth wyth him. I thanke thee, and prayse thee (O thou God of my fathers) that thou hast lent me wysdome and strength, and hast shewed me the thynge, that we desyred of thee/ for thou hast opened the kynges matter vnto me.

Upon thys went Daniel in vnto Aryoch, whom the kinge had ordened to destroye the wyse at Babylon: He went vnto hym, and sayd: destroye not suche as are wyse in Babylon, but brynge me in vnto the kynge, and I shal shewe the kynge the interpretatyon. Then Arioch brought Daniel in to the king in al the haste, and sayd vnto him: I haue found a man amonge the prysoners of Juda that shall shewe the kynge the interpretacyon. Then answered the kynge and sayde vnto Daniel whose name was Balthasar: Art thou he that canst shew me the dreame whych I haue seen and the interpretacyō therof? Daniel answered the kynge to hys face and sayde: As for thys secrete for the whych the kynge maketh inquisycion: yt is nether the wyse wyse, the sorcerer, the charmer or the de-uell coniurer, that can certyfye the kyng of it. Only God in heauen can open secretes, & he it is, that sheweth the kynge Nabu chodonosor, what is for to com in the latt er dayes.

C Thy dreame/and that whych thou hast sene in thyne head vpon thy bed is thys: O kynge, thou dydest cast in thy mynde, what shulde come herafter: So he that is the opener of misteries, telleth thee/what is for to come. As for me, this secrete is not shewed me, for anye wysdom that I haue, more the eny other lyuyng; but only that I myght shewe the kynge the interpretacyon. and that he myght know the thoughtes of his awne harte. Thou kynge sawest, and beholde:
there stode before the a greate Image, whose fygure was maruelous greate & hys vysage bryinme. The Image head was of fyne gold, hys breast and armes of syluer, hys body and loynes were of copper, hys legges were of yron, hys fete were parte of yron/and parte of earth.

Matth. xxi. c

Thys thou sawest: tyll the tyme that (wyth out eny handes) there was hewen of a stone whych smote the Image vpon
the fete, that were both of yron & earthe and brake them to pouldr: then was the yron, the earth/the copper, the siluer and golde broken altogether in peaces: and be came like the chaffe of corne, that the wynde bloweth away from the somer flouzes that they can no more be found.
But the stone that smote the Image, became a greate mountayne/whych fulfyl leth the whole earth. This is the dream e
And now wyl we shewe before the kyng, what it meaneth.

F Daniel. v. d

O kynge, thou art a kynge of kynges. For the god of heaue hath geue thee a kyngdom e, ryches/ strength and maiestye: & hath delyuered the al thynges that are amonge the chyldren of men, ye beastes of the feld/& the foules vnder the heaue/& geue thee dompynō ouer thē al.
Thou art that golden head. After thee there shal aryse another kyngdom, which shall be lesse then thyne. The thyrde kyngdom shalbe lyke copper. and haue dompnacyon in all landes. The fourth kyngdome shall be as stronge as yron.
For lyke as yron breaketh and breaketh all thynges: Yea, euen as yron beateth euerye thynge downe, so shall it beate downe and destroye.

Where as thou sawest the fete and toes/parte of earth and parte of yron:
that is a dyuyded kyngdome, whych neuertheles shall haue some of the yron grounde myxte with it, for so moch as thou hast sene the yron myxte wyth the claye.

The toes of the fete that were parte of yron and parte of claye, sygnyfyeth:
that it shalbe a kyngdome, partely strōg and partely weake. And where as thou sawest yron myxte wyth claye: they shal myngle the selues wyth the sede of symple people / and yet not contynue one wyth another lyke as yron wyll not be souldered wyth a potsherde.

In the dayes of these kynges, shall the God of heaue set vp an euerlastyng kyngdome whych shall not perysh, and hys kyngdome shall not be geuen ouer to a nother people: yea it same shal breake and destroye all these kyngdomes, but it shal endure for euer.

And where as thou sawest, that wi-out any handes there was cut out of ye mount a stone which brake the yron, ye copper, the earth/the syluer and golde in peaces: by that hath the greate god shewed the kynge, what wyll come af ter this. This is a trew dreame, and ye interpretacion of it is sure.

Then the kyng Nabuchodonosor fel downe vpon his face, and bowed him selfe vnto Daniel, and commaun ded ye they should offer meatoffrynges and swete odoures vnto hym. The kyng answeared Daniell and sayde:
yea of a truth your god, is a god aboue all goddes, a Lorde aboue al kynges and an opener of secretes, seinge that thou cāst discouer thys mystery. So ye king made Danyell a greate man, and gaue hym many and great gyftes.
He made hym ruler of al the countrees of Babylon, and lord of al the nobles ye were at Babylon: Now Danyel entreā ted ye king for Sydrach Mysach & Ab-denago, so ye he made them rulers ouer all ye offices in the lande of Babylon.
But Daniell him selfe remayned styll in the courte by the kyng.

The

C The kyng setteth vp a goulden Image, which he cōmaundeth to be worshiped. Sydrach, Mysach ād Abdenago ar accused, because they disobeyed ye kings cōmaundement. They are brought vnto ye kinge, & commaunded to worshipe the Image. They refuse to do it, and are put into a burnyng ouē. By beleue in god they ar delyuered from the fyre. Nabuchodonosor confesseth the power of god after, ye sight of the myracle.

The. iii. Chapter.

A NAbuchodonosor the kyng caused a golden Image to be made, which was. lx cubytes hye, and syxe cubytes thycke. This he made to be set vp in the felde of *Dura, in ye lande of Babylon, and sent oute to gather together ye dukes, lordes & nobles, ye iudges & officers/debtyes and shryes, with al the rulers of the land: that they might come to the dedycatyon of the Image which Nabuchodonosor ye kyng had set vp. So the dukes, lordes and nobles, the iudges and officers/debtyes and shreues with all the rulers of the land, gathered them toge ther, and came vnto the ded ycatig of ye Image/that Nabuchodonosor the king had set vp.

Now when they stode before the B ymage, which Nabuchodonosor set vp, ye bedel cryed out with al hys myght: O ye people, kinredes and tonges, to you be it sayde: that when ye heare ye noyse of the trompetes/which shalbe blowen with the harpes, shawmes, Psalteries, Symphonies and all maner of Musick: ye fal downe and worshyp ye golden Image, that Nabuchodonosor the kyng hath set vp. Whoso then falleth not downe and beweth hym selfe, shall euen ye same houre be cast into an hote burnyng ouen. Therfore, when all the folckes herde the noyse of the trompets that were blowen, wythe the harpes, shawmes/Psalteries, Symphonies & all kynd of Melody: then al the people, kynredes and nacyons fel downe, ād bowed them selues vnto the goulden Image, ye Nabuchodonosor the kyng had set vp.

Now were there certayne men of the C Caldees/that went euen then and accused the Jewes, and sayde vnto the kyng Nabuchodonosor: O king/god saue thy lyfe for euer.

Thou beyng kyng hast geuen a com maundemente/that all men when they heare ye noyse of the trompettes, harpes, shawmes, psalteries/symphonyes & al ye other melodyes: shall fall downe and bowe them selues towarde the golden Image: who so then fall not downe and worshyppe not, that he shulde be cast in to an hote burning ouen. Now are there certeyne Jewes, whome thou hast set ouer the officers of the land of Babylon namely, Sidrach, Mysaech ād Abdenago. These men (O kynge) regarde not thy commaundemente/yea they wyl not serue thy goddes nor bowe them selues to the golden Image, that thou hast set vp.

D Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruell wrath and displeasure, cōmaunded, that Sydrach, Mysach & Abdenago should be brought vnto hym. So these men were brought before the kynge. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them and sayd: what? O Sydrach Mysach and Abdenago, wyl not ye serue my goddes: nor bowe youre selues to the golden Image that I haue set vp: wel be redy hereafter, whē ye heare the noyse of the Trompettes Blowe wythe the Harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonyes & al ye other melodyes: that ye fall downe/ and worshyppe the Image whych I haue made. But if ye worshyppe it not, ye shal be cast immediatly into ā hote burnyng ouen. Let se, what God is there, ye maye deliuer you out of my handes. Sidrach Mysaech and Abdenago answered the kyng, & sayde: O Nabuchodonosor we ought not to consente vnto thee in thys matter/for why: our God whom we serue, is able to kepe vs from the hote burnyng ouen. O kyng and can ryght wel deliuer vs out of thi hādes. And though he wyll not yet shalt thou knowe (O kyng) that we wyl not serue thi goddes nor do re uerence to the Image, whyche thou hast set vp. Thē was Nabuchodonosor full of indygnacyon, so that the countenaunce of his face chaunged vpon Sydrach, Mysach, and Abdenago.

Therfore he charged and commaun ded, that the ouen should be made seuen tymes hoter thē it was wonte to be. and spake vnto the Strongest Worthyes that were in hys Hoost for to bynde

Sydrach

Sidrach, Misach and Abdenago, and to caste theym into the hote burnynge ouen.

So these men wer bounde in their cotes, hose, hewes with their other garmentis / and cast into the hote burnig ouen: for the kynges commaundemēt was so strate, and the ouen was exceadyng hote. As for the men that put in Sydrach, Mysach and Abdenago the flame of the fyre destroyed them. And these three mē Sydrah/Misah and Abdenago, fel downe in the hote burnig ouen, being fast bounde. Then Nabuchodonosor the kyng marueled, & stod vp in al haist: he spake vnto hys counsel, and sayde: dyd not ye caste these three men bound into the fyre? They answered, and sayde vnto the kyng: Yea O kyng. He answered and sayde: lo for al that, yet do I se foure mē goyng lowse in the myddest of the fyre, and nothig corrupte: & the fourth is lyke an angel to loke vpō. Upō this went Nabuchodonosor vnto ỹ mouth of the hote burnyng ouen: he spake also/and sayd: O Sydrach/Mysach and Abdenago, ye seruauntes of the hye God: go forth, & come hyther. And so Sidrach, Misach, and Abdenago went out of the fyre.

Then the dukes lordes and nobles, ād the kinges councel came together to se these men/vpon whom the fyre had no maner of power in their bodyes: In so much that the very heare of their head was not burnte, and their clothes vnchaunged: Yea there was no smel of fyre fell vpon them. Then spake Nabuchodonosor, and sayd: Blessed be the god of Sidrach, Misach and Abdenago: which hath sent hys angell, and delended his seruauntes, that put their trust in him: that haue altered the kynges commaundemēt: And ieopарde their bodyes therby on: rather thē they wolde serue or worshyp any other god, excepte their owne god only. Therfore I wil commaund, that al people & kynredes and tunges/whyche speake any blasphemy against the god of Sidrach, Misach, and Abdenago, shal dye, and their houses shalbe pylled: Because, there is no god that maie saue, as this. So the kyng promoted Sidrach, Misach, and Abdenago, in the Lande of Babilon.

¶ Nabuchodonosor dreameth againe, Daniel interpretethit. Nabuchodonosor is put out of his reime and eateth with beastes. He confesseth the power of god and is restored into his kyngdome.

¶ The iiii. Chaptre.

NAbuchodonosor kyng vnto al people, kinreddes and tunges that dwel vpō the whole erth: peace be multiplied amōg you. I thought it good to shew the tokens and meruelous worckes, that the hye God hathe wrought vpon me. O how greate are his tokens/and howe myghty are hys wonders: His kingdome is an euerlastynge kyngdome, and hys power lasteth for euer and euer.

I Nabuchodnosor being at rest in mine house, & flowrishing in my palace, sawe a dreame, which made me afrated; and the thoughtes that I had vpon my bed with the visions of mine head, troubled me. Therfore I out a cōmyssion/that al they which were of wildō at Babilō shuld be brought before me, to tel me ỹ interpretacīō of the dreame: so ther came the southsayers, charmers Caldees & conturers of deuels to whō I told ỹ dreame but what it betokened, they could not shewe me: tyl at ỹ laste, there came one Daniel (otherwyse called Balthasary, according to the name of my god) whych hath ỹ spyrite of the holy Goddes/in hym; to whome I told the dreame, saiyng: O Balthasar, thou Prince of the southsayers: For so muche as I knowe, that thou haste the spyrite of the holy Goddes and no Secretes hyd from thee: tell me therfor, what the vysion of my dreame (that I haue sene maye signify. I saw a visiō in my head vpon my bed: and beholde, there stode a tree vpon the grounde, whych was be yhye greate and myghtye: the heyght reached vnto the heauen, & the breadth extended to all the endes of the earthe: hys leaues wer faier, he had very much frute, so that euery man had enoughto eate therin,

The beastes of the felde had shadowes vnder it and ỹ foules of the ayre dwelt in the bowes therof. Shortly al creatures fed of it. I sawe in my heade a vysyon vpon my bed: and behold, *a watcher cam downe from heauen, and cried myghtely/saiyng. Hewe downe the tree, breake of hys braunches shake of hys leaues and scattre his Fruyte abroade: that all the beastes maye gett them awaye from vnder hym, and the foules from hys braunches. Neuerthe les leaue the grounde of hys rote styll in the earth, and bynde him vppon the plaine felde/with chaynes of yron and stele. With the dewe of heauen shal he be wette, and he shall haue his parte in the herbes of the grounde with other wylde beastes.

That mans herte of hys shalbe taken frō hi, & a beastes hert shalbe geuē him, tyll seuen yeares be come and gon vpon hym.

Thys erand of the watcher, is a cō maundement grounded ād sought out in the councel of him that is moost holy: to lerne men for to vnderstand, that the hyghest hath power ouer the kyngdoms of men, and geueth them, to whō it lyketh hym, and bryngeth the verye outcastes of men ouer them. Thys is the dreame, that I kynge Nabuchodonosor haue sene. Therfore O Balthazar, tell thou me what it signifyeth: for so moche as all the wyse men of my kingdome are not able to shewe me/what it meaneth. But thou canst do it, for the spyrite of the holy Goddes is in thee.

Then Daniell (whose name was Balthasar) held hys peace by the space of an houre & hys thoughtes troubled hym, so the kinge spake and sayde: O Balthasar, let nether the dreame nor ỹ interpretacyō therof feare thee. Baltha sar answered saiyng. O my Lorde this dreame happen to thyne ennemyes, and the interpretacyon to thyne aduersartes, As for the tree that ỹ sawest whych was so greate and myghti, whose heigh reached vnto the heauen & hys breadth into all the worlde whose leaues were fayre, and the frute muche: vnder the whych the beastes of the feld had theyr habitation and vpon whose braunches the foules of the ayer dyd syt.

Euen thou (O Kynge) art the tre/greate and stronge. Thy greatnesse increaseth, ād reacheth vnto the heauen, so doth thy power to the endes of the earth. But where as the kynge sawe a watcher euen an holye aungell/that came downe from heauen, and sayde: hew downe the tre/ād destroye it: yet leaue the ground of the rote in the earth: and bynde hym vpon ỹ playne feld wyth chaynes of yron & stele: He shall be wet wyth the dew of heauen, and hys parte shal be wyth the bestes of the feld, tyll seuen yeares be come and gone vpon hym: thys (O kynge) is the interpretacyon, yea it is the very decyde of hym, that is hyest of all, & it toucheth my lorde the kynge.

Thou shalt be cast oute fro men, and thy dwellynge shalbe wyth the beastes of the felde: *wyth grasse shalt thou be fed lyke an oxe. Thou must be wet wyth the dew of the heauen: yea seuen yeares shall come, & go vpō thee, tyl thou know that the hyest hath power vpon the kingdomes of men, and geueth thē to whom he lyst. Moreouer, where as it was sayde that the rote of the tree shulde be left stil in the grounde: it betokeneth, that thy kyngdom shal remaine whole vnto thee after thou hast lerned to know, that the power commeth from heauen. Wherfor O kyng/be content wyth my counsell, that thou mayest lowse thy synnes with ryghteousnesse, and thine offences with mercy to poze people: for suche thynges shal prolonge thy peace.

Iob. xliiii. b. Dunie. v. a.

Daniell. ii. c. Iere. xxvii. a

All these thynges touche the kynge Nabuchodonosor.

So after xii monethes, the kyng walked vp and downe in the palace of ỹ kyngdom of Babylon, and sayde: This is the greate cyte of Babylon, whych I my self (wyth my power & strength) haue made a kynges courte, for the honour of my maiestye. Whyle these wordes were yet in ỹ kynges mouth there fel a voice from heauen saiynge. O kyng Nabuchodonosor to thee be it spoken: Thy kyngdome shal departe from thee/ thou shalt be cast out of mens company: thy dwellyng shalbe wyth the beastes of the felde/so that thou shalt eate grasse lyke as an oxe tyll seuen yeares be come and gone ouer thee.

The prophecye

euen vntyl thou knowest, that the hiest hath power vpō the kingdomes of mē and that he mate geue them, vnto whō it pleaseth him. The very same houre was this matter fulfylled vpon Nabuchodonosor: so that he was cast out of mens company, and eate grasse lyke an oxe. Hys body was wet with the dewe of heauen, tyll his heares were as greate as Aegles fethers, & his nayles lyke vnto dores clawes.

G When this tyme was past, I Nabuchodonosor lyfte vp myne eyes vnto heauen, and myne vnderstandynge was restoared vnto me agayne. Then gaue I thankes vnto the hyghest. I magnyfied and praysed hym that liueth for euermore, whose power endureth alwaye, and his kyngdome me frō one generacyon to another: in comparyson of whome all theye that dwell vpon the earthe, are to be reprooued as Dante. iii, f. nothing.

He handleth accordyng to his wil among the powers of heaue, and amōg Psal. cxxxv the inhabytours of the earth: and ther is none that maye resyst hys hande/or saye what dost thou? At the same tyme Job, xlii, b. was myne vnderstandyng geuen me agayne, and I was restoared to the honoure of my kyngdom, to my dygnitee and to myne owne shappe agayne. My greate estates and Princes sought vnto me, and I was set in my kyngdō agayne, so that I had yet greate worshyppe.

Then dyd I Nabuchodonosor/ loue, magnyfie and prayse the kyng of heauen: for all hys worckes are trew, and hys wayes right. As for those that go on proudly, he is able to bryng the downe.

Balthazar king of Babylon, abusyng the vessels of the tēple, seeth an hande wryting in the wall The sothe sayers called of the king, can not expoūd the wryting Daniel is called, which redeth it, and interpreteth it also. Balthasar beis slayne, Darius succedeth in his rowme.

The. v. Chapter.

KYnge Balthasar made a greate bācket to his thousand Lordes: wyth al these thousande he made greate chere, and when he was drōken with wyne, he cōmaunded to bryng hym the golden and syluer vesselles/ whyche hys father Nabuchodonosor had taken oute of the temple at Ierusalem: that the kyng and hys lordes wyues ād cōcubines might drynke therout. 4. Reg. xxv

So they brought the golden vessel, that was taken out of the temple of the Lordes house at Ierusalem. Then the kyng ād his lordes with his quene and concubynes droncke out of them: They droncke wyne, and praysed their Idoles of gold syluer, copper/ston, wod B and stone.

In the very same houre there apered fyngers/as it hadde bene a mans hand wrytyng, tyght ouer agaynst the candelstyck vpon the playne wall in ꝑ kynges palace: and the kyng sawe the palme of the hand that wrote. Then chaunged the kyng his countenaunce Iremy. li and his thoughtes troubled hym, so ꝑ ꝑ ioyntes of hys body shoke, and hys knes smote one agaynst another: Wherfore the kyng cried mightely, that Daniel. v they should bryng hym the chamers, Caldees and conuters of deuels. The kynge spake also to the wise men of Babylon and sayd: who so can rede thys wrytynge, & shewe me the playne meanynge therof, shalbe clothed with purple, haue a chayne of golde about hys neck and rule the thyrd part of my kyngdome.

Upon thys, came all the kynges wyse men: but they coulde neyther reade the writinge, nor shew the kyng what it signified. Then was ꝑ King sore afraid in so muche, that hys colour chaūged, & his Lordes were sore vexed. So by reason of thys matter, that had happened to the Kinge and hys Lords, the quene C went vp her self into the bancket house and spake vnto the kinge, sayinge, O kinge/ God saue thy life for euer: Let not the thoughtes trouble thee, and let not thy countenaunce be chaunged. For why: there is a man in thy kingdō that hath the holye spirite of the holye goddes within hym/ as it was seene in thy fathers dayes. He hath vnderstandynge and wysdōe lyke the Goddes. Yea the kyng Nabuchodonosor thy father made thys man chefe chefe of the sothsayers, charmers / Caldees and deuelconjurers: Because that such an aboundaunt spryte, knowledge, and wysdome, to expounde dreames, to open secretes, to declare harde doubtes) was founde in hym, yea euen in Daniel whom the kyng named Balthazar. Let thys same Daniel be sente for/ and he shall tell, what it meaneth.

Then was Daniel brought before the Kynge. So the Kynge spake vnto Daniel, & sayde: Art thou that Daniel, C one of the prysoners of Juda, whom my father the kinge brought out of Jewry? I haue heard speake of thee, that thou hast the spryte of the holy goddes, experyence and vnderstandyng, and that there hath bene greate wysdome founde in thee. Now haue ther bene brought me wyse and cōnynge charmers/ to reade thys wrytyng and to shew me the meanynge therof: But they coulde not tell me, what hys matter signyfied. Then heard I saye, that thou canst expounde darcke thynges & declare hard doubtes. Well than, yf thou canst reade thys wrytynge, and shew me the meanynge therof: thou shalt be clothed with purple haue a chayne of golde about thy necke and rule the thyrde parte of my kyngdō

D Daniell answered, and sayde before the kyng: As for thy rewardes, kepe thē to thy self/ or geue thy ryche gyftes to another, yet not the lesse I wyl rede the wryting vnto the king/ & shew him the interpretacion therof. O Kynge, God the highest gaue vnto Nabuchodonosor thy father, the dignitee of a king, ye worshyp and honor: so that all people, kynreddes and tonges stode in awe and feare of hi by reason of the hygh estate, ꝑ he had set hym. For whye, he slewe whome he wold, he smote whome it pleased hym. Again whome he wolde he set vp: and whoom he lust, he put downe. But because hys hart was so proude and hys stomack set so fast vnto wylfulnesse he was deposed C from hys kyngly trone/ and hys maiestye wast aken from hym.

He was shut out from amonge men, hys harte was lyke a beastes herte, and hys dwellyng was wyth the wylde asses, he was faine to eate grasse like an oxe, and hys body was wet wyth the dewe of the Heauen tyll he knewe, that the hyghest had power vpō ꝑ kyngdomes of men, and setteth ouer them/ whome he lyst.

And thou his sonne (O Balthasar) for all thys / hast not submytted thyne hart, though ꝑ knewest al these thīges but haste Magnyfyed thy selfe aboue the Lorde of heauen, so that the vessels of hys house were brought before thee that thou, and thy Lordes, wyth thy quene and concubines myghte drincke wyne therout: And hast praysed the Idoles of syluer and golde/ copper and F pyron, of woodde and stone. As for the God in whose hād consisteth thy breath and all thy wayes, thou hast not loued hym.

Therfore is the palme of thys hād sent hether from hym, to token vp this writing. And this is the scrypture that is wryte vpō it: Mane, Thetel, phares Now the interpretacyon of the thyng is thys: Mane/ God hath numbred the kyngdome, and brought it to an ende: Thetel, thou art weyed in the balaūce, and arte founde to lyght. Phares/ thy kindome is dealte in partes/ and geue vnto the Medes and perses.

Then commaunded Balthasar, to clothe Daniell wyth purple / to hange G a cheyne of golde about his necke, and to make a Proclamation concerninge him: that he shoulde be the ruler of the thyrd parte of his kingdom. The very same night was Balthazar the Kinge of the Caldees slayne, and Darius out of Medea toke in the kingdome, being lxii. yeares of age.

Daniell is made ruler ouer the Lordes. The Imagination of an acte agaynst Daniell. The proclamacion of the acte wherof Daniel is accused vnto the kig as a transgressoure. He is put into a denne of lyons by the commaundement of the kynge. He is delyuered by fayth in God. Daniels accusers are put vnto the lyons to be torne in sonder. Darius by the proclamation of a decree, magnifyeth the god of Daniell Eze.xviii.b these he set thre Princes(of whom Daniel was one/that the Lordes Jere.xiii. myght geue accomptes vnto thẽ, and the kyng to be vndysceased.

But Daniel exceded al these Princes and Lordes,for the spyrte of God was plenteous in hym/so that the kyng was mynded to set hi ouer the whole realme.
Wherfore the Princes & lordes sought to pycke out in Daniell some quarell agaynst the kyngdome: yet coulde they fynde none occasyon nor fawte vpõ hym
For why he was so faythfull,that there was no blame nor dyshonesty founde in hym.

Then sayde these men: we wyl get B no quarel agaynst thys Daniel excepte it be in the lawe of hys God.Upon this wente the princes and lordes together vnto the kynge/ and sayde thus vnto hym:kyng Darius, God saue thy lyfe for euer.All the great estates of ỹ realme as the Pryntes, Dukes, Senatours & Judges,are determedte pur out a com maundement of the kyng,and to make a sure statute:namely that who so demyth any petycyon either of any god or man wyth in thys .xxx. dates excepte it be ỹt of thee, O kyng the same person may be cast in to the lyons denne. Wherfore, O kyng/confyrme thou thys statute. and make a wrytynge:that the thyng which the Medes and Perses haue ordened be not altered nether broken.

So Darius made the wrytynge, and confyrmed it. Now whe Daniel vnder stode that the wrytynge was made, he wente in to hys house:and the wyndowes of hys hal toward Jerusalem stod open. There kneled he downe vpon his knees,thre tymes a daye: there he made his petycyon,and praysed hys God like as hys maner was to do a fore tyme.

C Then these men made serche and founde Daniel makynge hys petycyon and prayynge vnto hys God So they came to the kyng/and spake before him concernyng hys commaũdemẽt saying:
O kyng/hast thou not subscrybed the statute,that wyth in .xxx. dayes who so requireth thys petition of any god or man but onely of thy selfe, O kyng he shalbe cast into the denne of the lõs
The kynge answered/and sayde: yea it is true.It muste be as a lawe of the Medes and Perses,that maye not be broken.

Then answered they,and sayde vnto the kynge:Daniell one of the prysoners of Jude, O kynge/regardeth neyther thee nor thy statute, that thou hast made,but maketh hys petycyon thre tymes a day. Wherfore the kyng herd these wordes/he was sore greued, and wold haue excused Daniel to delyuer hym and putte of the matter vnto the sũne went downe to the intent that he might saue him.

These men perceauing the kinges mynde, sayde vnto hym:knowe this O D kyng,that the lawe of the Medes and Perses is,that the commaundement & statute whiche the kyng maketh,may not be altered. Then the kynge bad them bringe Daniel/and they cast hi into the lions denne

The kynge also spake vnto Daniell and sayde:thy God O Daniel whome thou al-ware seruest,euen he shall defende the
And there was brought a stone,& laid vpon the hole of the denne. Thys the kynge sealed with hys owne ryng, and wyth the signet of hys Princes:
that the Kinges Commaundements concernynge Daniel should not be bro
ked,

So the kynge wente into his palace,and kepte him sober all night/so that there was no table spred before hym,nether could he take any slepe.
But betimes in the mourninge,at the breake of the day,the king arose, and C wente in all haste vnto the denne of ỹ lyons.

Now as he came nygh vnto ỹ denne
he cried wythe a pitifull voice vnto Daniel,yea the kyng spake,ãd said vn to Daniell: O Daniell thou seruaunt of the lyuing god/is not thy god(whõ thou alwayes seruest) able to delyuer thee from the lions? Daniell sayed vnto the kinge: O Kinge/God saue thy lyfe for euer. My God hath sente hys aungels,which hath shut the lõs mouthes

mouthes,so that they myght not hurt me. For why:myne vnryghtines is found out before hym. And as for thee/O kig
I neuer offended thee.

Then was the kyng exceadyng glad, and commaunded to take Daniel out of the denne. So Daniel was brought out of the denne,and no maner of hurt was founde vpon him. For he put his trust in his God. And as for those men which had accused Daniel,the kynge commaunded to bring thẽ/and to cast them in the lions denne:them,their chil dren and their wiues. Or the Lyons had the maistry of them, and brake all their bones a sunder/or euer they came at the grounde.

After this,wrote king Darius vnto al people,kynreddes,and tounges that dwelt i all lãdes: Peace be multiplied vn
you. My cõmaũdemẽt is,in al my domynyon & kingdome, ỹ men feare ãd stand in awe of Daniels God.

The.viii. Chapter.

A In the fyrste yeare of Balthe-zar kyng of Babylõ, saw Da niel a dreame,& a vysyon was in hys head vpon hys bedde.
Which dreame he wrot,and ỹ summe of the matter is thys: Daniell spake and sayd: I sawe in my visyõ by nyght,and beholde: the foure windes of the heauẽ stroue vpõ the sea/ & foure great beastes cam vp from the sea one vnlyke another.

B The first was a lyon,and yet had the Aegles wynges. I sawe, that hys wynges were pluckte from him/and he taken awaye from the earth:ỹ he stod vpon his fete as a mã,and ther was geuẽ him a mans hart.

Beholde/the seconde beaste was lyke a beer/and stode vpon the one syde.
Amonge hys teeth in hys mouth he had
iii. greate longe teeth,and it was sayde vnto hym: Aryse,eate vp,muche flesshe.
Then I loked,and behold,there was an other lyke vnto a leoparde: thys had wynges as a foule,euen foure vpõ the backe. Thys beast had foure heades,& there was power geuen him. After thys I sawe in a visyon by night,and behold,the fourth beast was grymme and horrible,and maruelous stronge.
It hadd greate yron teeth,it deuoured and destroted,and stamped the residue vnder his fete. It was farre vnlyke ỹ other beastes that were before it: for yt had ten hornes, whereof I toke good C hede.

And beholde,there came vp among them another like horne, before whom there wer thre of ỹ first hornes pluckte awaye. Beholde this horne had eyes lyke a man,and a mouth speaking pre sumtuous thinges I loked tyl the seates were prepared, and tyll the olde aged sat hi downe. His clothig was as white as snow, & the heares of his head lyke the pure wolle. His trone was lyke the fyrye flãme,and his wheles as the bur nyng fyre. There drewe forth a fyrye streame ãd went out from him. A thousande tymes a thousand serued him.x
M. times ten thousand stode before hi
The iudgment was set,and the bokes opened. Then toke I heed therunto,because of the voyce of the proude wor- D des/which that horne spake. I beheld tyl the beast was slaine, and hys body destroyed,and geuen ouer to be brent i the fire.

As for the power of the other beastes also,it was taken awaye,but their liues were prolonged for a tyme and season.
I sawe in a visyon by nyght, and behold there cam one in the cloudes of hea uen lyke the sonne of a mã/which went vnto the olde aged before, whom they brought him. Then gaue he him power and dygnytee regall that all people tribes & tonges should serue hym. His power is an euerlastyng power, which shal neuer be put downe: and hys kigdom endureth vncorrupt.

My herte was vexed/ and I Danyell had a troubled spirite with in me, and ỹ vysyone of my head made me afrayed, tyl I gat me vnto one of thē that stode by, to know ỹ trueth, concernig all these thynges. So he tolde me, and made me vnderstand ỹ interpretacō of these thynges.

D These foure greate beastes, are foure kynges, whyche shall aryse oute of the earth. These shal take in the kyngdom of the sayntes of the most hyest/ & possesse it styll moze and moze for a longe sealō. After thys I requyzed dylygently to knowe the truth, concernig ỹ fourth beast wych was so farre vnlyke the other beastes/ and so horryble; whose teeth were of Yron, and his nayles of brasse: whych deuoured and destroyed, and stamped the residue vnder his fete I desyred also to knowe the trueth, as touchyng the ten hornes that he had vpon his head/ and this other whyche came vp afterwarde, before whose face there fel downe thre: which horne had eyes and a mouth that spake presumptuous thynges, and loked with a grimmer visage then his felowes. I beheld and the same horne made battel against the sayntes, ye and gat the victory of them: vntyl the tyme that the old aged cam: that the iudgement was geuen to the chyefeste Sayntes and tyll the tyme, that the saintes had the kyngdō in possession. He gaue me this answere That fourthbeaste shalbe the fourth kingdome vpon earth: it shalbe more then all other kingdomes / it shall deuoure, treade downe, and destroye all other landes.

The ten hornes, are ten kinges, ỹ shal aryse out of that kyngdome after whō there shal stād vp another whych shalbe greater then the fyrst. He shall subdue thre kiges, and shal speake worldes against the hyest of al: he shal destroy the sayntes of the mōst hiest and thynke, that he may chaung times ond lawes. They shalbe geuen vnder hys power, vntyll a time, two tymes, and half a tyme.

But the iudgment shalbe kept, so that his power shalbe taken from him for he shal be destroyed/ and perysh at the last. As for the kyngdom: power and all mighte that is vnder the heauen: it shalbe geuen to the holy people of the moost hyest/ whose kingdom is euerlasting, yea al powers shall serue and obeye him. Thus farre extend the wordes. Nevertheles I Daniel was so vexed in my thoughtes, that my countenaunce chaunged, but the wordes I kepte styl in my hart.

¶ A vysyon of a sterke betwene a rāme and hegoat The vnderstanding of the vysiō is of the battel betwene the king of Persia and the kynge of the Grecyans. Of the shameles kyng Antichist.

¶ The. viii. Chapter.

3 IN the thyrde yeare of the raygne of king Balthazar there appered a vysyō vnto me Daniel, after that I had seane the fyrste I sawe in a vision (and when I sawe it, I was at Sulis in the chefe cytee/ which lyeth in the land of Elam) and in the vysiō, me thought I was by the ryuer of Ulai.

Then I loked vp, and sawe: and beholde there stode before the ryuer/ a rāme, whyche hadde hornes: And these hornes were hyghe, but one was hier thē another, and the hyest cāe vp last. I sawe ỹ this rāme pushed with hys hornes, against the west, against the north, and against the south so that no beastes might stand before him, nor defende them from his power but he dyd as him lysted, & waxed greatly. I toke hede vnto this, and then cāe there an he goate from the weste ouer the whole earthe / and touched not the grounde.

This goate had a maruelous goodly horne betwyxte his eyes/ and came vnto the rāme, that had the two hornes (whom I had sene a fore by the ryuer side) and ranne fearcely vpō him with his myght. I sawe hym drawe neygh vnto the rāme being very fearce vpon hym: yea he gaue hī such a stroke that he brake his two hornes: Neither had the rāme so much strength as to stand before him: but he cast him doune troden him vnder hys fete: and no man was able to delyuer the rāme out of his power.

The

The goate waxed exceadynge great and when he was at the strongest hys greate horne was broken also. Then grewe ther other four suche lyke in the stede/ towarde the. iiii. wyndes of the heauen. Yea, out of one of the least of these hornes, there cam vp yet another horne, which waxed maruelous great: towarde the south/ towarde the east, & towarde the farre pleasaunt lande. It grewe vp to the hoost of heauen where of it dyd caste some downe to ỹ ground and of the starres also, and trode them vnder fete.

Yea, it grewe vp vnto the prynce of the host/ frō whō the dayly offeryng was taken, and the place of hys Sanctuary casten downe. And a certayn season was geuen vnto it agaynste the dayly offeryng (because of wyckednes) ỹ it myght cast downe the veryte to the grounde, and so to prospere in all thynges, that it wente aboute.

Upon this, I herd one of the saintes D speakynge, whych sayncte sayde vnto one that asked this questyon: How longe shall this vysyon of the dayly sacrifice and of the waskyng abhominacyon endure: that the Sanctuary & the power shal so be troden vnder fete, And he answered him: Vnto the euenynge and the morynynge, euen two thousande and thre Hundreth dayes: Then shall the Sanctuarye be clensed agayne.

Now when I Daniell had sene this vysyon/ and sought for the vnderstandynge of it: beholde, there stode before me a thynge lyke vnto a man. And I heard a mans voyce in the ryuer of Ulay, whych cryed/ and sayde: O Gabryel, make this man vnderstande the vysyon. So he came, and stode by me. But I was afrayed at his commynge and fell downe vpo: my face.

E Then sayd he vnto me: O thou sōne of man, marcke well, for in the last time shall this vysyon be fulfylled.

Now as he was speakynge vnto me/ I waxed sayntes so that I stuncke downe to the grounde: But he toke hold vpō me, and set me vp agayne, sayynge: Beholde, I wyll shew thee, what shal happen in the last wrath: for in ỹ time appoynted it shalbe fulfylled

The rāmme whiche thou sawest w the two hornes, is the kyng of the Medes ād Perses: but the goote is ỹ king of Greke land: the greate horne ỹ stode betwyxt his eyes/ that is the principal kynge. But where as it brake, 4 foure other roose vp in the stead: it sygnyfieth/ that out of this people shal stande vp foure kyngdoms/ but not so mighty as it.

After these kyngdomes (whyle vn F godlynes is a growing) ther shal aryse a kyng of an vnshamefast face, whiche shalbe wise in darck speakynges.

He shalbe myghtie and strong, but not in his owne strength. He shal destroye aboue measure, and al that he goeth about shal prospere: he shal slaie the strong and holy people. And thorow his craftynes, falshed shall prospere in his hand: his hart shalbe proud and many one shall he put to death in his welthynes. He shal stād vp against the Prynce of prynces, but he shall be destroyed without hande. And thys vysiō that is shewed vnto thee, is as sure as the euening and the morning. Therfore wrpte thou vp thys syghte/ for it is wilbe longe, or it come to passe.

Upō thys was I Daniel very faint so that I laye sicke certayne dayes: but when I rose vp, I went about the kinges busynes, and maruyled at ỹ visiō neuerthelelle no man knew of it.

¶ The. ix. Chapter.

1 IN the fyrste yeare of Darius the sonne of Assuerus which was of the sede of ỹ Medes, & was made king ouer the realme of the Caldees: yet euen in the fyrste yeare of his raigne, I Danyel desyred to knowe ỹ yeasyre numbre out of the bokes, wher of the Lorde spake vnto Jeremye the Prophete: that Jerusalem shoulde lye waste.lxx.yeares: and I turned me vnto God the Lorde/for to praye and make myne intercessyon/with fastig, sack clothe and ashes. I prayed before the Lorde my God,and knowledged, sayinge:

O Lorde,thou greate and fearfull god thou that kepeste couenaunt and mercy with them,whych loue thee,and do thy commaundementes: We haue synned,we haue offended,we haue ben vngodly and gone back/ye we haue departed from all thy preceptes & iudgmentes.

We wolde neuer folow thy seruauntes the prophetes, ¶ spake in thy name to oure kynges and prynces, to oure forefathers/and to al the people of the lande. O Lorde,righteousnes belongeth vnto thee,vnto vs pertayneth nothig but open shame: as it is come to passe thys daye vnto euery man of Juda/& to them that dwel at Jerusalem: Yea vnto al Israell, whether they be farre or nye:throughout al landes:wherin ¶ hast strawed them,because of the offences that they had done agaynste thee. Yea O Lorde/vnto vs, to our kinges and prynces, to oure forefathers: euen to vs al, that haue offended thee, belongeth vpon shame. But vnto the O Lorde our God,pertayneth mercy & forgeuenes. As for vs,we are gone backe from him, and haue not obeyed the voice of the Lorde our god/to walk in his lawes,which he layde before vs by his seruauntes the prophetes/ye al Israell haue transgressed, and gone backe from the lawe,so that they haue not herkened vnto thy voyce.

Wherfore the curse and othe that is wryten in the law of Moyses the seruaunt of god(agaynst whom we haue offended)is poured vpon vs. And he hath performed his wordes, which he spake agaynste vs,and agaynste oure iudges that iudged vs:to bringe vpon vs suche a greate plage, as neuer was vnder heauen, lyke as it is nowe come to passe in Jerusalem. Yea, al this plage,as it is wryten in the lawe of Moyses/is come vpon vs.
Yet made we not oure prayer before the Lorde oure God, that we myght turne agayne from oure wyckednesse, and to be lerned in thy veryte. Therfore hath ¶ Lorde made haste,to bringe thys plage vpon vs:for the Lord oure God is righteous,in al hys workes whych he doth: for why,we would not hercken vnto his voyce.

And now O Lorde oure God,thou that with a mighty hande hast brought thy people oute of Egypte, to get thy selfe a name, whych remayneth thys day/ we haue synned. O Lord/and done wyckedly agaynst all thy righteousnes: pea let thy worthiull displeasure be turned away(I beseech ¶) fro thy cite Jerusalem thy holy hyll. And why:for oure synnes sake,and for the wickednesse of oure forefathers is Jerusalē & thy people abhorred/of al them that are aboute vs. Now therfore, O oure God,heare the prayer of thy seruaunt,and hys intercessyon. O let thy Face shyne ouer thy Sanctuary, that lyeth waste.

O myGod,enclyne thine eare,and herken(at the leest for thyne owne sake) ope thyne eyes:beholde how we be desolated ye & the cytye also,whych is called after thy name:for we do not cast our prayers before thee in our owne righteousnes no but only in thy greate mercyes. O Lord heare. O forgeue Lord: O Lord consyder. Tarye not ouer long:but for thine owne sake do it. O my God , for thy cytee and thy people is called after thy name.

As I was yet speakynge at my prayers,knowledging myne owne sines and the synnes of my people,makyng so myne intercessyon before the Lorde my God for the holy hilles sake of my God

Yea,whyle I was yet speakyng in my prayer,beholde,the man Gabryel(whom I had sene afore in the vysiō) came flyig to me and touched me aboute ¶ offerige tyme in the euenynge. He informed me and spake vnto me: O Daniel(sayd he) I am now come to make the vnderstand it: For as soone as thou begannest to make thy prayer,it was so deuysed, and therfore am I come to shew thee. And why: For thou art a man greatly beloued.

Wherfore ponder the matter well; that that thou mayest learne,to vnderstande the vysyon. lxx. *wekes are determined ouer thy people,and ouer the holy citie: that the wickednes may be consumed, that the synne maye haue an ende,that the offence maye be reconcyled, and to bring in euerlasting ryghteousnes/to fulfyl the vysions and the Prophetes, and to anoint the moost holy one. Vnderstande this then, and marke it wel: that from the time it shalbe concluded to go & repayre Jerusalē agayne/vnto Christ(or the anoynted) prynce: there shalbe seuen wekes. Then shal the stretes and walles be buylded agayne in.lxii. wekes,but with harde troublous tyme. After these.lxii. wekes,shal christ be slayne,and they shall haue no pleasure in hym. Then shal there come a people with the Prince,and destroye ¶ cytie and the Sanctuary:and his end shal come as the water flood. But the desolatyon shal contynue tyl the ende of the battayl.

He shall make a strong bond with many,for the space of a weke:and whe ¶ weke is half gone,he shal put doune the slayne and meateoffrynge.
And in the temple there shalbe an abhominable desolacyon/tyll it haue destroyed all. And it is concluded, that thys wastyng shall contynue vnto the ende.

The notes.

*A weke is here taken for seuen yeare,as in Leuitis xxv. Wherfore the lxx.wekes are foure.C. and.xx. yeares.

¶ There appeareth vnto Daniell,a man clothed in lynen which sheweth hym wherfore he is sente.

¶ The.x. Chapter.

IN the thyrde yeare of kynge Cirus of Perlia,there was shewed vnto Daniell (otherwyse called Balthasar)a matter,ye a true matter , but it is yet a long tyme vnto it. He vnderstoode the matter wel ,and perceaued what the vysyon was. At the same tyme, I Daniel mourned for the space of thre weakes, so that I had no luste to eate bread:as for flesh and wyne there came none in my mouth: No, I dyd not ones annoynt my self,til the whole three wekes were out.

Upon the xxiiii. day of the fyrst moneth , I was by the great flood called Tigrys. I lyfte vp myne eyes , and loked/and beholde a man clothed in lynen /whose loynes were gyrded vp with fyne gold of Araby/his body was like the Chrysolyte ston,hys face(to loke vpon)was lyke lyghtenynge ,hys eyes as the flame of fyre ,hys armes and feate were lyke fayre glysterynge metal, but the voyce of hys wordes was lyke the voyce of a multitude.

I Daniel alone sawe thys vysyon, the men that were with me,sawe it not: but a greate fearefulnesse fel vpon the so that they fled away & hyd the selues. I was left there my selfe alone/& sawe thys greate vysyon so longe tyll there remayned no more strength wythin me yea I lost my colour cleane. I wasted awaye and my strength was gone. Yet herde I the voyce of hys wordes: and as sone as I hearde it, sleepinesse came vpon me/ and I fell downe flat to the ground vpon my face.
And behold an hand touched me,which set me vp vpon my knees and vpon the palmes of my handes saying vnto me O Daniel,thou wel beloued man:take good hed of the wordes that I shal say vnto thee, and stand vpright vp/for vnto thee am I now sente. And when he had said these wordes, I stode vp tremblig Then sayde he vnto me:feare not Daniell:for why,sence the fyrst daye that thou set thyne herte to vnderstand,and dyddest chasten thy selfe before thy god thy wordes haue bene heard.

And I had come vnto thee when thou begānest to speake had not the Prynce ouer the kyngdome of the Perses withstande me xxi dayes. But lo Michael one of the chefe Prynces, came to helpe me,hym haue I left by the kyng of Persya/and am comme to shew thee what shall happen vnto thy people in the latter dayes. For it will be longe yet or the vysyon be fulfilled.

Now when he hadde spoken these wordes vnto me/I cast down my head to:the ground and held my tong. Behold there touched my lyppes one very lyke vnto a man. Then opened I my mouth: And sayde vnto hym that stoode before me: O my lorde,my ioyntes are loused in the vysion, & ther is no moze stregth wythin me. How maye my Lordes seruaunt then talke wyth my Lorde? Seyng there is no strenght in me/ so ỹ I cannot take my breath. Vppon thys ther touched me againe one muche like a man, and comforted me sayeng: O thou man so well beloued/ feare not: be content, take a good heart vnto thee/ād be stronge. So when he hadde spoken vnto me, I recouered and sayde: speake on my Lorde, for thou hast refreshed me Then sayde he: Knowest thou wherfore I am come vnto thee? Now wyll I go agayne to fyght wyth the prynce of the Perses. As sone as I goo forthe/ lo, the Prynce of Grekelande shall come. ✠ The .xi. Chapter

A Nd in the fyrst yeare of Darius of Medea, I stode by hym to comfort hym, and to strength hym, and now wyl I shewe thee the truethe.

Beholde, there shall stande vp yet three kynges in Persia, but the fourth shalbe farre rycher then they all. And when he is in the cheafest power of hys ryches/ he shall prouoke euery man agaynst the realme of Grekeland. Than shal there aryse yet a myghtye kyng that shal rule wyth great dominion and do what him lyst, and as sone as hys kyngdome commeth vp, yt shalbe destroyed and diuyded toward the foure wyndes of the heauen. They that come after hym shal not haue suche power and dompynon as he but hys kyngdome shalbe scattered, yea euen amonge other then those. And the kynge of the south e shalbe myghtyer, then hys other Prynces. Agaynste hym there shall one make hym selfe stronge & shal rule hys dominiō wt great power But after certayne yeares, they shalbe ioyned together, ād the kynges daughter of the south shal come to the kyng of the Northe, for to make frendshyppe, but she shall not obtayne the power of that arme, neither shal she be able to endure thorow hys myght: but she, and such as brought her (yea ād he that begat her, and cōforted her for his tyme) shalbe delyuered vp. Out of the braunches of her roote, there shall one stande vp in hys steade: whyche wyth power of armes shall go thorow the kynges land of the north/ and handle hym accordyng to his strength. As for their Idols ād prynces, wt their costly Jewels of gould and syluer, he shal cary thē awaye captiues into Egypte, and he shall preuayle agaynst the kyng of thenorth certayne yeares. And whē he is come into the kynges realme of ỹ south/ he shalbe fayne to turne againe into hys awne lande. Wherfore hys sonnes shalbe displeased, & shal gather together a mighty greate hoost of people: and one of them shal come/ and go thorow lyke a water flowd: then shal he returne, and go forth with defynge and hoastynge vnto his awne lande.

Then the kyng of the south shalbe angry, and shall come forth to fight agaynst the kyng of the north: yea he shal bringe a greate multytude of people together, and a greate heape shalbe geuen into his hande: these shal he cary away with greate pryd, for so muche as he hath cast downe so many thousādes, neuertheles he shal not preuaile. For the kynge of ỹ north shall gather (of the new) a greater heape of people then afore, and cō forth (after a certayne tyme and yeares) with a mighty hoste and exceadynge greate good.

At the same tyme ther shal many stande vp agaynste the kynge of the south, so that the wicked chyldrē of thy people also shall exalte them selues (to fulfyll the vysyon) and then fall. So ỹ king of the north shal come to late lege and to take the strong fenced cytyes.

And the power of them of the south, shall not be able to abide him, and the best men of the people shal not be so strong as to resist hi. Shortly, whenhe cōmeth he shal hādle hi as he lyst & no mā shalbe so hardi as to stād against hi

Of Daniel

He shall stande in the pleasaunt cōtrye, whych thorow hym shalbe destroyed He shall set hys face wythall hys power to obtayne hys kyngdom, and to be lyke it. Yea that shal he do, and geue hym vn to the daughters among women, to destroye hym. But he shal fayle, neither shal he obteyne hys purpose. After thys shal he set hys face vnto the Iles, & take many of them. A prynce shall stoppe hym, to do hym a shame, besyde the confusion ỹ els shall come vnto hym. Thus shall he turne agayne to hys owne lande, shōble and fall / and be no more founde: so he that came vpon hym, and dyd hym vyolence, shall stande in hys place, and haue a pleasaunt kyngdome, and after fewe dayes he shalbe destroyed, & that neyther in wrath nor in battail. In hys steade there shall aryse a vyle person, not holdē worthy of a kynges dygnyty: thys shal come in craftely/ and obtayne the kyngdome wyth fayre wordes: he shall fyght agaynste the armes of the myghtye (and destroy them) yea & agaynst the prynce of the couenaunt,

So after that he hath taken truce wt hym, he shall handle deceatfully: that he maye get vp, and ouercome hym wyth a small flocke: and so wyth craftines to get hym to the fattest place of the lande and to deale otherwyse then ether hys fathers or grandfathers dyd For he shal destroye the thyng/ that they had robbed and spoyled/ yea and all theyr substaūce Imaginynge & thoughtes agaynste the stronge holdes/ and that for a tyme.

Ye they that eate of hys meate shal hurte hi so that hys hoost shall fall/ and many be slayne downe.

These two kynges shalbe mynded to do mischefe and talke of dysceyte at one table but they shal not prosper: for why the ende shal not come yet vnto the tyme appoynted. Then shall he go hom agayn vnto hys owne lande wyth greate good. and set hys harte agaynst the holy couenaunt, he shalbe busy agaynste it/ and then returne home. At the tyme appoynted he shal come agayne and go towarde the south. So shal it happen otherwyse then at the fyrste yet ones agayne

And whye the shyppes of Cythym shall come vpon hym: that he maye be smitten and turne againe that he maye take idignation againſt the cōuenaunt of holynes to medle agaynste yt. Yea he shall turne hym and drawe suche vnto hym/ as leaue the holy couenaunt.

He shall set myghty men to vnhalow the sanctuary of strengthe, to put downe the dayly offeryng, and to set vppe the abhominable desolation. And suche as breake the couenaunt shall he flatter wt fayre wordes. But the peple ỹ wyl know theyr God, shall haue the ouerhande ād prosper. Those also that haue vnderstāding amonge the people shall enfourme ỹ multitude and for a long season, they shalbe persecuted wythe swearde, wythe fyer, wyth captyuitye and wythe the takyng away of theyr Goodes. Now whē they fall they shalbe set vp wyth a lytell helpe: but many shall cleue vnto theym fayneely.

Yea some of those whych haue vnderstandyng shallbe persecuted also ỹ they maye be tryed, purifyed and clensed, tyl the tyme be out: for there is yet another tyme appoynted. The kynge shall doo what hym lyst [he shall] exalte and magnifye hym selfe agaynst al, that is God Yea, he shal speake maruelous thynges agaynst the God of all goddes, wherin he shall prospeare/ so long tyl the wrath be fulfylled/ for the conclusyon is decreed already. He shal not regarde the god of hys fathers, but hys lust shalbe vpon women: Yea, he shal not care for any god for he shall magnifye hym selfe aboue all. In hys place shal he worshyp the mighty Idoles and the god wdom hys fathers knewe not/ shall he honor wyth golde and syluer, with precious stones and pleasaunt Jewels.

This shall he do, seking helpe and succour at the mighty Idols & straūge goddes. Suche as will receaue him, and take him for god he shal geue the great

¶ The fyꝛſt Chapter.

A THis is the wozd of the Lozd, that came vnto Oseas the ſonne of Beery, in ꝯ dayes of Oseas, Joathan / Ahas & Jezekiah kynges of Juda: and in ꝯ tyme of Jeroboam the ſonne of Joas kyng of Iſrael.

Fyꝛſt, when the Lozd ſpake vnto Oseas he ſayde vnto hym: Go thy waye, take an harlot to thy wyfe / and get chyldꝛen by her: fooꝛ the lande hath committed greate whoꝛdome agaynſt the Lozde. So he wente, and tokeb* Gomer the Daughter ofb Deblaim: wꝑch conceaued/and bꝛought fooꝛth a ſonne. And the Lozd ſayde vnto hi: cal hys name c* Iſrael, fooꝛ I wyll thooꝛlye auenge the bloude of Iſrael vpon the houſe of Jehu, and wyl bꝛing the kyngdome of the houſe of Iſrael to an end. Then wyl I bꝛeake the bow of Iſrael, B in the valleye of Iſrael.

She conceaued yet agayne/ and bare a daughter. And he ſaide vnto hi: Cal her named* Lozuhamah (that ys/ not obtayning mercy) fooꝛ I wyll haue no ꝑyte vpon the houſe of Iſrael, but fooꝛget them, and put them cleane out of remembꝛaunce. Neuertheleſs I wyll haue mercy vpon the houſe of Juda, & wyl ſaue them, euen thõꝛow the Lozde their god. But I wyll not delyuer thẽ thooꝛow any bowe, ſwearde, batel, hooꝛſe oꝛ hooꝛſmen.

Now when ſhe had weaned Lozuhamah/ſhe conceaued againe, ād bare a ſonne. Then ſaide he: cal his name. c Loamy. Fooꝛ why: e are not my people, therfooꝛe wyl not I be yours. And thoughe the numbꝛe of the chyldꝛen of Iſrael be as the ſande of the ſea, wꝑch can nether be meaſured noꝛ tolde: yet i the place wheꝛe it is ſayde vnto thẽ, ye be not my people: euen there ſhal ye be thus repoꝛted of them: they be ꝯ childꝛe of the lyuing god. Then ſhal the chyldꝛen of Juda and the childꝛẽ of Iſrael be gatheꝛed together againe/ ād chooſe thẽ ſelues one head, and then departe out of the lande: fooꝛ greate ſhalbe the date of Iſrael.

TEl your bꝛethꝛen, that they A are my people: & your ſiſtꝛẽ ꝯ they haue optained mercy As fooꝛ youre a* mother, ye ſhal chyd wꝑh her/ & tꝛeꝛoue her: fooꝛ ſhe is not my wyfe, nether am I hur huſbande, vnleſſe ſhe put away her whoꝛdome out of my ſyght/ād her aduoutry from her bꝛeſtes.

If no I ſhall ſtrype her naked, and ſet her euen as ſhe came into the wozlde: yea I ſhal lay her waſte, and make her lyke a wyldernelle, & ſlay her fooꝛ thirſt. I ſhal haue no ꝑyte alſo vpõ her chyldꝛen/ fooꝛ they be the chyldꝛeren of fooꝛnycacion.

Theyꝛ mother hath bꝛoken her wedlocke, and ſhee that bare them, is come B to confuſyon. Fooꝛ ſhe ſayde: I wyll go after my louers/ that geue me my water and my bꝛead, my wolle and flaxe, my oyle and my dꝛynche. But I will hedg her away wꝑth thoꝛnes, and ſtop it, that ſhe ſhall not fynde her fotteſtepꝛes: and though ſhe runne after her louers, yet ſhall ſhe not get thẽ, ſhe ſhall ſeke thẽ/ but not find them. Then ſhal ſhe ſaye: well, I will go turne againe to my fiꝛſte huſbande, fooꝛ at that time was I better at eaſe, then now. But this wolde ſhe not knowe/ where as I yet gaue her coꝛne, wine, oyle, ſylucr and golde, wꝑch ſhe hath hanged vpon Baall.

Wherfooꝛe now wil I go take my coꝛne and wyne again in their ſeaſon, and ta againe my woll and my flaxe wꝑche I gaue her, to couer her ſhame.

And

And now wyll I discouer her foolyshnesse, euen in the syght of her louers/ and no mã shall delyuer her out of my handes. Moreouer/ I wyl take awaye al her myrth, her holy dayes/ her newemones, her Sabbothes and al her solempne feastes. I wyl destroye her vynyardes ãd figge trees, though she sayeth: lo, here are my rewardes that my louers haue geuen me. I wyl make yt a wodde / and the wylde beastes shall eate it vp. I wyl punysh her also for ỹ dayes of Baal, wherin she censed him decking him with her earinges & cheynes: when she folowed her louers/ and forgat me, sayeth the Lord.

Wherfore behold I wyll cal her a gaine, bring her into a wyldernes, and speake frendely vnto her. There wyl I geue her her vynyardes agayne, yea & the valley of Achor also to shewe her hope and comfort. Then shal she singe there as in the tyme of her youth/ and lyke as in the daye when she came out of the land of Egypt. Then (sayeth the Lord) she shal saye vnto me: O my husband and shal cal me nomore Baal: for I wil take away those names of Baal from her mouth, yea she shal neuer remembre their names any more. Then wyl I make a couenaunt with them, with the wilde beastes, with the foules of the ayre/ and with euery thing ỹ creepeth vpon the earth.

Is for bowe, sweard, and batell/ I wyl destroy suche out of the land, and wyl make them to slepe safely. Thus wyl I marry thee vnto myne owne selfe for euermore: yea euen to my selfe wil I marry thee, in rightuousnes, in equytee/ in louyng kyndnesse and mercy. In fayth also wyll I marry thee vnto my self, and thou shalt know the Lord. At the same time wyl I shew my selfe frendly and gracious vnto the heaues, sayeth the Lord: and the heauens shall helpe the earth / and the earthe shall helpe the corne, wine and oyle/ ãd they shal helpe Israell. I will sowe them vpon earthe, for a sede to myne owne selfe, and will haue mercy vpon her, that was without mercy.

And to them whyche were not my people, I wyll saye: Thou arte my people. And he shal saye: thou arte my God.

Of the loue of god toward the people.

The. iii. Chapter.

Then saide the Lorde to me: Go yet thy waye and bow an aduouterous woman, whom thy neighboure loueth, as the Lord doth the children of Israel: how be it they haue respect to straunge goddes, and loue ỹ wine kannes. So I gat her for xv siluerlinges, and for an Homer and an half of barlie, & saide vnto her: Thou shalt bide with me a longe season, but se that thou playest not the harlot, and Loke thou medle wyth none other man, and then wyll I kepe my selfe for thee.

Thus the children of Israel shal sit a greate while without kig & prince without offering and aultar, without prest and reuelation. But afterwarde shal the children of Israel conuerte & seke the Lorde their God, and Dauid their king: & in ỹ latter dayes they shal worshyp the Lorde, and his louing kyndnes.

A cõplaint against ỹ people & ỹ prestes of Israell

The. iiii. Chapter

Heare the word of the Lord O ye children of Israel: for the Lord must punish the that dwel in the lãd. And why? ther is no faithfulnes there is no mercy/ ther is no knowledg of God in the lande: but swearynge, lyeng, man slaughter, theft, and aduoutry haue gotten the ouer hand, and one bloudgiltines foloweth an other. Therfor shal ỹ lãde in amiserable case and all they that dwell therein, shall mourne. The beastes in the felde, the foules in the ayre, and the fysshes in ỹ sea shal dye. Yet is there none that will chasten nor reproue another de prestes which shoulde reforme other men, are become lyke the people.

Therfore stomblest thou in the day tyme and the prophet with thee i the night. I wyll bring thy mother to sylence, ãd why? my people perysshe/ because they haue no knowledge. Seyng then that thou hast refused vnderstanding therfore wyl I refuse thee also: so that thou shalt no more be my prest. And for so muche as thou hast forgotten the lawe of thy God, I wyll also forget thy children. The more they increased in the multytude, the more they synned agaynst me, therfore wyl I change their honoure into shame. They eate vp the synnes of my people, and forage them in their wyckednesse. Thus the prest is become lyke the people. Wherfore I wyl punysh them for their wycked wayes, ãd reward them accordynge to their awne ymaginacyons. They shall eate/ ãd not haue ynough: They haue* vsed whordome/ therfor shall they not prosper: ãd why? they haue forsaken the Lorde/ and not regarded him.

Whordom, wyne and dronckennesse take the harte awaye. My people aske counsayl at their stockes, their staf must tell them. For an whoorysh mynde hath deceaued them/ so that they cõmytte fornycacyon agaynst their God. They make sacrifyces vpon the hye mountaynes, and burne theyr incense vpon the hylles, yea amonge the okes, groues ãd bushes, for there are good shadowes. Therfore youre daughters are become harlottes, and youre spouses haue broke theyr wedlocke. I wyll not punysh your daughters for beynge defyled, and your brydes that be come whores: seyng the fathers them selues haue medled wyth harlottes/ and offered wyth vnthryftes: but the people that wyl not vnderstande must be punyshed.

Though thou* Israel art disposed to playe the harlot, yet shuldest not thou haue offended, O Iuda: thou shuldest not haue runne to Galgal, nor haue gone vp to Bethauen nor haue sworne, ỹ lord lyueth. For Israel is gone backe lyke a wanton cowe. The Lord therfore shal make her fede, as the lambe that goeth a straye. And where as Ephraim is becõe partaker of Idols/ wel, let hi go. Theyr Dronckennes hath putt them backe, and brought them to whordom.

Their rulers loue rewardes, bring (say they) to their owne shame. A winde shal take hold of their fethers, ãd they shall be confounded in their offringes.

The notes.

a* To vse whordom or fornicatyon thorow out ỹ prophetes, is, to take another god thẽ the true god and to serue images or to beleue in them.

b* Israell and Ephraim, for the moost part in the prophetes are taken for the .x. trybes, Psal lxxviii. b. Ye reade in the .iii. of the kynges .xii. of that .x. trybes folowed Ieroboam, where as only Iudas Beniamin abode by Rehoboam, Those .x. trybes are cõmonly called Israel in the Prophetes: as Beniamin is tokened with Iuda.

Against the Prestes & rulers of Israel. The helpe of man can do nothyng against god.

The. v. Chapter.

Ye prestes: heare this/ take hede, O thou housholde of Israel: geue eare/ O thou kynglye house: for this punishment wyl come vpon you/ that are become a snare vnto Mizphah, and a syzed net vnto the mounte of Tabhor. They kyll sacryfices by hepes, *to begyle the people therwith: therfore wyll I punysh them all. I know Ephraim wel ynough, and Israel is not hid fro me: for Ephraim is become an harlot: and Israel is defiled. They are not mynded to turne vnto their God, for they haue an whorysh hearte, so that they can not knowe the Lorde.

But the pryde of Israell wyll be rewarded him in hys face, yea both Israel and Ephraim shal fall for their wickednes, and Iuda with them also. They shal come with their shepe and bullockes to seke the Lorde, but they shal not fynd him, for he is gone from them. As for the lord, they haue refused him and brought vp bastard children: moneth therfore shal deuoure them with their portions. Blowe wyth the shawmes at Gabaa/ and with the trõpet i Ramah. Cry out at Bethauẽ vpõ yõder syde of Ben Iamyn. In the tyme of the plage shal Ephraim be layde waste therfore dyd I faithfully warne the trybes of Israel. Yet are the princes of Iuda become lyke them, that remoue the lãdemarkes, therfore wyl I poure out my wrath vpon them lyke water. Ephraim is oppressed, and can haue no ryght of the lawe: for why? they fo-lowe the doctrynes of men. Therfore wyl I be vnto Ephraim as a moth, and to the house of Juda as a caterpiller.

IN theire aduersytee they shal seke me/ and saie: come let vs turne agayne to the Lord: for he hath smytten vs, and he shall heale vs: he hath wounded vs/ and he shal bid vs vp agayne: a *after two dayes shal he quicken vs, in the thyrd daye he shal rayse vs vp, so that we shal lyue in hys syght. O Ephraim/ what shal I do vnto thee? O Juda, how shal I entreate thee? seynge your loue is lyke a morning cloud B and lyke a dewe that goeth early away Therfore haue I cut downe the Prophetes, and let them be slayne for my wordes sake: so that thy punishmente shal come to lyght. For I haue pleasure in louyng kyndnes/ and not in offeryng: yea in the knowledge of God, more then in burnt sacrifice. But euen lyke as Adam dyd, so haue they broken my couenaunt, and set me at naught.

Galaad is a citie of wycked doers, of malycious People and bloudshedders. The multytude of the Prestes is lyke C an heape of theues, murtherers & blod thurstye: for they haue wrought abhomynacyon. Horrible thinges haue I sene in the house of Israel, there playeth Ephraim the harlot, and Israell is defyled: but Juda shall haue an harueste for him self/ whē I returne the cap tyuytye of my people.

Thy calf, O Samarya, shalbe taken awaye, for my wroth ful indygnacō is gone forth against thee. How long will it be, or they can be clensed? For the calfe came from Israel, the worcke man made it/ therfor can it be no God, but euen to a spyders webbe shall the Calfe of Samarya be turned. a* They haue sowne wynde/ therfor shall they reape a storme

Theyr sede shall beare no corne, there B

Ephraym geueth rewardes to get louers, therfor are they scatred amōg the heathen there wil I gather them vp They shall soone be weerye of the bur then of kynges and Princes. Ephraim hath made many aultars to do wycked nes: therfore shall the aultars turne to hys synne. Though I shewe them my lawe neuer so much, they counte it but straunge doctryne. Where as they doo sacrifice/ offeryng the flesh and eating C it: the lorde wyll haue no pleasure there in but wyll remembre theyr wickednes ād punysh their synnes: Israel turneth againe into Egipte they haue forgotten him that made thē they build churches, ād Juda maketh many stroōg cities; therfore wyll I sende a fyre into their cyties and it shall consume theyre places.

The.ix. Chapter.

DO not thou trumphe, O Israell, make no bostinge more then the Heathen, for A thou hast committed aduoutry agaynst thy God: of raūg rewardes hast thou loued more thē al the corne flo wres. Therfore shal they no more enioye the corne flo wres & wynepressels, and their swete wyne shal fayle them. They wyl not dwel in the Lordes lande, but Ephraim turneth a gayne into Egypt, and eateth vncleane thynges amonge the Assirians. They powre out no wyne for a drinckoffering vnto the Lord nether geue they hi their slayne offeringes: but they be vnto thē as mourners meates, wherein all they that eate them, are defyled. For ȳ bred that they haue suche lust vnto, shal not come into the house of the lord. What wyll ye do then in the a* solempne dayes/ and in the feast of the lorde? lo, they shal get them away for the destrucciō; Egypte shall receaue them, and Noph B

¶ The.x. Chapter.

Israel was a goodly vyne but he hath brought forth vnprofitable frute: yea,ÿ more frute he had,the more aultars he made,the more good I dyd to theyr lande/ the more frendshyp shewed they to their ymages Their herte is dyuided, therfore wyll they be destroyed. The lord shal breake downe theyr Images: he shall destroye theyr aultars. Then shall they saye:we haue no kynge,for whye? we haue not feared the Lorde. And what shall then the kyng do to vs? They cōmune together,and sweare vayne othes: they bee confederate together,therfore groweth theyr punishement as the wedes in the forowes of the lande.

They that dwel in Samaria haue worshyped the calfe of Bethauen:therfore shal the people mourne ouer them yea and the preastes also,that in theyre wealthynesse reioyced wyth thē: for whyle it shall passe away from them. It shal be brought to the Assirias for a Present vnto kynge Jareb. Ephraim shall receaue full punishemente: Israell shall be confounded for hys owne ymmagynacions. Samaryа wyth hys king shal vanych awaye/as the scōme in the water. The high places of Aue wher Israel do sine/shalbe cast doune thyselfe & thornes shal grow vpō their aultars. Then shal they say to the moūtaynes: couer vs, & to the hylles: fal vpon vs.

O Israell thou hast synned as Gabaa dyd afore tyme/where they remayned: shoulde not the battayll then come vpon the wycked chylderen:as wel as vpon the Gabaonites? I wyll challen them,euen after myne owne desyre,the people shalbe gathered together ouer them/when I punysh them for theyre greate wyckednes. Ephraim was vnto me,as a Cowe that is vsed to goo to plowe,therfore I loued hym/ and fell vpon hys fayre necke: I dyoue Ephrai, Juda plowed,and Jacob played the husbandman,that they might lowe vnto ryghteousnes/and reape the frutes of weldoynge that they myght plowe vp theyr fresh land, & seke ÿ Lorde,til he came and lerned thē ryghteousnes.

But nowa* they haue plowed them wyckednesse, therfore shall they reape synne,and eate the frute of lyes. Seig thou puttest thy confydence in thyne owne wayes,and leanest to the multytude of thy worthyes: there shal grow a sedycyon amonge the people. All my stronge cyties shalbe layde wast/ euen as Salmana was destroyed wyth his kynsmen of Arbel,in the date of battel,wher the mother perished with her chyldren Euen so shal it go with you(O Bethel) because of your malycious wickednes. Lyke as the morowyng goeth awaye,so shal the kynge of Israel passe.

¶ Agaynst the vnkyndnes of Israel

¶ The.xi. Chapter.

When Israel was yonge, I loued hym:and called him my sonne out of the lād of Egypt. But the more they were called, the more they went backe, offeryng vnto Idoles,and censinge Images. I lerned Ephraime to go,and bare thē in myne armes,but they regarded not me, that wold haue helped them I led them with cordes of frendshyppe,and with bandes of loue. I was euen he that layed the yock vpō their neckes. I gaue them their fodder my selfe,that they should not go againe into Egypt. And now is Assur their kynge. For they wolde not turne vnto me. Therfore shal the sweard be gynne in their cyties, the store that they haue laied vp,shalbe destroied and eaten:ād that because of their owne ymaginacyons. My people hath no lust to turne vnto me/their prophetes laye the yock vpon them,but they ease theym not of their burthen.

What greate thynges haue I gone thee,O Ephraim: how faithfully haue I defended thee, O Israel: haue I delt with thee as with Adama: or haue I entreated thee lyke Seboim: No/my hart is otherwyse minded. Yea my mercy is to feruēt,therfore haue I not turned me to destroy Ephrai in my wrothful displeasure. For I am god & no mā/ I am euen that holy one i the middest of thee,though I came not vnto ÿ citee

The Lorde roareth like a lyon,that they maye folowe hym: yea as a Lyon roareth he:that they may be afrayd lyke the childeren of the sea that they may be scattered away from Egipt,as me scarre byrdes, and frayed awaye(as doues vse to be)from the Assirians lande:and that because I wolde haue them taty at home sayeth the Lorde. But Ephraim goeth about me wyth lyes,and the houle of Israell dyssembleth. Onely Juda holdeth hym with God, and wyth the true holye thynges.

¶ Agaynst the vayne trust of the people.

¶ The.xii. Chapter.

Ephraym kepeth the ayre ād foloweth after ÿ east wynde: he is euer encreasynge lyes and destruction. They be confederate wyth the Assiryans,theyr oyle is caryed into Egypt: the Lorde hath a courte to hold wyth Juda ād wyl punysh Jacob. After theyr owne wayes,and accordyng to theyr owne inuencyons shall he recompense them. He toke his brother by the hele when he was yet in hys mothers wombe,and in hys strength he wrestled with God. He stroue wyth the Aungel, and gatt the victorye so that he prayed and desyred hym. He founde hym at Bethell,& there he talked wt vs. Yea the lord god of hoostes,euen ÿ Lorde hym selfe remembred hym. Then turne to thy god,kepe mercy and equitie and hope styll in thy God. But the marchaunt hath a false weyght in hys hande he hath a pleasure to occuppye extortyon.

Ephraym thynketh thus: Tush, I am ryche, I haue good ynough: In all my worckes shall not one faute be founde/ that I haue offended. Yet am I the lord thy GOD,euen as when I brought thee out of the land of Egypte/ and set thee in thy tentes,and as in the hygh feest dayes.

I haue spoken thorowe the Prophetes/and shewed dyuerse bysions,and declared my selfe by the mynistracyon of ÿ Prophets,but at Galaad is the abhominacyon/they are fallen to vanitye. At Galgal they haue slayne Oxen: and as manye heapes of stonnes as they had in their land forowes: so many aultars haue

Samaria they made. Jacob fled into the land of Syria/and Israel serued for a wife, and for a wyfe he kepte shepe.

By a prophet the Lord brought the out of Egipt and by a Prophet he pre serued the. But Ephraim hath prouoked him todisplearsure thorow his abhominacions, therfore shal his bloude be poured vpon him selfe/and the lord hys God shall rewarde hym hys blasphemyes.

THe abhominatiō of Ephraī is come also into Israel. He is gone backe to Baal/ therfore must he dye. Therfore they shal be as the morning cloud, & as the dew that early passeth away, & like as dust ỹ ỹ wynd taketh away from the floze, & as smoke ỹ goeth out of the chymney.

The wickednesse of Ephraim is bounde together, and his synne lyeth hyd. Therfore shall sorowes come vpon hym as vpon a woman that trauayleth. The.ii. Chapter

A BLow out the trompet in Sion/and cry out vpō my holy hyll that al suche as dwel in the lande maie tremble at it: for the daye of the Lord cōmethe, and is harde at hande, a darcke daye, a gloumyng daye, a cloudy daye, yea and a stormy daye, lyke as the morning spreadeth out vpon the hylles: Namely, a great ād myghty people: suche as haue not bene sens the begynnynge, neither shall be after them for euermore. Before hym shall be a consumynge fyre, and behynde hym a burnyng flāme. The lande shalbe as a garden of pleasure before hi, but behynde hym shal it be a very waste wylderneſſe and there is no mā, that shal scape hym. They are to loke vpon/ lyke barded horses/and runne lyke horse mē. They skippe vp vpon the hylles, as it were the sound of charettes: as the flāme of fire that consumeth the strawe, and as a mighty people redy to the battayll.

The folke shalbe afrayed of hym: all faces shall be as blacke as a pot. These shall runne lyke gyaunttes, and leape ouer the walles lyke mē of warre. Euery man in hys goyng shall kepe his araye, and not goo out of hys Path. There shall not one dryue another/ but eche shall kepe hys owne waye. They shal breake in at the wyndowes, and not be hurte. They shal come in to the cytye, and runne vpon the walles. They shall clyme vp vpon the houses and styppe in at the wyndowes lyke a theſe. The earth shall quake before hym, yea, the heauens shalbe moued: The Sunne and Moone shal be darckened and the starres shal wythdrawe theyr shyne.

The Lorde shall shewe hys voyce before hys hoaste for, his hoaste is greate, stronge and myghtye to fulfyll hys commaundement. Thys is that greate and marueilous fearfull day of the lord. And who is able to abyde it?

Now therfore sayeth the Lorde: Turne you vnto me with al youre hartes wyth fastyng, weppyng and mournynge, rente your hertes, and not your clothes. Turne you vnto the Lorde youre God, for he is gracyous and mercyfull/long sufferyng and of greate compassyon: ād redy to pardone wyckednes. Then (no doute) he also shall turne, and forgyue: after hys chastenyng/ he shal let your increase remayne/ for Meate and dryncke offeryinges vnto the Lorde youre God. Blowe out wyth the Trompet in Sion proclayme a fastyng, cal the congregation/ād gather the people together, warne the congregacion, gather the elders, brig the chyldren/and sucklynges together. Let the bryde goem go forth of hys chāber/and the bryde out of her closet. Let the preestes serue the lorde, betwixte the porch and the aultar/ weppyng and saying: be fauourable, O lorde be fauourable vnto thy people: let not thine heritage be brought to suche confusyon, lest the Heathē be lordes therof. Wher fore should they say amōge the Heathē, where is now their God?

Then shal the lord be gelous ouer his land, and spare his people: yea the lorde shall answere/and saye vnto hys people: Behold/ I wyl sende you corne wyne, and oyle, so that ye shal haue plēty of them: and I wyll nomore geue you ouer to be a reproſe among ỹ Heathen. Agayn/as for hī of the North/ I shal dryue him far from you: ād shutte him out in to a dry le and wast land/his face toward the east sea/and his hinder partes towarde the vttermost sea. The stynche of him shal go vp, and his fylthy corrupcyon shal fal vpon him self because he hath dealt so proudly. Feare not (O land) but be glad ād reioyce, for the lorde wyll do greate thynges. Be not ye afrayed neither (O ye beastes of the felde) for ỹ pastures shalbe grene and the trees shal beare their fruite: the fygfygge trees & vineyardes shall geue theyr increase.

Be glad then (O ye chyldren of Sion) and reioyce in the Lorde youre God, for he hath geuen you a teacher of ryghteousnes./ and he it is that shal sende you downe showers of rayne/ early and late in the fyrst moneth: so that the graners shalbe full of corne and the preſſes plenteous in wyne and oyle. And as for the yeares that the grasshopper, locuste, blastynge and caterpyller (my greate hoaste whych I sent amonge you) haue eaten vp, I shal restore them to you againe: so that ye shall haue ynough to eate, and be satisfyed: and prayse the Name of the Lorde youre God that so marueilously hath dealte wyth you.

And my people shall neuer be confounded any more. Ye shall knowe/that I am in the myddest of Israel, and that I am your God: yea, and that there is none other, and my people shall no more be brought to confusyon.

After thys, wyl I poure out my spryte vpon all flesh: and your sonnes ād your daughters shall prophecy: your olde mē shall dreame *dreames, and youre yōge men shall se vysyons: yea in those dayes I wil poure out my spryte vpon seruaunts and maydens. I wyll shewe wonders in heauen aboue, and tokēs in the earth beneth, bloude and fyre, ād the vapoure of smoke. The sunne shalbe turned into darcknesse/ and the moone into bloude: before the greate and notable daye of the Lorde come. And the tyme shal come: that whosoeuer calleth on the name of ỹ Lorde, shalbe saued. For vpon the mount Syon and at Jerusalem, there shalbe a saluacyon/ lyke as the lord hath promysed: yea and amonge the other remnaūt, whom the Lorde shall call.

Thou Tirus and Sydon and all ye borders of the Philistins, What haue ye to do with me? Will ye dekye me? wel/ yf ye wyll nedes de kye me? I shall recompence you euen vpon youre heade and that ryght shortely, for ye haue taken away my siluer and gold, my fayre and goodly Jewels, and brought them into your goddes houses. The chyldrē also of Juda and Jerusalem haue ye solde vnto the Grecians, that ye might bringe them farre from the borders of their owne contrees.

Beholde therfore, I will raise them out of the place, where ye haue sold thē & will reward you euē vpon your head. Your sonnes & youre doughters wyll I sel thorow the handes of the childrē of Juda & so they shal geue thē forth to sel vnto thē of Saba a people of a far cōtre, for the Lord him selfe hath sayde it.

Crye out the le thinges among the Gētyles/proclayme warre, wake vp the gyauntes, let them drawe nye, let thē come vp al the lusty warryours of thē, make you swerdes of youre plowshares, and spades of your sycles and sythes. Let the weake man saye, I am stronge. Muster you/and come all ye Heathen roūde about: gather you together, thet thal the lord laye al the gyauntes to ỹ grounde. Let the people aryse, and get thē to the valley of Josaphat: for there will I set, and iudge al Heathen, roūd about. Laie to your sythes, for the harueſt is rype: come, get you doune, the wynepresse is ful, yea the wine preſſes rūne ouer, for their wickednes is waxen greate. In ỹ valley appointed, there shall be many/many people: for the daye of the Lorde is nye in the valleye appointed. The sunne and moone shalbe darckened, and the starres shall withdrawe their lyght. The Lord shal rooze out of Syon/and crye out of Jerusalem, that the heauens and the erth shall quake withall.

THe Lorde God shewed me suche a vysion: behold, there stod on that made grashoppers/ euen when the corne was shutynge forth/ after the kyng had clypth his shepe. Now when they vnderto eate vp all the grene thynges in the lande, I sayde: O Lorde God, be mercyful, I beseche thee: who shoulde els helpe vp Jacob? that is brought so lowe? So the lorde was gracyous therein, and the Lorde sayde: wel/ it shal not be.

Then sayde I: O Lorde God holde thyne hande: for who shulde els helpe vp Jacob that is brought so lowe? So the Lord was mercyful therin, and the Lord god sayd: well, it shall not be.

And Amasyah said vnto Amos Gett thee hence (thou that canst se so well) and fle in to the lande of Juda: gett thee there thy lyuing, and prophecy there, and prophecy nomore at Bethel for it is the kynges chapell, and the kynges courte.

Amos answered and sayde to Amasiah C
As for me I am neyther prophete, nor prophetes sonne, but a keper of Catell Now as I was breakyng downe molbe eyes and goyng after the catel, the lord toke me, and sayd vnto me: Go thy way and prophecy vnto my people of Israell And therfore, heare thou now the word of the Lord: Thou saiest: prophecy not a gaynst Israell, and speake nothynge a gaynst the house of Isaac.

Wherfore thus sayeth the Lorde: Thy wife shalbe defiled in the cytie, thy sonnes and daughters shalbe slayne with the swerde, and thy lande shalbe measured out with the lyne. Thou thy selfe shalte dye in an vnclene land, and Israel shal be driuen out of his owne countre.

Agaynst Edom, ād the trust that they had in riches.

Thys is the vysyon that was shewed vnto Abdy: Thus hath the Lord god spoke vpō Edom: We haue herde of the Lord that there is an Embassage sent amonge the Heathen: Vp, let vs arise, & fyght against them. Beholde, I wyl make thee small amonge the Heathen, so that thou shalt be vtterly despised. The pryde of thyne herte hath lyft thee vp/ thou that dwellest in the strong holdes of stones, and hast made the an hye seate: Thou sayeste in thyne herte: who shall cast me downe to the grounde? But though thou wentest vp as hye as the Aegle, and madest thy nest aboue amonge the starres: yet wolde I pluck thee downe from thence Yf the theues and robbers com to thee by nyght, thou takyng thy rest, should they not steale tyl they had ynough? Yf the grape gatherers com vpon thee wold they not leaue thee some grapes? But how shal they rype Esau, and seke out his treasures?

Yea, the men that were swozne vnto ther, shal dryue thee out of the bordersof thyne owne lande. They that be now at one wyth thee shal dysceaue thee and ouercome thee: Euē they ỹ eate thy bred shall betray thee/ or euer thou perceaue it. Shal not I at the same tyme destroy the wyse Men of Edome / and those that haue vnderstandyng frō the mount of Esau? Thy gyauntes (O Theman) shalbe afrayed, for thozow ỹ slaughter they shalbe all ouerthrowne vpon the mount of Esau. Shame shall come vpon thee, for ỹ malice that thou shewedst to thy brother Iacob: yea, for euermore shalt thou perysh, and that because of the tyme / when thou dyddest set thy selfe agaynste HYM: Euen when when the enemyes carryed awaye hys hoost/ and when the aleaunts came in at hys portes, and cast lottes vpon Ierusalem, and thou thy selfe wast as one of them.

Thou shalt nomore se the daye of thy brother, thou shalt nomore beholde the tyme of his captiuyte: thou shalt no more reproue ouer the chyldren of Iuda in the daye of theyr destruccyon, thou shalt tryumphe nomore in the tyme of theyr trouble. Thou shalt no more com in at the gates of my people in the tyme of theyr decaye: thou shalt not se theyr myserye in the daye of theyr fall.

For lyke wyse as ye haue dronckē vpon myne holy hyll, so shall al Heathen dyncke contynually: yea dryncke shall they, and swalowe vp, so that ye shalbe/ as though ye had neuer bene.

But vpon the mount Syon, there shal a remnaūt escape: these shalbe holy and the house of Jacob shal possesse euē those, that had them selues afore in possessyon. As the envyous philistines stopped the welles of Abraham and filled them vp with earth, to put the remembrall out of mynde, to the entente that they myght chalenge the grounde: euen so the fleshlye minded pocrytes stoppe vp the wayes of lyfe whiche are in the scrypture, with the earth of their tradicyons, false similitudes and lienge allegoryes: and that of lyke zeale to make the scripture their owne possession and marchaundise: and so shutt vp the kyngdome of heauen which is gods worde, neither entrynge in them selues nor sufferyng them that wolde.

¶ The scripture hath a body without, and with in a soule, spryte and lyfe. It hath without, a barcke, a shel, and as it were an hard bone for the fleshly minded to gnaw vpon. And within it hath pith, cornel, mary and al swetenes for gods electe whiche he hath chosen, to geue them his spirite, and to wryte hys lawe and the fayth of his sonne in their hertes.

¶ The scripture conteyneth .iii. thinges in it: fyrst the lawe to condempne al flesshe: secondarely the gospel, that is to saye, promises of mercye for all that repente and knowledge their synne at the preachynge of the lawe, and consente in their hertes that the lawe is good, and submyt them selues to be scolers to learne to kepe ye lawe and to lerne to beleue the mercy that is promysed them: and thyrdly the storyes and lyues of those scolers, bothe what chaunces for tuned theym, and also by what meanes their scolemaster taught them and made them perfecte, and howe he tryed the true from the falce.

¶ When the pocrites came to the lawe, they put gloses to, and make nomore of it then of a worldly lawe which is satisfyed with the outward worke and which a turke maye also fulfyl. When yet Gods lawe neuer ceaseth to condempne a man vntyll it be wrytten in hys harte and vntyll he kepe it naturally without compulsion and al other respecte, saue onely of pure loue to god and hys neighboure as he naturally eateth when he is an hongred, without compulsion and all other respect, saue to slake hys honger only.

¶ And when they came to the Gospel, there they mingle their leuen, and say, god now receaueth vs no more to mercye, but of mercye receaueth vs to penaunce, ye is to wete, holy dedes that make them fatt belies and vs their captiues, both i soules body. And yet they faine their Idole the pope so merciful ye if ye make a litle money glister i hys Baalames eyes ther is nether penaunce nor purgatory nor any fastig at al but to fle to Heaue as swifte as a thought and at the twinklinge of an eye.

¶ And the liues storyes and gestes of men which are contayned in the bible, they reade as thinges nomore pertaynyng vnto them, then a tale of Robyn hode, and as thinges they wot not wherto they serue, saue, to faine false descat and iuggling allegoryes, to stablish their kyngdome withal. And on of ye chefest and fleshliest study they haue, is to magnifye ye sayntes aboue measure and aboue ye truth and wt they poetry to make the greter the euer god made the. And if they fide any ifirmite or sine ascrybed vnto sayntes ye they excuse wt al diligece, diminishyng ye glory of the mercye of God and robbyng wretched synners of all their comfort, and thyncke therby to flatter

ter the sayntes/ and to obteyne their fauour, and to make soreyall aduocates of the euen as a man would obteyne the fauour of worldly tyrauntes as they also fynde the sayntes muche more cruell then euer was any heathen man and more wreke full and vengeable, then the poetes fayne their goddes or their furyes ye torment the soules in hell, yf their euens be not fasted and ther Images visited and saluted wt apater noster (whiche prayer only our lyppes be acquaynted wt, our hertes vnderstandinge none at all) and worshipped with a candel/ and that offeryng of our deuocion in the place which they haue chosen to heare the supplications and mekepetitions of their eyenes theryn

But thou reader thinke of the law of God how that it is altogether spirituall and so spirituall that it is neuer fulfylled wyth dedes or worckes, vntyl they flow out of thyne hert wyth as greate loue toward thy neyghbour, for no deserupynges of hys yea though he be thyne enemy as Chryst loued thee and dyd for thee, for no deserupnge of thyne, but euen when thou waste hys Ennemye. And in the meane tyme throughout all our infancy and chyldehode in Chryst tyll we be growen vp into perfecte men in the full knoweledge of Chryst and full loue of Chryst agayne and of our neyghbours for hys sake, after the ensample of hys loue to vs, remembre that the fulfyllynge of the lawe is a fast fayth in Chrystes bloud, coupled wyth our profession and submyttinge our selues to lerne to do better.

And of the Gospell or promyses whych thou metest in the scrypture, beleue fast that God wyll fulfyll them vnto thee, and that vnto the vttermost tere, at the repentaunce of thyne herte, when thou turnecke to hym and forsakest euell, euen of hys goodnes and fatherly mercye vnto thee, and not for thy flatterynge hym wyth ypocrityfh workes of thyne owne fayninge. So that a fast fayth onely wythout respecte of all worckes, in the forgeuenes both of the synne whych we dyd in time of ignorance wyth lust and consent to synne, and also of al the sinnes whych we do by chaunce and of frayltie, after that we are come to knoweledge and haue professed ye lawe oute of oure hertes. And all dedes serue onelye for to helpe our neibours and to tame our flesh that we fall not to synne agayne, and to exercyse our soules in vertue, and not to make satisfaction to Godwarde for the Synne that is ones paste.

And all other storyes of the Byble, wythoute exception, are the practysynge of the lawe of the Gospell and are true and faythfull ensamples and sure earnest that, God wyll euer so deale wyth vs, as he dyd wyth them, in all in tymptyes, in all temptacyons, and in all lyke cases and chaunces. Wherin ye se on the one syde how fatherly and tenderly and wyth all compassyon GOD entreateth hys electe whych submytte them selues as scollers, to learne to walcke in the wayes of hys lawes and to kepe them of loue. If they forgat them selues at a tyme and wente astraye, he sought them out and fet them agayn wyth all mercye. If they fell and hurte them selues he healed them agayne wyth all compassyon and tenderues of herte, he hath oft brought great tribulacyon and aduersytee vpon hys electe: but all of fatherly loue onely to teache them and to make them se theyr owne hertes and the synnes that there laye hydde, that they myhgt afterward feale hys mercy. For hys mercye wayted vpon them, to rydde them out agayne, as soone as they were learned and come to the knowledge of their owne Hertes: so that he neuer cast man awaye how depe soeuer he had synned saue them onely, whych had first cast the pocke of hys lawes from their neckes, wyth vtter dekpaice and malyce of herte. Whych ensamples how comfortable are they for vs when we be fallen into synne and God is com vpon vs wyth a scourge, that we dispeare not, but repent wyth full hope of mercye after the ensamples of mercy that are gone before. And therfore they were wrytten for oure learynge, as testifyeth Paule Roma. xv. to comforte vs that we myght the better put oure hope, and truste in God, when we see howe mercyfull he hath bene in tymes paste vnto our weake brethren that are gone before, in all their aduersities, neade, temptacions, yea, and horryble synnes into whych they nowe and then fall.

And

¶ And on ỹ other syde, ye se how they that hardened their hertes and synned of malice and refused mercye that was offered them, and had no power to repente perysshed at the latter ende with all confusyon and shame mercylessely.
Whych ensamples are very good and necessary, to kepe vs in awe and drede in tyme of prosperyte as thou mayest se by Paul. i. Cor. that we abyde i ỹ feare of God, and war not wylde & fal to vanities and so synne and prouoke God ād bringe wrath vpon vs.
¶ And thyrdly ye se in that practise, how as god is mercyful and longsufferig, euen so were al his true prophetes and preachers, berig the infirmyties of their weake brethren and their owne wronges and iniuries with al pacyence & longsuferynge, neuer castyng any of them of their backes, vntyll they synned against the holy goost, malycyously persecutyng the open and manyfest trouth: contrarye vnto the ensample of the Pope, which in synninge agaynst God, and to quēche the truth of hys holy spirytе, is euer chefe captayne and trompetblower, to set o ther a worcke, and seketh only his owne fredom, lybertee, priuylege, welth, prosperyte/prosyte/pleasure, passyme, honoure and glory, with the bondage, thraldome, captiuyte, myserie, wretchydnes and vyle subiectyon of his brethren: and in hys owne cause is so feruent, so styffe & cruel, that he wyl not sufferone word spoken against his false maiesty, wyly inuencyons and suglyng ypocrisy to be vnadueuged, though al chrystendom should be set together by the eares: & should cost, he cared not how many hundred thousand their lyues.
How that thou mayest reade Jonas faithfully, & not as a poetes fable, but as an obligation betwene God and thy soule/as an earnest pennye geuen thee of God/that he wyll helpe thee in tyme of nede, yf thou turne to hym, and as the worde of God the onely fode and lyfe of thy Soule, thys marke and note. First counte Jonas the frend of God, and a man chosen of God to testify hys name vnto the world, but yet a yong scoller, weake and rude, after the fashiō of the Apostles: whyle Chryst was yet wyth thē bodyly. Which, though Chryst taught them euer to be meke and to humble them selues, yet ofte stroue amonge them selues, who should be greatest. The sonnes of zebede woulde sytt the one on the ryghe hande of Chryst/and the other on the left. They wolde pray that fyre myght descend from heauen, and consume the Samaritanes.
¶ When Chryste asked: who say men that I am? Peter answered/thou art the sonne of the liuing God, as though Peter had bene as perfect as an aūgel. But immediatly after, when Chryst preached vnto them of hys deathe and passion, Peter was angrye, and rebuked Chryste, and thought earnestly, that he had raued and not wyste what he sayde: as at another tyme, when Chryst was so feruent in healynge of the people/that he had no leysure to eate, they wentte oute to holde hym, supposyng that he had bene belyde hym selfe. And one that caste out Deuelles in Chrystes name, they forbad, because he wayted not on them, so glorious were they yet.
And though Chryste taughte alwaye to forgeue, yet Peter after long goyng to schole, asked whether men shoulde forgeue. vii. tymes, thynckyng that vii. times had bene to muche. And at the laste souper, Peter woulde haue dyed wythe Chryste, but yet within fewe houres after, he denyed hym both cowardlye and shamefully: and after the same maner, though he had so longe herd that no mā myght aduenge hym selfe, but rather turne the other cheeke too, then to smyte agayne: yet when Chryste was in takynge, Peter asked whether it were laweful to smyte with the swearde, and caryed none answere, but layed on rashely.
So that/though when we come fyrste vnto the knowledg of the truth, and the peace is made betwene god and vs, and we loue his lawes and beleue and trust in hym, as in oure father and haue good hertes vnto hym, and be borne anewe i the spirite: yet we ar but children and ponge scolers, weake and feble/and muste haue leysure to grow in the spirite, in knowledg, loue and in the dedes therof, as younge children must haue tyme to growe in their bodyes.

And God oure father and scholemaster feadeth vs and teacheth vs accordyng vnto the capacitee of oure stomackes and maketh vs to growe and ware perfect and tryeth vs, and tryeth vs as gold, in the fyre of temptacions and trybulaciōs. As Moyses wytnesseth Deutero. viii. saynge: Remembre all the waye by whych the Lorde thy God caryed thee, thys. xl. yeares in the wyldernesse, to humble thee, and to tempte or proue thee, that it myght be knowen what were in thyne harte. He brought thee into aduersytye and made thee an hungred and then fedde thee wyth Manna, whych neyther thou, nor yet thy fathers euer knewe of, to teach thee that a man lyueth not by breade onely, but by al that proceadeth out of the mouth of God. For the promyses of God are lyfe vnto all that cleaue vnto them, muche more then is bread and bodyly substaunce: as the iourneye of the children of Israell oute of Egypte into the lande promysed them, ministreth the notable ensamples, and that aboundauntly as doth al the rest of the byble also. Howe be it, it is impossible for flesh to beleue and to trust in the trueth of gods promyses vntyll he haue lerned it in muche trybulacion, after that God hath deliuered hym out therof agayne.
¶ God therfore to teache Jonas, and to shewe hym hys owne harte/and to make hym perfecte, and to instructe vs also by hys ensample, sent hym out of the lande of Israel, where he was a Prophete, to go among the heathen people, and to the greatest and myghtyest citye of the woorlde then, called Niniue: to preache that within. xl. Dayes they shoulde all perysshe for theyr Synnes, and that the Cytie shoulde be ouerthrowen. Which message the frewyll of Jonas had as muche power to do as the weakest harted woman in the worlde hathe power, yf she were commaunded to leape into a tobbe of lyuing Snakes and Adders: as happelye, if God had commaunded Sara to haue sacrificed her sonne Isaac, as he dyd Abraham, she woulde haue disputed wyth hym yer she hadde done it, for though she were stronge ynough, yet many an holy Sayute, coulde not haue found in theyr hartes, but wolde haue dysobeyed and haue runne awaye from the presence of that commaundement of god vo Jonas, if they had bene so strongly tempted.
For Jonas thought on this maner: lo, I am here a prophet vnto Gods people ỹ Israelites. Which though they haue gods worde testyfied vnto them dayly, yet dispice it & worshyp God vnder the likenes of calues and after all maner facions saue after hys owne worde, & therfore are of al nacions the worste and moste worthy of punishment. And yet god for ỹ loue of fewe that are amonge them, ād for hys names sake, sparyth them and defendeth them. Now then shoulde god take so cruel vengaunce on so greate a multitude of them to whome his name was neuer preached to, and therfore are not the tenth parte so euel as these? If I shall therfore go preache so that I lye, and shame my selfe and god therto ād make thē ỹ more to dysprise GOD, and sett the lesse by hym, and to be the more cruel vnto hys people.
And vpon that imagynacyon, he fled from the face or presence of god: that is, out of the contre where god was worshypped in, and from persecutynge of Gods cōmaundement, and thought, I wyl get me another waye amonge the heathen people and be nomore a prophet, but lyue at rest, and out of al combrauunce. Neuertheles the God of al mercy which careth for hys electe children, and turneth al vnto good to them/and smyteth them, to heale them agayn, and killeth them, to make them alyue agayne, and playeth with theym (as a father dothe somtyme with hys yong ignorant children) ād tempteth them, and proueth them, to make thē se their owne hertes preuided for Jonas, how al thinges shoulde be.
¶ When Jonas was entred into the shyppe he layd hym down to slepe & to take hys reste, that is, hys conscience was tossed betwene the commaundment of God/whyche sente hym to Nynyue, and hys fleshlye wysdome, that dyssuaded and counsayled counseled him the contrary and at the last prevailed against the commaundement and caried hym another waye, as a shepe caught betwene.ii. streames/ and as poetes faine the mother of Meliager to be betwene diuers affections, while to auenge hir brothers death, she sought to slaye her owne sonne. Wherepon for very payne and tediousnes, he laye downe to slepe, for to put the commaundement which so gnew and kreate his consience, out of minde, as the nature of al wycked is when they haue synned a good, to seke the al meanes with riot, reuell and packyme / to dryue the remembraunce of sine out of their thoughtes or as Adam dyd, to couer their Nakednesse wyth aproznes of pope holye wozkes.

But God awoke hym oute of hys dreame, and sett hys Synnes before hys face.

¶ For when the Lott had caught Jonas, then be sure that hys synnes came to remembraunce agayne, and that hys conscyence raged no lesse then the waues of the sea. And then he thoughte that he onelye was a Synner ād the heathen that were in the shyppe none in respecte of hym, and thought also, as verely as he was fled from God, that as verely god had cast hym awaye. For the sight of the rodde, maketh the naturall chylde not onelye to see and to knowledge hys faute, but also to, forget al hys fathers olde mercye and kyndnes. And the he confessed his sinne openly, and had yet rather perysshe alone, then that the other shoulde haue perysshed wyth hym for hys sake: and so of very desperacion to haue lyued any lenger, bad cast hym into the sea betymes, except they would be lost also.

¶ To speake of lottes, how farre forth they are lawful, is a lyght question. Fyrst to vse them for the brekyng of stryfe as when parteners, theyr gooddes as equally diuided as they can, take eucrye man hys parte by lot, to auoyde all suspycyon of disceptfulnes, and as the Apostles in the fyrst of the actes, when they sought another to succede Judas the traytoure, a.ii. persons were presente, then to breake stryfe and to satisfye all partyes, dyd caste lottes whether shoulde be admitted. Seynge God to temper them and to take whoome he knewe moste mete, seynge they wyst not whether to preferre, or happely could not al agre. Another, is lawful and in all lyke cases. But to abuse them vnto the tempting of God, ād to compell hym therewyth to vtter thynges wherof we stande in doubte, when we haue notō maundemente of hym so to do as these heathen here dyd, though God turned it vnto hys glorye, can not be but euell.

¶ The heathen shipmen astonyed at the syght of the miracle, feared God prayed to hym, offered sacrifyce and vowed vowes. And I doute not, but that some of the, or happely al, came therby vnto the true knowledge and true worshypping of God, were wōne to god i their soules. And thus god which is infinite mercyfull in al hys wayes, wrought their soules health out of the infirmitie of Jonas, euen of his god wyll and purpose, and loue, wherwith he loued them before the worlde was made, and not of chaunce, as it appeareth vnto the eyes of the ignorant.

☞ And that Jonas was.iii. dayes and.iii. nyghtes in the belye of hys fyshe: we cannot therby proue vnto the Jewes and infydels or vnto any mā, that christ must therfore dye and be buried and ryse agayne. But wee vse the ensample and lykenesse to strength the fayth of the weake. For he that beleueth the one can not dout i the other: in as much as the haude of god was no lesse mightye i preseruing Jonas alyue agaynst al natural possibilitee and in deliuerynge hym sake oute of hys fysh, then in reysynge vp Chryste agayne out of hys sepulchre. And we maye describe the power and vertue of the resurrecyon therby/as Christ him selfe boroweth the symilytude thereto Mat. xii sayenge vnto the Jewes, that cam about hi and desired a signe or a wonder from heauen to certyfy them that he was christ: thys euel & wedlocke breakyng nacyon (which breake the wedlocke of fayth wherw they be maried vnto god, and beleue in their false worckes) seke a signe, but ther shal no signe be geue thē saue ŷ sygne of the prophet Jonas: for as Jonas was.iii. dayes &iii. nyghtes in the belye of the whale, euen so shall the sonne of man be: iii

dayes and.iii. nyghtes in the herte of the erthe. Which was a watch word as we saye and a sharpe threatenyng vnto the Jewes and as muche to saye as thus / ye harde herted Jewes seke a signe: loo, thys shalbe youre sygne, as Jonas was reysed out of the sepulchre of his fyshe and then sent vnto the Niniuites to preache ŷ they shoulde perysh/ euen so shal I ryse agayne out of my sepulchre, and come ād preache repentaunce vnto you. Se therfore when ye se that signe that ye repent or els ye shal surely perysh & not escape. For though the infirmiteys which ye now se in my flesh be a let vnto youre faythes, ye shal yet then be without excuse, when ye se so greate a myracle and so greate power of god shed out vpon you. And so Christe came agayne after the resurrection in hys spyrite ād preched repentaūce vnto them, by the mouth of his apostles and disciples, and with miracles of ŷ holy goost. And al that repented not perysshed shortly after & were for the most part slain wt swerd and the rest caryed away captiue into al quarters of the world for an ensāple, as ye se vnto this daye.

¶ And in lyke maner, sens the worlde begaune, wheresoeuer repentaunce was offered and not receaued, there god toke cruel vengaunce immediatly: as ye se in the flood of Noe in the ouerthrowynge of Sodom and Gomor & al the coutre aboute and as ye se of Egypt, of the Amorytes, Cananites, and afterwarde of the very Israelites and then at the last of the Jewes to, and of the Assyrians and Babylonians and so throughout al the imperes of the worlde.

¶ Gyldas preached repentaunce vnto the olde Brittaynes, that inhabited englād, they repented not, and therfore God sent in theyr enmyes vpon them on eucry syde and destroyed them vp and gaue the lande vnto other naciōs. And greate vengaūce hath bene taken in ŷ lande for sinne ryus that tyme.

¶ Wicleffe preached repentaunce vnto oure fathers not longe sens: they repented not: for their hartes were indurate and their eyes blinded with their own pope holye ryghtuousnesse, wherewythe they hadde made their soules gape agaynste the receauing agayne of the wycked spirite that bringeth. vii. worse then hymselfe wyth hym, and maketh the latter ende worse then the begynnynge, for in opē sines, there is hope of repentaūce, but in holy ypocrysy none at al. But what folowed: they slewe theyr tru and ryght kynge and set vp.iii wronge kynges arowe, vnder whych all the noble bloude was slayne vp and halfe the commās therto, what in Fraunce, and what wyth theyr owne swerde, in fyghtinge amonge them selues for the crowne and the cityes and townes decayed, and the lande brought halfe in to a wyldernesse in respecte of that it was before.

☞ And now Christ to preache repentaunce is ryssen yet ones agāyne oute of hys sepulchre in whych the pope had buryed hym and kepte hym downe wyth hys pyllers and pollares and al disguisynges of ypocrysy, wyth gyle, wyles and falshede and wyth the swerd of al princes, whych he had blynded wyth hys false matchaūdyse. And as I doubte not of the Ensamples that are paste soo am I sure that greate wrath wyll followe, excepte repentaunce turne it backe agayne, and ceasse it.

☞ When Jonas had ben in the fyshes bely a space, and the rage of hys conscience was somewhat quieted and swaged, and he come to hym selfe agayne, and had receaued a lytle hope: the qualmes and panges of desperacyon whyche went ouer hys hert halfe ouercome, he prayed, as he maketh mencion in the text, saiyng: Jonas prayed vnto the Lorde hys God oute of the belly of the fysh. But the wordes of that prayer, are not here set. The prayer that here stādeth in ŷ text is the prayer of prayse & thanckesgeuyng/ whych he prayed and wrote, when he was escaped ād past all ieopardy.

☞ In the ende of whyche prayer he sayethe, I wyll sacrifyce wyth the voyce of thanckesgeuynge and paye that I haue vowed, that sauyng commeth of the lord For verely to confesse out of the herte, that all benefytes come of God, euen oute of the goodnesse of hys mercye, and not deseruinge of our dedes, is the onely sacry-

fyce that pleaseth God, and to beleue that God onlye is the sauiour, is the thynge that all the Jewes bowed in theyr circumcysion, as we in our baptysme. Which vowe Jonas now taught wyth experyence, prompteth to paye. For those outward sacrifyces of beastes, vnto whych Jonas had happelye ascrybed to muche before, were but feble and childish thynges and not ordeyned, that the woorckes of them selues shoulde be a seruyce vnto God, but vnto the people, to put them in remembraunce of thys inwarde sacrifyce of thankes and of fayth, to truste and beleue in God the onelye sauiour. Whych signification whē it was awaye, they were abhominable and beuelysh ydolatrie and ymage seruice: as oure ceremonies and sacramentes, are become now to all that truste and beleue in the woorke of them and are not taughte the signifycacyons, to edifye theyr soules wyth knowelege and the doctryne of God.

¶ When Jonas was cast vpon the lande agayne, then hys wyll was fre, and had power to goo whether God sent hym, and to do what God badde, hys owne ymaginacyons layd apart. For he had bene at a new schole, yea and in a fornace where he was purged of muche refuse and drosse of fleshlye wysdomme, whych resisted the wysdome of God, and led Jonas his wyl contrarye to the wyl of God. For as farre as we be blynde in Adam, we cannot but seke and wyll oure owne profytte pleasure and glory. And as farre as we be taught in the spyrit, we can not but seke and wyll the pleasure and glory of God onely.

¶ And as for thre dayes iourneye of Niniue, whether it were in lenght or to goo rounde aboute it, or thorowe all the streates, I comit vnto the discretion of other, men: But I thyncke that it was then the greatest citie of all the worlde.

¶ And that Jonas went a dayes iourney in the cytye, I suppose he dyd it not in one daye: but weute fayre and easely preachyng here a sermon and there another and rebuked the synne of the people, for whych they must perysshe

¶ And whē thou art com vnto the repentaunce of the Niniuites, there haste thou sure earnest, ꝑ how so euer angry god be, yet he remembreth mercy vnto al ꝑ truly repent and beleue in mercy. Which ensample oure sauiour Christe also casteth in the teeth of the indurate Jewes sayyng: the Niniuites shall rise in iudgement vp this nacion and condempne them, for they repented at the preachyng of Jonas, and beholde a greater then Jonas here, meaninge of him selfe. At whose preachig yea though it were neuer so mightye to perse the herte, and for al his miracles ther to, the harde herted Jewes coulde not repent: when the heathen Niniuites repented at the bare preachinge of Jonas, rebukinge theyr synnes without any miracle at all.

¶ Why: For the Jewes had leuended the spirituall lawe of God, and with their gloses had made it al togethyr earthly and fleshly, and so had set a vayle or couerynge on Moses face, to shadow and darken the glorious brightnesse of his countenaunce. It was synne to stele: but to robbe wedowes howses vnder a coloure of longe prayynge, and to polle in the name of offerynges, and to snare the people vp intollerable constitucions ageinst al loue, to catche their money out of their purses, was no synne at all.

¶ To smite father and mother was synne. But to withdraw helpe from them at theyr nede, for blynd zeale of offeryng, vnto the profyt of the holye phariseis, was then as meritorious as it is now to let al thy kinne choose whether they wyl sinck or swime, whyle thou buyldest ād makest goodly foundaciōs for holy people which thou haste chosen to be thy Christe, for to sowple thy soule with the oyle of theyr swete blessinges, and to be thy Jesus for to saue thy soule from the purgatory of ꝑ bloud that only purgeth synne, with their watchinge, fasting, wolwarde goyng & tyspynge at mydnighte .etc. wherwith yet they purge not them selues from their couetousnesse, pryde, lechery, or any vyce that thou seyest amonge the laye people.

¶ It was greace synne for Christe to heale the people on the Sabbothe daye vnto vnto the glorye of God hys father, but none at all for them, to helpe theyr catel vnto theyr owne profyte.

☞ It was synne to eate with vnwasshen handes, or on an vnwasshen table, or out of an vnwasshen dysh: but to eate out of that puryfyed dish, that which came of bribery, theft and extortion, was no synne at all.

☞ It was exceadynge meritorious to make manye disciples: But to teache them to feare God in hys ordinaunces had they no care at all.

☞ The hyghe Prelates so defended the ryghte of holy Churche, and so feared the people wyth the curse of God and terryble paynes of hell, that no man durste leaue the vylest herbe in hys garden vntithed. And the offeryng and thynges dedicate vnto God for the profytte of hys holye Vicars were in suche estimacion and reuerence, that it was muche greater synne to sweare trulye by them, then to forsweare thy selfe by God: what vengeaunce then of God, and how terryble and cruel dampnacion thynke ye, preached they, to fal on them that had stolen suche holy thynges? And yet sayth Christ, that righteousnes and fayth in keppynge promyse, mercye and indifferent iudgemente, were vtterlye troden vnder fote and cleane dysprysed of those blessed fathers, whych so mightely mayntened Aarons patrimony, & had made it so prosperous, and enuyronned it ād walled it aboute on euery syde wyth the feare of God that no man durst touche it.

¶ It was greate holynesse to garnysh the sepulchres of the Prophetes and to cōdempne theyr owne fathers for slenig of them: and yet were they them selues for blynde zeale of theyr owne constitucions, as ready as theyr fathers to slea who so euer testifyed vnto them the same truth, which the prophetes testified vnto theyr fathers. So that Christ compareth al the ryghteousnes of those holy patriarkes vnto the outwarde bewtye of a paynted Sepulchre, full of stynche and all vnclennesse wythin.

☞ And finally to begyle a mans neyboute in subtyl bargayning and to wrappe & compase him in with cauteles of the lawe, was then (as it is nowe) in the Kyngedome of the Pope. By the reason whereof they excluded ꝑ lawe of loue out of their hertes, and consequently all true repentaunce: for how coulde they repente of that they coulde not se to be synne?

¶ And on the other syde, they had set vp a ryghtwesnesse of holy woorkes, to clese their soules withal: as the Pope sanctifieth vs with holy oyle, holy bred, holy salte holy candels holy dome ceremonies and holy dome blessynges, and with what so euer holynes thou wilt, saue with the holynes of Gods word which onlye speaketh vnto the herte, and sheweth the soule her fylthynes and vnclennesse of synne, ād leadeth her by the waye of repentaunce vnto the fountayne of Christes bloud to wasshe it awaye thorow fayth. By the reason of which false ryghtwysenes they were dysobedient vnto the righteousnesse of god, which is the forgeuenes of synne in Christes bloude and coulde not beleue it. And so thorow fleshly interpretynge the lawe and falce imagined righteousnesse their hertes were hardened & made as stony as clave in an hote furnace of fyre, that they coulde receaue neyther repentaunce nor faith or any moyster of grace at all.

☞ But the heathen Niniuites, though they were blynded with lustes a good, yet were in those .ii. poyntes vncorrupt and vnhardened and therfore with the onelye preachyng of Jonas came vnto the knowledge of their synnes, ād confessed them and repented truly and turned euery man from his euel dedes, and declared theyr sorow of hert and true repentaunce, with their dedes, which they dyd out of fayth & hope of forgeuenes, chastisyng their bodies with prayer ād fastyng, and with takinge all pleasures from the flesh: trustynge as God was angry for their wyckednesse euen so shoulde he forgeue them of his mercie, yf they repented and forsoke their mysse lyuynge.

☞ And in the last ende of all, thou hast yet a goodly ensample of learninge, to se how earthly Jonas is styll for all hys tryinge in the whales bellye. He was so sore displeased because the Niniuites perysshed not, that he was werye of hys lyfe, and wysshed after the death for very sorow and payne, that he had lost the glory of hys prophesyinge, in that hys prophecye came not to passe. But God rebuked hym w a lykenes, sayinge: it greeueth thyne herte for the losse of a vyle shrobbe or sprayе, wherein thou bestowedst no labor or cost, neyther was it thyne handworke: How muche more then shoulde greue myne hert the losse of so greate a Multitude of innocentes as are in Nimiue, whych are all myne handes worcke. Naye Jonas, I am God ouer all, and father, as well vnto the Heathen, as vnto the Jewes, and mercyfull to all, and warne, yet I smyte: neyther threate I so cruelly by any Prophete, but that I wyl forgeue if they repent and aske mercye: neyther on the other syde, what soeuer I promyse wyll I fulfylle it, saue for theyr sakes onely, which truste in me and submytte them selues, to kepe my lawes of very loue, as natural chylderen.

ON thys maner to reade the Scrypture, is the ryght vse therof, and why the holyghoost caused it to be wrytten. That is that thou fyrst seke out the law what God wyll haue thee to do, interpretinge it spiritually wythout glose or couerynge the bryghtnesse of Moyses face, so that thou fele in thyne herte, how that it is dampnable synne before God, not to loue thy neyghboure that is thyne enemye as purely as Chryst loued thee: and that not to loue thy neyghbour in thyne herte is to haue committed already all synne agaynst hym. And therfore but yf that loue be come, thou muste knowledge vnfaynedlye, that there is synne in the best dede thou doest. And it must earnestlye greue thyne herte and thou must wash all thy good dedes in Chrystes bloude, yer they can be pure, and an acceptable sacrifice vnto God, and must desyre God the father for hys sake, to take thy dedes a worth, and to pardonne the imperfectnesse of them, and to geue thee power to do them better and wyth more feruent loue.

And on the other syde, thou must search dylygently for the promyses of mercye whyche God hath promysed thee agayne. Whyche .ii. poyntes, that is to were, the lawe spiritually interpreted, how that al is dampnable synne that is not vnfayned loue out of the grounde and bottome of the herte after the ensample of Chrystes loue to vs, because we be all equally created and formed of one God oure Father and indifferentlye boughte and redemed wyth one bloude, of our sauioure Jesus Chryst: and that the promyses be geuen vnto a repentinge soule that thyrsteth & longeth after them, of the pure and fatherly mercye of god thorow oure faythe only wythout all deseruyng of oure dedes, or merytes of oure workes, but for chrystes sake alone/and for the merytes and deseruinges of hys worcke/deathe and passyons that he suffered altogether for vs and not for him self: whych .ii. poyntes I saye if they be wrytten in thyne hert, are the keies whych so open al the scrypture vnto thee, that no creature can locke thee out, and wyth whych thou shalt go in & oute and fynde pasture and fode euery where.

And yf these lessons be not wrytten in thyne herte, then is al the scrypture shutt vp, as a cornel in the shale, so that thou maiest rede it & cõmon of it & reherse al the stories of it and dispute subtilly and be a profound sophyster, and yet vnderstand not one iote therof.

And thyrdelye that thou take the storyes and lyues whyche are contayned in ỹ byble, for sure and vndoubted ensamples that God so wyl deale wythvs vnto ỹ worldes ende.

Here with Reader fare well and be commended vnto God & vnto the grace of his spirite. And fyrst se that thou stoppe not thyne eares vnto the callynge of God, and that thou harden not thyne herte, begyled with fleshly interpretatinge of the lawe & false imagined and ypocrityth righteousnes, and so the Niniuites ryse vp thee at the day of iudgement and condempne thee.

And

And see dayly, if thou find ought amisse, when thou seist thy selfe in the glasse of Gods worde, thynke it cõpendious wisdome to amende the same betymes, monished and warned by the ensample of other men, rather then to tary vntyl thou be beaten also.

And thirdly, if it shal so chaunce that the wilde lustes of the flesh shal blinde thee and cary thee cleane awaye with theym for a tyme: yet at the later ende, when the god of al mercy shal haue compelled thee on euery side with temptacions, tribulacions, aduersities and combraunce, to bryng thee home agayne vnto thyne owne herte, and to set thy sinnes which thou woldest so faine couer and put out of minde with delectacion of voluptuous passimes, before the eyes of thy conscyence: then call the faithful ensample of Jonas and al lyke stories vnto thy remembraunce, & withe Jonas turne vnto thy Father that smote thee: not to cest thee awaye but to laye a sore plaster and a freatyng plaister vnto the pocke that laye hydan and strong warde to draw the disease oute and to make it appeare, that thou myghtest heale thy sycknes and the daunger therof and come and receaue the healyng plaister of mercy.

And forget not that what soeuer ensample of mercye god hath shewed sens the begynninge of the worlde, the same is promysed thee, yf thou wylte in lyke maner turne agayne, and receaue it as they dyd. And wyth Jonas be acknowen of thy synne and confesse it and knowledge it vnto thy father.

And as the lawe which freteth thy conscience, is thine herte, and is none outward thynge, euen so seke wythin thyne hert the playster of mercye, the promises of forgeuenes in our sauiour Jesus Chryste according vnto al the ensamples of mercy that are gone before.

And wyth Jonas let them that wayte on vanities and seke god here and there and in euerye temple, saue in theyr hertes, go: and seke thou the testament of god in thyne harte. For in thyne harte is the word of the law, and in thyne hert is ỹ word of fayth in the promyses of mercye in Jesus chryst. So that yf thou confesse with a repentinge herte and knowledge and surely beleue that Jesus is Lorde ouer al synne, thou art safe.

And fynally when the rage of thy conscience is ceased and quieted wythe faste fayth in the promyses of mercye, then offre wyth Jonas the offeryнge of prayse and thankesgeuinge: and paye the vowe of thy baptisme, that God only saueth, of his only mercy, and goodnesse: that is, beleue stedfastlye and preache constauntlye that it is god onely that myghteth, and God onely that healeth: ascribynge the cause of thy tribulacion vnto thyne owne synne, and the cause of thy delyuerance vnto the mercye of God.

And beware of the leuen that sayth, we haue power in our free wyll before the preachynge of the Gospell to deserue grace, to kepe the lawe, of congruitee, or good to be vnryghteous. And saye wyth John in the fyrst: that as the lawe was geuen by Moyses, euen so grace to fulfyll it, is geuen by Chryste. And when they saye oure dedes wyth grace deserue heauen, saye thou wyth Paule Ro. vi. that euerlastyng lyfe is the gyfte of God thorow Jesus Chryst our Lord and that we be made sonnes by fayth Jhon. i. and therfore heyres of God wyth Chryst. Rom. viii. And saye that we receaue all of God thorow fayth that foloweth repentaunce, and that we do not oure woorckes vnto God but either vnto our selues to slaye the synne that remayneth in the flesh and to ware perfect, other vnto our neyghbours which do as muche for vs agayne in some other thynges. And when a man exceedeth in gyftes of grace let hym vnderstande that they be geuen hym as wel for hys weke bretheren as for hym selfe: as though all the breade be committed vnto the panter yet for hys fellowes wyth hym, whych geue the thanckes vnto theyr lorde and recompense the panter agayne wyth other kynde seruice in theyr offices. And when they saye that Chryste hath made no satisfaction for the synne we do after our baptysme, saye thou wyth the doctryne of Paule, that in oure baptisme we receaue the merites of Chrystes death, through repentaunce and faith, of whych two, baptisme is the sygne. And though when we synne af kraltie after our baptisme we receaue the sygne no more, yet we be renewed agayne, through repentaunce and fayethe in Chrystes bloude, whyche twayne, the sygne of Baptisme euer contynued amonge vs in baptysinge our younge chylderen, doth euer kepe in mynd and call vs backe agayne vnto oure profession if we be gone astraye, and promiseth vs forgeuenes. Neyther can actuall Synne be washed awaye wyth oure workes, but wyth Chrystes bloude: neyther can there be anye other sacrifyce or satisfaction to Godwarde for them, saue Chrystes bloude. For as muche, as we can do no workes vnto God, but receaue onelye of hys mercye wyth oure repentinge, fayth, through Jesus Chryste oure Lorde, and onely Sauiour: vnto whome, and vnto hys holye spirite, that onely purgeth, sanctifyeth and washeth vs in the innocent bloude of oure redemption, be prayse for euer.

The Ende of the Prologe vpon the Prophete Jonas.

The Boke of

The Prophete Jonas.

Of the flyght of Jonas when he was sent to preach. Of tempest arysyth and casteth him in the sea for his disobedience.

The fyrst Chapter.

THe word of the lorde came vnto Jonas, the sone of Amithai saynge: Aryse and get thee to Niniue that greate cytye: & preache vnto them how that their wickednesse is come vp before me. And Jonas made hym ready to flie vnto * Tharsis, from the presence of the Lorde, and gat hym downe to Joppa: where he found a shyppe ready for to go vnto Tharsis. So he payed his fare, and went aborde that he myght go with them vnto Tharsis, from the presence of the Lorde. But the Lorde hurled a great wynde into the sea, and there was a myghtye tempeste in the sea: so that the shyppe was in ieopardy of going in peces. Then the mariners were afrayde, and cryed euery man vnto his God: and the gooddes that were in the shyp, they cast into the sea, to lighten it of them. But Jonas gat hym vnder the hatches, where he layd hi downe and slombred.

So the Master of the shyppe came to hym, and sayde vnto hym: why slomberest thou? Up, call vppon thy God: yf God (happely) wyll thyncke vpon vs, y we perysh not. And they sayde one to another: come, let vs caste lottes: y we may knowe, for whose cause we are thus troubled. And so they cast lottes, and the lott fell vpon Jonas.

Then sayde they vnto hym: tell vs for whose cause are we thus troubled? what is thyne occupacion? whence commest y? what countreman art thou? and of what nacyon? He answered them: I am an Hebrewe, and I feare the Lorde God of heauen whych made both sea and dry land. Then were the men exceedyngly afrayed and sayde vnto hym: why diddest thou so? (for they knewe that he was fled frō the presence of the Lorde because he had tolde them) and sayd moreouer vnto hi: what shal we do vnto thee, that the sea maye ceasse from troublynge vs? (for y sea wrought and was troublous): he answered them: take me and caste me into the sea, so shall it let you be in rest: for I wote it is for my sake, that thys greate tempest is come vpon you.

Neuertheles the men assayed with rowynge, to bryng the shyppe to lande, but it wold not be, because y sea wrought so and was so troublous agaynst them. Wherfore they cryed vnto the Lorde, & sayde: O Lord let vs not perish for this mans death, neyther laye thou innocent bloude vnto oure charge, for thou / O Lorde, haste done, euen as thy pleasure was.

So they toke Jonas, and cast hym into the sea, and the sea lefte ragyng. And the men feared the Lorde exceadyngly, doing sacrifyces & making vowes vnto the Lorde.

The Notes.

* Vnder the name of Tharsis (as somethinck) is sygnifyed some sea that was farre of, and whose voiage was verye longe: so that the saylers therin, coulde se no thynge but the sea and the ayre.

Joppa is an hauen of Jewry, where was sometime a goodly cytie of whych there remayneth nowe but a porcion.

Jonas is swalowed of a whale. The prayer of Jonas.

The .ii. Chapter.

BVt the Lorde prepared a greate fysche, to swalow vp Jonas. So was Jonas in the bely of y fysh, three dayes and three nyghtes. And Jonas prayed vnto the lorde his god out of the fishes bely, and sayd: In my trouble I called vnto the lorde, and he herde me out of the bely of * hel, I cryed / and thou herdest my voyce. Thou haddest cast me downe depe in the middest of the sea / and the flonde compassed me aboute: yea all thy waues and roules of water wente ouer me, I thought that I had ben cast awaye out of thy sight: but I wil yet agayne loke towarde thy holy temple.

The waters compassed me, euen to the very soule: the depe laye about me and the wedes were wrapte about myne head. I went downe to the botome of hylles, and was barred in wyth earthe for euer. But thou, O lord my god, hast brought vp my lyfe agayne out of corruption. When my soule faynted wit-me, I thought vpon the Lorde: and my prayer came into thee, euen in to thy holy temple. They that hold of vayne vanyties, will forsake his mercy. But I wyl do the sacrifyce with the voyce of thankesgeuinge/and wyl pay that I haue vowed: for why: saluacō cometh of the Lord. And the Lorde spake vnto the fysh, and it cast out Jonas agayne vpon the drye lande.

The notes.

* The Scripture speaketh of hell commenly as of a place comen for all them that gōo downe into the earth, as into a graue, or to the depe of the see. &c. as ye haue in Genesi and in the Psalmes.

¶ Jonas is sent againe to Niniue. The repentaūce of the kinge of Niniue.

The.iii. Chapter.

1 THen came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jonas againe, saiynge: vp, and get thee to Niniue that greate cytie, & preache vnto them the preachinge which I bad thee. So Jonas arose, and went to Niniue at the lordes commaundement. Niniue was a greate cytie vnto God, namelye, of thre dayes iourney.

B And Jonas went to, and entered into the cytie: euen a dayes iourney, and cryed, saiynge: There are yet .xl. dayes and then shal Niniue be ouerthrowen And the people of Niniue beleued god and proclamed fasting, and arayed themselues in *sacke cloth, as wel the greate as the small of them. And the tidinges came vnto the kinge of Niniue, which arose out of his seate, and dyd his apparel of, & put on sackcloth, and sat him C downe in asches.

And it was cryed and commaunded in Niniue, by the auctorite of the king & hys lordes, saiynge: Se that nether mā or beast/oxe or shepe taste ought at all: and that they neyther fede nor drynke water: but put on sack cloth both man and beest/and cry mightely vnto god: yea se that euery mā turn from hys euel waye, and from the wickednes, that he hath in hande.

D Who can tel God maye turne, and repent, and cease from his fierce wrath, that we perish not. And whē god sawe their workes, how they turned frō their wycked wayes: he repented on the euel, which he sayde he wolde do vnto them and dyd it not.

The notes.

* The arayeng them in sackcloth was an outward signe of greate repentaunce, as in ii. Reg. iii. ¶ Jonas is reproued of God.

The. iiii. Chapter.

THerfore Jonas was sore displeased & angry. And he prayed vnto A the Lorde, and sayde: O Lord, was not thys my saiynge (I praye thee) when I was yet in myne owne contree. Therfore I hasted rather to flee vnto Tharsis, for I know well ynough that thou arte a mercyfull God, full of compassion, longe sufferyng, and of greate kindnes, and repentest when thou shouldest take punishement. And nowe, O Lord take my life fro me (I beseech thee) for I had rather dye then liue. Then sayd the Lorde: arte thou so angrie? And Jonas gate him out of the cytye, and sate downe on the east syde therof: and there made him a boothe, and sate vnder it in the shadow/tyl he myght se, what should chaunce vnto the cytye.

And the Lorde God prepared a wylde vine, which sprang vp ouer Jonas, B that he myght haue shadowe aboue his heade, to deliuer him out of his payne. And Jonas was exceadinge glad of the wylde vyne.

But vpon the nexte morowe agaynste the spryng of the daye. The Lorde ordened a worme, which smote ye wylde vine, so that it wythered awaye. And when the sunne was vp, God prepared a feruente east wynde: and the Sūne bett ouer the heade of Jonas that he fainted agayne and wyshed vnto his soule, that he might dye, and sayde: it is better for me to dye then to lyue. And god sayd vnto Jonas: C Art thou so angry for the wylde vyne? And he sayde: yea very angry am I euē vnto the death. And the Lord sayd: thou hast cōpassion vpō a wylde vyne/ wher on thou bestowedst no labour, nor madest it growe: whyche sprange vp in one night and perysshed in an other: and should not I then haue compassion vpō Niniue that great cytee, wherin there are aboue an. ¶ The ende of the prophecy of Jonas.

¶ The Boke of

The Prophete Micheas

¶ Of the destruction of Samaria because of theyr Idolatrye.

The fyrst Chapter.

A Verba Domini quę factum est.

THys is the woorde of the Lorde, that came vnto micheas the morastite/in the dayes of Jothan, Ahas and Jehezekiah kinges of Juda: whych was shewed hym vpō Samarya and Jerusalē. Heare all ye people, marcke thys well O earth, and all that therin is: Yea the Lorde God hym selfe be wytnes an ōge you, euen the Lorde from hys holy temple. For why: beholde the Lorde shal goo oute of hys place, and come downe, and trede vpon the hygh thynges of the erth. The mountaynes shall consume vnder him and the valleys shal cleue asunder: lyke as waxe consumeth at the fyre, and as the waters runne downward. And all B thys shalbe for the wickednes of Jacob and the synnes of the house of Israell.

But what is the wyckednes of Jacob: Is not Samaria? Which are the hye places of Juda: is not Jerusalem? Therfore I shall make Samaria an heape of stones in the feld, to lay about the vinyarde: her stones shal I caste in to the valeye, and discouer her foundacyons.

All her Images shalbe broken downe and all her wynninges shalbe brente i the fyre: ye al her Idoles wyl I destroy for why: they are gathered oute of the hyre of an whore / and into an whores hyre shall they be turned agayne.

Wherfore I wyl mourne and make lamentacion, bare and naked wyl I go: I must mourne lyke ye dragōs / & take sorow as the Estriches: for their wounde is past remedy: and why: it is come in C to Juda, and hath touched the porte of my people at Jerusalem alreadye.

Wepe not, leste they at Geth perceaue it.

Thou at Betaphra, welter thy selfe i ye dust and ashes. Thou that dwellest at Sephir get thee hence with shame. The proude shall boost nomore for very sorowe: and whyther neyghboure shall take from her what she hath. The rebellyous cyty hopeth, that it shal not be so D cruel: but for al that, the plage shal come from the Lorde, euen in to the porte of Jerusalem. The greate noyse of ye charettes shal feare them, that dwell at Lachis, whych he is an occasyon of ye synne of ye daughter of Sion, for in her came vp the wyckednesses of Israel. Yea she sent her curriers in to the lande of Geth. The houses of lyes wyll dysce aue the kings of Israel. And as for thee (O ye ye dwellest at Morasta) I shal bryngc a possessioner vpon thee, and the plage of Israel shal reach vnto Odolla. Make the balde, & shaue the, because of thy tender chyldren: Make thee cleane bald as an Aegle, for they shalbe caryed awaye captyue from thee.

The tenynges agayn̄ the sinful people.

The. ii. Chapter.

OWo vnto them, that imagyn to do harme, & deuyse vngracyous nesse vpon their beddes, to perkourme it in ye clere daie: for their power is agaynst God. When they couet to A haue land, they take it by vyolence, they robbe men of their houses.

Thus they oppresse a mā for his house, and euery man for his heritage. Therfore thus sayeth ye Lorde: Beholde agaist this housshold haue I deuysed a plage, wherout ye shal not plucke your neckes: Ye shal nomore go so proudly, for it wyl be a perlous tyme. In that daye shal thys terme be vsed, & a mourninge shalbe made ouer you on this maner: We be vtterly desolate, the portion of my people is translated. Who han wyl he parte vnto vs the lande, that he hathe taken from vs?

Neuertheles there shalbe no man to B diuide thee thy portion in the congregacion of the Lorde. Cush, hold youre tong (saye they.) It shal not fal vpon thys people, we shal not come so to confusion, sayeth the house of Jacob. Is the spirite of the Lorde so cleane awaye? or is he so myndes?

reproue the peope of farre countres in stede of their swerdes they shall make plowshares, and sythes of their speares.

One people shal not lyfte vp a sword agaynst another, yea they shal nomore learne to fyghte: but euery man shall sy syt vnder hys vyneyarde and vnder his figge tree and no man to fraye him away:

for the mouth of the Lord of hostes hath spoken it. Therfore, wher as al the people haue walked euery man in the name of his owne God, we wyll walcke in the na me of oure God for euer and euer. At ỹ same tyme, sayeth the Lorde, wyl I ga ther vp the lame & the outcastes, & suche as I haue chastened: and wyl geue isshue vnto the lame, and make of ỹ outcastes a great people: and the Lorde him selfe shalbe their kyng vpon the mount Siō from this time forth for euermore. And vnto thee (O thou tower of Eder, thou F stronge holde of the daughter Syon) vnto the shal com: euen the lordshippe and kyngdome of the daughter Jerusa lem. Why then art thou now so heuy: is ther nō kyng in thee: are thy counsailers away that thou art so payned, as a wo man in her trauayle? And nowe (O ỹ doughter Syon) be sory, let it greue ỹ as a wife labo'yng w chyld: for now must thou get thee out of ỹ cytie, and dwel vp on that playne feld. Yea vnto Babylon shalt thou go, ther shalt thou be delyue red, and there the Lorde shal lōse thee from the hande of thyne enemyes.

Now also are ther many people ga
G thered together agaynst ỹ, saynge: what Sion is cursed, we shal se oure lust vpō her. But they know not the thoughtes of the Lorde they vnderstande not hys counsel, that shal gather them together as the sheues in the barne. Therfore get the vp, O ỹ daughter Sion, and throsse out the corne: For I wyll make thy horne yron and thy clawes brasse that thou mayest grynde many people: their goodes shalt thou appropriate vnto the Lorde and their substaunce vnto the ru ler of the whole worlde.

Of the destruction of Jerusalem.

The .v. Chapter

AFter that shalt thou be robbed thy self, O thou robbers
I doughter: they shal lay siege agaynste vs and smyte the iudge of Israell wyth a rod vpon the cheke.

And thou Bethlem Ephrata art litle amonge the thousandes of Juda. Out of thee shall come vnto me, which shal be the gouernour in Israel: whose out goynge hathe bene from the begyn nyng, and from euerlasting. In the meane whyle he plagety them for a sea son, vntyl the time that she which shal children of Israel. He shall stande fast and geue kode in the strength of ỹ lord and in the vertoy of the name of ỹ lord his god: and whē they be converted, he shalbe magnifyed vnto ỹ karthest par tes of the worlde.

Then shall there be peace/ so that the B Assirian maye come in to oure lande, & treade in our houses. We shall bryngе vp * seuen shepherdes and viii. princes vpon them: these shal subdue the lande of Assur with the swearde, and the lāde of Nymrod with their naked weapes.
Thus shal he deliuer vs from the Assi rian / when he commeth within oure lande, and setteth hys kote within oure borders.

And the remnaunt of Jacob shalbe amonge the multitude of people, as ỹ dewe of the Lorde, and as the droppes vpon the grasse, that taryeth for no mā and waiteth of no body. Yea ỹ residue of Jacob shalbe amonge the Gentiles and the multitude of people, as ỹ lion C amonge the beestes of the wodde / and as the Lions whelpe amonge a flocke of shepe: which (when he goeth thorow) treadeth downe/ teareth in peces / and there is noman that can helpe. Thyne hand shalbe lift vp vpō thine enemies, and thyne aduersaries shall perish al.

The tyme shal come also, sayeth the Lord/ that I wyl take thyne horses frō thee/ and destroye thy charettes. I wil breake downe the cyties of thy land, & ouerthrow all thy stronge holdes. All witchcraftes will I rote oute of thyne hand, there shal no mo sothsayynges be within thee. Thyne Idoles & thyne Images will I destroye out of thee: so that thou shalte nomore bowe thy selfe vnto the worckes of thyne owne han des. Thy groues will I pluck vp by the rotes, and breake downe ỹ cities.

Thus

Thus wyl I be auenged also, vpon all the Heathen that wyll not heare.

¶ An exhortation to heare the iudgement agaist Israel beyng vnkinde. What maner of Sacrifices do please god

¶ The.vi. Chapter.

HEarken now what the Lord saieth: Up, reproue ẏ mountaynes, & let ẏ hilles heare thy voyce. O heare the punishment of the Lorde, ye mountaynes, and ye mightye foundacions of the earth: for the lorde wyll reproue his people, and reason with Israel. O my people what haue I done vnto thee: or wherin haue I hurt thee: geue me answere. Because I brought thee from the lande of Egipte and deliuered thee out of ẏ house of bondage: Because I made Moyses Aarō and Miriam to leade thee: Remembre (O my people) what Balach the kinge of Moab had immagened against thee and what answere that Balaā the sonne of Beor gaue hym from Sethim vnto Galgal that ye maye know the louyng kindnesses of the Lorde.

What acceptable thynge shall I offer vnto the Lord: shal I bowe my knee vnto the hye god: Shall I come before him with the Burnte Offerynges and with calues of a yeare olde: Hathe the lorde a pleasure in many thousand cāmes, or innumerable streames of oyle: Or shal I geue my fyrst borne for myne offences, and the frute of my body for the synne of my soule: I wyl shew thee, O man, what is good, and what ẏ lord requyreth of thee: Namely, to do, right to haue pleasur in louing kindnes, to be lowly, and to walke with thy god: that thou mayest be called a scyttle of the lord and that thy name maye be ryghteousnesse.

Heare (O yee tribes) who woulde els geue you suche warnynge: Shoulde I not be displeased for the vnryghteous Good in the houses of the wycked, and because the measure hys mynyshed: Or shoulde I iustyfye the Faulse Balaunces and the bagge of deceatful weyghtes among those that be full of ryches vnryghteously gotten, where thr cytezyns deale with falshead, speake lyes, & haue disceatfull tunges in ther mouthes.

Therfor I wyll take in hande to punysh thee, and to make thee desolat, because of thy sinnes. Thou shalt eate, and not haue ynough: yea thou shalt bring thy self downe. Thou shalt fle, but not escape: and those that thou woldest saue wyl I deliuer to the sword. Thou shalt sowe, but not reape: thou shalte presse out oliues but oyl shalt thou not haue to anoynte thy selfe withall: thou shalt treade out swete must, but shalt drynke no wyne. Ye kepe the ordinaunces of Amri, & all the customes of the house of Ahab: ye folow their pleasures, therfor wyll I make thee wast, āð cause thy inhabyters to be abhorred, O my people: & thus shalte thou beare thyne owne shame.

A complaynt of the lytle numbre of the ryghteous. Against the cruelty ought we not to hold with oure greatest frendes.

The.vii. Chapter

WO is me: I am become as one, that goeth a gleanyng in the harueste. Ther are no grapes to eate, yet wold I fayne (wt all my haste) haue of the best frute. There is not a godly mā vp on earthe, there is not one righteous amonge men. They labour all to shede blode & euery man hunteth his brother to death: yet they sayethey do wel whē they do euel. As the prynce wyl, so sayth the iudge: ẏ he maye do him a pleasure agayn. The great man speaketh what his hart desireth & the iudges allow hym. The best of them is but as a thistle & the most righteous of them is but as a brear in the hedge. But when the daye of thy preachers cōmyth ẏ thou shalt be visited: than shal they be wasted awaye. Let no man beleue his frend, nor put his confidence in a prince. Kepe the porte of thy mouth from her that lieth in thy bosome: for the sonne shal put his father to dishonoure, the daughter shal ryse agaynst her mother, the daughter in lawe against her mother in lawe: & a mans foes shalbe euē they of his owne Neuertheless I wyl loke vp vnto the Lorde, I wyll patiently abyde god my Sauioure: my God shall heare me. O thou enemye of myne, reioyce not at my fall, for I shal get vp agayne and and though I syt in b* darcknesse, yet the Lorde is my lyght. I wyl beare the punishmente of the Lorde (for why I haue offended hym) tyl he sytt in iudgement vpon my cause & se that I haue right. He wyl bring me forth to ẏ light & I shall se his righteousnesse.

She that is myne enemy shal loke vpon it & be confounded, whiche now saieth: Wher is thy Lord God: Myne Eyes shal beholde her, whan she shall be troden downe as ẏ claye in ẏ stretes The tyme wyll come, that thy gappes shalbe made vp, & ẏ law shal go abrode and at ẏ tyme shal they come vnto thee frō Assur vnto the strōg cytyes, & frō ẏ strong cytyes vnto ẏ ryuer: from ẏ one sea to ẏ other, from the one mountayn to the other

Not wythstandyng ẏ land must be wasted, because of them that dwel therin and for the frutes of their owne Imaginacyons. Therfor fede thy people wt thy c* rodde, the flocke of thyne heretage whiche dwel desolate in ẏ wodde that they maye be fedd vpon the moūt of Charmell, Basan and Galaad as afore tyme. Marueluous thynges wyl I shewe them, lyke as when they came oute of Egypt, Thys shall the Heathense, and be ashamed for all their power, so that they shall d* laye their hande vpō their mouth, and stop their eares. They e* shal lycke the dust lyke a serpent, & as the wormes of the earth ẏ tremble in their holes. They shalbe afrayde of the Lord our God, & they shal feare thee.

f Wher is there suche a God, as ẏ that pardonest wyckednes, & forgeuest ẏ offences of the rēnaūt of thine heretage: He kepeth not his wrath for euer. And why: his delite is to haue compassion: he shal turne agayne, and be mercyful to vs: he shal put downe oure wycked nesses, & cast all our synnes in to the bottome of the see.

Thou shalt kepe thy trust with Jacob and thy mercye for Abraham, lyke as thou haste swore vnto oure Fathers longe agoo.

The fyrste Chapter.

THis is ẏ heuy burthen of Nynyue, whiche Nahum of Elchos dyd wryte as he sawe it.

The Lorde is a gelous God, and a taker of vengeaūce yea, a taker of vengeaunce is the lord, and wrothful. The Lorde taketh vengeaunce of hys enemies, and reserueth displeasure for his aduersaries. The Lorde sufferethe longe, he is of great power and so innocent, that he leaueth no man faultes before him. The lorde goeth forth in tempeste and stormy wether, the cloudes are ẏ dust of his fete. When he reproueth the sea, he driethit vp, and turneth al the floudes to drye lande. Basan is desolate, Charmel & the pleasure of Libanus wasteth awaie The mountaynes tremble for him, the hilles consume. At the syght of him, the earth quaketh: yea the whole world, & al that dwel therin. Who maye endure before his wrath: Or who is able to abyde his grimme displeasur: His anger taketh on like fyre, and the hard rockes burst in sunder before him.

Ful gracious is the lord, & a strong holde in the tyme of trouble, he knoweth them that put their trust in hi: whē the floud runneth ouer, and destroyeth the place, ād whē the darckenesse foloweth styll vpon hys enemyes. What do ye Imagyne then agaynst ỹ Lorde

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde:
Lett them be as well prepared, yea and hewen downe, and passe away. And as destroye thee. And now wyl I breake wylt not heare?

How long shall I before me, power ouer goeth right: for the lawe is toorne in peces, and there can no right iudgement go forth. And why? the vngodlye is more set by then the righteous: this is the cause, ỹ wrōg iudgement proceadeth. Beholde amōg

For lo, I wyl rayse vp the Caldees. ỹ

¶ Their horses are swyfter then the cattes of the mountayne, and byte sorer then the wolues in the euenig. Their horsmen come by greate heapes from farre, they fle hastely to deuour as the Aegle. They come all to spole: out of them commeth an east wynd, which bloweth & gathereth their captyues lyke as the sandde. They shall mocke the kynges, and laughe the prynces to scorne. They shal not set by any stronge holde, for they shal laye ordinaunce agaynst it, and take it. Then shal they tak a fresh corage vnto them, to go forth and to do more euel and so ascribe that power vnto their God.

But thou O Lord my God, my holy one thou art from the begynnyg, therfor shall we not dye. O Lorde, thou hast ordened them for a punisment, and set the to reproue the myghtye. Thyne eyes are clene, thou mayst not se euell, thou canst not behold the thing ỳ is wycked. Wherfore the doest thou loke vpon the vngodly, and holdest thy tunge, when the wycked deuoureth the man that is better the hi selfe. Thou makest meas the fyshe in sea, and lyke as the creppyng beestes that haue no gyde. They take vp al with ther angle, they catch it in their net, and gather it in their parne: wher of they reioise & are glad. Therfor offre they vnto theyr net, & do sacrifyce vnto their parne: because that therowe it their porcyon is become so fat, and their meate so plenteous. Wherfore they cast out their net agayne, and neuer cease to slaye the people.

¶ Of the vision of the prophet. Agaynste pollynge, couetousnes, and Idolatry.

The.ii. Chapter.

I Stode vpon my watch, and set me vpon my bulwarcke, to loke and se what he wolde say vnto me, and what answere I shoulde geue hym that reproueth me. But the Lord answered me, and said: Write the vysyon planely vpon thy tables, that who so commeth by, mape rede it: for the visyon is yet farre of for a tyme, but at ỳ last it shall come to passe, and not fayle.

And though he tary, yet wayte thou for hym, for in very dede he wyll come, and not be slacke. Beholde, who so wyll not beleue, his soule shall not prospere: but ỳ iuste shal lyue by his faith. Lyke as the wyne discraueth the dronckard, euen so the proude shal fayle and not endure. He openeth his desyre wyde vp as the hell, and is as vnsaciable as death. Al heathen gathereth he to hym, and heapeth vnto him al people.

But shal not all these take vp a prouerbe agaynst him, and mocke him with a by worde, and saye: wo vnto hym that heapeth vp other mens goodes. Howe longe wil he lade him selfe with thycke claie. How sodenly wil they stand vp, that shal byte, and awake, that shal terre thee in peces. yea ỳ shalt be their praie. Seing thou hast spoiled many heathe, therfore shall the remnaunt of the people spoile thee: because of mens bloud, & for the wronge done in the lande, in the cytie and vnto all them that dwell ther in.

Wo vnto hym, that couetously gathereth euel gotte goodes ito his house: that he may set his nest on hie, to escape from the power of misfortune.

Thou hast dyuised the sham of thyne owne house, for thou hast slayne too muche people, and hast wyl fully offended: so ỳ the very stones of the wall shal crye out of it, and the tymber that lyeth betwixt the joyntes of the bylding shal answer.

Wo vnto hym, that bylideth the towne wyth bloude, and maytayneth the Cytye wyth vnrighteousnes. Shall not the Lorde of hoostes bringe thys to passe, that the labors of the people shalbe brent wyth a greate fyre, and that the thynge wherupon the people haue wayted the selues, shall be lost. For the erth shalbe ful of knowledg of the Lordes honor, lyke as the waters that couer the sea.

Wo vnto hym that geueth hys neyghbour drincke, to gee hym wrothfull displeasure for hys dronckennes: that he maye se hys pryuities. Therfor wt shame shalte thou be fylled, in steade of honour. Drincke thou also, fyl thowe slöber wt al: for the Cuppe of ỳ lordes right hande shall compasse thee aboute, and shamfull spewynge in teade of thy worshipp for the wrong that thou hast done in Lybanus, shal ouerwhelme the, & the wyld beastes shal make thee afrayed: because of mens bloude, and for ỳ wrong done in the lande, in ỳ cytie/ and vnto al suche as dwell therin.

What help then wyl the Imagedo, whō the workeman hath fashioned? Or the vayne cast Image, wherin because the craftesman putteth his trust, therfor maketh he domme Idols. Wo vnto hym, ỳ sayeth to a pece of wod: arise, and to a domme stone: stand vp. For what instruction maye suche one geue? Behold it is layed ouer with gold and syluer, & ther is no brethin it. But ỳ Lord in hys holy temple is he, whom althe worlde should feare.

¶ Prayer of the prophet Abacuc for the ignorannte.

The.iii. Chapter

O Lorde, when I hard speke of ỳ, I was afrayed. The workes that thou hast taken in hand, shalt ỳ perfourme in his tyme, O Lorde: & whē thy tyme commeth, thou shalt declare it. In thy very wrath thou thinckest vpō mercy. God commeth from Theman, and the holy one from the mōut of Pharan. Selah. His glory couereth the heauens and ỳ earth is ful of his prayse. His shin is as the sonne/ and beames of lyght go out of his handes, ther is his power hyd. Destruccion goethe before him, and burnyng cressettes go from his fete. He standeth, & measureth the earth. He loketh, and the people consume awaie, the mountaynes of ỳ world fall downe to poulder, & the hilles are fayne to bowe them selues/ for his goinges are euerlastyng and sure.

I sawe, that the pauilyons of the Mozians and the tentes of the lande of Madian were vexed for wrynes. Was thou not angry, O Lord, in thy waters: was not thy wrath in that floudes, and thy displeasure in the see-pes/ when thou sateste vpō thyne horse, and whē thy charetes had ỳ victory. Thou shewdst thy bowe openly, like as thou haddest promised with an othe vnto the trybes. Selah.

Thou dydest deuyde ỳ waters of the earth. When the mountaynes sawe thee, they were afrayed, the Water Streame went awaye: the depe made a noyse at the lyftyng vp of thyne hande. The Sunne and Moone remayned styl in their habytacion. Thyne arowes went out glysteryng, and thy speares as the shyne of ỳ lyghtyng. Thou trodest downe ỳ lande in thine anger and diddeste throsshe the Heathen in thy displeasur. Thou camest forth to helpe thy people, to helpe thyne anoynted. Thou smottest downe ỳ head thee houle of ỳ vngodly, & dyscouerdest his foūdacions, euē vnto ỳ necke of him. Selah. Thou cursest his sceptres, the captayne of his men of warre: whiche come as a stormy wynd to scatze me abrode & are glad when they may eat vp the poore secretly. Thou makest awaye for thy ne horses in the see, euen in the moudd of greate waters. When I heare this, my body is vexed, my lippes tremble at the voyse ther of, my bones corruppte, I am afrayed wher I stand. O/ that I myght rest in the daye of trouble that I might go vp vnto our people, which ar alredy prepared.

For the syggetrees shall not be grene, and the vynes shall beare no frute. The labour of the olyue shal be butlost and the lande shal bryngе no corne: the shepe shalbe taken out of the folde, and there shalbe no catel in the stalles. But as for me, I wyl be glad in the lord, and wyll reioyce in God my Sauioure. The Lord God is my stegthe, he shal make my fete as the fete of herttes: and he which geuethe the victorye/ shall bryngе me to my hye places/ syngynge vpon my Psalmes.

Threatening ꝑ against Juda & Jerusalem because of their Idolatry.

¶ The.i. Chapter.

THis is ꝯ word of the Lord which came vnto Sophony ꝯ sone of Chusi, ꝯ sone of Gedoliah, the sone of Amariah ꝯ sone of Hesekiah in ꝯ time of Josiah ꝯ sune of Amon king of Juda. I wil gather vp all thinges in the lande (saith ꝯ lord) I wil gather vp mā & beest I wyl gather vp ꝯ foules in ꝯ ayre & the fish in the sea (to ꝯ great decay of the wicked) & wil vtterly destroy ꝯ mē out of the land, saith the lord. I wyl stretch out mine hand vpō Juda, & vpon al suche as dwel at Jerusalē. Thus wyl I rote out ꝯ remnaut of Baal frō this place, & the names of the Remurins & prestes: yea & such as vpō their house toppes worship & bowe thē selues vnto ꝯ hoste of heaue: whiche sweare by the lord, & by their Malchom also: whych starte a back frō ꝯ lord, and neyther seke after ꝯ lord, nor regard him. Be stil at ꝯ presence of the Lord god, for the day of ꝯ lord is at hande: yea ꝯ Lorde hath prepared a slain offring, & called his gestes therto. And thus shall it happē in ꝯ day of the Lordes slayn offring: I wil visit ꝯ princes, the kynges chyldrē, & all suche as weare straung clothig. In the same day also wil I visit al those, ꝯ trede ouer the threshold so proudly, which fyll their lordes house ẅ robbery & falshod. At ꝯ same time (saith the lord) there shal be herd a great crye frō ꝯ fish port, & an houlig frō ꝯ other port, & a great murther frō the hylles. Howle ye ꝯ dwel in ꝯ myl, for all the marchaūt people ar gone & all they ꝯ were ladē ẅ syluer, are roted out.

At the same tyme wyl I seke through Jerusalem wyth lanternes, & visit thē that continue in their dregges, and say in their hertes: Tush, the Lord wyl do neither good nor euel. Their goddes shal be spoyled, and their houses layed wast. they shal builde houses, and not dwel in them: they shal plant vynyardes, but not drynke the wyne therof. For the greate daye of the Lorde is at hande, it is hard by, & commeth on a pace. Horrible is the tydynges of the Lordes daye: then shall the gyauntes cry out: for that daye is a daye of wrath, a daye of trouble, & heuinesse, a daye of vtter destruction & mysery/ darke and gloomyng daye, a cloudy & stormy daye, a daye of the noyse of trōpettes and shawmes, against the stroug cities & hie towres. I wil bring ꝯ people into soch vexation, that they shall go about like blynd men, because they haue synned against the Lorde. Their bloud shalbe shed as the dust/ād their bodies as the myre. Neither their siluer nor their gold shalbe able to deliuer them in ꝯ wrothful daie of ꝯ lorde but ꝯ whole lād shalbe cōsumed thorow ꝯ fire of his gelousy: for he shal sone make clene rydda ce of all them that dwel in the land.

¶ He moueth to returne to god, propheſying vnto the one destruction, & to the other, deliuerance.

¶ The.ii. Chapter.

GOmtogither & gather you, O froward people: or the thing go forth ꝯ is cōclu ded, & or ꝯ time be passed awaie as ꝯ dust: or ꝯ fearefull wrath of ꝯ lord com vpō you, yea or the date of the lordes sore displeasure cō vpon you. Seke the lord al ye meke herted vpō erth, ye ꝯ worke after his iudgmēt seke righteousnes, seke lowlynes: ye maie be defēded i ꝯ wrothful daie of the lord. For Gaza shalbe destroied, & Ascalon shalbe laied wast. They shal cast out Asdod at ꝯ none daye & Accaron shalbe pluckte vp by ꝯ rotes. Woo vnto you ꝯ dwel vpō ꝯ sea coost, ye murtherous people: ꝯ word of ꝯ lord shal com vpō you. O canaā ꝯ lād of the Philistines, I wil destroy the, so ꝯ ther shal no mā dwel i ꝯ any more: & as for ꝯ sea coast, it shalbe hirdmens cotages & shepe folde: yea it shalbe a porcio for such as remaine of ꝯ house of Juda to fede ther vpō: in ꝯ houses of Ascalō shal they rest toward night for ꝯ lord their god shal visitthē, & turne awai ther captiuitie. I haue herde ꝯ despit of Moab, & ꝯ blasphemies of the childrē of Ammō how they haue shāfully intreated my people, & magnifyed thē selues vpō in ꝯ borders of their lāde. Therfore as truly as I liue (saieth ꝯ lorde of hostes ꝯ god of Israel) Moab shalbe as Sodom, & Ammō as Gomorra: euē dorthorn hedges * salpytes & a perpetual wilderncs. The residue of my folk shal spoyle them: ꝯ remnaunte of my people shal haue them in possession.

Thys shall happen vnto them for their pryde, because they haue dealt so shamefully with the Lord of hoostes people, & magnyfied them selues aboue them. The lord shalbe grime vpon them, and destroy al the goddes in ꝯ land. And all the Isles of ꝯheathen shal worship him euery man in his place.

Ye Mozians also shal perish with my swerde: yea he shal stretch oute hys hand ouer the nozth, and destroy Assur. Ja for Niniue, he shal make a desolate. drye and wast. The flockes and all the beastes of the people shal lye in the myddest of it. pellycanes and storckes shall abyde in the vpper postes of yt, foules shal synge in the windowes, and rauens shal sit vpō the balckes/ for the bozders of Cedre shalbe ryuen downe. Thys is the proude and careles citye, that saide in her herte: I am, ād ther is els none. WOo to the abhominable, fylthy and cruel cytie: whych wil not heare, nor be reformed. Her trust is not ꝯ lord nether wyl she holde her to her god. UPon the.xxiiii. daye of the.vi. moneth, in the seconde yeare of Kynge Darius, the xxi. daye of the seuenth moneth, came the worde of the Lorde by the prophet Aggeus, saiynge: speake to Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel prince of Juda/ and to Jesua the sonne of Josedech the hye preest and to the residue of the people, and saye: Who is left among you, that sawe this house in her fyrst beawtye?

But what thinck ye now by it? Is it not in your eyes, euē as though it were nothig? Neuertheles be of good chere O Zorobabel (saieth the Lord) be of good comforte, O Jesua þ sonne of Josedech þ hie preest: take good hartes vnto you also, al ye people of the land, sayeth the Lord of hostes and do accordyng to the worde (for I am wyth you, sayeth the Lorde of hostes) lyke as I agreed wt you, when ye came out of þ land of Egypte: and my spyrete shalbe amōge you, feare ye not.

For thus sayth the Lord of hostes. yet once more wyl I shake heauen and earth, the sea and the dry land yea I wil moue all Heathen, and the comforthe of all Heathen shall come, and so wyll I fyll this house wyth honoure, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes. Aske the preestes concerning the law, & say: if one bere holy flesh in his cote lappe & wt hys lap touch the bred, potag, wyne, oyl or eny other meat shal he be holy also? The preestes answered and sayde: No. Then sayd Aggeus Now yf one beyng defyled with a dead carcase, touch eny of these: shal it also be vnclene? The Preestes gaue answer and say: yea, it shalbe vnclene. Then Aggeus answered and sayd: euē so is this people and this nation before me/ sayeth the Lorde: and so are al þ workes of their handes, yea & all þ they offre is vnclen.

And now (I praye you) consyder frō this daye forth/ and how it hath gōe wt you afore: or euer ther was laid one stōe vpon another in the temple of þ Lorde: þ whē ye came to a corne heape of xx. bushels, ther were scarse ten: & þ whē ye cāe to þ wyne presse for to poze out. L. potes of wyne, ther were scarce. xx. For I smote you with heate/ blasting and hayl stones in all the laboures of your handes: yet was there none of you, þ would turne vnto me, saieth the lord. I wil ouerthrow the chaarettes and those that syt vpon them, so þ both horse and man shal fal downe, euery mā thorow his neighbours sweard. And as for thee, O Zorobabel (sayeth the Lord of hoostes) thou sonne of Salathiel my seruaunt: I wyl take thee, saieth þ Lord at the same tyme/ & make thee as a seale for I haue chosen thee, saieth the Lord of hoostes.

Then sayd he vnto me: Thys is the curse, that goeth forth ouer the wholeearth: for all theues shalbe iudged after this boke, & all swerers shalbe iudged accordyng to the same, I wyll bryng it forthe (saith the Lord of hostes) so that it shall come to the house of the chefe, and to the house of him that falsely sweareth by my name: & shall remayne in hys house, and consume it, wyth the tymbre and stones therof. Then the Aungell that talked wyth me, went forth, and sayde vnto me: lyft vp thyne eyes and see, what thys is that goeth forth. And I sayde: what is it? He answered: thys is a measure going out. He sayed moreouer: Euen thus are they (that dwell vpon the whole earth) to loke vppon. And beholde there was lyft vp a talent of leade: and lo, a woman sate in the myddest of the measure. And he sayd: thys is wyckednes. So he caste her in to the middest of the measure, and threwe the lompe of led vp into an whole.

Then lyft I vp myne eyes, and loked: and beholde, there came out .ii. women and the wynde was in theyr wynges (for they had wynges lyke the wynges of a storcke) & they lyft vp the measure betwyxt the earth and the heauen. Then spake I to the Aungell that talked wyth me: whyther wyll these beare the measure? & he sayd vnto me: vnto the lãd of Synear, to buyld them an house: whych when it is prepared, the measure shall be set ther in his place.

MOreouer I turned me, liftynge vp mine eyes, and loked: and beholde there came .iiii. charettes out from betwyxte two hylles, which hylles were of brasse: In the fyrst charet were reade horse, in the seconde charett were blacke horse, in the thyrde charet were whyte horse, in the fourthe Charette were horses of diuers colours and stronge. Then spake I & saide vnto the aungel that talked with me: O Lord, what are these. The angel answered and sayde vnto me. These are the .iiii. windes of the heauen, which become forth to stand before the ruler of all thee earth. That with the blacke horse wente in to the lande of the north, and the whit followed them, and the speackled horses went forth toward the south. These horses were very strong, and went out, and sought to goo and take their iourneye ouer the whole earth. And he sayde: get you hence, and go thorow the worlde. So they went thorowe out the worlde. Then cried he vpon me, and spake vnto me, sayenge: beholde, these that go towarde the north, shal styll my wrath in y north countre.

Th: .vii. Chapter.

IT happened also in the fourth yeare of kinge darius, that the word of the Lorde came vnto zachary in the fourthe daye of the .ix. moneth, which is called * Casleu: what tyme as Sarasar, and Rogomelech and the men that were withe them sent vnto Bethel for to praye before the Lord: and that they shoulde saye vnto y preastes, whiche were in the house of the Lord of hoostes, and to the Prophetes: Shoulde I wepe in the fyfte moneth, & abstayne, as I haue done now certaine yeares? Then came the word of y Lorde of hoostes vnto me, saying: Speake vnto al the people of the lande, and to the prestes, and saye: when ye fasted & morned in the v and vii. moneth (nowe this .lxx. yeares) did ye fast vnto me? When ye ate also and dronke, did ye not eate & drinke for your owne selues? Are not these the wordes, which y lord spake by his prophtes afore tyme, when Jerusalem was yet inhabited and welthy, she & the cyties rounde about her: when there dwelt men, both toward the south and in the playne countrees?

Zach.viii.c Ezech.xxxii.c

And the word of the Lord came vnto zachary, sayeng: Thus sayeth y lord of hoostes: Execut true iudgemente: shewe mercy and louinge kindnes, euery man to hys brother. Do the wyddowe, the fatherles, the straunger, and poore no wronge: And let no man ymagyn euell agaynste hys brother in hys herte. Wherfore the Lorde of Hostes was very wroth at them. And thus is it come to passe, that lyke as he spake, and they would not heare: euen so they cryed, and I woulde not heare (sayth the Lorde of Hoostes) but scattered them amonge all Gentyles, whom they knewe not. Howle ye Fyrre trees, for the Cedre is fallen, yea all the proude are waſted awaye. Howle (O ye okes trees of Baaſan) for the mighty ſtronge wodde is cutt downe. Men maye heare the Shepherdes mourne for their glory is deſtroyed. Men maye heare the lyons whelpes roare for the pryd of Jordane is waſted awaye.

Thus sayeth the Lord my God: fede the shepe of the slaughter, whiche shalbe slayne of those ꝑ possesse them: yet they take it for no synne, but they that sell thē saye: The lord be thanked I am rich: yea their owne shepherdes spar thē not. Ther fore wyll I nomore spare those that dwel in the lande (sayeth the Lord) but lo, I wyll deliuer the people, euery man in to his neyghbours handes and in to ꝑ hād of his king: ꝑ they maye smyte the land, and out of their handes wil not I deliuer them.

I my selfe fedde the slaughter shepe (a poore flock vtterly) and toke vnto me two staues: ꝑ one I called louyng mekenesse, the other I called wo, and so I kept the shepe. Thre shepherdes destroyed I in one moneth, for I myght not awaye with thē, neither had they eny delyt in me Then sayde I: I wyll fede you nomore, the thing that dyeth, let it dye: ād ꝑ wyll perishe let it perish/and let the remnaūt eate/ euery one ꝑ flesh of his neyghbour. I toke also my louig meke staf & brake it that I myght disanul the couenante, which I made w̄ al peple. And so it was broken in that daye.

Then the poore symple shepe that had a respecte vnto me, knewe therby, that it was the worde of the Lorde. And I sayd vnto them: yf ye thinked it good, bringe hyther my prince: if no, then leaue. So they waged downe .xxx. Syluer pens, ꝑ valu that I was prysed at. And the Lorde sayd vnto me: Take to the also ꝑ of a foolish shpherde: for lo, I wyll raise vp a shepherde in the lande, which shall not seke after ꝑ thinges that be lost, nor care for suche as go astraye: he shal not heale the wounded, he shall not norishe the thing that is whole: but he shal eate the flesh of suche as be fat, and tear their clawes in peces.

O Idoles shepherde / that leaueth the flocke. The sweard shall come vpon his arme, and vpon his ryghte eye. Hys arme shalbe clean dried vp, and his right eye shalbe sore blynded.

The heuy burthen, whych the Lorde hath deuised for Israel. Thus sayth the Lord/ whych spred the heauens a broade, layde the fount ation of the earth, ād geueth man the breth of lyfe: beholde, I wyll make Jerusalē a cuppe of surfet vnto al the people that are round aboute her: yea Juda hym selfe also shalbe in the seage against Jerusalem. At the same tyme, wyll I make Jerusalem an heuy stone for al people, so that all suche as lyft it vp, shalbe tore ne & rente/ & all the people of the earthe shalbe gathered together against it.

In ꝑ daye, sayeth the Lorde, I wyll smyte al horses abal hed, and those that ryde vpon them, to be out of their wittes. I wyll open myne eyes vpon the house of Juda, and smyte al the horses of the people, with blyndnes. And the princes of Juda, shal saye in their hertes: The inhabiters of Jerusalem, shal geue me consolacion in the Lord of hostes their God. In that tyme wyl I make ꝑ princes of Juda, lyke an hote burnyng ouen w̄ wodd, and lyke a cresset of fyre amōg the straw: so that they shal consume al the people rounde about them, both vp on the ryghte hande and the lefte. Jerusalem also shalbe inhabited again: namely in the same place, wher Jerusalē standeth.

The lord shal preserue the tentes of Juda, lyke as a fore tyme: so that ꝑ glory of the house of Dauid, and the glory of the cytesins of Jerusalem shalbe but lytle regarded, in comparyson of ꝑ glory of Juda. In that daye shal the lorde defend the cytyns of Jerusalem: so that the weakest then among them shalbe as Dauid: and the house of Dauid shalbe lyke as gods house, and as the Aungell of the lord before them.

At the same tyme wyl I go about to destroy all such people as come against Jerusalem. Moreouer, vpon the house of Dauid, and vpon the citisens of Jerusalem, wyl I powre oute the spryte of grace and prayer, so that they shal loke vpon me, whome they haue pearsed: and they shall bewepe hym, as men mourne for their onely begotten sonne: yea and be sory for hym, as mē are sory for their fyrst chylde.

Then shal there be a greate mournynge/ at Jerusalem, lyke as the lamentacion at Adremmon, in the felde of Magadon. And the lande shal bewayle euery kinred by them selues: the kinred of ꝑ house of Dauid/ them selues alone, and their wyues by them selues: The kinred of the house of Nathan them selues alone, and their wyues by them selues: The kindred of the house of Leuy, thē selues alone, & their wiues by them selues: The kired of ꝑ house of Semei thē selues alone, & their wyues by them selues: In lyke maner, al the other generacios, euerychone by them selues alone, and their wyues by them selues.

In that tyme shal the house of Dauid and the cytyens of Jerusalem haue an open wel, to wash of sinne ād vnclenes. And then (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) I wyl destroye the names of Idoles oute of the lande: so that they shal nomore be put in remembraūce.

As for the false Prophetes also and the vncleane spryte, I shall take them out of the lande: So that yf any of thē prophecy any more, his owne father ād mother that begat hym, shal saye vnto hym: Thou shalt dye, for thou spakest e lyes vnder the name of the lord: yea, his owne father and mother that begat hi, shal woūd hi, whē he prophecyeth. And then shal those prophetes be cōfoūded e uery one of his visiō whē he prophecieth nether shal they weare sackclothes any more to disceane mē wal. But he shalbe faie to saye: I am noo Prophete, I am an husbondman, for so am I taught by Adā fro my youth vp.

And yf it be sayde vnto him: how came these woundes thene i thyn handes? He shal aneswere: Thus am I wounded in the house of myne owne frendes.

Aryse/ O thou swearde, vpon my shepherde, and vpon the Prynce of my people, sayeth the Lord of hostes: Smite the shepherde/ & the shepe shalbe scatred abrode, ād so wyl I turne myne hande to the lytle ones. And it shall come to passe (sayth the Lorde) ꝑ in all the lande two partes shalbe roted out, but the thyrde parte shal remayne therin. And the same thyrd parte wyll I bringe thorowe the fyer, and wyll clense them, as the syluer is clensed: yea and tryed them lyke as golde is tryed. Thē shal they cal vpō my name. and I wyl heare them: I wyl saye: it is my people. And they shall saie: Lord, my God.

¶ The wasting of the church vnder the figure of Jerusalem. Of the kyngdoms of the lorde.

The .xiiii. Chapter

Beholde, the daye of ꝑ Lorde commeth, that thou shalt be spoyled and robbed: for I wyl gather together all the Heathen, to fight agaynste Jerusalem: so that ꝑ citie shalbe wonne, the houses spoyled, & the wemen defiled. The half of the citie shal go awaye in to captyuite, ād the residue of ꝑ people shal not be caried out of the citie. After ꝑ shal the Lord go forth to fight against those Heathen, as men vse to fight in the daye of battel. Then shal his fete stande vpon the mount oliuet, that lieth vpō the east side of Jerusalē. And the mounte oliuete shal cleue in two, eastward & westward, so that ther shalbe a greate valley: ād the half mout shal remoue toward ꝑ north, and the other towarde the south. And ye shal fle vnto the valley of my hylles; for thy valley of the hilles shal reach vnto Asal. Ye fle shal ye, like as ye fled for ꝑ earth quake in the dayes of Osiah kige of Juda. And the Lord my God shal cō, ād al sayntes w̄ him. In that daye shal it not be light, but colde and frost. This shalbe that specyal daye, which is knowē vnto the Lorde: nether daye nor nyght, but about ꝑ euenig time it shalbe lyght.

In that tyme shal there a* waters of lyfe runne out from Jerusalem: the halfe parte of them b* towarde the east see, & the other halfe towarde the vttermoste see, ād shal contynue both somer & witer. And ỹ Lord hym self shal be kinge ouer all the earth.

At that tyme shal there be one Lorde only, and hys name shalbe but one. Mē shall go aboute the whole earth, as upō a felde: from Gybea to Remmon, ād frō the south to Jerusalem. She shalbe set up, and inhabyted in her place: frome Ben Jamyns porte, vnto the place of ỹ Fyrste Porte, and vnto thee Cozner porte: and from the tower of Hananeel, vnto ỹ kynges wyne presses. Ther shal men dwel/and there shalbe no more curssinge, but Jerusalem shalbe safely inhabyted. This shalbe the plage, wherwith the Lorde wyl smyte al people, that haue fought agaynste Jerusalem: Namelye, there flesh shall consume away/though they stand upō there feet: ther eyes shal be cozrupt in ther holes, and their tunge shal consume in ther mouth.

In that daye shall the Lorde make a great sedycion among them, so that one man shal take a nother by the hande, ād laye his handes vpon the handes of his neyghbour. Juda shal fyght also agaist Jerusalē, and the goodes of al ỹ Heathē shalbe gathered together round about: golde and syluer and a very great multitude of clothes. And so shal this plage go ouer horses, mules, camels, asses, & al the beastes that shalbe in the host, lyke as ponder plage was. Euerye one that remayneth then of all the people, which came agaynst Jerusalem, shal go up ye arly, to worshyp the kinge (euen ỹ Lord of hostes) & to kepe ỹ fest of tabernacles And loke what generacyon vpon earth goth not up to Jerusalem, for to worshippe the kinge (euen the lord af hostes) vpon the same shal come no rayne. Yf the kynred of Egypte go not up, and come not, it shal not rayn upō thē nether.

This shalbe ỹ plage wherwith ỹ Lord wyl smyte al Heathen, that come not up to kepe the feast of tabernacles: yea thys shalbe the synne plage of Egipte and the synne plage of all people, that goo not up to kepe the feast of tabernacles.

At that time shall the riding geer of the horses be holy vnto the Lorde, and thy kettels in the Lordes house shall be lyke the basens before the aultar: yea all the kettels in Jerusalem and Juda, shal be holy vnto the lorde of hoostes: and al they that slaye offeringes, shal come take of them, and bight them therin. And at that tyme there shall be no mo Cananites in ỹ house of the Lorde.

¶ The fyrst Chapter.

THe heuye burthen, which ỹ Lord sheweth agaynst Israel by Malachy. I haue loued you, sayeth the Lord: ād yet ye saye: wherin hast thou loued vs? Was not Esau Jacobs brother, sayeth the Lorde? yet haue I loued Jacob, and hated Esau: yea I haue made hys hylles waste, and his heritage a wildernes for dragons. And though Edom sayde, wel, we are destroyed, we wyll go buylde vp agayne the places that be wasted: yet (saieth the lord of hostes) what they buylded, that brake I downe: so that it was called a cursed lande, and a people/whome the Lorde hath euer bene angry w al.

Youre eyes haue sene it, ād ye youre selues confesse, that the Lorde hathe brought the land of Israel to greate honor. Should not a sonne honour his father, and a seruaunt hys master? If I be now a father/wher is mine honoure? If I be the lord, where am I feared? saieth the lorde of hostes.

Now to you prestes, that despyse my name. And yf ye saye: wherin haue we dispised thy name? In this, that ye* offer vncleane bred vpon myne aultar. And if ye wyl saye: wherin haue we offered any vncleane thyng vnto thee? In this that ye saye: the aulter of the Lorde is not to be regarded. If ye offer the blynde, is not that euell? And yf ye offre the lame & sicke, is not that euell? Yea offer it vnto thy prince, shal he be content with the, or accepte thy person, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes?

And nowe make your prayer before god, that he maye haue mercy vpon vs: for suche thinges haue ye done. Shal he regarde your personnes, thincke ye, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes? Yea what is he among you, that wyl do so much/as to shutt the dores, or to kyndle the fyre vpon myne aultar for naught? I haue no pleasure in you, sayeth the Lorde of hostes: and as for the meate offering, I wyl not except it at your hande. For frō the rysyng vp of the sonne to the goyng downe of the same, my name is greate amōg the Gentyles: yea, in euerye place shall there sacrifice be done/and a clene meate offeryng offered vp vnto my name: for my name is greate among ỹ heathen, sayth the Lorde of hoostes. But ye haue vnhalowed it, in ỹ ye saye, ỹ aultar of ỹ Lorde is not to be regarded, and b* ỹ thing that is set therupon, not worthye to be eaten.

Now saye ye: It is but laboure and trauayle, & thus haue ye thought scorne at it (sayeth the Lord of hostes) offering robbery, yea the lame and the syeke. Ye haue brought me in a meate offeryng, shulde I accepte it of your hand, sayeth the Lord? Cursed be the dissembler/which hath in his flock one that is male and when he maketh a bowe, offereth a spoted one vnto the Lord. For I am a greate kyng (sayeth the lorde of hostes) and my name is fearefull amonge the heathen.

¶ Threatenings against the Prestes being seducers of the people,

The.ii. Chapter

NOwe (O ye prestes) this cammaundement toucheth you: if ye wyl not here it, nor regarde it, to gyue the glori vnto my name, sayeth the Lorde of hostes, I wyl sent a course upō you, and wyl curse youre blessynges: ye curse them wyl I, yf ye do not take heded. Behold, I shal corrupte youre sede, and cast donge in your faces: euen the dong of your solempne feastes and it shal cleue fast vpon you. And ye shal knowe, ỹ I haue sent this commaundement vnto you: that my couenaunt whyche I made w Leui, myght stand, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes.

I made a couenaunt of life ād peace w him: this I gaue hym, that he myght stand in awe of me: and so he dyd feare me, and had my name in reuerēce. The lawe of treuth was in his mouth, and ther was no wickednesses found in his lippes. He walked with me in peace & equite, and dyd turne many one away from ther sinnes. For the prestes lippes shoulde be sure knowledge, ỹ men may seke the lawe at his mouthe, for he is a messaunger of the Lord of hostes. But as for you/ye are gone clene out of the waye, and haue caused the multytud to be offended at the lawe: ye haue broken the couenaunt of Leui, sayeth the Lord of hostes. Therfor wyl I also make you to be despised, ād to be of no reputatiō among al ỹ people: because ye haue not kepte my wayes, but be partial i ỹ lawe. Haue we not al one father? hath not on God made vs? why doth euery on of vs then despise his owne brother, & so breke ỹ couenaunt of oure fathers? Now hath Juda offended: ye the abhominacyō is don in Israel & in Jerusalem, for Juda hath defiled the Sanctuary of the Lord, whiche he loued, and hath kept ỹ daughter of a strong God. But the Lorde shadestroye the man that doth this (yea both ye master & ye scoler) oute of ye tabernacle of Jacob, with hi that offereth vp meat offeringe vnto the lord of hostes. Now haue ye brought it to this point againe, that the aulter of the Lorde, is couered with teares, wepyng, and mourning: so that I wyl nomore regarde the meate offeryng, nether wil I receaue or accept any thinge at your handes. And yet ye saie: wherfore? Euen because that where as the lord made a couenaunt betwyxt thee & thy wyfe of thy youth, thou hast despised her: Yet is she thine owne companion and maried wyfe.

B So dyd not *the one, and yet had he an excelent spyrete. What dyd then ye one? He sought the sede promysed of god. Therfor loke wel to your spyrete, and let no man dyspyse the wyfe of his youth. If thou hatest her put her away, sayeth the Lord god of Israell & geue her a clothing for the scorne, sayeth the lorde of hostes. Loke well then to youre spyrete, and dispise her not. Ye greue the Lorde with your wordes, and yet ye saye: wherwith al haue we greued hym? In this, that ye saye: All that do euell are good in the syght of god, and such e please him. Or els where is the god ye punisheth?

Of the day of the Lord and of Elias.

The .iii. Chapter.

A Beholde, I wyll sende my messaunger, which shall prepare the waye before me: & the Lord whom ye woulde haue, shal soone com to his temple, yea euen the messaunger of the couenaunt whom ye longe for.

Beholde, he commeth, sayeth ye lord of hostes. But who maye abyde the day of his commyng? Who shall be able to endure, whe he appeareth? For he is like a goldsmythes fyre / and lyke washers sope. He shall syt hym downe to trye & so clense the syluer, he shal purge ye chyldren of Leuy, and purify theym lyke as gouilde and syluer: that they maye bring meate offeringes vnto the lord in righteousnes. Then shall the offeringe of Juda and Jerusalem be acceptable vnto the Lord, lyke as from the beginnynge, and in the yeares afore tyme.

I wyl come and punish you, and I my self wyll be a swyfte wytnes agaynst the witches, agaynst the aduouterers, agaynst false sweaters: ye & agaynst those that wrongfully kepe backe the hyre lynges dewty: which vex the wyddowes and the fatherlesse, and oppresse ye straunger, and feare not me, sayeth the Lord of Hostes. For I am the Lorde ye chaunge not / & ye (O children of Jacob) wyll not leaue of: ye are gone away, fro myne ordinaunces, and kepe not the tyme of your forefathers haue ye not kepte them.

B Turne you now vnto me, & I wyl turne me vnto you, sayeth the Lord of hostes ye saye: Wherin shal we turne? Should a man vse falshed and disceat vnto God as ye vse falshed and disceate with me? yet ye saye, wherin vse we disceate with the? In Tithes & heaue offerenges. Therfor are ye cursed with penury / because ye dyssemble with me / all the sorte of you.

Bringe euery Tithe in to my barne, that ther maye be meate in my house: & proue me vnto al (sayth the lord of hostes) yf I wil not open the wyndowes of heauen vnto you, and poure you out ablessyng with plenteousnesse. Yee I shal rebuke thee consumer for youre sakes, so that he shall not eate vp ye frute of your grounde, nether shall the vynyarde be baren in the felde, sayeth the Lord of hostes: In so moch that al people shal saie, that ye be blessed, for ye shall be a plesaunt lande, sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

Ye speake hard wordes agaynst me, sayeth the Lord. And yet ye say: What haue we spoken agaynst the? Ye haue sayde.

C It is but lost labour to serue God: What profit haue we for keppynge hys commaundementes, and for walkynge humble before the Lorde of hooste? Therfor may we say, that the proud are happie, and that they which dele vngodlynesse, are set vpe: for they tempte God / and yet escape.

But they that feare God, saye thus one to an other, the Lorde considereth and heareth it. Yea it is before hym a memoriall boke, written for such as feare the Lord, and remembre his name. And in the day that I wyl make (saith ye Lorde of hooste) they shalbe myne owne possession: and I wyll fauoure the, lyke as a man fauoureth hys owne sonne, that doth hym seruice. Turne you therfore and consydre what difference is betwixte the righteous and vngodlye: betwyxte hym that serueth god, and hi that serueth hym not.

For make, the daye commeth that shall burne as an ouen: and all the proude / yea and al suche as do wickednes, shalbe strawe: and the daye that is for to come, shall burne them vp (sayeth the Lorde of hooste) so that it shall leaue them neyther rote nor braunche.

But vnto you that feare my name shal the Sonne of tyghteousnes aryse, and healthe shallbe vnder hys wynges: ye shall go forth, and multiplye as the fatt calues. Ye shall treade downe the vngodly for they shalbe like the ashes vnder the soles of youre fete, in the daye ye I shall make, sayeth the Lorde of hooste.

Remembre the lawe of Moyses my seruaunte, whyche I committed vnto hym in Oreb for all Israell, wyth the statutes and ordinaunces. ¶ Behold I wyl send you Elyas the Prophete: before the comminge of the daye of the great and fearefull Lord.

He shall turne the hartes of the fathers to theyr chyldren. and the hartes of the chyldren to their fathers, that I come not and smyte the earth with curse.

¶ To the Reader

IN consideracion that the bokes before, ar found in the hebrew tonge, receued of al men: that the other followyng, whych are called Apocripha (because they were wont to be redde, not openly and in comen, but as it were in secret and aparte) are nether found in the hebrew nor in the Calde: in whyche tonges, they haue not of longe bene wrytten (in lesse then it were haply the boke of sapiēce) wherupon it were now very hard to repayre and amende them: And that also they are not receaued nor taken, as legitymate and leafull, as well of the Hebrues, as of the whole Church, as S. Hyerome sheweth: we haue separate them, and set them alyde, that they may ẏ better be knowen: to thintent that men maye know of which bokes, witnes ought to be receued and of which not. For the sayde sayut Hyerome, speakinge of the boke of Judyth (which is apocripe) sayth, that the auctorite therof is not estimed worthye and sufficient, to confyrme and stablish the thynges that lyght in disputacion. And generally of al the bokes called Apocrypha, he sayeth, that men maye reade them to the edyfyyng of the people, but not to confyrme and strengthen the doctryne of the Churche. I leaue out here the lawe (as they cal it) of Canon. c. Sancta Roma na vb. distinct. where he shewed his iudgement. Lyke wyse the glose of. c. Canons vbi, distinct. whych sayth, that men reade them, but not in generall: asthoughe he should saye, that generally and thorouly they are not alowed. And not wythout a cause: For that they haue bene corrupted and falsifyed in many places, it appeareth sufficiently by Eusebius in hys boke called hystoria Ecclesiastica: whych thyng is easy to be knowen, euen now a dayes in certen poinctes, namely in the bokes of ẏ Machabees, whose second boke sayut Hyerome confesseth that he founde not in the hebrewe, by the meanes wherof it is become vnto vs the more suspecte, and the lesse receaued.

In lyke maner is it of the thyrd and fourth boke of Esdras, which S. Hyerom protesteth that he wold not haue translated/esteming them for dreames: where as Josephus yet in his boke of his Antiquities declareth ẏ sume of the matter after ẏ maner of a story, as wel of ẏ boke of Machabees as of the. iii. of Esdras although he esteame the bokes compyled from the raigne of kyng Artaxerses vnto hys tyme, to be Apochripha.

Wherfore then, when thou wylt mayntayne any thing for certen, rendring a reason of thy faythe, take hede to procede therin by the lyuyng and pyththy Scriptures, folowyng. S. Peter/which sayth: He that speake, let him speke as thoughe he spake the word of god. He sayeth the word of god, as a thing most treue & certen, opened by the prophetes and Apostles, inspired with the holy gost: of whome we haue wytnes moare cleare then the daye. Lawers hauing greate desyre to confyrme and stabish their opinyons by the lawe of man, saye, ẏ they shame to speake without lawe: How muche more feare and dreade then ought he to haue, that sayeth he is a Christian, the which holdeth not hym selfe, or resteth not in the lawes of the lyuyng god: But in mennes inuencyons, iudgyng of al thynges according to the same, and leauyng to an vncerte imaginacyon and phantasy. Let vs therfore that are buylded on the foundacyon of the holy prophetes and Apostles/and one the head cerner stone (one which they them selues were founded, on which they preached/that is Jesus Christ, the sure stone) leaue the thynges that are vncerten to folow the certen: holding vs and resting vs in the, and fastenig our ancre there, as in a sure place. For our christen faith consisteth not in douteful thynges, but in playn and most certen assurance, and in most tru preseruacio, taken and confyrmed by infallyble verite. In which god graunte vs to walcke perpetually, to the intent by infallyble verite. In which god graunte vs to walcke perpetually, to the intent that accordig to it (fulfyllyng hys holy wyll in vs, and settyng aside al inuencios contrary vnto hym) we maye lyue to his honoure, and to the edyfyeg of his church.

¶ The thyrde boke of Esdras.

¶ Josias holdeth passeouer. After his deth, is Jehoahas his sonne made kyng in his stede whō ỹ kynge of Egipt putteth out, & setteth in his brother Joachim. Jerusalem is destroyed, & Sedechiah taken.

¶ The fyrst Chapter.

AND Josias helde the feaste of Easter in Jerusalem vnto the Lorde, and slewe the Passe ouer, the .xiiii. daie of the fyrst moneth. He set the preestes also in ordre (according to their dayly courses) being araied in long garmentes in the temple of the Lord. And he spake vnto the Leuites the holye ministers of Israell/ that they shoulde halow them selues vnto the lorde, to set the holy arcke of the lorde, in the house that kynge Salomon the sonne of Dauid had buylded, and sayde: Ye shal no moare beare the Arke vpon youre shulders. Now serue your lord, and take the charge of hys people of Israell, after your villages ād your trybes: accordig as kyng Dauid, the king of Israel hath ordened, and accordig as Salomon his sonne hath honorably prepared: ye loke that ye al do seruice in the temple, accordinge to his ordynge and destribucion of the principal men, which are appoynted out of the trybes, to do seruice for ỹ children of Israel. Kyl the Passeouer & prepare offerynges for your brethren & do accordinge to ỹ cōmaundement of ỹ Lord, which he gaue vnto moses. And vnto the people that was founde. Josyas gaue .xxx. thousande of sheepe lambes, kyddes, and goates, and thre thousande oxen. These the kynge (of his kyngly liberalytye) gaue vnto the people, accordinge as he had promysed: and to the preestes of the Passeouer, he gaue two thousand shepe, and an hundreth oxen. Moreouer, Jechonias & Semeias, and Nathanael brethren and Hasabias Jehiel, and Josabad gaue theym to the Passeouer. .v. M. shepe, and .v. hundreth bullockes:

And when these thinges were brought to passe, the Preestes and the leuites stode goodly in theyr ordre, and had the vnleuened bread throughout the tribes. And after the ordering of the principal men in the tribes, they offered vnto the lorde, in the syghte of the people, accordyng as it is wrytten in the bouke of Moses, and so they roasted the Easter lambe as accordinge was. As for the thanckoffrynges, & the other they dighe them in kettels and pottes and set them before the People, with good wyll, and afterwarde before them selues, and the Preastes. For the preestes offered the fat vntyll the tyme was expyred: but the leuites prepared for them selues, and for theyr brethren the children of Aaron. The syngers also the children of Asaph stode in theyr ordre, accordynge as Dauid had deuised. So dyd Asaph, Zachary and Iduthun, whych were apoynted by the kynge. Moreouer the porters ād dore kepers, stod by the dores and that dylygentlye, so that none wente out of hys standing and seruice/ for theyr brethren (the Leuites) prepared for them. ¶ Thus wer al thynges perfourned, ỹ belōged to the offering of the Lord. In that day they held the passeouer, and offred thanckoffrynges, beside the sacrifice of the Lorde, accordynge to the cōmaūdement of kyng Josias.

So the children of Israell, whyche were then present helde an honourable Passeouer, and the feaste of swete bread vii. dayes longe. Yea such a Passeouer was not kepte in Israell, from the tyme of the Prophete Samuell. And all the kynges of Israell, helde not such an easter, as thys which kyng Josias helde/ and the preastes, the Leuites, the Jewes, and all Israell, of all them that were at Jerusalem. And in the .xviii. yeare of the raygne of Josias was thys passe ouer kepte. And wythe a perfecte harte, dyd kyng Josias ordre all hys workes, before the Lorde, and the thynges that were Wrytten of hym in Tymes paste concerning those that synned, and were vngodly agaynste the Lorde before all people, and that sought not the word of the Lorde vpon Israel. * After all these actes of king Josias, Pharao the king of Egipte, wente vp/ and came towarde Carcamis by Euphrates, and Josias went went to mete him. Then sent the kynge of Egypte vnto Josyas / saiyng: what haue I to do wt thee/ O king of Juda? I am not sent of the lord to fight against thee, for my warre is vpon Euphrates, go thou thy waye home agayne in all ỹ haste. And Josias wolde not turne agayn vpon hys charet, but vndertoke to fyght agaynst him, and harkened not vnto the worde of the prophet, which he tolde him out of the mouth of God, but pytched a battell agaynst him in ỹ feld of Mageddo. And the princes preassed to kynge Josias. Then sayde the kynge vnto his Seruauntes: Carye me away oute of the battell, for I am sore wounded. And immediatly his seruauntes toke him awaie, out of the front of ỹ bat tell. Then sate he vp vppon the second charet, came to Jerusalem, dyed, & was buryed in his fathers sepulcre. And in al Jewry they mourned for Josias/ ye the rulers also with their wyues, made lamentacion for him vnto this daye: And this was done euer still in Israel.

These thynges are written in the boke of the stories of the kynges of Juda, namely, al the actes & workes of king Josias, his kingly power and maiesty, hys vnderstanding in the lawe of god, and what he dyd, yea thynges which are not wrytten in the boke of the kynges of Israel and Juda. And the people toke Jechonias the sonne of Josias, and made him kynge in stede of Josias his father when he was .xxiii. yeares olde. And he raigned ouer Israel iii. monethes. And the kynge of Egipte put hym downe, ỹ he shoulde not raygne in Jerusale, and rayed vp a tare of the people: namelye, an .C. talentes of syuer and one talente of golde. The king of Egypt also, made Johakim hys brother kyng of Juda & Jerusalem. & for them of the kynges Councel, with the kynge him selfe, and Zaraceles hys brother, he toke them, & caried them awaye prisoners into Egipt. Fyue and twentye yeare olde was Joachim, when he was made kynge in the lande of Juda and Jerusalem, and he dyd euel before the Lord. After this, Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon cāe vp, bounde hym wyth bandes of yron, & caryed hym vnto Babilon.

Nabuchodonosor also toke all ỹ vessels that were halowed in the temple of the Lorde, and all the Jewels, and caryed them vnto Babylon, and brought them into hys owne temple at Babylon. Of hys vnclennes and vngodlynes it ys written in the booke of the Actes of the kynges. And Joachim hys sonne raygned in his steade: He was made kynge beinge .xviii. yeare olde, and raygned but thre monethes and x. dayes in Jerusalem, and dyd euel before the Lorde.

So after a yeare, Nabuchodonosor sent and caused hym be brought vntoo Babylon, wt the holy vessels of the lord and made Zedekiah his brother kyng of Juda and Jerusalem, when he was xxi. yeare olde: and he reygned .xi. yeare. And he did euell also in the syght of the Lord, and cared not for the wordes that were spoken vnto hi by the prophet Jeremy at the mouthe of the Lorde. And wheare as he had made an oothe vnto kynge Nabuchodonosor, he manswore hym selfe, and fell from hym, hauinge a stifnecke and a harte, and transgressed all the statutes and ordinaunces of the Lorde god of Israell. The rulers also and heades of the people of the Lorde, dyd muche euell, and became vngodly more then the Heathen, beinge defyled in all maner of abhominacions: Yea, & defyled the holy temple of the Lorde at Jerusale. And the God of theyr fathers sent hys messangers vntoo them, to turne them backe, and to call them agayne from theyr synnes: for he wold fayne haue spared them for hys holy tabernacles sake: Neuertheles, they had hys Messaungers in derysyon: And looke, what god spake vnto them by his prophetes, they made but a sporte of it. Thys drew on so longe, tyl the Lorde was wrothe with hys people for theyr vngodlynesse: & tyl he caused the kynges of the caldees to come vp, whych slewe theyr yong men wt the swerde, yea euen in the compasse of theyr holy temple, ād spared nobody, neyther yonge nor olde/ neyther maide nor yong man: but they were al deliured into the power, of the kinges of the caldees, and all the holy vessels of the Lorde and the Kynges treasures toke they, and caryed them vnto Babilon. As for fyre vpon her to wyes, destroyed all her noble buildinges, and brought them to naught: and the People that were not slayne wyth the sweatde, they caryed vn to Babylon.

Thus became they prisoners and bondmen of the king of Babilon, tyll they were delyuered and Raygned for them selues, * when the woordes of the Lorde were fulfylled, whyche he promised them by the mouth of the prophete Jeremy, and tyll the lande had her rest: namelye, all the time that it laye waste had it rest an dquietnes. lxx. yeares.

¶ Cirus geueth lycence to the Jewes, to returne to Jerusalem, & restoreth them the vessels of the temple. After that are ther letters sent to Artaxerses, which accuse the Jewes for buylding of the Citie: and so is the buylding dyscõ ued, vntyll the. ii. yeare of Darius.

The. ii. Chapter.

A * Now when kynge Cirus raigned ouer the Persians, and when the Lord would perfourme the worde yt he had promysed by ye mouthe of the prophete Jeremy: the lord raysed vp the spyrete of Cirus, the kyng of Persians, so that he caused this writinge to be proclaymed throw out his whole realme, saynge: Thus sayth the kynge of Persians: The lorde of Israell that hygh lorde hathe made me kynge of the Lande, and commaunded me to buylde hym an house at Jerusalem in Jewrye. If there be any now of youre people, ye the lorde be wyth hym, and go vp wyth hym to Jerusalem. And all they that dwell rounde about that place, shall helpe them, whether it be wyth golde, w siluer w gyftes, w horses & necessary catel and all other thynges that are brought wyth a fre wyll to the house of the lord at Jerusalem.

Then the principall men out of the B tribes and vyllages of Juda and Benjamin stode vp: so dyd the prestes also ād ye leuites (whome the Lorde had moued) to go vp, and to buyld the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem, And they that were about them helped them wyth all maner of gold, and syluer, and catell also and wyth many lyberall gyftes, and thys dyd many one, whose mynde was styrred vp thertoo. * Kynge Cirus also brought forth the vessels & ornamentes, that wer halowed vnto the Lord (which Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon had caried awaye from Jerusalem, and consecrated them to ys & doll and ymage) and delyuered them to Mythridatus hys Treasurer, and by hym they were delyuered to Sanabasar, the deputie in Jewry. And thys was the nombre of them: Two thousand and. iiii. C. syluer boules. xxx. syluer basens. xxx. basens of golde. ii. M. and. iiii. C. vessels of syluer, and a thousande besyde. All the vessels of golde and syluer were. v. M. viii. C. and. lx. These were numbred vnto Sanabasar, and them that were come agayne wythe hym to Jerusalem out of the captyuitye of Babylon. *
C Now in the tyme of Kynge Artaxerses the king of Persia, there men: Balemus & Mithridatus, Sabellius, Rathimus, Ballthemus, Semellius the scrybe and other that dwelt in Samarya and in other places vnder the dominion thereof, wrote a letter vnto Kynge Artaxerses, wherin they complayned vnto the king of them in Jewry and Jerusalem. The letter was made after thys maner:

Syr, thy seruauntes Rathimus, the storye wryter, Sabellius the Scribe and other iudges of the courte in Celosyria and Phenyce. Be it knowen and manifest to our Lord the kyng, that the Jewes which are com vp from you vn to vs into the rebellyous and wycked cytie, begynne to buylde it agayne, and ye walles about it, and to set vp the temple
D of the new. Now yf thys cytye and ye walles therof be set vp againe, they shal not only refuse to geue trybutes & taxes, but also rebell vtterly agaynst the king.

And forsemuch as they take this in hand now about the tempe, we thought it reason, to thinke no scorne of it, but to shew it vnto our Lord the kyng, and to certyfy him therof: to theintent that if it please the kynge, he maye cause it be sought in the bokes of olde: and ye shalt fynde suche warning written, and shalt vnderstande, that the cytie hathe all waye bene rebellyous and disobediente, that it hath subdued kinges and cyties, and that the Jewes which dwel therin, have

haue euer ben a rebellious, obstinat, vnfaythfull, & fighting people, for the which cause this cite is wasted. Wherfor now we certifye our Lorde the kynge, that if thys cite be builded, ād occupied again, and the walles therof set vp anewe, ye canst haue no passage into Celosyria ād Phenices.

Then wrote the kyng to Rathimus the storye writer, to Balthemus, to Sabellius the scrybe, and to the other officers and dwellers in Syria & Phenices after this maner: I haue red the Epistle, whych thou sentest vnto me, and haue commaunded to make diligent searche/ and haue founde that the cytie hath euer resisted kynges, that the same people are disobediente, and haue caused muche warre, and that myghty kinges haue raigned in Jerusalem, which also haue raysed vppe Taxes of Syria and Phenices. Wherfore I haue commaūded those people, that they shal not buil de the cittie, that they make no more in it, and that they proceade no further wyth the buyldinge: for so muche as it myght be the cause of warre, and displesure vn to kynges.

Now when Rathymus and Sabellyus, the Scrybe, and the Rulers in the lande, had red the writinge of kyng Artaxerses, they gat them together/ and came in all the hast to Jerusalem, with an hooste of horsmen, and with much people of fote, & forbad them to build. And so they lefte of from buylding of the tẽple, vnto the seconde yeare of kynge Darius.

¶ Darius maketh a feast. The. iii. sentences of the iii. young men, of which the first is declared.

¶ The iii. Chapter.

A Kyng Darius made a great feast vnto his Seruauntes, vnto all hys coutte, ād to al the Officers of Medea and Persia, yea to al the debites and rulers that were vnder hym / from India vnto Ethiopia, an hundred and xxvii. countrees. So when they had eaten and dronken being satisfyed, and were gone home agayne. Darius the kyng wente into hys chamber, layed hym downe to slepe, and so awaked.

Then the thre younge men, that kepte the kynges person and watched hys body, commoned amonge them selues, and spake one to another: let euery one of vs saye sumthing, and loke whose sentence is wyser and more excellent than the other/ vnto hym shal kyng Darius geue greate giftes, and clothe him with purple. He shall geue hym vessels of goulde to drinke in, clothes of gold and couerynges: he shal make him a costly charet and a bridle of golde, he shal geue hym a bonet of whit lynke, & a chayne of gold about his necke: yea he shal be set albe the secõd and principall nexte vnto kynge Darius, & that because of his wysdome, and shalbe called, the kinges kynsman.

So euery one wrote his meanynge, sealed it, and layde it vnder the kynges pelowe, and sayde: when the kynge arysseth, we wyl geue him our writinges: & loke whose woordes the kyng & his thre lordes iudge to be the moste wyttely spoken, the same shal haue the victory. One wrote: Wyne is a strong thinge.
The seconde wrote: The kynge is stronger. The thyrde wrote: Women haue yet more strength, but aboue al thinges the treuth beareth awaye the victory.

Now when the king was risen vp, they toke theyr writynges and delyuered the vnto him, and so he red them. Then sent he forth to cal al his chefe lordes, all ye debytes and chefe rulers of the contrees of Medea and Persia. And when they were set downe in the councell, the writinges were red before them. And he cõmaunded, to cal for the ponge men, that they myght declare their meanynges the selues by mouth. So whē they were set for, and came in: the kynge sayde vnto them: shewe vs and make vs to vnderstande, what the thinges are that ye haue written.

Thē be ganne the first (which had spoken of the strength of wyne) & sayde: O ye men, wyne is maruelous stronge, and ouercommeth them that drynke it: it disceaueth the mynde, and bringeth bothe the poore manne and the kynge to dotage and vanite.
Thus dothe yt also with the bonde man and wyth the free, & wyth the poore and ryche: It taketh awaye their vnderstandynge, and maketh theym careles and merye/so that none of them remem breth any heynesse, dett or dewtye: It causeth a man to thynche also that the thinge which he doth, is honest & good:

and remembreth not that he is a kyng, nor that he is in auctorite, and that he ought not to do suche thynges. Moreo-uer/when men are drynkinge they forget al frendshippe all brotherly fayth-fulnes and loue: but as soone as theye are dronken, they drawe out the swerde and wyl fyghte: and when they are laid downe from the wyne, and so rysen vp agayne, they can not tel, what they dyd:
iudge ye now, is not wyne the strongeste
For who wolde elles take in hande to do suche thynges? And when he had spoken this, he helde his tonge.

¶ The declaracion of .iii. last sentences of kyng men, propouded in the Chapter before of which the last, that is, that verye beareth ꝑ victory in al thin gs, is most commended & allowed. Darius writeth let ters to al rulers vnder him, that they should ayde zorobabel to the building of Jerusalem.

¶ The .iiii. Chapter.

THen the seconde (which had sayde, that the Kynge was stronger) began to speake, sayinge: O ye men/are not they the strongest / and most excellent, that conquere the ꝑ land and the sea, and al that is in the sea & i the earth? How is the kyng lorde of all these thinges/and hath dominiō of the al: and loke what he commaundeth, it is done. If he sende hys men forth awarfare, they go, and breake downe hylles, walles and towres. They are slayn, and slaye (other men) the selues, & ouerpasse not ꝑ Kynges word. If they get the victory, they bringe the kyng al the spoyle.
Like wise the other that medle not with warres and fyghting, but tyl the grounde:
when they reape, they bringe tribute vn to the kyng. And yf the kyng alone do but commaunde to kyll, they kyll: yf he commaunde to forgeue, they forgeue: yf he cōmaūd to smyte, they smyte: if he bid dryue awaye they dryue awaye: if he cō maunde to buylde, they buylde: yf he cō maunde to breake downe, they breake downe: yf he commaunde to plant, they plant. The comen people and the rulers are obedient vnto hym. And the kynge in the meane season sytteth hym down, eateth, and drinketh, and taketh his rest then kepe they watch rounde aboute the kyng, and not one of them darre get hi out of the way, to do his owne busynes, but must be obedient vnto the kyng at a worde. Judge ye now, O ye men, howe should not he go farre aboue, vnto whō men are thus obedient? And when he had spoken this, he helde hys tonge.

The third whose name was zorobabel/ B which had spoken of wemē and of truth, beganne to saye after this maner: O ye men, it is not the greate kynge, it is not multitude of men, neither is it wyne that excelleth: Who is it then that hath the lordshippe ouer them? Haue not wemen borne the kynge, and all the people that rule those thynges? Haue not we-men borne theym, and broughte theym vp, that plante the vynes, whereout the wine commeth? They make garmen tes for al men, they geue honoure vnto al men, and wythoute wemen can not men lyue. If they gather golde and siluer and all precyous thynges, and se a fayre wel fauoured womā, they leaue all to gether, and turne their eyes only vn to the woman, and gape vpon her, and haue more desyre vnto her, then vnto ꝑ syluer and golde, or any maner of precyous thynge. A man leaueth hys Father that brought hym vp, he leaueth his o-wne naturall countree, and cleaueth vn to the woman: yea he forgetteth hys ly fe wyth the woman, and remembreth nether father, nor mother, nor countree.
By thys then ye must nedes know, that wemen haue the dominion ouer you.

¶ Doth it greue you? A man taketh C hys swearde, and goeth hys waye too steale, to kyll, to murther, to saile vppon the sea, and seith a lyon, and goth in the darckenes: and when he hath stollen, dylcfaued and robbed, he bringeth it vnto hys loue. Agayne, man loueth hys wyfe better, then father and mother: ye ma ny one there be, that runne oute of theyre wyttes and become bondmen for theyre wyues sakes: many, one also haue peryshed, and haue bene slayne, and haue sy-ned because of women.

And nowbeleue me, I know a kig/which is greate in hys power, and all lan des stand in awe of hym, and no man da re laye hande vpon hym: yet dyd I see,
that

that Apame (the daughter of the greate kyng Bartacus) ꝑ Kynges concubine sat besyde the kyng, vpon the ryght hā de, and toke of his crowne frō his head and set it vpon her awn head, āde smote the kynge with her lefte hande. Moreo- D ouer, the kinge loked vpō her with open mouth: yf she laughed vpō him, he lau ghed also: but yf she toke any displea sure wt hi, ꝑ king was faine to flatter her, and to geue her good wordes, yl he he had gotten her fauoure agayne.

O ye men, ar not wemen then stronger?
Greate is the earth/ād hye is the heaue that do these thinges. Then the kyng & the Princes loked one vpō another. So he began to speake of the trueth: O ye men/are not wemen strongar? Greate is the earth, hye is the heauen, swyft is the course of the sounne, he compasseth the heauen rounde aboute, and fetcheth his course agayn to his own place in one daye. Is he not excellent that doth this Ye great is the trueth and stronger the all thinges. All the earth calleth vpon the trueth, ꝑ heauen prayseth it, al wor kes shake and tremble at it, and with it is no vnrighteous thing. Wyne is vn rightuous: the kyng is vnrighteous women are vnrighteous: al the childrē of men are vnrighteous, ye al their wor kes are vnrighteous, & ther is no trueth in them, in there vnrighteousnes also shal they be destroied and perish. As for truth, it endureth and is al waye strōg:
it lyueth and conquereth for euermore E worlde without ende.

The treueth accepteth no parsonnes, it putteth no difference betwixte riche or poore betwexte the myghtye or simple but doth right vntoeuery man whether they be euel or good and all men are lo uyngly dealt wt al in the workes of it.
In the iudgement of it there is no vn righteous thing, but strength kyngdō and power & maiesty for euermore Blest sed be the God of trueth.

And wt that he helde his tonge and all the people cried and sayde: Great is the trueth, & aboue al. Then sayde the King vnto him: Aske what thou wylt more then is appoynted in the writing and I shall geue it thee, for thou arte found wyser then thy companyons:
ꝑ shalt sit next me and be my kindsemā.
Then sayde he vnto the kynge: Remem bre thy promyse and vowe, whyche thou haste vowed and promysed (in the daye when thou cameste to the Kyngdome) to builde vp Jerusalem, and to sende agai F ne al the vessels and Jewels, that were taken awaye out of Jerusalem: whyche Cyrus separated, when he offered in Ba bylon, and would send the agayne. And thy mynde was to buyld vp the temple/whych the Edomites brent, when Jeru salem was destroyed by the Caldees.
Thys onely, O kyng/is the thynge that I require, thys is the maiestie, whych I desyre and aske of thee: that thou perfor me the vowe, which thou wyth thyne o-wne mouth hast made vnto the kyng of heauen.

Then Darius the kinge stode vp, ād kyssed hym, and wrote a letter vntoo all the debytes and Rheues, to all the lords and Nobles, that they should conueye hym forth, and all them that would go vp wyth hym. He wrote a letter also vn to al the Shyreues that were in Celosiria and Phenices, and vnto Lybanus, that they should drawe Cedre trees from lybanus vnto Jerusalem, to buylde the citye wyth all. Moreouer he wrote vntoo all the Jewes that were gone out of his realme into Jewry, because of the fredom ꝑ no officer, nor ruler, nor Shyreue, shulde come to theyr dores: and that all their lā de whych they had conquered, should be free and not tributary: And that the Edomytes shoulde geue ouer the cityes and vyllages of the Jewes, whyche they had taken in: yea and that they shoulde yearely geue, xx. talentes to the buylding of the temple, vntill the tyme that it we- G re fynished: and to the dayly halowinge of the brent offerynges (as it is cōmāde ded) ten talēts yearely also: And that all they whych come from Babylon to build the Cytie, should haue free Lybertye, they and theyre Childeren, and all the Preastes:

He wrote the greatnesse also, and commaunded that the holye Garmente shouldebe geuen them, wherin they mi-nistred: and wrote that commaundemen tes shoulde be geuen to the Leuites, vn

tyl the daye, that ꝯ house were fynisshed and Jerusalem buylded vp: and cõmaũded that al they ꝯ watched ꝯ cyte, shold haue their porcyons and wages.

He gaue ouer also all the vessels that Cyrus had separated from Babylon: & all ꝯ Cyrus had geuen in cõmaũdement, the same charged he also, that it shuide be done and sent vnto Jerusalem. Now when this ponge man was gone forth he turned his face toward Jerusalem, and prayed the kyng of heauen, & sayd Of thee commethe the victorye, Of the commet, wysdom and clearnesse and I am thy seruaut. Blessed art thou which hast geuen me wysdome: the wyll I prayse, O Lorde, thou God of oure fathers.

And so he toke the letters/and wente vnto Babylon: And when he came there he tolde this vnto hys bretheren that were at Babylon, and they prayed the god of ther fathers, that he had geuẽ thẽ refreshing & lyberti to go vp, & to build Jerusalem and the temple (whiche ys there called after the name of ꝯ Lord) and they reioyced with instrumẽtes ãd gladnesse seuen dayes longe.

¶ They ꝯ returne to Jerusalẽ are nombred. They begyn to lay ꝯ foundacion of ꝯ tẽple, but are let by ꝯ meanes of enemyes & so is ꝯ buylding dyrẽ of by ꝯ space of two yeare.

The.v.Chapter.

After this were the principal men of al the villages chosen in the trybes and kynredes, that they shuld go vp with their wyues & childrẽ with their seruauntes & maydens. with al their catel and substaunce. Their heades also and the rulers in the trybes, when they came to Jerusalem and wolde buylde and set vp the tẽple of God agayne in his place, they gaue (after their abilitye, vnto the temple, to the treasure and to the seruyce of the Sanctuary. xii M poundes of golde, v M of syluer, and an. C. Preestes garmentes. And so dwelt the Preestes and ꝯ Leuites/and the peple that went out to Jerusalem, ãd in the countre ther about the syngers also and the porters, euerye one of Israel in his owne lande.

So when the seuenth moneth came, and when the chyldren of Israel were euery man at his busynes, there came all w one consent in to the court, which was before the East doze. And ther stod Jesua the sonne of Josedeck and his brethren the Priestes, and zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel and his brethre, setting vp an aulter, to offre brent sacrifices vpon it, as it is writen in the law of moyses.

There came people also of other countrees, and the Heathen oute of all landes to set vp the aulter in his place, ād offred sacrifices and brentoffringes vnto the Lozde in the mo⁹nynge. And so they helde the feaste of tabernacles, as it is commaunded in the lawe. And dayely offred they as accordyng was, and made the sacryfyces appoynted the offrynges also of the Sabbothes and of the new Mones, and all holy feastes. And all they that vowed offringes vnto the Lord, begānne at the new Mone of the. vii. moneth to offre vnto God, for the temple of the Lozd was not yet buylded. And thei gaue vnto ỹ masons and Carpenters, moneye, meate, and drynke withe chearfulnesse. Unto them of Sidon also and Tyre, they gaue cartes, that they shulde carry Cedre trees from lybanus to Ioppe, accordyng as it was appointed and ordeyned by Cirus kynge of the persians.

And in the seconde yeare they came vnto the temple of God at Jerusalem. In the seconde moneth begānne zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, ād Jesua the sonne of Josedec & their brethren the Priestes & Leuites, ād al they that were come vnto Jerusalem out of the captyuite of Babilon, and layed the foūdacy of the temple in the newe moone of the second moneth in the second yeare that they were come into Jewry and Jerusalem. And they appoynted the Leuites (ỹ were about. xx. yere old) vnto the seruyce of the Lozde: so Jesua and his sonnes and his brethren al the Leuites stode to gether, and perfourmed the law & ordinaunce in the house of the Lozde.

And the Priestes stode, and had their Garmentes and Trompettes and the Leuytes, the sonnes of Asaph had Cymbales, geuyng thankes and prayses vnto the Lozd, accordynge as Dauid the kynge of Israel had ordeyned. And the songe that they dyd synge vnto the Lozde, was after this maner: * O synge vnto the Lozd for he is gracyous, and hys goodnes vpon Israel endureth for euer. And al the people blowe out wyth trompettes, and songe with loud voice, prayseng the lozde together in the rearyng vp of the house of the lozde. *

There came also from amonge the Priestes and leuytes the rulers and elders, accordyng to the trybes and kynredes (suche as had sene the house afore) to ỹ buylding of the temple with greate crie and greate mournyng, many also wyth trompettes and great ioye: Insomuch, that the trōpetes might not wel be herd for the weping and mournyng. For the commen people blow goodly vpon the trompetes.

* Then came the enemyes of the trybes of Juda and Ben Jamyn, to know what that trompetyng & noyse of shawmes myght be. And they preached, that it was they wyth were come agayn oute of captiuitee, and wolde buylde the temple vp anew vnto the Lozde god of Israell. So they wente to zorobabell and Jesua, and to the rulers of the vyllages, and sayde vnto them: Shall we buylde wyth you also. For we lykewyse haue heard youre Lozde, and we walke after the same maner, from the dayes of Asbazareth the kynge of Assiria whiche brought vs hether. Then zorobabell & Jesua & ỹ rulers of the vylages of Israell sayde vnto them: It is not mete, that ye shoulde buylde the temple of our god wyth vs: we oure selues alone wyll buylde vnto the LORD, lyke as Cirus the kynge of the Persians hath commaunded vs.

But the heathen in the land layed the seluys agaynste those that were in Jewry, helde vp the Buyldinge from them, laied wayte vppon them, preuyly stopped suche as broughte anye thyng to them, forbadde them to buylde, and hindred those that made them passage, ỹ the buyldyng buyldyng shoulde not be fynyshed: and thys contynued so longe as kinge Cirus lyued: and so they put of the buyldinge for the space of. ii. yeares, vntyl the rayngne of kyng Darius.

Aggeus and zachery prophecey. They build the temple without let or hyndraunce, by the commaundement of Dauid.

The. vi. Chapter

NOt wyth standynge in the seconde yeare of the raigne of Darius, Aggeus and zacharye the sonne of Addo prophecyed vpon the Iewry ād Jerusalem, in the name of ỹ god of Israell. Then zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel and Jesua the sonne of Josedec, stode vp, and begānne to buylde the house of the Lozde at Jerusalem, whē the Prophets of the Lozd helped them. At the same tyme came Sysennes the vnder Shreaue in Syrya and Phenyces, wyth the land lordes and hys companyons, and sayde vnto them: Who hathe bydden and commaunded you to buylde the house, to make the roke, and al other thynges agayne? And who are the workemen, that buylde them? Neuertheles the elders of the Jewes had suche grace of the lozde, that they wold not be let (though they were prouoked therto) but buylded on styll, vntyll the tyme that kyng Darius were certyfied thereof, and an answere receaued from hym. The letter that these men sente vnto kynge Darius, was after thys maner.

Sysennes the vnder Shreaue in Syria and Phenyces, and the landlordes wyth their companyons, whych are head rulers in Syrya and Phenyces, sende their saluacyon vnto Darius the kynge. We certyfye oure Lozde the kynge, that we came into the lande of Jewry, and wente to Jerusalem: where we founde them buyldyng the great house of God and the temple, w gre te costly free stone and wythg oodly tymbre for the walles: yea they make greate haste wyth the worke, and helpe one a nother, and it goeth forth prosperously in their handes, ād with greate dylygēce and worshipe is it made.

Then asked we the elders, who had commaunded them to make vp the House and the buylding, and thys we dyd to the intent that we myghte certifye them perfectlye, and wryte vnto thee, the names of those that were the rulers of the worke. So they gaue vs thys answere: we are the seruauntes of the Lozde, whyche made heauen and earth: and as for thys house, it hath bene buylded and set vp a foze tyme by the greate and Myghtye kyng of Israel. But when our fathers prouoked God vnto wrathe, and sinned agaynste the God of Israel, he gaue thē ouer into the power of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon, the kynge of the Chaldees, whyche brake doune the house, and brent it, and caryed away the people prisoners vnto Babylon. * i Esdr. v. c

* Neuertheles, in the fyrste yeare that kyng Cyrus raygned at Babylon, Cyrus the kynge wrote and commaunded to buyld vp thys house agayne: and all the ornamentes that Nabuchodonosor caryed awaye from Jrrusalem vnto Babylon, and appropriated vntoo hys owne temple: these brought Cirus forth agayne, and delyuered them to zorobabel, and to Salmanasar the vnder shreue, commaundinge them that they shulde bryng those same ornamentes agayn, to Jerusalem into the tēple, and to begynne from the tyme forth, to buylde the temple agayne in hys owne place. Then Salmanasar layed the foundacion of ỹ Lordes house at Jerusalem, and euer sence haue they buylded, and yet it is not ended. And therfore, O kyng, if thou thinke it good, let it be soughe in the lybraryes and rolles of kynge Cyrus: yf it be founde then, that it is don wyth the co ū cell and consente of kyng Cyrus, and yf our Lozde the kynge be so mynded, lette hym write vnto vs therof. * i Esd. vi, a * ii Esd. iiii. c

* Then commaunded kyng Darius, to seke in the Lybraries: and so at Ecbathanis, in a lytle cytte in Medea there was founde suche a writinge: In the fyrst yeare of the raygne of Cirus the same kinge Cyrus commaunded that the house of the Lord at Jerusalem shold be buylded agayn (and odoures to be made there continually vnto the Lord) whose heygth shalbe .x. cubites, and the bredthe xl. cubites and iiii. square with thre hewen stones, wyth a lofte of tymber of the same countre, yea with a new loft, and ȳ expences therof to be geue of the house of kyng Cyrus. And the ornamentes of gold and syluer, that Nabuchodonosor toke out of the house of the lorde at Jerusalem, shalbe sett agayne in the temple at Jerusalem, wher they were afore. Sysennes also the vnderthreaurer of Syria and Phenyces, the Phenyces and their companions, and the other that be hed rulers in Sirria and Phenices, shal not medle nor haue any thing to do w that place.

G Jt Cyrus haue commaunded also/ that they shall buylde the house of the LORDE whoole vppe, and haue ordeyned them, to helpe those that be come oute of captiuyte: till the House of the Lorde be finished: and out of the tribut and taxing that is yearly raysed vp in Syria and Phenyces/ bylygentelye to geue them a certayne summe to the offeryng of the Lorde: and the same to be delyuered vnto Zorobabell the offycer: that he therwythal maye ordeyne oxen, rammes, lambes and corne, salt, wyne & oyle/ and that continually euery yeare: after the expences which the preests that be at Jerusalem, shewe to be made dayly, thys shalbe geuen vnto them. wythout delaye that they may offre sacrifices dayly to the hyest God, for the kyng and for hys Seruauntes/ and to praye for their lyues.

Lett it be proclaymed also on euery syde, that whosoeuer breketh or dispiseth this commaundemente of the kynge, shalbe hanged vpon a galow (made of hys owne good) and all hys gooddes shalbe seased vnto the kyng. The Lorde therfore (whose name is therecalled vppon) cote out and destroy all the kynges and people that vndertake, by violence too hynder the same, or to deale vncurteously wyth the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem. J Darius the kynge haue ordeyned, that these thynges shalbe don with all dilygence.

¶ The temple is finished, and dedicat: and the feast of vnleuened bread is holden.

The .vii. Chapter.

Then Sysennes the vnder shreue Celosiria, Phenices/ and the other Land lordes w ther compāyons, obeied the thinges that kyng Darius had ordened, were dilygent in the holy workes, and were felowhelpers w the olde rulers of the Jewes. And so ȳ worcke of the Sanctuary went forth & prospered/ whe Aggeus & zachary prophecyed. And they perfourned al thinges thorow the commaundement of the Lorde God of Jsrael, and after ȳ deuise of Cyrus, Darius, and Artaxerses kynges of Persia.

And thus was oure house fynyshed vnto the .xxiii. daye of ȳ moneth Adder in the .vi. yeare of kynge Darius. And the chyldren of Jsrael the Preestes and ȳ Leuites, and the other that were come out of captiuite, and soch as were ioyned vnto them/ dyd accordyng as it is written in the boke of Moises. And in ȳ dedycacyon of the temple they offred, an hundred oxen, an hundred rammes, iiii. hundred lambes, and .xii. gotes for the synnes of al the people of Jsrael, after ȳ nomber of ȳ trybes of Jsrael. The Preestes also and the Leuites stod arayed in ȳ presthy garmentes/ after ȳ trybes, ouer al the workes of ȳ Lord God of Jsrael B accordyng to the boke of Moses, and ȳ porters by all the dores.

And the chyldren of Jsrael (w those ȳ were come out of captyuyte) helde the passeouer the .xiiii. day of the fyrst moth when the preestes and the Leuites were sanctified. They that cam out of captyuite, were not al sanctified together: but the Leuites were al sanctyfied together. And so al they that came out of captiuite, kylled the easter lambe, for their brethren, for the preestes and for the selues. And the chyldren of Jsrael that came out of captiuite, & escaped from al ȳ abhominacions of the Heathen, sought the Lord, & kept the feast of vnleuened bred vii. dayes long: & ate yng & drinckyng and were mery before the Lorde that ȳ Lord had turned the deuyce of the kynge of Assyria, and comforted their handes to ȳ workes of the Lorde God of Jsrael.

Esdras

Esdras exhorteth the people to assemble & come together, & redeth them the lawe. They kepe ȳ feast of Tabernacles.

The .viii. Chapter.

A And after him, when Artaxerses the kynge of the Persians raigned, there went vp to him Esdras the sonne of Saraias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Helchiah, the sonne Sallum/ the sonne of Sadoc, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amarias, the sonne of Jsarias, the sonne of Bocsus, the sonne of Abisu, the sonne of Phinees, the sonne of Eleatar, the sonne of Aron the fyrst preest. This Esdras went vp from Babylon, for he had good vnderstanding in the lawe of Moses, that was geuen of the lord god of Jsrael, to be taught and done in dede.) And the kynge fauoured hym, & dyd hym great worshyp and honoure, after al hys desyres. There went vp with him also certayne of the chyldren of Jsrael, of ȳ Preestes, of the Leuites, of the syngers, porters and mynysters of the temple at Jerusalem.

In the .vii. yeare of the raygne of kynge Artaxerses, in the .v. moneth, that is in the .vii. yeare of the raigne/ they wente from Babylon in the new moone of the .v. moneth, and came the hye way to Jerusalem after this commaundemēt lyke as the Lord had prospered their iourney. For in these Esdras gat greate instructyon, that he shoulde leaue none of the thinges behynde, whiche are i the Lawe and commaundementes of God. And taught whole Jsrael al rightuousnes and iudgment.

B Then came the Secretaries of kyng Artaxerses, and delyuered the wrytynges (that were come from Artaxerses the kyng) to Esdras the preest and reder of the lawe of the lorde: And thys is the copy of the letter. Kyng Artaxerses sendeth his greetynge vnto Esdras the preest and reder of the lawe of the Lord: Of frendshyp and good wyll J haue ordeyned and charged/ yf there be any of the Jewes/ of the preestes and Leuytes in my realme, whiche desyreth al so content to go wyth thee vnto Jerusalem, ȳ he maye do it. Therfore if any be mided to beare thee company, let them come together, and goo with the (lyke as J am contene and my .vii. frendes my councellers:) to se what they do at Jerusalem and in Jewrye, and kepe the thinges according as thou hast in the lawe of the lorde: and to bryng the gyftes vnto the lord of Jsrael, that J and my frendes haue promysed to Jerusalem/ and all ȳ syluer and golde that is in the countre of Babylon, vnto the Lord at Jerusalem, with the thinge that is geuen for ȳ People in the Lordes temple at Jerusalem: Yea that the same syluer & golde maye be gathered, and oxen, rammes, shepe and goates and other: that belōg to these thynges: and that they maye offer sacrifyces vnto the lorde, vpon the aulter of the lorde/ whych is at Jerusalem.

And what soeuer thou and thy Brethren, wyll doo wythe the Syluer and Golde, that doo after thy Mynde, and after the Commaundemente of the Lorde thy GOD: and lykewyse withe all the holye vessels that are geuen thee for the Seruice of the House of the Lorde/ thy GOD and other thynges, whatsoeuer is necessary for thee to the worke of the temple, that shalbe geuen thee of the Kynges treasure: and looke what thou with thy Brethren wylte doo wyth the Golde and syluer, that do after the wyll of the Lorde.

And J Kynge Artaxerses haue commaunded, the kepers of the Treasuries in Syria and Phenices, that whatsoeuer Esdras the preest and reader of the lawe, of the Lorde doth wyte, it shalbe geuen hym, tyll an hundreth, Talentes of Syluer and of golde in lyke maner: Of corne also an hundreth measures, and tyl an hundred vessels of wyne and other plenteous thinges without nombet.

Let al thinges be done after thee lawe of the hyghest GOD, that the wrath of God aryse not in the realme of the kyng and of his sonnes

I

I cõmaunded you also, that ye require no tare nor trybute of the prestes, Leuytes, singers, and mynsters of the temple, nor of the wyters: and that no mã haue auctorytie to medle any thinge agaynste them. As for thee (O Esdras) set thou iudges and arbytrers in the whole land of Siria and Phenyces, after the wysdome of god: and learne al suche as are ignorraunt in the lawe of God thy Lord, and let al them that offende against the lawe, be punished: whether it be wt deth, wt paine, to be condempned in money, or to be banished.

Esdr vii.d Then sayde Esdras the wryter.* Blessed be the God of our fathers, that hath geuen so good a mynde and wyll, in to the herte of the kyng, to magnyfye his house that is at Jerusalem, & hath made me to be accepted in the syght of ỹ kynge/of his councel, of hys frendes & of his nobles. And so I was stedfast in my minde, according as the Lord my god helped me, and I chose out men of Israel to go vp with me. *¶ And these *i.Esdr.viii.a are the heades (after their kynredes ād houses of their fathers) that went vp wt me from Babylon, out of the kyngdom of Artaxerses: Of the sonnes of Phares, Gersonius. Of the sonnes of Sleinarith, Amenus. Of the sonnes of Dauid, Jecus/the sonne of Cecilia.

Of the sonnes of Phares, zachary: and with hym there turned agayne an. C. and fyfte men. Of the sonnes of the captayne of Moabilon, zaraei, & with him. ii C and. l. men. Of the sonnes of zachnes, Jechonias zecholy/and wt hym. ri. C. and l. men. Of the sonnes of Salamaasias, Gotholle, and. lxx. wyth hym Of the sonnes of zaphacia, zarias, Meheli, and with hym. lxx. Of the sonnes of Job/ Abdias, Jehely, and wyth hym. ii. C. and xii. men. Of the sonnes of Bania, Salimoth the sonne of Josaphia, and with hym an C. and lx men. Of the sonnes of Beer, zachary Bebi, and with hym. ii. C and viii men. Of the sonnes of Esead, Johannes Ezechan, and wyth hym. C. and x. men. Of the sonnes of Adonicam, those ỹ were the last, and these are their names: Eliphalam the sonne of Gebel, and Semeias, and wyth hym. lxx. men.

All these called I together by the water Thya, where we pytched oure tentes thre dayes and there I mustered them.

As for the sonnes of the prestes and Leuites, I founde none there. Then sent I vnto Eleazar, and Eccelom, & Welman, and Malobam/and Enaathan, & Samea, and Jozibimathan, Eunagã, zachary, Mosollamum (these were the leaders and men of experyence) and I sent them word that they shoulde come vnto Loddeus, which was by the place of the treasury, and commaunded them that they shoulde speake vnto Loddeus and to hys brethrẽ, and to those that were in the treasurye/to sende vs suche men/as might execute the prestes office in the house of the Lord our God. And with the myghty hand of our lord god, they brought vnto vs men of good experience, from among the sõnes of Mooly us/the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Israel, Sebebiam and ỹ sonnes & his bre thre Asbin and anin, of whom ther were xviii. From among ỹ thyldren of the sonnes of Canenus, and theyr sonnes, were xx. men.

And of them that serued in the Temple, whome Dauid had ordened, and the principall men that minnistred for the work vnto the Leuites in the temple. ii. C. and xx. men, whose names are all tokned vp in wrytinge.

Then commaunded I a fastinge vn to the young men before the Lorde, that I myght delyre of hi a prosperous iourneye and a good way for vs/yea for vs/ for our children & for the catel, because of the layinges awayt, & I durst not require of ỹ kynge men of horse & of fote, to conuey vs safely agaynst out ennemyes, for we had sayd vnto the kyng, that the power of the Lorde oure god shoulde be wyth them that seke hym wyth theyr whoole herte.

And therfore we besought oure lorde earnestly because of these thynges, and he was mercyful vnto vs. and hearde our prayer. And I separated from amonge the rulers of the People and from the Prestes of the Temple twelue in nne / and Sebeia, and Alania and ten men of their brethren with them. And I weied them the gold and the syluer, and al the Presthy ornamentes of ỹ house of oure God, whyche the kyng & hys councel, and hys Pryuces, and whole Israel had geuen.

And when I had weyed it, I gaue them an. C. & l. talentes in syluer, & C. talētes of syluer vessel, an. C. talentes of golde, & of golden vessell seuen tymes twenty, & vessels of other metall (yee of good metal) xii. glysteringe as the golde, and sayde vnto them: ye also are holy vntoỹ Lorde, and the vessels are holy, and the golde and the syluer is promised vnto ỹ Lord the god of our fathers. Be diligẽt now, and kepe it, vntill the tyme that ye delyuer it to the rulers of the people, to the Prestes to the Leuites, to the principal men of the cyties of Israel in Jerusalem, ād in the chamber of the house of oure God.

So the Prestes and the Leuites which receaued of me the golde, the siluer and the vessel, brought it to Jerusale into ỹ temple of the Lord. And from Thia we brake vp the .xii. daie of ỹ firste moneth, till we came to Jerusalem. And when ỹ thyrday was past/the weyed golde and syluer was delyuered in the house of ỹ lorde the fourth daye, vnto Meremoth the sonne of Jor the Prest, ād wt hi was Eleazar ỹ sone of Phineas, & wt the were Josabdus the sonne Jesued, Wedias & the sonne Banus, and certayne of the Ieuites to the nomber and to the wayght ād the wayght of them was written vp ỹ same tyme. As for those that were com out of captyuitee, they offered sacrifyce vnto the lord ỹ God of Israel: euen. xii. oxen for al Israel lxxxvi. rammes. lxxii. shepe. xii. goates for synne. xii. kyne for a thankoffryng, al to the sacrifyce of the lorde. And the kynges commissyon delyuered they vnto the stewardes and debytes of the kyng, and the vnderthrcues in Celosyria and Phenices.

Now when these thinges were done, the rulers came vnto me, ād saide: The generacyon of Israel, the pryuces ỹ Prestes and Leuites, thee & straunge people and indwellers of the land, haue not put awaye their vnclennesse, from ỹ Cananites, Hethites, Pherestites, frõ the moabites, Egyptyans, and Edonytes. For bothe they & their sonnes haue myngled the selues wt ỹ daughters of them, & the holy sede is myxte wyth the outlandish heathen, and sens the beginnynge of theyr raygne, haue the Rulers and heades bene partakers of theyr wicked nesse.

*As soone as I hadd hearde these Esdr.ix.a thynges, immediatlye I rent my holye garmentes, and pulled out the heare of my head & my beard, & sate me downe sorowful & heuy. So al they ỹ wer moued thorow the worde of the God of Israel, came vnto me: and I satte styll full of heauynesse vntyll the euenynge Sacrifice. Then stode I vp from fastinge, hauing rẽt clothes and the holi garment kneled downe vpon me knees, held out my handes vnto the Lorde, and sayde: O Lorde, I am confounded and ashamed before thy face. for oure synnes are become many vpon our heades, and our wickednesses are exalted vntoo the heauen: for sens the tyme of our fathers we are in greate synne vnto thys day. And for the synnes of vs and our fathers, we with oure brethren and with oure priestes, haue bene delyuered vnto the kynges of the earth, into the swearde, and to captiuitie, and became a spoyle wyth confusion and shame vnto thys daye. And nowe, O Lorde God, howe greate is the mercy that we haue gotten of the in that thou hast left vs a rote and a name in the place of thy sanctuari, to discouer oure lyght in the house of the Lorde oure God, and geuen vs meate at all tymes of oure minystracion. And when we were in Captiuitee, we were not forsaken of the Lorde ourr god: But he made the kynges of Persya gracious and fauorable vnto vs, soo that they gaue vs victayles and meat, yea and leaue to bulde vp the temple of oure Lorde GOD Dagayne, to repayre the wasted places of Sion, and to dwel in Jewry and Jerusalem. And now, O lord, what shall we saye/hauing all these thynges in possession? For we haue broken thy commaũdementes, whyche thou gauest vnto vs by the handes of thy seruauntes the prophetes, saiynge.

The land that ye go vnto, ād ỹ is geuen you for anheritage to haue in possessyō, is defyled with the vnclennes and filthines of the Heathen, and with their abhominaciō haue thei poluted it al together, Therfor shall yee not ione your daughters vnto theire sonnes, ner mary youre sonnes vnto ther daughters: Moreouer, ye shal neuer seke to make peace w̄ thē, that ye maye increase and eate the beste in the landes, and that ye maye deuyde the inheritaunce of the land vnto your chyldren for euermore. As for the thige that now happeneth vnto vs, it cōmeth all for oure wicked worckes and greate synnes, yet haste thou geuen vs suche a rote, ỹ we are com agayn into our owne lande, and we ar so wicked that we haue broken thy statutes and cōmaundementes agayne, ād mengled oure selues w̄ the vnclennes of the outlandish hethen. O Lord, art ỹ angry w̄ vs, wyll ỹ rote vs cleane out, that oure rote and name remayne nomore? O Lord God of Israel thou art ru, for our rote endureth yet vnto this present daye. And behold, now are we before ỹ in our synnes, now can we not stand before the in them.

*ii. Esdr. ix. a

*And when Esdras w̄ this prayer had knowledged the sinne, weping, & lyēge flat vpon the ground before the temple, ther gathered vnto hym from Israel a greate multitud of men, and women, of ponge men and maydens, for ther was a very great weping and mourning in ỹ congregacyon. So when Iechonias ỹ sonne of Iehely on of the childzen of Israel cryed, he sayd vnto Esdras: we haue synned agaynst the Lord, because we haue maried outlandish wemen of ỹ Heathen. Now art ỹ ouer al Israel. We wil sweare an othe therfore vnto the Lord, ỹ we shal put away al oure wyues, whiche we haue taken of the Heathen, with ther childen: lyke as it is appointed ỹ by oure fore elders. Stande vp then, open thou it, and declare it playnely vnto vs, accordīng to the lawe of the ỹ lord: for ỹ mater belongeth vnto the, & we wyl help the, quyet thi selfe manly. So Esdras arose, and toke an oth of the rulers of ỹ Prestes/ and of the Leuytes, and of Israell, to do after these thynges: and thei swate.

After Esdras had read the lawe, ỹ people put away their straung wyues: & the returneth euery man merely vnto his owne dwellyng.

The. ix. Chapter.

Then Esdras stod vp from ỹ court of the temple wout, and wente into the chambre of Ionathas the Sonne of Nalabus, & remained there a ate no meate nor dranke no drinke, for the multitud of the wyckednes of ỹ people. And there was made a proclamacyon in al Iewry and at Ierusalem, for all suche as were gathered at Ierusalem out of captiuite, that whosoeuer came not to Ierusalem wythin two or iii. dayes accordīng to the iudgement of the olde Lordes of councell, his goodes shoulde be taken from him, and be excluded from the congregatyon of the captyuyte. And in thre dades were all they of the trybe of Iuda and Ben Iamin gathered together at Ierusalem, ỹ xx. daye of the .ix. moneth. And the whole multitude sat trymblynge in the coruit of the temple, for it was wynter.

So Esdras arose vp, and sayde vnto them: ye haue don vnrighteosly in, that ye haue taken outlandish wyues to maiage, and so to increace the synnes of Israell. And now knoweledge the same, & geue prayse vnto the Lorde God of our fathers, and perfourme hys wyll, departing from the Heathen of the lande, and from the outlandish wyues. Then cried ỹ the whole multitude with Loude voyce and sayde: lyke as thou hast spoken, soo wyll we do: but for so muche as the people are manye, and the wynter here, we maye not stande without the house: agayne, this worcke is not a thyng, that can be fynished in a day or two, for we be many that haue synned in these thinges: Ordeyne therfore, ỹ ỹ rulers of the multitude, and all they that dwell wyth vs, ād as many as haue outlandish wyues, the Prestes also and iudges of euery place may stande in the tyme appointed, tyl they lowse vp ỹ wrath of ỹ lord in hys busines.

Then Ionathas the sonne of Ezeli, and Ozias and Thecam receaued the charge

thargof this mater Bozozamus, Leius, & Sabatheus help the therto. After, this al they stod vp that were com out of captyuyte. And Esdras the Prest chose vnto him the principall men from amōge the fathers accordyng to their names, & in ỹ newe mone of the tenthe moneth they satt together, to examen this mater. And so the matter was a determyng (concernyng the menne that had outlandish wyues) vntil the new mone of the fyrst moneth. And of the Prestes that had myxte them selues w̄ out landysh wyues, there were found: Of ỹ sōnes of Iesu the sonne of Iosede ād his brethren Mazeas, Eleazar, Iozibus and Ioadeus, which offred them selues to put awaye theire wyues, and to offre a ramme for their ignoraunce. And of the sōnes of Semmeri Nasseas, & Esles & Ieelech Azarias. Of the sonnes of Fosera, Limosias, Hismach/ Nathanea, Iussio, Ieddus, & Talsas. And of ỹ Leuites Iosabdus, Semeis, & Colnis/ Caletas, Factas, Colnas & Elionas. Of the singers of the Sanctuary, Elyasib/ Zackerus. Of ỹ porters Sallumus and Talbanus. And of Israel of the childzen of Foros, Osi, & Remias, & Geldias, & Melchias, Michelus, Eleazarus, Iemmebias, & Bannas. And of ỹ chidren of Iolamā, Chanias, Zacharias Ieizelus, Ioddius/ Erimoth & Elias. And of the sonnes of Iathoi, Eliadas Liasamus, ād Zozhias, Latimoth, Sabdis and Tebedias. And of the sōnes of Zebes Iohannes Amanias, Zabdias & Emmeus. And of ỹ sonnes of Bānus Olāmus, Maluchus, Ieddus, Iasub Asabus & Ierimoth. And of the sonnes of Addin, Naatus & Mosias & Caleus & Raanas, Naasias, Nathathias Besel, Bannus ād Manasses. And of ỹ sōnes of Naue, Mones, Afras, Melchedeas, Sameas, Simon, Ben Iami, Malluchus. & Narras. And of the sonnes of Asom, Carianeus, Mathathias, Bānus, Eliphalach, Mānasses, Semei. Of the sonnes of Bannus, Ieremy, Mooddias, Abzamas, Iobel, Daneas, Peleas, Iona, Marimoth, Eliasib, Mathaneus, Eliasis, Ozias, Dielus, Semedius, Zambzisād, Ioseph. Of the sonnes of Nobeus/ Idelus, Mathathias, Sabadus, Zecheda, Sedmi, Iesseus and Baneas.

All these hadd taken oute landysshe women to mariage, and they put them away with theyr chylderen. The prestes and leuites, and al they that were of Israell dwelt at Ierusalem & thorowout all the lande, in the new moone of the seuenth moneth/ and the chylderen of Israel were in theyr dwellyngs. And the whole multitude came together vpon the flowet at the easte syde of the holy porte of the temple. And they spake vnto Esdras the hye prest and reader, that he wolde bryngе the lawe of Moyses whych was geuen of the Lorde God of Israell. So Esdras the hye prest brought the lawe vnto the whole multitud, to man and woman, and to all Prestes, & at they myght heare the lawe, *in the new mone of the vii. monethe. And he red in the floze that is before the holy porte of the temple, frō the morning earelye vnto the euenynge, before men and women. And they applyed theyr mynd all vnto the lawe.

*ii. Esdr. viii. a *Esdr. viii. a

And Esdras the Prieste and reader of the lawe stoode vp vpon a scaffolde of wodde, whych was made therfore: and vpon hys right hande there stode by him Mathathias, Samus, Anantas, Asarias, Urias, Ozechyas, and Balsamus: Upon hys lefte hande stode Faldeus, Misael, Malachias/ Abuschas, & abus Nabadias and Zacharyas. Then toke Esdras the boke before the whole multitude for he was the principal and had me the honour of them all. And when he had red out the lawe, they stode all streyght vpon theyr feate. So Esdras prayed the Lorde the moost hye God, the almyghty God of hoostes. And al the people answered: Amen, and helde vp theyr handes, fell downe flat vpon the earth, and prayed the Lorde. And Iesus, Beneas, Sarebias, Iaddinus/ Accubus, Sabbatheus, Caiythes, Azarias, Iozadus, Ananias, and Philias the Leuites lyft their handes vpward, and bowed theyr faces to the grounde and prayed the Lorde: Those were they whych taught the law of the Lord, ād red the lawe of the lord in the congregation: and euery man set those before that vndestode the lawe.

Then spake Atharates vnto Esdras the hie prest & reader, and to the Leuites that taught the multitud, saying: This daye is holy vnto the Lorde: and all they that had heard the lawe, wept. So Esdras sayde: Departe youre waye then, and eate the best/ and drynke the swetest/ and sende gyftes vnto them that haue nothing: for thys day is holy vnto the Lorde, and be not ye sorye: The went they theyre waye, eatynge and dronke, and were merye, and sente rewardes vnto them that had nothinge that they also myght eate wyth gladnesse: for they were exceedingly reioyced thorow the wordes that were red vnto them in the lawe: And so they were all gathered together at Ierusalem to holde the feaste, accordyng to the couenaunt of the Lorde God of Israell.

The ende of the thyrde boke of Esdras.

¶ The people is reproued for theyr vnthankefulnes, & God wyll fynde another people if these wyll not be reformed.

The.first.Chapter.

THe second boke of the Prophete Esdras (the sonne of Saraias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Helchya, the sonne of Sallum, the sone of Sadoc, the sone of Achitob the sonne of Amerias, the sone of Azarias, the sunne of Maraioth, the sonne of Saahias, the sunne of Ulli the sonne of Boccus, the sonne of Abisu, the sonne of Phineas, the sunne of Eleazar the sonne of Aaron, of the tribe of Leuy) which was prisoner in the lande of Medes, in the raygne of Artaxerses Kinge of Persia.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me saynge: go thy way, and shew my people theyr synnefull dedes, & and their wyckednesses, which they haue doe agaynst me, that they may tell their childers children the same: for the sinnes of their fathers are increased in them. And why? they haue forgotten me and haue offered vnto straunge goddes. Am not I euen he that brought them out of the lande of Egypte, from the house of bondage? But they haue prouoked me vnto wrath and despysed my councels. Pull thou out then the hear of thy heade, & call al euel ouer them/ for they haue not bene obedient vnto my lawe.

It is a people without learnyng and nourtour. How long shal I forbere them vnto whom I haue don so moch goode?

* Many kinges haue I destroyed for their sakes: * Pharao with his seruauntes and al his power haue I smytten downe & slayne: All the nacions haue I destroyed and roted out before them: in the east haue I brought two landes to people to naught, euen Tyre and Sidon and haue slayne al their enemyes. Speake therfore vnto them, saying: Thus sayth the Lorde: * I led you thorowe the sea, and haue geuen you swer stretes fete the begynnyng. * I gaue you Moses to be youre captaine, and Aaron to be your preest: I gaue you lyght in a pyller of fier and great wonders haue I done amōg you: yet haue ye forgotten me/ sayth the Lorde.

Thus sayth the almighty Lorde: * I gaue you quayles to eate and tentes for your succoure: Neuertheles ye murmured/ and asscrybed not the victorie of youre enemies vnto my name: yee this same daye do ye yet murmure.

Where are the benefittes, that I haue done for you? Where ye were hongrye in the wyldernes, dyd ye not cry vnto me? Why hast thou brought vs into this wyldernes to kyll vs? It had ben better for vs, to haue serued the Egipcians, then to dye in this wildernes. Then had I pytye vpon youre mournynges, and gaue you Manna to eate. * ye ate angels foode. When ye were thyrstye dyd not I hewe the hard ston/ and caused water to flowe ther out? For the heate I couered you with the leaues of the trees: I good pleasaunt fat land gaue I you: I cast out the Cananites, the Pherezites and Philistines before you.

What

What shal I do more for you, sayeth the Lorde?

Thus sayth the Almyghty Lorde: When ye were in the wyldernes, in the water of the Amorites, beyng a thyrsty, and blaspheming my name, I gaue you not fyre for your blaspemyes, but cast a tree into the water, and made the ryuer swete. What shal I do vnto thee, O Jacob? Thou Juda wouldest not obey me. I wyl turne me to another people/ and vnto those wyl I geue my name, that they may kepe my statutes. Seyng ye haue forsaken me, I wyl forsake you also. When ye desyre me to be gracious vnto you, I shal haue no mercy vpon you. * When ye call vpon me, I wyl not here you. For ye haue defyled youre handes wyth bloud/ and yourfete are swift to commyt manslaughter. Ye haue not forsake me (in a maner) but your own selues, sayeth the lorde.

Thus sayeth the almyghty Lorde: haue I not prayed you, as a father hys sones, as a mother her daughters, & as a nurse her yong babes, that ye wolde be my peple, and I shuld be your god: that ye wold be my childre, & I shuld be your owne father? * I gathered you together as an henne gathereth her chekens vnder her wynges. But now what shall I do vnto you? I shal cast you out fro my face. * When ye offer vnto me I shal turne my face from you: for your solempne feast dayes, youre new moones, and your circumcisions haue I forsaken. I sent vnto you my seruauntes the Prophetes/ whome ye haue taken and slai, and torē their bodyes in peces, whose bloude I wyl require of youre handes sayeth the lorde.

Thus sayeth the Almighty Lorde: your house must be desolate. I wyl cast you out as the wynde doth the strawe: your childre shal not be frutful, for they haue despysed my commaundement, and done the thing that is euel before me. Youre houses wyll I geue vnto a peple that shal come, and they that neuer heard me shal beleue in me: And they vnto whome I neuer shewed token, they shal do the thynge that I commaund them. They haue sene no Prophetes, yet shal they cal their sinns to remembraunce, and knowlege them.

I report me vnto the grace, that I wil do for the people which is to come/ whose childeren rejoyce in gladnes: and though they haue not sene me with bodyly eyes, yet in spyrite they beleue the thyng that I saye. And now brother, beholde what greate worshyppe, and se the people that commethe from the Easte, vnto whoome I wyll geue the dukedome of Abraham Isaac and Jacob, of Oseas Amos and Micheas, of Joel, Abdi, Jonas Naum and Habacuc of Sophony, Aggeus, Zachary and Malachy (whych is called also an angell or messenger of the Lorde.)

¶ The synagoge synneth saute with her owne childzen, The gentyles are called.

The.ii.Chapter.

THus sayethe the Lorde: I brought thys people oute of bondage, I gaue them my commmaundementes by my seruauntes the Prophetes, whome thou woldest not heare, but despysed my councels. The mother that bare them, sayth vnto them: Go your waye ye childeren, for I am a wyddow and forsaken: I brought you vp with gladnes, but with sorow and heupnes haue I lost you: for ye haue synned before the Lorde youre God, and done the thynge that is euel before hym. But what shall I nowe do vnto you? I am a wyddow and forsaken: goo youre waye, O my childeren, and aske mercye of the Lord. As for me, O Father, I call vppon thee for a wytnesse ouer the Mother of these childeren, which wolde not kepe my couenaunte: that thou bringe them to confusion, and theyr mother to a spoyle, that she beare no more. Let theyr names be scattered abroade amonge the Heathen, lett them be putt oute of the Earthe, for they haue thoughte scorne of my Couenaunt.

Wo be vnto thee Assur, thou that hydest the vnrighteous by thee. Thou wycked wyght, remembre what I dyd vnto Sodome and Gomorre/ whose land is turned to pytch and ashes: Even so also wyll I do vnto all them, that heare me nor, sayth the almyghtye Lorde. Thus sayth the lorde vnto Esdras: tell my people, that I wyll geue theym the kingdome of Jerusalem, which I wolde haue geuen vnto Israel. Their glorye also wyl I take vnto me and geue thē the euerlasting tabernacles, which I had prepared for those.

The tree of lyfe shall be vnto them a swete smellyng oyntment: they shall nether labour nor be wery. Go ye your waye/and ye shal receaue it. Prayse for your selues a fewe dayes, that they maye dwel therin. Now is the kingdō prepared for you, therfore watch. Take heauen and earthe to wytnesse, for I haue broken the euell in peaces and created the good, for I lyue sayth the Lorde. Mother embrace thy childeren and bringe them vp wyth gladnesse: make theyr fete as fast as a pyller, for I haue chosen thee sayth the Lorde.

And those that be dead, wyll I rayse vp agayne from theyre places, and bringe theym out of the graues, for I haue knowen my name in Israell. Feare not thou mother of the childzen for I haue chosen thee/sayth the Lorde. And for thy helpe, I shall sende thee, my seruauntes Elay and Jeremy/after whose counsell, I haue sanctifyed and prepared for the xii. trees wyth dyuerse frutes, and as many welles, flowyng wyth mylke and hony, and seuē mountaynes, where vpon there growe roses and lylyes, wherin I wyl fyll my childeren wyth ioye. Execute iustice for the wydow, be iudge for the father lesse: geue to the poore defende the comfortlesse: cloth the naked: heale the wounded & sick: laugh not alaine man to scorne: defend the crepel, & let the blynd come into the lyght/ of my clearenes. Kepe the olde and young wythin thy walles: where soeuer thou fyndest the ded, take theym, and bury them, and I shal geue thee, the fyrst place in my resurrection. Holde styll (O my people) and take thy rest, for thy quietnes is come. Feade thy childeren O thou good norse, stablysh theyr fete: As for my seruauntes whoome I haue geuen thee, there shall not one of them perysh/for I will seke theym from thy numbre, bere not thy selfe. For when the day of trouble and heuinesse commeth, other shall weape and be sorowful, but thou shalt be mery and plentyous.

The heathē shalbe gelos but they shal be able to do nothyng against the sayth the Lorde. My handes shal couer thee so that thy childeren shal not se the fyre euerlasting. Be ioyfull O thou mother wyth thy childeren, for I wyll delyuer thee, sayth the Lorde. Remembre thy dead childeren, for I shall bringe them out of the earth, and shew mercy vnto them, for I am mercyfull, sayth ye Lorde almyghty.

Embrace thy childeren, vntyl I come, and shewe mercy vnto them, for my welles runne ouer, and my grace shall not fayle.

I Esdras receaued a charge of the Lorde vpon the mount Oreb, that I shoulde go vnto Israel. But whē I camme vnto Israell, they set me at naught, and despysed the commaundement of the Lorde. And therfore I saye vnto you, O ye heathen that here and vnderstande: Loke for your shepherd, he shal geue you euerlasting rest, for he is nye at hand, yt shal come in the ende of the worlde. Be ready to the rewarde of thy kingdome/for the euerlasting light shall shyne vpon you for euermore. Flie the shadow of this worlde, receaue the ioyfulnes of youre glory. I testifye my sauioure openly: Receiue the gyfte that is geuē you, and be glad, geuynge thanckes vnto hym, that hath called you to the heauenly kingdome.

Aryse vp and stande fast: beholde the nombre of those that be sealed in the feaste of the Lorde, which are departed from the shadow of the worlde, & haue receaued the glorious garmentes of the Lord. Take thy nombre, O Sion, & shut vp thy purifyed, which the haue fulfylled ye lawe of the Lorde. The nomber of thy children whom thou longedest for is fulfylled: beseech the power of the Lorde, that thy people which haue bene called frō the beginning, may be halowed

I Esdras sawe vpon the mont Syon a great people, whom I could not nombre nombre and they al praysed the lorde with longes of thankesgeuinge. And in the middest of them there was a yong man of an hyghe stature, moare excellente then al they, and vpō euery one of their heades he sett a Crowne, and was euer hygher and hygher, which I marueled at greately. So I asked the angel, and sayde: Syr what are these. He answered and saide vnto me: These be they that haue put of the mortall clothynge/ and putte on the Immortall, and haue confessed & knowledged the name of god. Nowe are they crowned, and receaue ye rewardes.

Then sayd I vnto the angel: what ponge personne is it, that crowneth thē, and geueth them the palmes in their hādes. So he answered and sayde vnto me: It is the sonne of god, whome they haue knowleged in the world. Then began I greately to commende them, that stode so stedfye for the name of the Lorde. And so the aungel sayde vnto me: Goo thy waye, and tell my People/what maner of thynges, and howe greate wonders of the Lord thy god, thou hast sene.

¶ The wonderous worckes which god did for the people arrerefied. Esdras marueleth ye god suffereth the Babilonians to haue rule ouer his people, whi they yet are sinners also.

The.iii.Chapter

IN the thyrde yeare of the fall of the cytie, I was at Babylō, a lay troubled vpon my bed, & my thouggtes cam vp ouer my herte: for I sawe the desolacio of Sion, and the plentyousnes wealthe of thē that dwelte at Babilon: and my spyrete was sore moued, so that I began to speake fearefull wordes to the moost hiest, and said: O Lord Lord, ye spakest at the beginning, when thou plantedste the earth (and that thy selfe alone) and gauest commaundement vnto thy people, and a body vnto Adam, which was a creature of thy handes, and hast breth ed in hym the breth of lyfe: and so he lyued before the/and thou leddest him into paradice/which garde of plesure thy right hand had planted, or euer ye earth was made. And vnto him thou gauest commaundement to loue thy waie, why che he transgressed and immedyatlye ye appoyntedest deathe in him, and in hys generacions. Of him came nacions tryues, people and kyntedes oute of nūbre. And euerye people walked after their owne wyll, and dyd nyce thynges before thee: And as for thy Commaundementes, theye dyspysed them.

But in processe of tyme thou brought the water floud, vpon those that dwelt in the world/and destroiest them. And lyke as the death was in Adam, so was the water floud also in these. Neuertheles one of them thou lefte: namely Noe, wyth his householde, of whome came al ryghtuos men. And it happened that when they that dwelte vpon the earth, began to multiply/ & had gotten many childzen, and were greate people, they beganne to be more vngodlye then the fyrste.

Now when they al liued so wickedly before thee, thou dyddest chose the a mā ne from amonge them, whose name was Abraham. Hym thou louedst, and vnto hym onely thou shewedste thy wyll, and madest an euerlastinge couenaunt with hym, promysinge hym, that thou wouldest neuer forsake hys sede. And vnto hi thou gauest Isaac, vnto Isaac also thou gauest Jacob and Esau. As for Jacob thou dyddest chose hym, and putte backe Esau, and so Jacob becam a greate multitude.

And it happened, that when thou ledest his sede out of Egypt, thou broughtest them vp to the mount Syon, bowynge down the heauens, settyng fast the earth mouinge the Grounde, Makynge the dephtes to shake/ and troublinge the worlde: And thy glorye went thorowe foure poortes of fyre and earthquakes, and wyndes, and colde, that thou mightest geue the lawe vnto ye sede of Jacob, and Dylygence vnto the Generacion of Israel.

And yet tokest thou not away from them that wicked Herte, that the lawe myght bringe forth frute in them. For the fyrst Adam bare a wycked hert, tran fgressed and was ouer come/and so be al they that are borne of him. Thus re mayned weakenes with the law in ꝑ hert of the people, with the wyckednesse of ꝑ rote: so that the good departed away, and the euel abode styll. So the tunes passed awaye, and the yeares were brought to an ende. Then diddest thou rayse the vp a seruant called Dauid/whom thou commaundedst to builde a cite vnto thy name, and to offer vp incense ād sacrifyce vnto thee therin. Thys was done now many yeares. Then the inhabyters of the cyte forsoke the, and in al thinges dyd euen as Adam and al his generations hadde done: for they also had a wycked harte.

And so thou gauest thy cyte ouer into the hands of thyne enemyes. Are they of Babylon then better & more righteous then thy peple, that they shal therfor haue the dompynyon of Sion? For when I came there, and sawe their vngodlynes and so greate wyckednesse, that it coulde not be nombred: ye when my soule sawe so many euell doers (in the .xx. yeare) my harte fayled me, for I sawe, howe thow sufferest them in suche vngodlinesse, and spared the wicked doers: but thyne owne people hast ꝑ rooted out and preserued thyne enemies, and this hast thou not shewed me.

I can not perceaue howe this happeneth. Do they of Babylon then better, then they of Sion? Or is there any other people, that knowe the, saynge the people of Israel? Or what generacō hath so beleued thy couenaunte, as Jacob? And yet their rewarde appeareth not, and their labour hath no frute.

For I haue gon here and ther thorow the heathen, and I se that they be rich and wealthy/and thinke not vpon thy commandementes.

Wepe thou therfore ouer wyckednes now in ꝑ balāce, & theirs also that dwell in the worlde, and so shall thy name be no where founde but in Israel.

Or where is there a people vpon earth, that hath not synned before thee? Or what people hath so kept thy commaundementes? Thou shalte fynde, that Israel by name hath kept thy preceptes, but not the other people and heathen.

The Aungell reproueth Esdras, because he semed to enter into the profound iudgmentes of god.

The .iiij. Chapter

AND the aungell that was sente vnto me (whose name was Uriel) gaue me an answer, & sayd: The lorde hath taken to muche vpon ye in this worlde, and thou thynkest to comprehende the waye of the hyest. Then sayde I: Yea my lord. And he answered me, and sayde: I am sente to shewe thee three wayes, and to set forth three similytudes, before thee: whyrof if thou canste declare me one, I wyl shew thee also the waye/that thou desyrest to se: And I shal shewe the from whence the wycked herte commeth.

And I sayde: Tell on my Lorde. Then sayde he vnto me: Go thy waye, weye me the weyghte of the fyre, or measure me the blast of the winde, or call me agayne the daye that is past.

Then answered I and sayde: Who maume borne is able to do that? Why requirest thou suche of me? And he sayd vnto me: If I shulde aske the, howe depe dwellynges are in the Sea: Or howe greate waters sprynges are vpon the firmamente? Or howe great water sprynges are in the begynninge of the depe? Or whych are the outegoinges of Paradyce? Hazauentute thou woldeste saye vnto me: I neuer went downe yet into the deape nor hell/neyther dyd I euer clymme vp into heauen. Neuer theles now haue I asked the but onely of fyre and wynde and of the daye, where thorow ꝑ hast trauayled, ād from the whyche thou canst not be separated: ād yet canst thou geue me no answere of them.

He sayd moreouer vnto me: Thine owne thynges, and suche as are growne vp with the cān thou not know how shoulde thy vessel then be able to cōprehende the way of the hyest, and now out wardly wardly in the corrupte worlde / to vnderstande the corrupcion that is euident in my sight? Then sayde I vnto hym: It were better that we were not at all, then that we should lyue in wyckednes, and to suffer, ād not to know wherfore. He answered me, and sayde: I went in a wod, and the trees toke such a deuyce and sayde: Come let vs go, and fyghte agaynst the sea, that it maye departe awaye before vs, and that we may make vs yet more woddes.

The floudes of the sea also in like maner toke this deuyce, and sayde: come let vs go vp/and fyght agaynst the trees of the wod, that we maye make oure lande the wider. The thought and deuice of the wodd was but vayne and nothyng worth, for the fyre came and consumed the wodd: The thought of the floudes of the sea came lyke wyse to naught also, for the sande stod vp and stopped them.

If thou were iudge now betwyxte these two/ whom woldest thou iustifie, or whom woldest thou condemne? I answered and sayde: Verely it is a folysshe thought that they both haue deuysed. For the ground is geuen vnto the wod, and the sea also hath his place to beare his floudes.

Then answered he me, and sayd: Thou hast geue a ryght iudgmēt, why iudgest thou not thy self also? For like as the grounde is geuen vnto the wod, and the sea to his floudes: euen so they that dwell vpon Earth: maye vnderstande noothynge, but that whyche is vpon Earthe: and he that dwelleth aboue the heauens, maye onelye vnderstande the thynges, that are aboue the heauens. Then answered I, and sayde: I beseche thee, O Lord, let me haue vnderstanding: For it was not my mynde to bee curyous of thy hye thynges, but of suche as we daylye medle wyth all/namely wherfore that Israell is blaspheined of the Heath, & for what cause the peple whom ꝑ euer hast loued is geuen ouer to bee punisshed of vngodlye nacions: And whye the lawe of our fathers is brought to naught, and the writen couenaunte come to none effecte, and we passe awaye oute of ꝑ worlde as the grashoppers/and our life is a very feare, and we ar not worthy to optayne mercye. What wyll he do thē vnto his name, which is called vppon ouer vs? Of these thynges haue I asked question.

Then answered he me, and sayde: The more thou serchest, the more thou shalt meruell, for the worlde hasteth fast to passe awaye and canne not comprehende the thinges / that ar promysed for the rightuous in time to comme, for this worlde is full of vnrightuousnesse and weakenes.

But as concernynge the thynges, wherof thou askest me, I wyll tell the. The euell is sowne, but the destruction therof is not yet come. Yf the euell sowne that is sowne, be not turned vpside downe, and if the place wher the euel is sowne/passe not awaye, then can not the thige come that is sowne wyth good. For the corne of euell sede hathe bene sowne in the hert of manne from the beginnig/ and how muche vngodlynesse hathe he brought vp vnto this tyme? and howe muche shall he yet bringe forthe, vntyll he came into the barne?

Wondre nowe thy selfe, when the corne of euell sede is cut downe, how greate a barne shal it fyll? I answered and sayde: Howe and when shall these thynges comme to passe? Wherfore ate oure yeares few and euel? And he answered me, sayenge: Haste not thou to muche vpon the hyghest, for thy hastines to be aboue him is but vayne, thou makest to muche ado.

Dyd not the Sowles also of the ryghteuous aske a questyon of these thynges in their Holynesse, sayinge: * How longe shall I hope of thys fall? vpon: When commeth the frute of my barne, and my rewarde?

*Apoc. vi.

And vpon thys Jeremyel the Arcaungell gaue them answere/and sayde: Euen when the nombre of the seedes is fylled in you: For he hath weyed the worlde in the balaunce: In measure and nombre hath he measured the tyme and moueth it not, vntyll the same measure be fulfylled.

Then

Then answered I and sayde: O Lord Lorde, now are we all of synne, and for oure sake peraduenture it is not, that ỹ barne of the rightous shal not be fylled, be cause of the sinnes of them that dwel vpon the earth.

So he answered me, and sayd: Go thy waye to a woman wyth chylde, and aske of her, when she hath fulfylled her. ix monethes/ yf her chyld bed maye kepe the byrth any longer wythin her. Then sayde I: No Lord, that can she not. And he sayd vnto me: In hell the secret places of soules are lyke as the prouy chambre of a woman. For lyke as a woman that trauayleth, maketh haste, whē the tyme & necessitie of the byrth is at hand: Euen so doth she haste to delyuer it that is cō mitted vnto her. Loke what thou desyrest to se, it shalbe shewed the from the beginninge. Then answered I and sayde: If I haue found fauour in thy sight, and yf it be possible & if I be mete therfore, shewe me then, whether there be more to come then is paste/ or moare past then is to come. What is past I knowe: but what is for to come, I knowe not.

And he sayde vnto me: Stande vp vpon the ryght syde, and I shall expoū de the symilitude vnto the. So I stode, and be holde, an whote burnīg ouē went ouer me before me: and it happened that when the flamme was gone by, the smoke had the vpperhande. After thys there went ouer before me a watery clou de and sent downe much more rayne vē a storme: & when the stormy rayne was past the droppes remayned styll: then sayde he vnto me: lyke as the rayne is more then the droppes, and as the fyre exceadeth the smoke, euen so the measu re, of the thynges that are past, hath the vpperhand. Then went the droppes and the smoke about: and I prayed and sai de: Maye I lyue (thynckest thou) vntil that tyme? Or what shall happen in tho se dayes? He answered me & sayd: as for the tokens whereof thou askeste me, I maye tell thee of them in a parte: but as touchynge * thy lyfe, I maye not shew thee, for I am not sent therfore.

Esdras and the Aungel commen togethers

The .v. Chapter.

NEuertheles, as cōcernyng the tokens, marke thys: Be holde, the dayes shal come, that they which dwel vpon earth shalbe taken in agre ate nomber, and the waye of the truthe shallbe hyd, and the land shallbe baren from fayth: but iniquite shall haue the vpperhand. lyke as thou hast sene now and as thou hast heard longe ago. And ỹ lād that ỹ seist now to haue rule, shalt thou thorlyse wast. But yf God gras ce the to lyue, ỹ shalt se after the thyrd trompete, that the sounde shall sodenly shyne agayne in the night, and the mō thze tymes in the daye/ and bloude shal droppe out of wod, and the stone shalge ue his voyce, & ỹ people shalbe vnquiet and euen ye shall rule, whom they hope not that dwel vpon earth, ād the foules shal flye, and the Sadoimyth see shall cast out his fith, and make a noyse in ỹ nyght, which many shal not knowe, but they shal all heare the voyse thereof. There shalbe a confusyon also in manye places/ and the fier shal be oft sent aga yne/ and the wylde beltes shal go their waye, and menstruous wemen shal bear monsters, and salt waters shalbe found in the swete: one fryende shall fight aga yust another: then shall all wyt and vn derstandyng be hyd and put aside into their secrete places, and shalbe sought of many, and yet not be found: then shal vnrighteousnes and voluptuousnes haue the vpperhande vpon earth. One land also shal aske another, ād saye: Is righteousnes gone thorowe the? And it shal saye: No. At the same tyme shal me hope, but nothing or teyne: they shal la bour, but their wayes shal not prosper.

To shewe the soche tokens I haue leue/ and yf thou wilt prayе agayne, ād wepe as nowe, and fast seuen dayes/ ỹ shalt heare yet greater thinges. Then I awaked, & a fearfulnes went thorow all my body, and my mynde was feble and carefull, so that I almoost sowned wyth al. So the aungel that was come to talke wyth me, held me, comforted me and set me vp vpon my fete.

And in the seconde night it happened that Salathiel the Capteine of the peo ple came vnto me/ saying: Why here fast thou bene? and why is thy countenaun ce so heuy? Knowest thou not/ that Isra el is committed vnto thee/ in the lande of their captuite? Up then, and eate, for sake vs not, as the shepherd that lea ueth his flocke in the handes of wycked wolues. Then sayde I vnto him: Go thy waye fro me, and come not nye me, & he herde it, and as I saide, so went he his waye fro me.

And so I fasted seuen dayes, mournig and wepinge, lyke as Uriel the aungell commaunded me. And after seuen dayes it happened, that the thoughtes of my hert were very greuous vnto me a gaine, and my soule receaued the spyrite of vnderstandinge, and I began to talk with the most hiest agayne, and said: O Lord Lord of every wodd of the earth and of al the trees therof, thou hast cho sen thee one onely viniarde: and all the landes of the whole worlde thou haste cho en thee one pyt: and of all floures of the ground thou hast chosen thee one lylye: and of al the depthes of the sea ỹ hast fylled the one ryuer: and of al buyl ded cyties thou hast halowed Sion vn to thy selfe, and of al the foules that ar created, thou hast named the one doue: and of al the catel that are made ỹ hast prouided thee one shepe: and among al the multitudes of folkes thou hast got ten the one prple, and vnto this people whom thou louedste, thou gauest a lawe that is proued of al.

And now, O Lorde, why hast thou geuen this one people ouer vnto manye and vpon the one rote thou hast prepa red other, and why haste thou scatered thy one only people among many? why che treade them downe, ye a which haue euer withstāde thy promyses, and neuer beleued thy couenauntes? And though thou werest enemye vnto the people, yet shouldest thou punish them with thyne owne handes. Now when I had spoke these wordes, the angel that cam to me the nyghte afore, was sente vnto me/ and sayde vnto me: Heare me, and herken to the thynge that I saye, and I shall tell thee more. And I sayde: Speake on my Lorde.

Then sayde he vnto me: Thou art sore vexed and troubled for Israels sake. Louest thou that people better the him that made them? And I sayde: No Lor de, but of verye greate and compassyon haue I spoken. For my reynes payne me euery houre, because I wold haue experience of the way of the most hiest, and to seke out part of his iudgement. And he saide vnto me: that thou maiest not. And I sayde, wherfore Lorde? Where vnto was I borne then? Or why was not my mothers chylde bed then my graue? So had I not sene the myserye and trouble of Iacob, and the trauayle of my people of Israell.

And he sayde vnto me: Nombre me the thinges ỹ are not yet come: gather me togethere the droppes that are scatred abrode: make me the flouers grene age yne, that are wythered: open me the thi ge that is closed: and bringe me forth ỹ wynes that are shut vp: Shewe me the ymag of a voyce, and then shal I decla re the thing, that thou labourest to knowe. And I sayde: O Lorde Lorde, who maye knowe these thinges, but he that hathe not hys dwellynge wt men?

As for me I am vnwyse: how we may I then speake of thes thynges wher of ỹ asketh me? Then sayde he vnto me: like as thou canst do none of these thinges ỹ I haue spoken of, euē so canst thou not fynde out my iudgemente, or in the ende the loue that I haue promysed vntomy people. And I sayde: Beholde O Lord, yet art thou ny vnto them that haue no ende: and what shal they do that haue ben befor me, or we that be now, or they that shall come after vs? And he sayde vnto me: I wyll licken my iudgement vn to a rynge.

Lyke as there is no slacnesse of the last, euen so is ther no swyftnesse of ỹ fyrst. So I answered and sayd: couldeste ỹ not make those (that haue bene made, and that be now, and that are for to co me) in one, that thou myghtest shewthy iudgment the sooner? Then answerd he me, and sayde: The creature maye not haste aboue the maker, nether may the world hold the atonce ỹ shalbe created.

And I sayd: How hast thou sayd then vnto thy seruaunte, that thou lyuing

maker hast made the creature liuing at once/and the creature bare it: euen so might it now also bere them that be present/at once. And he saide vnto me: Aske the childbed of a woman/and saie vnto her: If thou bringest forth children whiche if thou it not together, but one after another: Bray her therfore, to bryng forth ten children at once. And I saide: She can not, but muste do yt one after another.

Then saide he vnto me: Euen so haue I geuen a childebed vnto the earth, for those that be sowen vpon it by processe of tyme. For like as a yong childe may not bring forth the thinges that belong to the aged, euen so haue I ordened the world which I made.

And I asked and saide: Seing thou haste nowe geuen me a wape, I will speke before thee: for our mother, of whom thou haste tolde me, is yet younge, and nowe she draweth nye vnto age. He answered me, and saide: Aske a woman yͤ beareth children, and she shal tell the. Saye vnto her: wherefore are not they (whome thou hast now brought forthe) lyke those that were before thee, but lesse in stature? and she shall answere the: They that be borne in the youthe of strength, are of one fashion: and they that are borne in the tyme of age (when the childbed fayleth) are otherwyse. Consyder now thy selfe, howe that ye are lesse of stature, then those that were before you, and so are they that come after you lesse then ye: as the creatures whych nowe begynne to be olde, and haue passed ouer the strenght of youth. Then saide I: Lorde I beseche thee, yf I haue founde faueure in thy syghte, shewe thy seruaunte/by whome doest thou visite thy creature

¶ The Aungel instructeth Esdras, & geueth hi answer to his questiõs.

The. bi. Chapter.

AND he saide vnto me: In the begynnynge when the ground was made: before the world stode, or euer the wyndes blew, before it thõdred and lyghtened, or euer the foundacyons of Paradyse were layed, before the Fayre Flowers weare sene, or euer the Moueable Powers were stably sted, before the innumerabell multitude of angels were gathered together: or euer the hyghnesses of the aier were lifted vp, afore the measures of the firmament were named, or euer the chimneis in Sion were bote, and or the presente yeares were sought out, and or euer the inuencyons of them that now synne were put aside, before they were sealed that now gather fayth for a treasure: then dyd I consyder & ponder all these thinges, and they al were made thorow me, and thorow none other: by me also they be ended, and by none other. Then answered I and saide: which shal be the partinge a sunder of the tymes? Or when shal be the ende of the fyrst/ & yͤ begynnyng of it yͤ foloweth? And he saide vnto me: From Abraham vnto Isaac, when Jacob and Esau were born of him, Jacobs hand held fyrst yͤ heleof Esau: for Esau is the ende of this world, and Jacob is yͤ begynnyng of it that followethe. The hande of man betwyxte the hele and the hand. Other questyon (Esdras) aske thou not.

I answered then, and saide: O Lord Lord yf I haue founde fauoure in thy sight, I beseche the, shewe thy seruant the ende of thy tokens, wherof yͤ shewedst me parte the last night. So he answered and saide vnto me: Stande vp vpon thy fete, and here the perfect voyce and sounde. There shall come a greate mocion, but the place wherethou stãdest shall not be moued. And therfore when thou hearest the wordes, be not afrayed: for of the ende shal the word and foundacion of the earth be vnderstand. And why? the worde therof trembleth and quaketh, for it knoweth, that it must be chaunged at the ende. And it happened that when I had herde it, I stod vpon my seat, and herkened: and behold there was a voyce that spake and the sounde of it was like the sounde of many waters, and it saide. Behold, the daies come, that I wil beginne to draw nye, and to vysyet theym that dwell vpon earth and wyll begynne to make enquysicion of them, what they be that haue hurte equite & vnrighteousnes, & whe the low estate of Sion shalbe fulfylled: and when the worlde, that shal vanische away, shalbe ouersealed, then wyl I do these tokens.

The bokes shalbe opened before my firmament, and they shal se al together, and the chyldren of a yeare olde shal speake with their voyces: the wemen with childe shal bryng forth vntimely children of thre or foure monethes old, and they shal lyue, and be rated vp: and sodenly shal the sowne places apeare as the vnsowne, the ful store houses shal sodenly be founde emptye, and the trompet shall geue the sound, which when euery man heareth, they shalbe hastely afrayed.

At that tyme shall kyndes fyght, one agaynste another lyke enemyes, and the earthe shall Stande in feare wythe them.

The sprynges of the welles shall stande styl, and in thre houres they shal not renne. And whosoeuer remaineth from all these thynges that I haue tolde the, shal escape, and se my saluatyon/ and yͤ ende of your worlde. And the men that are receiued shal se it, they that haue not tasted death from their birthe: and the hert of the indwellers shalbe chaunged, and turned into another meanynge: for euel shalbe put oute/and dyscrete shalbe quenched. As for faith, it shal florish, for rupeyõ shalbe ouercome: and the trueth which hath bene so longe without frut, shalbe declared. And it happened when he talked with me, that I loked demurelye vpon hym, before whome I stode/ and these wordes saide he vnto me: I am come to shewe thee, the tyme of the night for to come.

Yf thou wylte praye yet more and fast seuen days agayn, I shal tell yͤ more thinges, & greater then before: for thy voice is herde before the hyest: for why? The Myghty hath sene the righteous deling he hath sene also thy chastyte whiche yͤ hast had euer sence thy youth: and therfore hath he sente me to shewe thee all these thinges, and to saye vnto thee: Be of good comforte, and feare not, & haste not with the tymes that are past to thy vicke vayne thynges, and make not hast of the latter tymes.

And it happened after this: that I wepte agayne, and fasted seuen dayes in like maner, that I might fulfil yͤ three weekes, which he told me. In the eyghte night was my herte vered within me again, and I begaune to speake before the Hiest: for my spirite was greately set on fyre, and my soule was in distresse and I saide: O Lord, thou spekest vnto thy creature from the begynnyng (euen the fyrst daie) and saidest let heauen and earth be made, and thy word was a perfect worke. And then was ther yͤ spirite and the darknesses were yet on euerye side, and silence: there was no mannes voice as yet from me. Thé commaundedst thou a fatre light to com forth out of thy treasures, that thy worke might appeare and be sene.

Upon the seconde daie thou madest the spirite of the firmament, and cõmaundedst it to part a sunder, and to make a deuision betwixt the waters, that yͤ on part myght remayne aboue, and the other beneth. Upon the thyrd day thou broughtest yͤ to passe, that the waters weare gathered in the seuenth part of the earth:

Sire partes hadst thou dryed vp/ and kepte them to thintente that men might sowe and occuppye husbandry therin. As soone as thy worde went forth/ the worke was made. For immediatly there was greate innumerable frute, and many dyuerse pleasures and desires of tempracion, floures of chaungeable colore and smel, and thys was donne the thyrde daye.

Upon the fourth daye thou cõmaundest that the sonne shoulde geue his shyne, and the moone her lyght: the starres diddest thou set in ordre, and gauest them a charge to doo seruice euen vnto man, that was for to be made. Upon the fyfte daye thou saydest vnto the seuenth parte (wher the waters were gathered) that they shoulde bring forth diuerse beastes, foules and fishes. And so it came to passe, that the domme water & wout sole, brought forth liuing beastes, at yͤ cõmaundement of God, that all people myght prayse thy wonderous workes. Then dydest thou preserue the soules, the one thou calledst Enoch & the other Leuiathan, and dydest separate the one from the other: for the seuēthe parte (namely where the watr was gathered together) myght not holde them both.

Vnto Enoch thou gauest one part, whē the was dryed vp the thyrde daye, that he shoulde dwel in the same part, where are the thousande hylles. But vnto Leuiathan thou gauest the seuenth parte, namely the moyst and hast kept him to deuoure what thou wylt, and whan.
Vpon the fyrste daye thou gauest commaundemēt vnto the earth, that before thee it shoulde bryng forth beastes, cattel, and al that crepe, and (besydes this) Adam also, whom thou madest lorde of al thy creatures: Of hym come we all & the people also, whom thou hast chosen specyally vnto thy selfe. Al thys haue I sayde now and spoken before thee, that I myght shewe/how that the worlde is made for our sakes. As for the other people whych also come of Adam thou hast sayde that they are nothyng, but be like a spytle, and hast lickned the abundaūce of them vnto a droppe (that falleth) frō the rofe of the house.
And now/O lord, the Heathē why the haue euer bene reputed as nothige haue begonne to be lordes ouer vs, ād deuoured vs: but we thy people (whom ÿ hast called the fyrste borne, thy onelye begotten and thy feruent louer) are geuen into their handes and power. Yf the world now be made for oure sakes, why haue we not the inheritaunce in possessi on wyth the world? How long shal this endure?

¶ The Angel sheweth Eldras many thinges to cō

The .vii. Chapter.

AND it happened after that I had spoken out these wordes there was sent vnto me an aungel, which had bene by me also ÿ nyghtes afore and he sayde vnto me: Vp Eldras, and heare the wordes that I am come to tel thee. And I sayde: speake on lorde my god. Then sayd he vnto me: The sea is set in a wyde place, that it myghte be depe and greate: But the entraūce is narow ād smal lyke as a riuer. For who woulde go into the sea, to loke vpon it, and to rule it? Yf he went not thorow the narow, how myght he come into the brode?
Item another: A cyte is buylded & set vpon a brode felde/and is full of all goodnes: the entraunce is narow ād so dayne, lyke as if there were a fyre at the right hand/ and a depe water at ÿ lyfte and as it were only one strate path betwyxt them both, so smal that ther cold but one man go there.
Yf thys cyte now were geuen to an heyre, and he neuer went thorow the parelous waye, how woulde he receaue his enherytaunce? And I sayd: It is so lord. The sayd he: euen so is Israell also a portion. And why? for their sakes haue I made the world: ād when Adam trangressed my statutes, then was the thing iudged that was done. Then were the entraunces of the world made narow, ful of sorow and trauaile: They are but few and euel, full of parels and labour. For ÿ entraunces of the fore worlde were wyde and sure, and brought immortal frute.
If they now whiche are entred into thys worlde, maye not comprehend these strayte and vayne thynges, muche lesse maye they comprehende and vnderstande the secrete thynges: & by disquieteste thow thy selfe then, seynge thou art but a corruptible man? And what wouldest thou knowe, where as thou arte but mortall? And why hast thou not receaued into thine hert the thynge that is for to com, but that is present?
Then sayde I: O Lord, Lorde, thou hast ordeyned in thy lawe that the righteous shoulde inherit these thynges/but ÿ vnfaythfull & vngodly shuld perysh.
Neuertheles the ryghtuous shall suffre straite thynges, and hope for wyde: for they that haue lyued vngodlye and suffered strayghte thynges, shall not see the wyde.
And he sayd vnto me: there is no Judge aboue God: and none that haue vnderstanding aboue the hyghest. For there be many that perysshe, because they dispise the lawe of God that is set before them. For God hath geuen strayte commaundement dement to soche as doe, that they know what they do/and how they shuld lyue: & if they kepte this they shoulde not be punyshed.

Neuertheless they were not obedient vnto him/but spoke agaynst him: pmygned vayne thinges, and pourposed to synne, and sayde moreouer that ther was nō God, ād that God regarded it not. His wayes haue they not knowne, his lawe haue they despysed, and denyed his promyses: in hys statutes and ordynaunces haue they not bene fayth ful and stedfast, and haue not perfourmed his workes.
And therfore Eldras vnto the ful, plenty: ād to the empty, emptynesse. Behold, the tyme shal come, that these tokens which I haue tolde the/shal com to passe, and the bryde shal appeare, ād the earth that now palleth away, shalbe shewed: and whosoeuer is delyuered frō the forsayde euels, shall se my wonders. For my sonne Jesus shalbe openly declared, which those that be with hym: & they that remayne, shalbe mery in foure hundred yeares.
After these same yeares shal my sonne Christ dye/and al men that haue life, & the worlde shalbe tourned into the old silence, vii. dayes, lyke as in ÿ fore iudgments, so ÿ no man shal remayn. And after seuen dayes, the worlde that yet awaketh not, shalbe rayled vp, and shall dye corrupte. And the earth shal restore those that haue slepte in her, and so shal the dust those that dwell in sylence ād the secret places shal delyuer those that be committed vnto them. And the most hyest shall be openly declared vpon the seate of iudgement, and all mysery shal vanish awaye, and long suffryng shalbe gathered together. But the iudgement shal continue, the treuth shal remayne, & faythe shal waxe stronge/the woorcke shall folowe, and the rewarde shalbe shewed, the ryghtuousnesse shal watch, and the vnrighteousnesse shall beare no rule.
Then sayde I: Abraham prayed fyrst for the Sodomites, & Moyses for ÿ fathers ÿ sinned in ÿ wyldernes, ād he ÿ cam after him for Israel in ÿ tyme of Iehas and Samuel: and dauid for the destruction, ād Salomon for them that came into the Sanctuary, and Helyas for those that receaued rayne/and for ÿ deade that he myght lyue, and Ezechias for the people in the tyme of Senna cherybim: and diuerse other in lyke maner, which haue prayed for many.
Euen so nowe seinge the corrupte is growen vp, and wickednesse increased, & the ryghtuous haue prayed for the vngodlye, wherfor shall it not be so nowe also?
He answered me, and sayde: Thys present worlde is not the ende, there remayneth much honour in it: therfore haue they prayed for the weake. But the daye of doome, shall be the ende of thys tyme, and the beginning of the immortalytie for to come, wherin all corrupcion vanisheth, al voluptuousnes is lowsed, all myssbeleefe taken awaye, ryghtuousnes growen/and the verite sprong vp. Then shal no man be able to saue him that is destroyed, nor to oppresse hym that hath gotten the victorye.
I answered then, and sayd: This is my fyrst and last saying: that it had bene better/not to haue geuen the earth vnto Adam/or els when it was geuen hym, to kepe him that he should not synne. For what profite is it for men now in thys present tyme to lyue in heuynes and after death to loke for punishmente? O ÿ Adam, what hast thou done? For though it was thou that sinned, thou art not fallen alone, but we al that come of the. For what profite is yt vnto vs, if there be promised vs an immortal tyme, wher as we medle wyth dayly workes: and ÿ there is promysed vs an euerlastynge hope/where as we oure selues are euel and vayne: and that there are laide vp for vs dwellinges of health and fredō, where as we haue lyued euell: and that the worshyp of thyghest is kept to defend them, which haue led a paciēt lyfe, where as we haue walked in the most wicked wayes of al?
And that there shalbe shewed a paradyce, whose frut endureth for euer, wherein is fredome and medicyne: where as we shal not go in: for we haue walked in vnpleasaunt places: And that the faces of theym whych haue abstayned, shall shyne aboue the starres, where as our faces shalbe blacke and darckefor whyle we lyued, and dyd vnrighteously, we consydered not, that we shold suffre therfore after death.

Then answered he me, and sayde: This is the consideracion and thought of the battell, whych man hathe vppon earth: that if he be ouercomme, he shall suffre as thou hast sayde. But if he get the victorye, he shall receaue the thynge that I saye. For thys is the lyfe, wherof Moyses spake vnto the People, whyle he lyued, saynge: Chose the lyfe, that thou mayst lyue, neuertheles they beleued hym not, neyther the Prophetes after hym. No nor me whych haue spoken vnto them / that heupnesse shoulde not reache vnto them to theyr destruccyon lyke as sore is for to come ouer those, which haue suffred them selues to be informed in saluacion.

I answered then and said: I know Lorde, that the hyghest is mercyfull, in that he hath mercy vppon them, whiche are not yet in the worlde, and vpon those also that walke in hys law: and that he is pacient and long suffring, toward those that haue sinned in theyr workes: and that he is lyberall to geue where as it requireth: and that he is of great mercye, for he multiplyeth hys louing kyndnesses towarde those that are presente, and that are paste, and to them which are for to come. For yf he multiplye not hys mercyes, the worlde shall not be made lyuynge, wyth those that dwel therin: He geueth also, for yf he gaue not of his goodnesse / that they whyche haue done euell myght be eased, the ten thousande parte of menne shoulde not be made lyuynge. And yf the Judge forgaue not those that be healed wt hys Worde, and yf he woulde destroye the Multytude that Striueth, there shoulde be scarce few e lefte in an innumerable Multitude.

Esdras prayeth God rather to loke vpon hys own mercy then on the synnes of the people.

¶ The. viii. Chapter.

And he answerd me, saying: The most Hyest made thys worlde for many, but the worlde to cõe for few. I will tel the a symylitud, Esdras: As when thou askest the earth, it shall saye vnto the, that it geueth moch moulde, wher of earthen vessels are made, but lytle of it that golde commethe of. Euen so is it wyth the worcke of thys world. There be many created but few shal be preserued. Then answered I & sayde: Then swalowe vp the wyttc (ỹ soule) and deuoure the vnderstanding, for thou art agreed to herken and to geue eare / and wyllynge to prophecye: for thou hast no longer space geuen ỹ, but only to lyue. O Lord / wylt thou not geue thy seruant leaue, that we maye praye befor the, and that thou mayst geue seede vnto oure herte, and builde oure vnderstandynge that there maye come frute of it: ãd that euery one which is corrupted, and beareth the state and place of a man: maye lyue.

For thou art alone, and we alare one worckmanshyppe of thy hãdes, lyke as thou haste sayde, and lyke as the body is fashioned now in the chyldesbed, and thou geuest the membres, and thy creature is preserued in fyer and water: & ir. monethes doth thy worcke suffre thy creature, whiche is fashioned in her: but the thing that preserueth ãd it that is preserued, shal both be kept together: and when time is ỹ childebed deliuereth ỹ thing that is kepte ãd growne in her.

For thou hast commaunded the dyeth es to geue mylk vnto the frute / that the thing which is created and fashioned, maye be notished for a tyme: and then dysposest and ordrest it wyth thy mercy bringest it vp with thy rightuousnes, nurturest it in thi law, and reformest it with thy vnderstandinge. mortifyest it as thy creature, and makest it lyuing as thy worke. Seynge then that thou destroyest him, which with so greate labours is created & fashyoned throw thy commandement, thou couldest lyghtly ordeyn, also that the thing which is made, myght be preserued.

And this I spake nowe of all men in generall as thou knowest: but of the people, for whose sake I am sorye: and of thy enherytaunce: for whose cause I mourne: and of Israell, For whome I am wofull: and for Jacob / for whose sake I am greued: therfore begynne I to praye before thee, for my selfe and for them, for I see the fal of vs / euen of vs that dwell vpon earth. But I haue herde the swyftenes of the iudge / whyche is to come: therfore heare my voyce, & vnderstande my woordes, and I shall speake before thee.

This is the begynninge of the wordes of Esdras, before he was receaued: O Lorde / thou that dwellest in euerlastingnesse, whose eyes are lyfte vp in ỹ ayre / whose stole is exceading hy, whose glorye and maiesty maye not be comprehended, before whome the hostes of heauen stande wyth tremblynge, whose keppng is turned in wynde and fyre / whose worde is true, whose talkinge is stedfast, whose commaundement is strong, whose ordinaunce is fearful, whose loke dryeth vp the depthes, whose wrath maketh the mountaynes to melt away, and whose trueth beareth wytnesse: O heare the prayer of thy seruaunt, and marcke wyth thyne eares the petition of thy creature.

For whyle I lyue, I wyll speake, & so lounge as I haue vnderstandinge, I wyll answere. O loke not vpon the sines of thy people, which serue in the trueth. Haue no respect vnto the wycked studies of the heathen, but to the desyre of those that kepe thy testimonies wyth sorowes. Thincke not vpon those that haue walcked faynedly before the, but vpon them, whych wyth wyll haue knowen thy feare.

Let it not be thy wyl to destroy the, which haue had beastly maners, but to loke vppon them that haue clearly taught thy lawe. Tak thou no indignacyon at them, which are worse then beastes: but loue them, that al way put their truste in thy rightuousnes and glorye: for we and oure fathers haue all the same sycknes and dysease, but because of our sinnes thou halte be called mercyfull.

For if thou hast mercy vpõ vs, thou shalt be called mercyfull, where as wee haue no workes of rightuousnesse: for the ryghtuous, whych haue layde vppe many goodworckes together, shall oute of theyr dedes receaue reward. For what is man, that thou shouldeste take displeasure at hym? Or what is the corruptyble Mortall Generacion that thou shouldest be so rough toward him?

For of a trueth theare is no man amonge them that be borne / but he hath dealte wyckedly: & among the faythfull there is none, which hath not don amis. For in this (O Lord) thy rightuousnes and thy Goodnesse shallbe praysed and declared, yf thou be Mercyfull vntoo them, which are not ryche in good worckes.

Then answered he me: and sayde: Som thinges hast thou spoken a right and acordinge vnto thy woordes it shal be. For I wyll not perelye consydre the worckes of them, whych haue synned before death, before the iudgement, before destruction, but I wyl reioyce ouer the worcke and thoughte of the righteous. I wyll remembre also the pylgrymage, the holy making and the rewarde. Like as I haue spoken now, so shal it come to passe. For as the husband man soweth muche sede vpon the grounde, and planteth many trees and yet alwaye the thinge that is sowne or planted ys not al kepte safe, neither doth it al take rote: Euen so is it of them that are sowne in the world, they shal not all be preserued.

I answered then and sayde: If I haue founde grace, then lett me speake. Lyke as the husbande mannes sede perisheth, if it receaue not rayne in due season, or if there come to much rayne vpõ it: Euen so perisheth man also, which is created with thy handes, and is lyke vnto thyne owne ymage and to thy selfe, for whose sake ỹ hast made al thynges and lickened hi vnto the husband mãs sede. Be not wroth at vs / O Lord but spare thy people, and haue mercy vpõ thine owne inheritaunce: O be mercifull vnto thy creature.

Then ãswered he me and said: Thinges present are for ỹ present, & thinges to come for suche as be to come. For ỹ wantest yet muche, seing thou mayest loue thy creature aboue me: I haue often tymes drawen nye vnto thee but neuer to the vnrighteous. Iudys also thou arte maruelous before the hyghest, in ꝯ thou hast humbled thy selfe, as it becommeth thee, and hast not regarded thyne owne selfe, that thou art had in such honoure amonge the righteous. Therfore shall great wretchednes and myserye come vpon them, that in the latter tyme shall dwell in the worlde, for they haue walked in greate pryde.

But vnderstand thou for thy selfe, & seke out glory for suche as be lyke thee: for vnto you is paradice opened, the tre of lyfe is planted, the tyme to comme is prepared, plenteousnes made readye: a citie is buylded for you, and a rest is prepared, yea perfecte goodnes and wysdome. The rote of euell is inarcked from you, the weakenes and moth is hyd frō you, and into hell flyeth Corruption in forgetfulnes. Sorowes are banished awaye, and in the ende is shewed the tre of immortalyti. And therfore aske thou nomore questions, concerninge the multitude of them that perysh. For they haue taken lybertie, despysed the hyghest, thought scorne of hys lawe, & forsaken his wayes.

Moreouer, they haue troden downe hys righteous, and sayde in theyr herte that there is no God, yea and that wityngly, for they dye. For lyke as the thynge that I haue spoken of, is made ready for you: Euen so is thyrste & payne prepared for them: for it was not his will that man shoulde come to naught but they whych be created haue defyled the name of hym that made them, & are vnthanckfull vnto hym, whych prepared lyfe for them. And therfore is my iudgemente nowe at hand. These thynges haue I not shewed vnto all men, but vnto fewe: namely vnto thee, and to suche as be lyke thee.

Then answered I and sayde: Beholde, O Lorde, nowe hast thou shewed me the multitude of the tokens, whyche thou myst beginne to do at the last, but what tyme and when thou hast not shewed me.

¶ Esdras hath visions shewed hym.

The .ii. Chapter.

And answered me then & sayde: Measuer thou the tyme diligently in it selfe, when ꝯ seyste that one parte of the tokens com to passe which I haue tolde the before: so shalte thou vnderstande, that it is the very same tyme, wherin the hyest wyl begynne to vysyte the worlde, which he made. And whē there shalbe sene earthquake and vproare of the people in ꝯ worlde, then shalt ꝯ wel vnderstand/that the most hyest spake of those thinges, from the dayes that were before thee, euen from the begynnynge.

For lyke as all that is made in the worlde, hath a begynnyng and ende, & the ende is manyfest: Euen so the tymes also of ꝯ hiest haue theyr begynninges in wonders and sygnes and the ende in workynge and in tokens. And euery one that sha be saued, & shalbe able to escape by hys workes & by fayth wher in ye haue beleued shalbe preserued frō the sayde perels and shal se my sauiour in my lande and within my borders, for I haue halowed me from thee worlde. Then shal they be in carefulnesse which now haue abused my wayes: and they ꝯ haue cast them out despytuilye shal wel inpaynes.

For soche as in ther lyfe haue receaued benefytes and haue not known me & they ꝯ haue abhorred my lawe whyl they had yet fredome and whē they had yet open rowme of amendment and cōuersion, and vnderstode not, but despysed it the same must knowe it after deathe in payne. And therfore be thou nomore curyous, how the vngodly shalbe punished, & how the righteous shalbe saued, & whose the worlde is, & for whome the worlde and when it is. Then answered I and sayde: I haue talcked before and now I spake also hereafter, that therbe many moo of them whiche perysshe then shalbe saued, like as the floud is greter then the droppes.

And he answered me, saying: lyke as the felde is, so is also the sede: as thee flouers be, so are ꝯ colours also soch as he workman is, soch is also the worck and

and as the husbande man is him selfe, so is his husbandry also, for it was ꝯ time of the worlde. And when I prepared for them that are nowe, or euer the worlde was made, wherin they shoulde dwell, then was ther no man that withstode me. Now when euery one was, and the maker also in the worlde which is now prepared, and the moneth that ceaseth not, and the lawe whyche is vnsearchable, three maners were corrupte. So I consydred thee worlde, and beholde/there was parell, beause of ꝯ thoughtes that were come into it. And I saw, and spared them greately, and haue kepte me a wynebery of the grapes, & a plant frō amonge many generations. Let the multitude perish then, whyche are growne vpp in vayne, and let my Grape and wynebery be kept: Euen my plant: for wyth greate labour haue I made it vp.

Neuertheles yf thou wilt take vpon the yet seuen dayes mo (but ꝯ shalt not fast in thē) go thy way then into the feld of flowres, where no house is buylded, and eate only of the flowres of the feld, taste not flesh, drinke no wyne, but eate flowres onely. Praye vnto the hiest continually, so wyl I com, and talke wt thee.

So I went my waye and came into the felde which is called Ardath (lyke as he commaunded me) and there I sat amonge the flowres and ate of the herbes of the feld, and the meate of ꝯ same satysfyed me. After seuen dayes I sate vpon the grasse, and my herte was vexed wtin me lykeas afore: & I opened my mouth and begann to talke before the hiest and sayde: O Lord, thou that shewest thy selfe vnto vs, thou hast declared and opened thy selfe vnto oure fathers in the wyldernes, in a place wher no man dwelleth, in a baren place, whē they came out of Egipt, and thou spakest/saying: here me O Israel, & marke my wordes thou sede of Jacob. Behold I sawe my lawe in you, and it shal bryg frut in you, and ye shalbe honoured in it for euer.

For our fathers whych receaued the lawe, kepte it not, and obserued not thy ordinaunces and statutes, & ꝯ frut of thy lawe was not declared: for it myght not, for why: yt was thyne. For they that receaued yt, perysshe, because they kepte not the thinge that was sowne in them.

It is a custome when the grounde receaueth sede, or the sea shipp, or a vessel meate and drynke, that when it perysheth or is broken wherein a thynge ys sowne, or wherin any thinge is put: the thynges also perysshe and are broken, which ar sowne or put therin. But vnto vs it hath not happened so: for we that haue receaued the lawe perysshe in synne, and oure herte whyche also receaued the lawe: Not wythstandinge ꝯ lawe perysheth not, but remaineth in his laboure.

And when I consydred these thinges in my hert after this maner/I loked about me wyth myne eyes, and vpon the ryght syde I sawe a woman whych mourned sore, made greate lamentacion, & wepte wyth loud voyce: her clothes were rent in peces, and she had ashes vpō her head.

Then let I my thoughtes go, that I was in, & turned me vnto her, & sayd: wherfore wepest thou: whye arte thou so sorye and discomforted. And she sayde vnto me: Sir, let me bewayle my selfe, and take yet more sorowe: for I am sore vexed in my mynde/and brought very lowe. And I sayd vnto her, what aileth thee: Or who hath done any thinge to thee: tell me. She sayde/I haue bene vnfrutefull and barren and haue had an husbande thyrtie yeares. And these xxx yeares: I do nothyng els day and nyght, and al houres, but make my prayer to the hyest. After thyrtie yeares God herde me thy handmayden, loked vpon my mysery, consydred my trouble, and gaue me a sonne/and I was glad of hym/so was my husbande also and all my neyghbours/and we gaue great honoure vnto the myghtie. And I nourished hym wyth great trauell. So when he grewe vp, and came to the tyme, that he shoulde haue a wyfe/I made a feast.

Esdras and the woman that appeareth vnto hym, commen together.

The .x. Chapter.

AND it happened that when my sonne went into his chāber, he fel downe, and dyed: then ouerthrewe we all the lyghtes/ and all my neighbours rose vp to comforte me. Then took I my rest vnto the secoude daye at night: and when they had al rested, that they myght comforte me, I rested also/ and rose vp by nyght, and fled, and am come hyther into thys felde, as thou seest: and am purposed not to come in the cittie/ but to remayne here, and neyther to eate nor dryncke, but continually to mourne and to fast, vntyll I dye.

Then let I my meditacions ād thoughtes fal that I was in, and spake to her in displeasur: Thou folysh woman, seest thou not our heuynesse and mournynge/ and what happeneth vnto vs: how Sion our mother is all wofull and sorye, and howe she is cleanne broughte downe and in myserye: seinge we be all nowe in heauines, and make our mone (for we be all sorouwfull.) As for the beaupns that thou takeste, it is but for one Sonne. Demaunde the earthe, and she shall tell thee, that it ys she, whych ought (by reason) to mourne, for the fall of so many, that grow vpon her.

For from the begynninge all men are borne of her/ and other shall come: and beholde, they walcked al moste all into destruccion, and manye of them shall be cuted out.

Who should thē (by reason) make more mournynge, then she, that hathe loste so greate a Multitude? And not thou, which arte sorye but for one. But if thou wouldest saye vnto me, my mourninge is not lyke the mournynge of the earth, for I haue loste the frute of my bodye whiche I bare wyth beaupnes: but the earth is accordyng to the manner of the earth, and the present multitude goethe agayne, into her, as it is come to passe: Then saye I vntoo thee: lyke as thou hast borne with trauell and sorowe, euē so the earth also from the beginning geueth her frute vnto manne, for him that made her. And therfore wyth holde thy sorowe and heauinesse by thy selfe, and loke what happeneth vnto thee, beare it strongly.

For if thou iudgest the marck & ende of God to be ryghtuous, and good/ād receauest his councel in tyme, thou shalte be commended therin. Go thy way then into thy cytie to thy husband.

And she sayde vnto me: that wyll I not do, I wyl not go into the cytye, but heare wyl I dye. So I commened more wyth her, and sayd: Do not so, but be cōceled, and folow me: for how many falles hath Sion. Be of good comforte because of the sorowe of Jerusalem. For thou sayst that our Sanctuarye is layde waste, oure aulter broken, our temple destroyed, our playyng of instrumentes and synging laide downe, & chaunce is geuyng put to sylence, our myrth is vanyshed awaye, the lyght of our candelstycke is quenched, the arcke of ỹ couenaunt is taken from vs, all our holy thynges ar defyled, ād the name that is called vpon ouer vs, is dishonoured: our children ar put to shame, our preistes are brent, our leuites are caried awai into captiuite, oure vyrgis are defyled, and oure wyues rauyshed, our ryghtuous men spoyled, and our chyldren dystroyed, oure yong men are broughte in boudage, and oure strong worthyes ar become weake: and Sion (whych seale is the greatest of al) is lowled vp from her worshyp: for she is deliuered into the handes of them that hate vs.

And therfore shake of thy greate heupnes, and put an aie the multytude of sorowes: that the Mighty maye be mercyful vnto thee/ and that the hyest may geue the rest from thy labour and trauayle. And it happened that whē I was talkinge with her/ her face did shyne and glister, so that I was afraide of her/ and mused what it might be. And immediatly she cast oute a greate voyce, very fearful, so ỹ the earth shoke at the noise of the woman: and I loked, and behold/ the woman appeared vnto me nomore: but there was a citie buylded, and a place was shewed frō ỹ ground and foundacion.

C Then was I afrayde, and cryed wyth a lowde voyce/ and sayde: Where is Uzyell the aungell, whyche came to me at the fyrst?

For he hath caused me to come in many consideracyons and hye thoughtes, and myne ende is turned to corruption/ and my prayer to rebuke. And as I was speakynge these wordes, he came vnto me, and loked vpon me/ and I laye as a one that had bene deed and myne vnder standyng was altered and he toke me by the right hand, and comforted me and set me vp vpon my fete/ and sayd vnto me: what ayleth thee? and why is thine vnderstandyng vered? ād the vnderstandyng of thy hart and wherfore art ỹ sorye? And I sayde: Because thou hast forsake me: and I haue done accordynge vnto thy wordes, I went in to the fylde and there hade I sene thinges that I am not able to expresse. He sayd vnto me: Stand vp and be manly, and I shal geue the exortacyon.

Then sayde I: Speak on to me my Lorde, forsake me not, lest I dye in vayne: for I haue seane that I knowe not, and herd that I do not knowe. Or shal my vnderstanding be disceaued, and my mynde? But now I beseech the, that thou wylt shew thy seruaunt of this wonder. He answered me thē and sayde: heareme and I shal enforme thee, & tel the wherfore thou art afrayed, for the Hyest hath opened manye secrete thinges vnto the.

He hath sene that thy waie is right/ and that thou takest sorowe contynually for thy people/ & makest greate lamentacyon for Sion: and therfore vnderstande the vysyon which thou sawest alytle while ago after this maner: Thou sawest a woman mournyng, and thou hast comforted her: Neuer theles now seyst thou the lykenes of the woman nomore, but thou thoughtest ther was a cytie buylded: and lyke as she told the of the fal of her sōne, so is this the answere: The woman whō thou sawest is Sion: and where as she tolde the, that she hath bene thyrtye yeares vnfrutefull and baren, those are the xxx. yeares wherin there was no offeryng made in her.

But after. xxx. yeares Salomō buylded her, and offred, and then bare thee baren a sōne. And where as she told the that she norysched him with labour, that was the dwellyng of Jerusalem. But where as the sonne died in her chamber, that is the fal of Jerusalem. And thou sawest her lyknes, howe she mourned for her sonne: and what elles happened vnto her, I haue shewed the. And now god seeth, that thou art sory in thy mind and sufferest from thy herte for her and so hath he shewed the her clernesse/ and the fayrnes of her bewty.

And therfore I bad the remayne in the felde, wher no house is builded. For I know ỹ the Hyest wold shew this vnto thee/ therfore I commaunded thee to go into the felde, where no foundacion nor buylding is. For in the place where the Hyest wyl shew his cytie, ther shalbe no mans building. And therfore feare not, & let not thyne hert be afraid, but go thy waye in, and se the glorious and faire building, and howe greate it is, & how gret ỹ thikest it after ỹ mesure of thyne eyes, & then shalt thou heare as muche as thyne eares maye comprehende. For thou art blessed aboue manye other, and art called wyth the Hyeste, as the fewe.

But to morowe at nyght thou shalt remayne here, and so shall the hyest shewe the visions, of hygh thinges, whyche he wil do vnto them, that dwel vpon earth in the last dayes. So I slepte the same nyght lyke as he commaunded me.

C In this Chapter, and in the two next ensuyng he entreateth of certeine visions and of their interpretacions therof.

C The. xi. Chapter.

IN hen sawe I a dreame: and beholde, there came vp frō the sea an Aegle, which had xii. wynges and three heades: And I sawe/ and beholde/ he spred hys wynges ouer all the earth/ and all the wyndes of the ayre blew in them, and so they were put together agayne. And I behelde, and out of hys fethers there grewe other lytle contrary fethers: the heades rested/ the heade in the myddest was greater then the other, yet rested it wyth the residue.

Moreouer I sawe/ that the Aegle flew wt hys wynges, & raygned vpō earth: & ouer all them ỹ dwelt vpon earth

and

and I sawe that all thynges vnder heauen were subiecte vnto him, and noma spake against him, no not one creature vpon earth. I sawe also that the Aegle stode vp vpon hys clawes and gaue a sounde wythe his fethers, and a voyce sayingafter this maner: watch not al together, slepe euery man in hys owne place and watche for a tyme, but let the hades be preserued at the last. Neuertheles I sawe, that the voyce went not out of his handes, but from the myddest of his body. And I nombred his contrye fethers, and behold, there were eight of them. And I loked, and beholde vppo the right syde there arose one fether, & raigned ouer al the earthe. And it happened that when it raygned, the ende of it came, and the place therof appered no more. So the nexte foloing stod vp, and rayned, and had a greate tyme: and it happened/that when it rayned, the ende of it came also, lyke as ỹ first, so that it appered nomore.

Then came there a voyce vnto it, and sayde: Heare thou that hast kept in the earth so long, this I say vnto the, befor thou begynnest to appere nomore There shal none after the attayne vnto thy time. Then arose the third, and raygned as the other afore, and appered nomore also. So went it vn al the residue one after another, so that euerypone rayned, and then appered nomore. Then I loked and behoulde, in processe of time ỹ fethers that folowed were set vpvpō the right syde that they myght rule also: and some of them ruled, but within a whyle they appered nomore: for some of them were set vp, but ruled not. After this I loked, and behold the xii. fethers appered nomore, and the two wynges: and ther was nomore vpon the Aegles bodye, but two heades that rest, and syx fethers. Then sawe I also, that the six fethers were parted in two & remained vnder the head, that was vpon ỹ right side, for the four continued i their place. So I loked / & beholde they that were vnder the winges, thought to set vpth selues and to haue the rule. Then was there one set vp but shortly it appeared nomore, and the seconde was sooner a waye then the firste. And I beheld and lo, the two thought also by them selues to rayn: and when they so thought, behold there walked one of the heades that were at rest, namely it that was in the middest, for that was the greater of the two heades.

And then I sawe, that the two heades were ioyned with him, and the head was turned with them that were by him, and ate vp the two vnderwinges, that wold haue raygned.

But thys head put the whole earth in feare, and bare rule in it ouer all those that dwelt vpon earth wyth much laboure, and he had the Gouernaunce of the worlde, ouer all the foules that haue bene. After thys I loked, and behold, the head that was in the myddest, sodenly appeared no more, lyke as the wynges: then came the two heads, which ruled vpon earthe, and ouer those dwelte therin. And I beheld, and lo, the heade vppon the right syde, deuoured it that was vpon the lefte syde. And I hearde a voyce which sayde vnto me: loke before the, and considre the thyng that thou seyst. Then I saw/and beholde, as it were a lyon that roareth/rennynge hastely out of the wod, and he sent out a mās voyce vnto the Aegle/and sayde: Heare thou. I wyll talke wyth thee, and ỹ hyest shall say vnto thee: Is it not thou that hast the victory of the foure bestes, whome I made to rayne vpon earth & in my worlde, and that the end of their tymes myght com/ thorowe them:

And the fourth came, and ouercam all the Beastes that were paste, and had power ouer the worlde, wyth great fearfulnes, and ouer the whole compasse of the earth wyth the most wycked labour, and so lounge Tyme dwelte he vpon ỹ earth vn disceate, & the erth hast thou iudged not wyth trueth. For thou hast troubled the meke/ỹ hast hurt ỹ peceable & quiet, ỹ hast loued lyers, and destroyed the dwellinges of thē ỹ brought fourth frute, and hast cast downe ỹ walles of such as dyd no harme. Therfore is thy wrongeos dealinge & blasphemy com vp vnto ỹ hyest, & thy pride vnto ỹ myghtye. The hyest also loked vpon ỹ proude times, and behold, they ar ended and theyr abhominations ar fulfylled

And therfore appeare no more thou Aegle/and thy horrible winges, & thy wicked fethers, and thy vngracyous heades/and thy synful clawes/and all thy rayne body: that the earth maye be refeched and come agayne to her self wh ỹ is delyuered frō thy violence, and that she maye hope for the iudgmente & mercy of him that made her.

The. xii. Chapter.

And it happened when ỹ Lyon spake these wordes vnto the Aegle, I sawe/ and beholde, the heade that afore had the vpperhand, appeared nomore: nether dyd the foure wynges appeare anye more, that came to hi & were set vp to rayne: and their kyngdome was smal and ful of vproute: And I sawe, and beholde, they appered no more, and the whole body of the Aegle was brent, and the earth was in greate feare. Then awaked I oute of the traunce of my mynde, and from greate feare, and sayde vnto my spirite: Lo/ this hast thou geuen me, in that thou serchest out the wayes of the hiest: lo, yet am I wery in mynde, and very weake in my spirite, and lytle strength ys there in me, for the greate feare that I receaued this nyght. Therfore wyll I nowe beseche the Hyest/ that he wyl comforte me vnto the ende: and I sayde, Lorde Lode/ yf I haue founde grace befor thy syght, and yf I am iustifyed wyth ỹ before many other, and yf my prayer de come vp before thy face, comfort me thē and shewe me thy seruaunt the interpretacion and playne difference of this horrible syght, that thou mayste perfectly comforte my soule: For thou haste iudged me worthy, to shewe me the last of tymes.

And he said vnto me: this is the interpretacion of thys sight. The Aegle whom thou sawest, com vp from the see is the kingdō which was seue in the vysion of thy brother Daniell, but yt was not expouded vnto hi, for now I declar it vnto the. Behold, ỹ daies com, ỹ ther shal rise vp a kigdō vpon earth and it shalbe feared aboue al kigdōes ỹ were before it. In ỹ same kingdō shal xii. Kinges raygne, one after another. For ỹ second shal begin to raigne, and shall haue more tyme then the other, and this do the. xii. wynges signifie whyche thou sawest as for the voice ỹ spake & ỹ thou sawest go out from the heades but not from the Bodye, it betokeneth, that after the tyme of that kingdom ther shal aryse greate straungers, & it shal stand in parel of fallig: neuertheles it shal not yet fal, but shalbe set into his beginnig. And the eyght vnderwynges whiche ỹ sawest hange vnto the wynges of hym, betoken, that in him there shall rayse eyght kinges whose time shalbe but smal, and their yeares swyft, and two of thē shal beare. But when the myddest tyme commeth, there shalbe foure kept in the time, when the tyme beginneth to come ỹ it maye be ended, but two shalbe kept vnto the ende.

And where as thou sawest the heades rolling, this is the interpretacyon: In hys last shal the Hyest rayse vp thre kyngdomes, and call many agayne into them, & they shal haue the dompnion of the earth, and of those that dwel theri, withe muche labour aboue all those, that were before them. Therfore are they called the heades of the Aegle: for it is they that shall bryngе for the hys wyckeones agayne, and that shall perfourme and fynish hys last. And where as thou sawest that the greate head appeared nomore, it signifyeth, that one of them shall dye vpon hys bedde, and yet wyth payne, for the twoo that remayne shalbe slayne wyth the swerde. For the swerde of the one, shall deuoure the other/ but at the laste shall he fall thorow the swerde hym selfe.

And where as thou sawest the vnderwynges, vpon the head that is on ỹ ryght syde, it signifyethe that it is they, whome the hyest hath kepte vnto theyr ende: thys is a small kyngdom, and ful of trouble. The Lyon whome thou sawest rising vp oute of the wod, and roarynge/and speaking vnto the Aegle, & rebuking hym for his vnrightuousnes/ is the wynde, which the hyest hath kept for them and for theyr wickednesse vnto the ende: he shall reproue them, and rente them alounder before them.

For

For he shal set them lyuyng before the iudgement, and shal rebuke them: for ỹ residew of my people shal he deliuer vñ trouble, those ỹ be preserued ouermore endes: and he shal make them ioyful vntyll the commynge of the daye of iudgement, where of I haue spoken vnto the from the begynnyng. This is the dreame that thou sawest/and this is the interpretacyon. Thou only hast bene mete to knowe the secretes of the Hyest.

Therfor wryte al these thynges that thou hast sene in a boke, and hyde them, and teache them the wise in the people, whose hertes thou knowest e maye cõprehende and kepe these secretes. But wayte thou here thy selfe yet seuen dayes mo, that it maye be shewed the, what soeuer it pleasethe the Hyest to declare vnto thee/& with that he went his way.
